JAPANESE MAKE A FALSE RETREAT TO AMBUSH RUSSIANS

The Czar's Troops Fell Into the Trap and Hotly Pursued Them.

The Russian Losses Are Placed at 800 Men Killed and Wounded.

Newchwang, June 13.—Information was received here at 10 o'clock last night through heretofore reliable channels that part of the Japanese force left at Pu Lan Tien to checkmate the Russians northward movement to relieve Port Arthur was attacked southeast of Shungnmao yesterday. After slight fighting the Japanese made a false retreat, the Russians hotly following them, when the Japanese made a flank movement, catching the Russians in a trap. The Russian losses are placed at 800 men. They then fell back on Kai Chou and began to retreat along the Baimatgu-Tsaichou road.

About 2000 Russian infantry from Kai Chou pased through Newchwang yesterday morning, accompanied by a large supply and hospital train. Several carts contained bandaged men. The troops appeared to be fagged out and showed every indication of a long, forced march. The officers refused to furnish any information, but a non-commissioned officer told a correspondent of the Associated Press that all the troops were retreating from Tsaicheu. Before he could say anything further he was reprimanded by a captain. Stragglers are closely watched by non-commissioned officers to prevent them from talking.

The Russians have abandoned the ground mines eight miles south of here.

A native messenger just in from the Russian camp east of here reports that there are many wounded men there.

ONLY SHORT DISTANCE

Separates the Japanese and Russian Armies.

Liao Yang, June 13.—The army here is increasing rapidly, a fresh squadron arriving daily.

There is no fresh news from Port Arthur, nor has any confirmation of serious events having occurred there been received. On the contrary, according to the best information, everything is going well.

The officers and men here are very enthusiastic over the driving back of the Japanese on the road between Feng Wang Cheng and Hai Cheng, June 9.

Only a comparatively short distance separates the Japanese and Russian armies and the soldiers are all anxious for active operations to begin.

CONSIDERABLE MYSTERY

Caused By Movements of the Japanese Columns.

St. Petersburg, June 13.—The Japanese advance of columns north and south of Feng Wang Cheng is causing considerable mystification. The preponderance of military opinion still inclines to the belief that the movements in both directions are feints, although the opinion that Gen. Kuroki has begun a serious advance by both flanks against Liao Yang does not lack supporters. Renewed skirmishing is reported in the neighborhood of Siu Yen, but there is no confirmation officially of the engagement reported by a correspondent of the Associated Press at Hai Cheng last night, as having occurred thirty miles southeast of Hai Cheng, in the direction of the Feng Wang Cheng road, which was reported to have resulted in the loss of two Japanese battalions. Should this report turn out to be true it would show that the Japanese are advancing toward Hai Cheng by two roads, as the column reported engaged must have been different from the one which drove out the Russians from Siu Yen, on the road further south.

Absolute confirmation is not obtainable of the report that Gen. Kuropatkin is dispatching troops from Mukden against the enemy's right. Extreme reticence is manifested at the war office regarding the military situation, which is generally interpreted as foreshadowing important developments in the immediate future. Whilet he imminence of a decisive battle between the two main armies is distinctly discouraged, news of fighting of a rather heavy character is anticipated. The lack of official dispatches from Kuropatkin during the last forty-eight hours is regarded as significant.

The London Standard's St. Petersburg dispatch says that a telegram had been received from Vice Admiral Skrydloff, announding that he recently left Vladivostok with the Russian fleet, and engaged a Japanese squadron off Port Arthur is denied at the admiralty. No such dispatch has been received from Skrydloff, whose squadron, according to the last advices, is still at Vladivostok and in its neighboring waters. The government has no advices of renewed fighting before Port Arthur, but it is regarded as not unlikely that fighting of a more or less serious character on the Kwan Tung peninsula may be in progress, although the war office is convinced that no serious assault on the fortress is yet possible.

Russia's naval program (finally approved Saturday at the meeting between Emperor Nicholas, the Grand Duke Alexis, the high admiral and Vice Admiral Avellan, chief of the admiralty) for the next ten years includes twenty battleships, ten armored, cruisers, ten first class and protected ships, and a number of torpedo boats and submarine boats. In view of the criticism on the part of foreign naval exports of the battleship type after the destruction of the Russian battleship Petropavlovsk and the Japanese battleship Hatsuse, the subject was given the most careful consideration, the decision being in favor of the continuance of the construction of battleships.

MICHAEL DAVITT'S VIEWS.

Says War Causes Little Excitement Among Russians.

St. Petersburg, June 13.—Michael Davitt, who is now in St. Petersburg investigating the labor and industrial conditions of Russia, in an interview today with the correspondent of the Associated Press, said:

"Aside from the immediate object of my visit I have been greatly interested in the attitude of the masses in Russia towards the war. Their attitude is of greater import in view of the stories published abroad to the effect that the war is unpopular and that the country is on the verge of a revolution owing to public discontent. I have visited every working quarter of St. Petersburg, the extensive Selosmalenskoe region, the Narvaskaia district, and such places of the Potilloff company's locomotive and steel works, employing 10,000 men. I interviewed the workmen outside of the factories, in the churches, parks and places of public entertainment, but failed to find anything except quiet confidence that Russia is bound to win in the end.

"The government is decidedly frank in its dissemination of news. Official bulletins are posted everywhere and they are read attentively by small groups. Frequently soldiers and sailors are among them. The news is discussed among the bystanders, but always quietly. There is no trace of excitement. In fact the war seems to arouse less public interest than the news received during the South African war. One reason may be the distance of the actual fighting from European Russia. Certainly the war is not affecting the general current of life. Business everywhere is progressing as usual and the people are following their ordinary routine. The only sentiment is full faith that Russia ultimately will win. The stories published abroad that 600 persons were executed at Moscow recently, that wholesale sentences have been imposed at Moscow and that sanguinary conflicts have occurred at Odessa are all, so far as my inquiries show, pure inventions deliberately set afloat for the purpose of injuring the Russian loan abroad."

RUSSIA REMAINS FIRM

On Her Declaration of Contraband of War.

St. Petersburg, June 13.—Russia will not heed the British representations in regard to the action of the Russian government in declaring rice and other foodstuffs to be contraband of war. The Russian position in relation to foodstuffs being contraband is as announced by the Associated Press when the declaration was issued. It covers only full cargoes, destined for Japan, where the assumption is that they are designed for the use of the enemy's army. In effect the Novoe Vreyman contends that Russia's position is exactly analygous to Great Britain's during the Boer war, nothwithstanding Great Britain's protest against foodstuffs being declared contraband at the time of the Franco-Chinese war in 1885, and the Japanese-Chinese war of 1894.

The Novoe Vreyma expresses pleasure at the statement from Washington regarding the submarine boat Protector (which was shipped recently from New York on board the Norwegian steamer Fortuna, presumably for Japan), saying:

"The United States notwithstanding the agitation in the pro-Japanese press, remains strictly neutral."

The Russian consul at Che Foo reports to the effect that two Russian and four Japanese ships have been lost. The ultimate result of the fight is not stated. As there is no confirmation of the report from any other source, the authorities express doubt as to its accuracy.

The Russian press while displaying considerable interest in King Edward's visit to Kiel, expresses the opinion that it would not have any important political consequences.

CHINESE ARE WORRIED.

Newchwang, June 13.—The Chinese government is apparently greatly worried over the death of Lewis Etzel, the correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, who was shot and killed recently by Chinese soldiers off the Liao Tung coast. The affair is being energetically investigated by United States Consul General Miller, and the viceroy at Shan Kai Kwan sent the Taotai Liu here to act in the matter on behalf of the Chinese government. Taotai Liu served at one time as secretary to the Chinese legation at Washington and subsequently as Chinese consul at New York. He is now taotai of Tien Tsin.

BACKWARD CHILDREN.

First Conference For Their Education Held.

Portland, Me., June 13.—Preceding the sessions of the National Conference of Charities and Corrections which will begin here Wednesday and continue until June 22, the first national conference on the education of backward, truant and delinquent children was opened here today. The forenoon was devoted to organization and the appointment of committees.

The afternoon program included the reading and discusion of papers. The conference will continue tomorrow.

DEFERENCE TO U. S.

Shown at Meeting of Women's Conference at Berlin.

Feeling Crops Out In Ovations to Miss Anthony.

Berlin, June 13.—The International Women's congress called by the League of German Women's societies, in connection with the International Council of Women, opened this morning in Philharmonic hall. There was a large attendance of women from all the continental countries, the United States and Australia. Frau Marie Stritt, of Dresden, president of the German league, opened the congress with an eloquent address, to which the countess of Aberdeen, president of the international council responded. The congress was then divided into four sections for the delivery of addresses and discussions.

Two sessions of each section will be held daily till Saturday. About 250 addresses are scheduled for the week, including more than thirty by American and Canadian women. Mrs. Mrs. Lydia Alber spoke this morning on "Education and Motherhood," Mrs. McTerrel, honorary president of the National Association of Colored Women of Washington, read a paper on "The Situation of Colored Women as House Servants," Mrs. Louisa Thomison, of Canada, on "District Visiting in Canada," and Mrs. Blankenburg, of Philadelphia, "The Evolution of American Laws Concerning Women."

The Americans were impressed with the great deference shown the United States, as the leading country in the world in women's movements. This feeling cropped out in the ovations given to Miss Susan B. Anthony and in the speeches of the German and other women.

Chancellor Von Buelow and Interior Secretary Von Posadowsky-Wehner will each give a reception in honor of the members of the congress and the empress tomorrow will receive a delegation in which the United States delegates will be well represented.

The municipality of Berlin has voted money to defray the expenses of a farewell banquet to the delegates.

CIVIC WEEK AT FAIR.

Municipal Problems Will Be Discussed Each Day.

St. Louis, June 13.—This is civic week at the fair. Each day there will be meetings at which municipal problems will be discussed by men from different parts of the country who have made a study of the questions upon which they speak. Today the meeting which was held in the town hall of Model street, was addressed by Amasa M. Eaton, president of the Municipal league of Providence, R. I., who discussed the civic problem from a legal point of view. Mayor Wells, of St. Louis, and Clinton Rogers Woodruff, of Philadelphia, also spoke. The program for the week contains the names of Charles Zueblin, of the university of Chicago; Prof. John C. Fairlie, of the university of Michigan; Mayor John M. Head, of Nashville, Tenn., Rev. Francis F. Hodgins, of Milwaukee, and Governor Cummins of Iowa.

The total admissions from the opening day, April 30, and including June 10, numbered 1,944,911.

CONSTERNATION CAUSED

By Pointed Remarks of Mrs. Ballington Booth.

New York, June 13.—In an address at the Madison Avenue Reformed church, Mrs. Ballington Booth has caused much consternation among the members of the fashionable congregation. She was interested in the work in the state prisons and success in the reform of so-called habitual criminals.

"I see before me many examples of what the love of Jesus Christ can do for habitual criminals," she said.

"I see here former convicts, with their wives and some even with children."

Many of the listeners looked at one another as if each felt that a neighbor might be one of those to whom Mrs. Booth was referring. Suspicious glances were cast and many looked askance to see a tell-tale blush, but none was observed and Mrs. Booth continued her remarks, assuring the congregation that she had not intended going into details.

TWO DROWNINGS

Mark Opening of Bathing Season In Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two drownings marked the opening of the swimming season in Minneapolis yesterday. Anthony Lejac, 19 years old, plunged from a boom in the northern section of the city and did not reappear. The body was recovered.

Johnnie Otto, 10 years old, who went swimming with several small friends, lost his life in a heroic attempt to save that of a younger boy, named Mathies, who had ventured too far into the current. The lad was dragged to safety, but the Otto boy, exhausted by his brave efforts, was sucked under by the powerful current and drowned. His body was not discovered until late last night.

SOCIALIST ELEMENT CAUSING TROUBLE IN MINING CAMPS

Gen. Bell Issues a Statement Concerning Deportations.

Says Socialism Predominates Among Western Federation.

Socialist Leaders Have Control and Must Be Exiled.

Cripple Creek, Colo., June 13.—Gen Bell has given out a statement concerning his action in deporting strikers and the causes leading up to the same. He attributes the recent troubles growing out of the miners' strike, and the strike itself to the Socialist element in the Federation of Miners, who, he says, captured the organization two years ago. He declares that the federation has made unionism a secondary consideration and that the organization, root and branch, is being made a vehicle for the promotion of Socialism. The leaders, he asserts, have not hesitated to cause "weak and willing members to commit any crime to strike terror to property owners or workingmen who refuse to abide their dictates."

The murder of non-union men by blowing up the Independence station, he charges, was "perpetrated with the aid and advice of federation leaders and by men in their employ."

The only hope for peace and security of life and property was "to exterminate the federation from the camp."

MINES AGAIN WORKING.

All But Portland Have Resumed Operations.

Cripple Creek, Colo., June 13.—Practically all the large mines in this district which closed down last Monday after the explosion at Indpendence, are working today. The Portland mine has not yet been reopened and the company has not announced its plans. This is the only large mine in the district in which union men have been employed during the ten months since the beginning of the strike. It has been conducted on "open shop" plan and nearly half the force of 400 men laid off when Gen. Sherman M. Bell ordered the mines shut down, were non-union members. Gen. Bell declares that no members of the Western Federation of Miners will be permitted to remain in the camp and that the Portland company consequently will be forced to fall in line with the policy of the other mine owners, who organized to fight the Miners' Federation.

After a conference between representatives of various local unions and of the mine owners and the Citizens' alliance, at which good feeling was shown on both sides, the employers agreed to make a full and frank statement concerning their attitude toward all organized labor. A committee is today preparing a draft of such a statement, which will be submitted to the central committee for approval before it is made public. It may be ready for publication tomorrow. Employers say that no radical action will be taken except as to the Western Federation of Miners and allied and kindred organizations. The statement will declare that the domination of the Western Federation of Miners will not be longer tolerated in the Cripple Creek district.

The walking delegate and the boycott also will be declared against in decisive terms. The District Trades assembly as now constituted, employers say, must be abandoned. On the other hand employers of labor will place themselves on record as against any lowering of the existing scale of wages and hours.

Matters seem to be settling down gradually and the bitter spirit of animosity which has prevailed between various classes of people seems to be abating materially. More reason and fairness are being shown in discussing the strike situation in all of its phases and causes.

About 125 men are in the bull pen at the present time. A list for deportation has been made out to be presented to Gen. Bell. The total number who will be sent out today will be between fifty and seventy-five, if the list which has been prepared is not amended by Gen. Bell.

The destination of the next party to be deported has not been officially announced and will not be until the train is well outside the district. It is understood, however, that the men will be taken either to New Mexico or Utah.

Lieut. Cole and a squad have been scouting in the neighborhood of Dunnville with a view to locating the men who were not captured by the military after the fight last Wednesday. Soldiers who have returned say they were shot at from ambush but were unable to locate the persons who fired the shots.

DIED ON TRAIN.

Friends to Greet Mrs. Wood, Find Lifeless Body.

Chicago, June 13.—Friends and relatives who assembled at the Northwestern railway station, to welcome Mrs. Helen Wood home from California, found her lifeless body as the train rolled in. She died in her berth a short time before the trained reached Chicago. Mrs. Wood, who was 74 years old, had been in ill health for some time and was reconciled to death, but hoped to reach her home before the end came.

She was the wife of Alonzo M. Wood and one of her relatives is the wife of Governor Frank White of North Dakota.

A THREE-CORNERED FIGHT IN ILLINOIS

Three Factions Trying to Control Democratic Convention.

Springfield, Ill., June 13.—The question of whether or not the Illinois delegation to the Democratic national convention will be instructed for William R. Hearst depends largely upon the outcome of a three-cornered factional fight for the control of the party organization in the state convention, which meets tomorrow. The angles to the struggle are made up of the adherents of John P. Hopkins, which means the existing party machine, the followers of Mayor Harrison and those who favor William R. Hearst for president of the United States.

Mr. Hearst has no interest in the fight beyond securing an instructed delegation, but of his chief lieutenants are men who were ousted from the control of tht party machine two years ago. They are making a strong battle for Hearst, but they are striving at the same time to regain their lost power. The Harrison men are for an endorsement of Congressman Williams for president, and that brings them up against the Hearst people. They are personally opposed to Hopkins and his control of the state committee, which leaves no hope of a combinaion against Hearst in that direction. The Hopkins people object to Harrison for the same reason that he oppose them.

Harrison may combine with Hearst against Hopkins for the control of the organization of the convention, and if this is done under able leadership, it may win. The struggle for control has become so keen that the nomination of state officers has become a secondary matter, and nobody at present is paying much attention to the seekers for office.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER PLANS GREAT COMBINATION OF MINES

New York, June 13.—In connection with its prediction of a gigantic combination, in the near future, of all the valuable mineral properties in the United States, with the possible exception of the Calumet & Hecla copper property in Michigan, the World says:

Within the past ten days John D. Rockefeller has taken up personally the task which had been left to his brother, William, and to H. H. Rogers, who have been conspicuously identified with the mineral interests of the Standard Oil company. For ten years the Standard Oil capitalists have been acquiring the mines of America through their banking interests.

"In Colorado, David Moffat and Dennis Sullivan, of the First National bank of Denver, have paid out many millions in the last six years for mines, and are said to control 70 per cent of the producing gold, silver and lead mines of the middle Rocky mountain district.

"Senator Clark, owner of the United Verde copper mines of Arizona, and with large holdings in many of the Amalagamated Copper company's mines in Montana, has been working with Mr. Rogers for several years. The extensive placer gold interests of Southern California, controlled by the Southern California banks, are in such condition that they can be taken over at any time.

"F. A. Heinze has been in the city for several weeks. He will neither affirm nor deny that he is negotiating for the turning over of his interests in Montana to the new combine.

"The only stumbling block in the way of the deal is the insistence of Mr. Heinze on being made an officer of the new company which will make it possible for him to keep certain promises in Montana."

TWO MEN DIE IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Ossining, N. Y., June 13.—Albert Koepping, who murdered John Martin, in Port Jervis, and Oscar Borstrom, who killed his wife in Mt. Kisco, were put to death in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison today. The executions took place without a hitch and twenty-four minutes after the first man was led to the chair, the second was pronounced dead. Koepping, the younger of the two, was the first executed. Each went to his death without displaying any emotion.

Koepping was only 22 years old. He murdered John Martin in Port Jervis Feb. 19, 1903 after having been ejected for non-payment of his board bill. Previously he had served six months in prison for robbing a woman with whom he had eloped from New York.

Borgstrom, a Swedish gardener, murdered his wife by cutting her throat in a jalous rage at their home at Mt. Kisco. A 14-year-old stepdaughter tried to interfere and narrowly escaped the same fate. He resisted arrest and attempted to commit suicide. Mrs. Borgstrom was an acomplished musician.

WILL TRY TO GET WISCONSIN REPUBLICANS TO COMPROMISE

Chicago, June 13.—Postmaster General Henry C. Payne, chairman of the Republican national committee, arrived here today and set about the work of preparing for the committee meeting the day after tomorrow. Chairman Payne was accompanied by Speaker Joseph G. Cannon, who has been chosen as presiding officer of the convention. Most of the forty-five members of the national committee will be on the ground tomorrow. There will be a meeting of the executive committee tomorrow in advance of the meeting of the general committee. Chairman New and John B. Schneider, composing the sub-committee on arrangements, held a conference today and took up the work of alloting seats to the various delegations. A number of Wisconsin political notables are expected tomorrow and Wednesday. An attempt will be made to get the leaders of the two Wisconsin factions before the national committee on Wedday and effect a compromise.

SUBMARINE IS BOUND FOR JAPAN

New York, June 13.—It is definitely stated here that Japan will be the ultimate destination of a submarine boat which is now being carried across the Atlantic on the deck of the Norwegian steamer Fortuna, about which much mystery has been made during the past week. The boat was built by an American firm. It is said to have been sold to private persons for $250,000 and by them shipped to a private firm in Suez. The second purchaser will, it is understood, turn the boat over to agents of the Japanese government. When the Fortuna sailed her papers gave Cork as the destination of the steamer.

ROBBER HITS WOMAN WITH BRICK

St. Paul, June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Cries and shrieks brought the police and neighobrs to the residence of Mrs. H. Evans, 463 Selby avenue, yesterday morning at 3 o'colck.

Mrs. Evans was found in a fainting fit on the floor of her home, and informed the police that she had been struck with a carpet covered brick in the hands of a burglar.

The burglar entered the house by prying open a rear door. Mrs. Evans and her sister, Mrs. Paulson, were alone in the house at the time, Mr. Evans being at his work as night cook in the saloon of Edward Rohrbeck.

Neighbors, first on the scene, say they met a man running from the Evans residence, and in answer to their queries said he was going for the police.

GREAT EFFORTS TO SAVE WOMAN

New York, June 13.—Remarkable efforts are being made to prevent the hanging of Mrs. Anna Valentina, at Hackensack, N. J., next Wednesday, for the murder of Rosina Salza. The board of pardons already has refused to interfere and before starting for Chicago Saturday to attend the Republican national convention, Governor Murphy signed the death warrant.

Only two women have been executed in the history of New Jersey and much opposition to the hanging has developed on that account. Considerable sympathy also has been aroused for the woman because of the circumstances surrounding her crime. Efforts are now being made by her counsel to secure a reprieve from Acting Governor Wakelee so that the case may again be placed before the board of pardons.

GRAND JURY INDICTS MRS. PATTERSON FOR MURDER OF YOUNG

True Bill Is Returned Against "Florodora" Actress.

She Refused to Give Details of the Shooting.

Coroner's Jury Returns Verdict of Death By Bullet.

New York, June 13.—Mrs. Nan Patterson, the actress who was with Caesar Young, the bookmaker, in a cab on June 4, when he was shot and killed, was, today, indicted for murder in the first degree. Young, who had been a close friend of Mrs. Patterson for several years, met her by appointment about two hours before the time set for the sailing of the steamship which he was to sail on with his wife for Europe. They had spent most of the previous evening in conference over the impending separation, and, it is understood, that this farewell meeting had been arranged for the transfer to Young of certain letters in the possession of Mrs. Patterson.

Conflicting stories have been told of the happenings in the cab, and Mrs. Patterson has refused to give the details of the shooting except to say that Young shot himself and that after the shooting, she had picked up the revolver and placed it in Young's right hand pocket. One eye witness has presented himself and his testimony was to the effect that Young had shot himself.

The indictment shows that the witnesses who appeared before the grand jury were: Dr. Edwin N. Higgins, of the Hudson street hospital: Dr. O'Hanlon, coroner's physician; William Luce, "Caesar" Young's brother-in-law; Patrolman Junior, Capt. Sweeney of the Leonard street station, Frederick Mitchell, a cabman.

The return was made to Judge Newburger today, although the indictment was found last Wednesday.

The filing of the indictment obviated the hearing of much evidence at the coroner's inquest, which was held today. Only a few witnesses were examined, and the jury quickly returned a verdict that Young came to his death by a bullet wound.

Mrs. Patterson will be arraigned to plead before Judge Newburger in the court of the general sessions tomorrow.

Mrs. Patterson was told in the coroner's court room that she had been indicted. For the first time since she recovered from the shock of Young's death she showed emotion, becoming hysterical. Her condition bordered on collapse, and Coroner Jackson, who is a physician, was called to attend her. Stimulants were administered and she became calmer. Dr. Jackson said the young woman's heart had given way under the strain she is undergoing, but that the weakness was only temporary. Mrs. Patterson was accompanied to court by her father and by a school girl friend, Miss McLaughlin. At the close of the hearing she was taken back to the Tombs.

THE RUSH FOR LAND.

Many People In Line At Cass Lake.

Cass Lake, Minn., June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—The advance rush for lands to be opened at the local land office Wednesday has commenced, and at present writing thirty men are lined in front of the land office ready to file. The line was formed at 6 o'clock Sunday night, twenty men falling into close order formation. Since that time there have been regular augmentations to the line, and many more are here getting their bearings relative to the character of the lands, preparatory to getting into line.

The land to be opened comprises 63,000 acres. Every precaution has been taken that no unfair advantage can be gained in the filings. There are a lot of men out on the land now looking it over, and it is expected that these will all be in before tomorrow noon, when the line will number several hundred. There is perfect order and harmony among the land seekers. From now until the opening on Wednesday morning it is expressed that there will be a great rush here, as a large portion of the land is valuable for agriculture.

AGED FARMER BRUTALLY ASSAULTED AND WILL DIE.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 13.—Henry Ortwine, an aged farmer of Glennion, near here, was brutally assaulted today by Martin Green and is dying. He was stabbed in four places, his skull fractured, and one eye and a portion of his tongue cut out. The assault was inspired by a quarrel. Green held the police at bay with a shotgun for some time, and the officers had great difficulty in saving him from a mob.

DOLL FOR WILKES

Manager Van Praagh Takes Superior Man For Second Base.

Minneapolis Wants Dan O'Leary—Also Anxious For Newt Randall.

Another shaking up is to take place in the Duluth baseball team.

"Joe" Wilkes will once more leave the team, returning to Superior, and Doll, of the Superior team, will be taken in exchange. Doll is an excelent substitute pitcher, and plays a good infield. He will be in the game this afternoon, playing second base, while "Rusty" Owens will do the twirling.

Doll will be given a trial at second base and if he does not make good, a new man will be signed. Ever since Martin left the team, the lack of a regular second baseman has been felt, and the infield has not been playing the sharp aggresisve game which it did previous to his departure.

Another deal is pending whereby Dan O'Leary, the crack backstop, of the White Sox, may go to Minneapolis. Manager Watkins, of the Millers, has been after O'Leary for a couple of weeks past, and has offered Catcher Leslie, Pitcher Bailey and an extra second baseman who he has on his staff, for him. The deal is not yet closed, but there is every prospect that it will be within a day or two.

The fans will be sorry to see O'Leary go. He has shown himself to be one of the best hitters and surest backstops in the league, and his departure will weaken the team. Hughes is a good man, however, and Leslie is taking his regular turn behind the willow for the Millers. Bailey, who was formerly with the Columbus team, is a southpaw and is said to be a comer.

Watkins has also asked Van Praagh to name what price he would take for Randall. He has been after the Duluth left fielder ever since the season opened, but Van Praagh has refused to consider his release. He will reply to Watkins' communication that Randall is not for sale.

The Duluth manager stated this morning that there was no truth in the story that "Rusty" Owens was likely to leave the team. Minneapolis has no string on Owens, and he has shown himself to be too valuable a man to let go.

The addition of Doll and Bailey will give Van Praagh six pitchers and a total of fifteen men in all from which to reconstruct his team.

MISSING FOR A WEEK PAST

Fred Schmidel, of Knudsen-Ferguson Company, Disappears.

Fred Schmidel, an employe of the Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit company, has been missing for over a week, and his employers fear that some accident has befallen him, or that he has put an end to his life.

Mr. Schmidel boarded with H. B. Knudson, of the firm by which he was employed. He has not been seen either at his room or at his place of business since a week ago Saturday, and he has left no notice of his whereabouts. His clothing remains undisturbed at his room, and Mr. Knudson is at a loss to account for his disappearance.

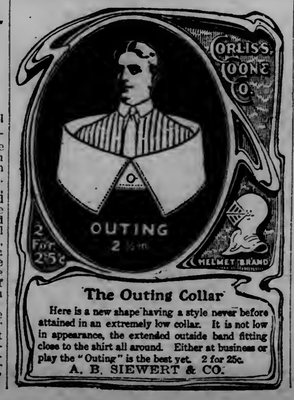

The missing man was about 40 or 45 years of age and had no relatives in this part of the country. He has been a resident of Duluth for about twelve years past, and was formerly employed by the Great Northern Railway company.

The last seen of him, so far as can be ascertained, was a week ago Saturday, when one of his friends saw him in front of the St. Louis hotel.

Half of Business Part of Town Wiped Out.

Milwaukee, June 13.—An Evening Wisconsin special from New Richmond, Wis., says: Fire toay wiped out over alf the business part of Spooner before the flames were brought under control. Spooner is the division headquarters of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha. It is one of the best towns between New Richmond and the head of the lakes. The bank was burned but the hotel and railroad property was saved. The heavy losses are fairly well insured.

GOING TO CAMP

Two Companies and Band To Leave For Lake City.

Encampment Not a Snap But Period of Hard Work.

One hundred and thirty members of Companies A and C and the officers will leave over the Great Northern road this evening for Lake City, where they will go into their annual encampment.

About 500 men in all will assemble at Lake City, from all parts of Northern Minnesota. The encampment is for the members of the Third regiment only, and will last about ten days. At its completion, the Second regiment will assemble, and it will be followed by the First.

Col. Charles A. Van Duzec will be in command of the regiment at the encampment, oassisted by Majors Gelrach, Resch and Eva.

Maj. Resche, who is in command of the second battalion, in which Company C is included, will not be able to leave for Lake City until Chief of Police Troyer returns from the meeting of the Association of Chiefs of Police, at St. Louis, but Maj. Eva of the third battalion, of which Company A is a part, will leave with the troops tonight.

The regiment comprises three battalions of three companies each. Each company has about fifty-two men, making a total of nearly 500 men with the officers, field staff and band. Two of these companies, A and C, have their headquarters at Duluth, while the others are located at the different cities in the northern part of the state. Capts. Little and Franklin are in command of the two local companies.

The largest and best band that ever left Duluth will accompany the men tonight. Director Flaaten states that he will take forty pieces with him to the encampment.

In former years the state has paid the expenses of the encampment, but this year the federal government will stand the cost. The officers have heretofore purchased their own uniforms, but this year the government has supplied them, and in a most generous manner. Handsome dark blue dress uniforms and caps, and service uniforms of olive drab color have been furnished, and the troops will make a roost creditable showing.

"The men won't have an easy time while in the encampment," said Major Resche this morning. "There is a regular program of drilling and tactics. The men arise at 5 o'clock in the morning, and drill for a short time before breakfast. There is a different program for each day. They will be given problems in minor tactics to work out. For example, one company may be sent out with sealed orders which the captain is not allowed to open until he has marched two or three miles, and he must get his men into position to withstand the attack, and properly intrench his position.

"It is not likely that any sham battles will be fought, but we will have different problems in minor tactics to work out each day."

COVERED WAGON READY.

Occupants of Hurry Up Cart Screened From View.

Hereafter occupants of the "hurry-up" wagon will not be exposed to the vulgar gaze of the common people. They will ride in a covered wagon to the police station and from the police station to the county jail. The new covered patrol wagon of the Duluth police department is completed and will be placed in serivce tonight.

Under the state law passed at a recent session of the legislature all patrol wagons in cities of over 50,000 inhabitants are required to be covered. The law was passed with the object of having the police conduct their business with as little disturbance and publicity as possible, and of having the drunks and vags hidden from the eyes of children and minors.

It was found that if the patrol wagon at present in use were covered, it could not pass under the arch of the door in the coach-room at police headquarters, and a wagon with a lower frame had to be constructed. The work has been done in the work-shop of the fire department, and the wagon will be ready for serivce this evening.

NORWEGIAN CONFERENCE

Votes to Accept Deaconess Home at Chicago.

St. Paul, June 13.—A special from Albert Lea, Minn., to the Dispatch says: The first business done by the United Lutheran Norwegian conference of America today, was the acceptance of the Deaconness home and hospital of Chicago for the church. The property is valued at $67,000 and has a debt of $20,000. A set of rules was adopted for the government of the district visitors of the church, making all the rules uniform. There was much discussion on the proposition to sub-divide some of the divisions of the church, but no radncal action was taken.

WHIPPING POST REGIME DERIVED AT LEXINGTON.

Lexington, Ky., June 13.—Police Judge John J. Riley today revived the old whipping post regime when he sentenced Simon Scearce, a 15-year-old negro lad to be whipped in the public square. Scearce had struck a small white boy. The court decreed that the boy's mother take the negro to the public square and give him twenty lashes with a buggy whip, which was done in the presence of a large crowd.

THE CASH IS READY TO PAY DIVIDENDS

New York, June 13.—James J. Hill, president of the Northern Securities company, has issued a circular to stockholders of the company in which he says that cash to pay the dividend declared on May 2 has been deposited in the bank by the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railrad companies and that payment will follow the distribution and formal transfer of the railroad shares. He adds that an early decision in the pending litigation against the proposed dissolution of the Northern Securities company is expected.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Three Men and a Girl Are Killed By Lightning.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Devils Lake—A severe electric storm passed over the north end of the western portion of this county, resulting in three deaths. Ole Bjorvig, 28 years old, a farm hand employed by Norman Morrison, twelve miles north of here, was killed.

A little later Hilda Lee, 10-year-old daughter of Hans Lee, was also killed.

About eighteen miles north of here a man named Anderson was also killed at Churche's Ferry by lightning.

Fargo—J. L. Smith, a well-known real estate dealer and lawyer at Leonard, has been indicted by the United States grand jury on the charge of making a fraudulent pension voucher. It is alleged he made proof of voucher three days after the death of the pensioner. He pleaded not guilty.

City Treasurer Mitchell, who threatened to convert the insurance money for the firemen into the general fund, has been enjoined against such action by three local fire companies. He held that they were in effect a paid department and that the city was entitled to the money. They contend that they are volunteers and entitled to the money under the laws of the state. The injunction was made returnable on June 25.

John Holte, 72 years old, a shoemaker who recently arrived here from Mayville, attempted suicide by cutting his throat from ear to ear with a razor. He had been drinking for a day or two. He is in a precarious condition and may not recover.

Grand Forks—Joseph Lacoquie, who was released from the St. Cloud reformatory, made a murderous assault on Robert J. Ryan in a grove back of a row of saloons in East Grand Forks, and was captured after a long chase. He assaulted Ryan with an iron can. After beating him terribly about the face and head, Lacoquie made an unsuccessful attempt to drown him by holding his face in a shallow pool of water. Men from one of the saloons heard Ryan's screams and came to his assistance. The police and several bystanders started in pursuit of Lacoquie and captured him a mile from the city. On the way to the police station Lacoquie drew an ugly looking knife and attempted to stab Officer Ellingson, but was overpowered and ironed. He was intoxicated when arrested, and declined to explain the trouble between him and Ryan. The latter is in a hospital and will probably recover.

Bismarck—President E. G. Patterson of the city council has removed Chief of Police John C. Ritchey and appointed Alex McDonald in his stead. Ritchey was appointed by Mayor Register, and in his absence from the city President Patterson exercised his power of removal, and the council met in special session and confirmed the new man.

What action Mayor Register will take on his return is not known. If he removes McDonald and reappoints Ritchey, the council will refuse to confirm the appointment. This is a continuation of the contest between the mayor and seven members of the council which has been on since the recent city election.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—Coroner Fultord was notified of an unusually sad case, that of the young child of William and Mary Ferguson, of Sioux Falls, which was smothered to death by its mother while she was in an epileptic fit, to which she is subject.

The long struggle in the United States court between the city of Sioux Falls and the private water company is reaching a critical stage. The suit, in addition to involving property to the value of more than $600,000, also involves the right of the city to complete and operate a municipal system of waterworks. The testimony has been taken and Special Examiner Adams is making an abstract of all the pleadings and exhibits. When this is completed the case will come before Judge Carland for his decision.

A friend of All Saints school in this city has contributed $10,000 for a sanatorium and rest house, which will be erected this summer on the school grounds. It has been learned that the donor is Henry Dexter, a New York millionaire, and an intimate friend of Bishop Hare.

Vermillion—A class of forty-seven was confirmed by Bishop O'Gorman, of Sioux Falls, in the presence of a large assemblage, members of the Catholic faith coming from all parts of the county, and some from nearby cities.

Huron—Arrangements have been made for the South Dakota Cornet band to go to the St. Louis fair. All members have been directed to meet in Woonsocket on the 20th, where Professor Ireland will take charge, and after a day or two for preparation the organization will depart for St. Louis, remaining at the fair until July 27. The band will be under military discipline, but subject to orders from Professor Ireland. There will be fifty-five pieces in the band, which has the best musicians of the state. At the expiration of its contract with the fair management the band will make a tour of the several large cities, returning to South Dakota in the early part of August, when it will give concerts in the principal towns of the state.

NO BLAME ATTACHED TO EITHER STEAMER

Montreal, June 13.—The inquest over the body of Alfred Thibault, of the steamer Canada, of the Richelieu & Ontario line, which was sunk in collision near Sorrel, early Sunday morning, resulted in a verdict of "found drowned," no blame being attached whatever to either the officers of the Canada or Cape Breton.

TO BE RELEASED ON WEDNESDAY

Probable That Ion Perdicaris Will Be Free Then.

Washington, June 13.—If all goes well Perdicaris will be realesed next Wednesday. It is estimated that it will require this length of time for the mission which has gone to his relief with the ransom demanded to reach the brigands' camp. Mr. Jusserand, the French ambassador, was at the state department today and had a talk with Secretary Hay about the situation. The ambassador has heard from his government that the sultan will grant the brigand's terms and, indeed, some of Raisuli's men who were in prison have already been released as an evidence of the good faith in which the terms are being met. It is possible that some of the released brigands may have been sent with the mission.

The French government has been active in the conducting of the negotiations for Perdicaris' release and this governmtnt will express its appreciation of these efforts as soon as he is free. It is also expected that the American fleet at Tangier will not tarry there long after Raisulis' prisoners return to Tangier.

MANY WILL COME

Four Hundred Delegates Expected at Sunday School Convention.

Opening Session Tuesday Evening at First Methodist Church.

The forty-sixth annual state Sunday school convention for Minnesota, will begin its sessions tomorrow at the First Methodist church, in this city. The convention will last until and including Friday evening of this week. The day sessions will be held at the First Methodist church and the evening sessions at the different churches, as announced by program.

The gathering will be a notable one for the local Sunday school circles for the reason that it will bring to Duluth some of the most prominent Sunday school workers in the state and the programs will be made very interesting from the fact that these will address the convention.

Fully 400 delegates are expected to attend the convention, about 150 having already been heard from. The delegates will be entertained in the homes of the Sunday school members of the various denominations; the state convention being an entirely interdenominational affair.

The opening program at the First Methodist church, tomorrow evening, will begin with a fifteen minutes musical service under the direction of Professor A. F. M. Custance, of this city. The prayer and scripture reading will be delivered by Rev. R. J. Mooney, of St. Luke's Episcopal church.

The feature of the program will be the fact that it is a celebration to a large extent of Flag day, which falls on June 14.

The local G. A. R. posts had figured on a fitting celebration of the day, but when it was learned that the state Sunday school convention would convene here that day, it was decided to turn over to the convention the celebration.

Rev. Robert Forbes will give a talk about Flag day and the many Duluthians who have heard Dr. Forbes talk on patriotic subjects on previous occasions will anticipate something especially interesting on this occasion. It has been suggested that all those who attend the meeting tomorrow evening wear the American colors.

The principal address of the evening will be that of Rev. J. S. Montgomery, on the topic "The Sunday School and Christian Citizenship." As the topic indicates the address will also be patriotic in character and befitting the flag day celebration. Dr. Montgomery is one of the most popular Twin City divines and has a wide reputation as a platform speaker.

Rev. J. Percival Huggett, who will deliver the Wednesday evening address, is a prominent minister of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and is well known throughout that state. Mr. Huggett is an old-time friend of Oscar Mitchell, former city attorney of Duluth, whose guest he will be while in the city.

Since the first publication of the program of the convention Rev. E. Stucker, a Baptist minister of Owatonna, Minn., has been secured to deliver the Thursday evening lecture, which will be on the topic, "And Ye Also."

Ernest Fagenstrom, who speaks to the convention, Thursday afternoon on the aople "The Boy Problem," is the Republican state Sunday school missionary of Minnesota. His experience as missionary has given him ample opportunity to study the problem from all sides and he will be prepared to present it in an entertaining and interesting way.

FROM SECOND STORY WINDOW

Charles Hill Falls Out While Apparently Walking In Sleep.

While walking in his sleep early yesterday morning, Charles Hill, a foreman for the Roach Lumber company, jumped from a second story window in his room at Sullivan & Devine's lodging house, 123 West First street, and received injuries which may result in his death.

Hill was heard walking about by his roommate, John Lavalle, who heard him get up and raise the window. Before Lavalle could make a move to stop him, Hill jumped and fell into the alley, a distance of eighteen feet below.

Lavalle instantly gave the alarm, and with the assistance of J. W. Sullivan picked up the unconscious man. He was found to have a bad cut on his chin and on the right side of his head.

When being carried into the house he was heard to murmur: "Tell my mother, I am dying."

He was taken to St. Luke's hospital, where he was in an unconscious condition during the greater part of the day. Today he is doing well and will probably soon be out.

Mr. Sullivan stated he had known Hill for seven years, and did not believe he could have been in his right senses when he jumped from the window.

At the hospital the attendants succeeded in learning the name of his mother, Mrs. Samuel Hill, of Glen Falls, N. Y., and a telegram has been sent to her conveying the news of the accident which had befallen her son.

80 PER CENT OF THE ADULT POPULATION SUFFER FROM ONE PAINFUL AILMENT.

Think what this means. Imagine the amount of misery that exists and is endured simply because people do not know there is an absolute cure.

The only way to cure any complaint is to remove the cause. There are very few diseases or ailments that can be cured by external application—and piles is not one of them. Piles can be cured; the treatment must, however, be internal, for the cause of piles is an internal disorder of the liver or the bowels. Even catarrh of the stomach and bowels can be cured by DR. PERRIN'S PILE SPECIFIC, The Internal Remedy. Here is an instance of what this practically infallible remedy will do:

Dr. C. A. Perrin, Helena, Mont.—Dear Sir: I have nearly finished the former bottle of Perrin's Pile Specific and am practically well. My case was one which most physicians would have pronounced incurable, as I was afflicted with a dysentery and compelled to go to the toilet room from three to five times each day and each time would bleed from one-half to one teacupful. I had to resort to bandages and absorbent cotton to check the flow of blood, and now the past ten or twelve days there has been no sign of bleeding and my appetite is good; have gained ten pounds in weight and feel like a new lease of life was given me.

Very truly yours,
T. R. HARRIS,
October 20th, 1902. Yerington, Nev.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific is sold by all reliable druggists at $1.00 the bottle, under an absolute guarantee to refund the money should this great internal remedy fail to cure.

WEST DULUTH

West Duluthians have about given up hope of a ferry line being established between their end of the city and Billings Park, Superior. For a time it looked very much as though the line would be put in operation. The Superior people started the move, and on three occasions a resident of Billings Park appeared before the West Duluth Commercial club to explain the advantages of the ferry and to find the sentiments of West Duluthians on the project.

The idea met with the hearty approval of residents of this portion of the city, and Mr. Palmer, the Billings Park man, was assured of every possible assistance if the boats were started running. On his last appearance before the club he appeared to be even more enthusiastic than before regarding the proposition, and promised that the line would be established in the very near future. That was about four weeks ago, and nothing whatever has been heard of the project since. It is thought that Mr. Palmer's plans have in some manner gone wrong and little hope is now entertained that the line will be started this summer.

REPAIRS TO BRIDGES.

Commercial Club Committee Meeting City Officials.

The committee from the West Duluth Commercial club, consisting of J. W. Holmes, Ben Getchell and Charles Kauppi, appointed to investigate the matter of getting the necessary repairs made to the Grand avenue bridges, west of Sixty-first avenue west, is meeting this afternoon with the board of public works and council committees on finances, bridges and viaducts.

Before the street car line can be extended out Grand avenue to Fairmount park, it will be necessary to expend about $5000 of the city's money in repairing and strengthening three bridges along the avenue, making them strong enough to bear the weight of the cars. It was reported to the council a short time ago that there was not enough money in the proper fund to carry on the work this year. The West Duluth Commercial club wishes to have the matter pushed this year, if possible, and with that end in view the committee was appointed at the regular club meeting last Friday night.

GATHERING OF LABOR

Opening of Convention of the Minnesota State Federation.

Annual Report of Secretary Willian E. McEwen of Duluth.

New Ulm, Minn., June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—The feature of the first day of the twenty-second convention of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, which commenced here this morning, was the reading of the annual report of the secretary, W. E. McEwen, of Duluth.

After dealing briefly with the growth and present prosperity of trades unionism in the state of Minnesota, Mr. McEwen proceeded to set forth the principals of unions in detail, and took advantage of the opportunity to take a fall out of the trusts, also touching upon the trouble the miners in Colorado are now having with their employers, and laying the blame of the strike and subsequent battles upon the shoulders of the state's chief executive, "owned body and soul by the mine owners."

"Where there is one anarchist in a ditch or at a bench, there are 100 in Wall street," said the speaker.

"It is eight years since I became an officer of this federation," said Mr. McEwen in his introductory remarks, "and during all of that time I have taken an active part in the trade union movement of this state. I have watched its growth and development. I have seen it stagger for a time, and almost fall, and then I have seen it ris again, and go farward without interruption. The labor movement is like every other movement in this respect. There are times of prosperity and times of adversity. Last year we reported a most marvelous growth of our movement. Unions sprang up fast and thick, and most of these that we organized are with us today.

"Last year our work was conducted in larger cities of the state. This year we determined to carry on the campaign in the smaller cities. As was to be expected, the cost of carrying on the work was greatly increased, but the reward for our efforts is being realized every day."

The speaker said he was well satisfied with the work of organization for this year. Eight years ago there were about seventy unions on the roster of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor. Today there are 260, or an increase of almost 400 per cent. After dealing with the advantages of unionism, the speaker acknowledged that in some instances unions were unreasonable in their demands.

"Unfortunately not all unions are dominated by men of ripe judgment and the capacity to consider and deal with conditions as they find them, and not as they would like to have them," he said. "The members, or a majority of them, may be well-meaning men who are convinced that their wage is inadequate; their hours of toil too long, and that when their demands for better conditions are presented before their fellow unionists the latter will unhesitatingly support them, either financially or by sympathetic strike. These men confine themselves entirely to a consideration of their own grievances, and do not make the slightest inquiry into the conditions governing other organizations which they confidently expect—no matter what sacrifice may be involved—to give their support.

"The probability of defeat should a union become involved in a strike within a few months after its organization is so strong that almost all of the national and international unions have adopted constitutional provisios disciplining unions that go on strike withing a certain period after their organization."

Further along Mr. McEwen said: "I submit that the best policy to pursue, before calling a strike, is to call upon unions likely to become involved and learn definitely what assistance, if any, they are in a position to give. By following this course many disappointments and much bitter feeling will be avoided, and, very likely, many strikes will never be called."

Mr. McEwen said that the most important matter before the convention was the discussion and introduction of ways and means to carry on the work of organization throughout the state.

"This is a mighty struggle in which we are engaged," he continued. "It is becoming more evident every day, as labor is gradually forcing its demands for a fairer distribution of the fruits of its toils, that the opposition is being aroused. Never in the history of the struggles of labor has capital been so thoroughly organized as it is today."

The speaker said that the present rate of taxation of federation members was too small to do the work expected. He recommended that a referendum vote be taken for the purpose of securing the consensus of opinion among the unions relating to increasing the per capita tax from 1 to 2 cents per month.

Mr. McEwen spoke of the "get together policy," and said that he believed labor and capital should get as close together as they can, and said that while he realized their interests were not always identical, they are at least reciprocal. Several instances were recited to show that the proper way was for labor and capital to get together and make agreements satisfactory to everybody concerned, just as any other buyer and seller make a contract.

"Any agency that tends to bring employer and employe into closer relation of business confidence; which encourages frank dealing between the two in connection with which certain rights of both, which oughtt o be inallenable, are recognized and respected, is an agency for good and should be cordially supported by all who desire to see and enjoy industrial peace."

Of trusts Mr. McEwen said in part:

"So many of our opponents, in discussing trade unions, refer to them as the labor trust. We are accused of attempting to destroy individual liberty. It is not true. Trade unions protect the individual. On the other hand, the trust, capital's organization, destroys him. Trade unions protect the weak and defenceless. The trusts crush the weak and protect the strong. Trade unions are like the trusts in no respect. They are organized for the many. They welcome to their ranks every man and woman who works. The trusts, on the other hand, are organized for the sole benefit of the few. They crush every competitor in the same line of business. Trade unions are inclusive; trusts are exclusive. Trade unions are democratic, trusts are autocratic. Trade unions are lawful; trusts are unlawful, hence anarchistic.

"When looking for the anarchist some men are wont to think of the kind pictured in the comic magazines. Where there is one anarchist in a ditch or at a bench, there are 100 in Wall street.

"The standard dictionary defines anarchy as utter disregard for government. The American plutocratic definition, a state of lawlessness, where utter disregard is shown for the laws of a community.

"If this definition is accepted, we are living in the very midst of anarchy in its most dangerous form. It not only prevails in labor riots in industrial centers, but it tarries in the innermost circles of Wall street, where it is capable of doing the most harm. It lingers in the legislative halls and occupies the seats of honor therein. It pollutes executive chambers in some instances, and defiantly flaunts its red flag at a pleading population."

Mr. McEwen said that organization of trusts in restriction of trade, literally and morally in violation of state and national laws, is anarchy, and gave many similar illustrations.

He said that anarchy existed in its worst form, in Colorado in the present strike of miners on the side of the governor and the generals who did his bidding. He detailed the hardships of the miners in the strike.

TO OBSERVE FLAG DAY

Patriotic Program at First M. E. Church—Two Speakers.

Flag day, set by congress for the celebration of the anniversary of the country's colors, falls on June 14, tomorrow, and it is expected that the public and private buildings of the city will observe the day with appropriate show of the national colors.

Special arrangements were to have been made for an entertainment of the patriotic line by the local G. A. R. posts, but because of the fact that the state Sunday school convention begins its session here tomorrow, the Grand Armer men gave over the celebration to the convention workers. The result is a patriotic program to be given in the First Methodist church tomorrow evening. Flag day and its observance will be discussed by Rev. Dr. Forbes of this city, and he will be followed in a patriotic address by Rev. James S. Montgomery, of St. Paul.

FISHING AT CASS LAKE

Catching Pike and Perch In Hundred Pound Lots.

Cass Lake is making a strong bid to being the best fishing ground in Northern Minnesota, and the catches that have already been made there this spring and summer bear out the claims.

Aside from several big muskellunge, there have been immense quantities of pike and perch, some black bass and croppies taken out of Cass lake, or its tributary streams and bodies of water.

Saturday evening two Cass Lake men, in less than five hours' time, caught enough pike and perch to fill a flour barrel to the overflowing point.

Yesterday a party of seven Superior and Duluth fishermen took out over 400 pounds of pike and perch, besides catching over 100 pounds of pickerel, that were thrown back.

Another party of Cass Lake people had strings of the same fish aggregating over 225 in number.

It is claimed that such fishing is not uncommon through the season, and people are beginning to go there from all over the country.

GAMES TODAY.

Fargo at Duluth.
Crookston at Superior.
Winnipeg at Grand Forks.

After robbing the Woodpeckers of Saturday's game by a sensational finish in the ninth inning, Van Praagh's bunch fell down yesterday and let the Crookston aggregation wipe its feet all over them, and incidentally use them as a stepping stone to climb out of the last hole.

Saturday's game was one of the heart-gripping kind that brings the fans to their feet. But the White Sox were mighty lucky—mighty lucky. They did not deserve that game, and had it not been for the mysterious workings of the goddess of fortune, Duluth would have dropped two out of three to the Woodpeckers.

Think of getting five hits to the Woodpeckers' twelve, and think of making three errors to their one, and think of winning the game in spite of it all! And that's what the White Sox did Saturday afternoon.

Arise, Mr. "Newt" Randall, you with the mighty club! You're the boy that did it all. You deserve the gaze of the admiring public. It was in the ninth inning, and bubbles of despondency were arising in the brains of the fans. The kid at the score board, who has sentiments which reach to his heels, commenced to tearfully mark out the outline of the totals when Ball came to bat. He waited patiently and was allowed to walk to first unmolested. Owens followed suit, and then Buck Noldin came to bat in place of Gehring. Buck responded to the frantic appeals for a hit most manfully. He swatted the bulb and the bases were full. Imagine nobody out and the bases full, with two runs needed to tie the score and three to win.

Corrigan sent a long fly to right field and Ball scored. One out and one run to tie. Quillan, after sending a foul over the left field fence, knocked a little pop fly up to Henry and the fans groaned.

But "Newt" was still left. "Just a little bit," pleaded the fans, and the first ball pitched met Newt's swatstick on the nose and went to the left field fence for a beautiful single. Owens and Noldin ambled home, and the game was won.

But they were lucky—mighty lucky. Those despised tail-enders landed on Buck in every inning for at least one hit, securing three in the sixth and two in the ninth. The score:

But yesterday the White Sox lost in a long low sob. An elongated slab artist by the name of Martin did the trick, while 3000 fans looked on in sadness and silence.

The future champions played like schoolboys and the support given Noldin was enough to take the heart out of any pitcher. For four innings only one Woodpecker reached first base, getting a life on an error by Randall. Then in the fifth two gentle swats and a fumble by Owens let the first man across the rubber for Crookston.

In the sixth the slaughter continued. Martin led off with a single and Breyette repeated the trick. Then the Woodpeckers commenced the hit and run game. Schils sacrificed and Carlisle beat out a sneak swat which brought home Martin, and Breyette came in on a fumble by Owens. Carlisle stole second, and after Novacek had struck out, came home on Burton's hit.

In the seventh session, Miller led off with a double, and went to third on Martin's out. Breyette knocked an easy one to Zink, and the big first baseman by a quick throw caught Miller ten feet from the plate. He was run down by Quillan and O'Leary. With two out and only one man on bases, it looked easy, but Schils rapped out a single. Then Lee Quillan did his little stunt. Carlisle sent a slow one his way, and the Duluth third baseman after making a beautiful running pick-up, threw the ball to the bleachers, allowing Breyette and Schils to score, and sending Carlisle to third. He came in a moment later when Novacek singled. Burton ended the agony by striking out.

O'Leary mauled the ball for one pillow in the ninth, and when Lagger placed out another single the fans saw a faint and distant glimmer of hope. But Mr. Miller of the pin-wheel legs was only teasing them. Capt. Artie Ball passed off the scene quietly by allowing three of those mysterious twists to cut the center of the plate. Owens hit at Schils, the fast-fielding second baseman, and the natural result followed, but O'Leary raced in with a useless run. Then Noldin did the courteous thing by his fellow-twirler in striking out, and it was all over.

They were lucky to get two out of three—very lucky. The score.

AN EVEN BREAK.

Fargo Takes Saturday's Game and Superior Sunday's.

Werden's braves and Cameron's colts broke even in the two games played Saturday and Sunday.

In Saturday's game the Swampjumpers played like dead men, and presented the game to the North Dakota men by piling up six errors. Dixie miniature twirler of the Superior team, pitched good ball, but lost his game through wretched support.

The batting rally by the Longshoremen netted two runs in the sixth and seventh, but the joy of the fans was short-lived as Werden's braves came back with two in the eighth and one in the ninth. The score:

"Demon" Shaw had the satisfaction of shutting out the Fargo team yesterday, while Noldin, for whom he was traded to Superior by Van Praagh, was getting bumped by the Woodpeckers.

Shaw allowed but two hits, and they came in different innings. He passed two men to first and struck out six.

The Swamjumpers took kindly to Hillock's curves and had ten safe ones marked to their credit.

The Bugville bunch was evidently anxious to get revenge for the two defeats at the hands of Werden's braves, and they played the kind of ball that wins pennants. Only one error is marked up against them, and that came on a hard chance by Egan. The score:

Two out of three from Crookston, and the exhibition game lost.

* * *

Fargo and Perry Werden this afternoon. A hard combination to beat.

* * *

Crookston deserves a better place than seventh.

* * *

Van Praagh's remnants over in Superior are playing good ball.

* * *

Shaw won and Buck Nolden lost. It's hard to choose.

* * *

Three games with Fargo and then to down the Bugville bunch.

* * *

Were they the tail-enders? They looked more like the champions. They deserved three out of the four games played here.

* * *

That was Newt Randall's game Saturday. His hit was a timely one.

The attendance at the ball games in Duluth has averaged better during the past week than in any of the cities in the American association, with the single exception of Columbus, where a big Sunday crowd of 10,000 brought the average up.

Bemidji Again Trims Akeley Eleven to One.

Bemidji, June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Bemidji and Akeley baseball teams played a game at the park here yesterday afternoon, and the home team, for the second time this season, administered a crushing defeat to the visitors, the final score being 11 to 1. During the past two weeks the Bemidji team has been greatly strengthened, until now the organization will rank favorably with any semi-professional club in Northern Minnesota.

Manager Kane has Witt, a member of the Northern League team at Crookston, who has been loaned to Bemidji for the balance of the season. Manager Lyman of that team having more twirlers than he could carry. Neeland, a fast southpaw from St. Paul, has joined the team within the past week, as has also Benthien, a first baseman from Saginaw, Mich. These new players, together with Ludwig and Oman, of Cass Lake, and the local members of the team, make a fast nine.

Witt pitched yesterday's game, not a safe hit being made off his delivery, and Ludwig caught his swift ones without a passed ball and gave the pitcher perfect support behind the willow. The only score which Akeley secured came in the opening inning, when by a succession of errors Frickey went over the plate, an error at short doing the business. After that inning the visitors were at Witt's mercy, and ten of the opposing batsmen were struck out. The pitcher also drove out a three-bagger at an opportune time. The balance of the team gave Witt perfect support, with the exception of the misplay at short in the first inning. Kruger, Bergerson and Espe did the battery work for Akeley, and had the pitchers been given as good support as was given the Bemidji twirler the score would have been much closer. Bemidji secured nine hits, and the errors of the visiting players were too numerous to mention. Rutledge, of Cass Lake, and Preville, of Bemidji, umpired.

For Civil Service.

The United States civil service commission announces an examination on July 6 in Duluth to secure eligibles from which to make certification to fill vacancies as they may occur in the position of farmer in the Indian service. Considerable difficulty has been experienced in securing eligibles for this position, and the commission, therefore, urges qualified persons to enter the examination.

As no applications were filed for the examination scheduled for May 14, another examination will be held in the local federal building on June 25, to secure eligibles for the position of firemen in the federal building, and other similar vacancies as they may occur. The salary attached to the position is $720 a year.

TRAIN KILLS TWO HORSES

Great Northern Strikes a Couple Near Swan Lake.

The eastbound Great Northern passenger train from Grand Forks, Crookston and Cass Lake, struck and killed two horses on the track near Swan Lake early this morning.

One of the horses was killed outright and the other was so badly injured that the trainmen shot it to put it out of misery.

The train was running at full speed and, when just the other side of Swan Lake, dashed into a fog from the river nearby and struck the animals before their presence was hardly known to the engineer.

One horse was tossed in the air, falling in the ditch at the side. The second horse was knocked down in front of the engine and was rolled and dragged between the rails for about a train length. The result was a conglomerated mass of horsehide, flesh and legs, and the front of the engine looked as though it might have telescoped a slaughter house.

None of the pasengers were aware of the accident until the train stopped and backed to find the horse in the ditch, to kill it. The trainmen regard the accident as fortunate in happening where it did, for close by was a bridge where the animals might have fallen between the ties and derailed the train when it struck them.

JAPANESE WOMEN.

Examples of System.

THE Japanese do not believe in a "weaker sex." They believe in teaching women to be as strong as the men. This they accomplish by a system of training for the body known as Jiu Jitzu. First, their basis of all strength is a healthy stomach. Second, practicing deep breathing in the open air for at least fifteen minutes—standing with hands on hips. Then, exercises that strengthen heart, arms and legs—but never practising these to the point of great fatigue—taking time to it and increasing the exercise each day. This system followed up, puts the Japanese women on a par with the men so far as physical strength is concerned. Such methods of bringing up young girls would be wholesome for American mothers to practice—as in mature life health and strength depends so much on the early training. Women have themselves to blame for being "the weaker sex." Mentally she is man's equal; physically she is usually his inferior. The reason is that as a girl she usually does not take the exercise in the outdoor air that her more fortunate brother does; then she early develops a female weakness due to catching cold at some critical period, or to tight lacing or some carelessness. If the young girl is anemic and pale she is predisposed to such irregularities. The mother should advise her at such time and get some good medical work, like the "Common Sense Medical Adviser," by R. V. Pierce, M. D. If the young girl shows peculiar nervous symptoms, it would be well for the mother to write a personal letter to Dr. Pierce, and she will receive confidential advice from him without any charge, simply costing the postage stamp and paper.

"You may think I am only a fraud as I have not written to you recently," writes Mrs. Lucy Wolfinger, care of Mr. Markley, Thorp's Lane, (Roxburgh), Philadelphia, Penn'a, but I thought I would wait and see if I would have any return of my trouble. I find my health remains good. You must remember I was a physical wreck when I first wrote to you, having been only five months out of the hospital after undergoing an operation and not getting much better. You answered my letter almost right away, for which I thank you most heartily, telling me to get your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' also 'Lotion Tablets' and 'Suppositories;' all of which I used and found that they were worth their weight in gold. I only weighed one hundred pounds last January, when I first wrote to you, but now my weight is one hundred and thirty-five pounds. I could do no work—the lightest kind was too much for me. Now we have a little vegetable garden which I take care of and do the housework for five, all myself. My friends are never through telling me how well I look. They say I am ten years younger in looks. My own family doctor says it is wonderful the change that has been made, so you see I have a great deal more to thank you for than I will ever be able to do; but I will always pray for your guidance and protection, and will always recommend your medicines. I do not think that any one could suffer more than I did. I took seven bottles of each kind of medicine and used one box each of the 'Lotion Tablets' and 'Suppositories.'"

Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors and makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb, which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets clear the complexion and sweeten the breath, they cleanse and regulate the stomach, liver and bowels and produce permanent benefit and do not re-act on the system. One is a gentle laxative.

HEARST IS BEATEN

For Control of the Minnesota State Democratic Convention.

Probable Result of the County Conventions Held on Saturday.

St. Paul, June 13.—While William R. Hearst captured two of the biggest counties in the state Saturday, indications are that, added to Ramsey and Stearns, the country districts of Minnesota will prevent a delegation favorable to his ambitions being selected at Duluth a week from Wednesday.

Efforts in a large number of counties to secure instructions for Hearst failed, and in some others he will receive scattering votes from delegates.

In a number of the counties, notably Winona, Benton, Jackson and Faribault, the Hearst managers claim they have captured the delegations. The greater number of the smaller counties in the state, however, appear to have elected delegates who will not vote for Hearst delegates in the state convention, and the anti-Hearst leaders are quite certain that the state convention will not be stampeded by the Hennepin-St. Louis county combination.

Uniformly throughout the state of Minnesota Democratic county conventions were held Saturday for the selection of delegates to the delegate state convention of the party to be held at Duluth June 2.

The issue in nearly every county in the state was the question of instructions or no instructions. Followers of William R. Hearst, in every instance where there was the faintest opportunity for success—and in some counties where absolutely no hope existed of securing the adoption of their plan—worked for instructions for their choice for president.

While sentiment among Minnesota conservative Democrats probably preponderates for Judge Parker, no effort was made to secure instructions for him, his friends and opponents of Hearst generally being content with uninstructed delegates who will use their best judgment in the St. Louis convention.

Ramsey county, which is one of the Parker strongholds in the state, made no effort to instruct for him, though there would have been no objection to this program had it been deemed advisable by Judge Parker's friends. The Hearst men, on the other hand, evidently desired to bind the delegates hard and fast to the New York congressman, and in counties where they were in the saddle they urged their delegates to the state convention to work for an instructed delegation for Hearst to the national convention.

In the Hennepin county convention there was a bitter fight for control of the temporary organization. S. A. Stockwell and Maj. J. M. Bowler were nominated for chairman, and Bowler was elected, 192 to 191. This was a Hearst victory and thereafter they ran things to suit themselves. F. D. Larrabee and James R. Corrigan were elected district delegates to the national convention and were instructed for Hearst. A resolution was passed indorsing Charles A. Towne of New York, as second choice for the presidency. A committee was appointed to select 192 delegates to the state convention and an adjournment was taken until Wednesday, when the list will be approved.

Aitkin county elected a delegation strongly anti-Hearst.

Brown county sent an uninstructed delegation, a few being Hearst men.

Blue Earth county elected eighteen delegates, three or four for Hearst and the rest anti-Hearst.

The Democracy of Beltrami county met in convention at Bemidji and named a full set of delegates to the Duluth convention. The attendance was large and enthusiastic and while the delegation will go unpledged still the sentiment is rather strong in favor of Hearst. The delegates are L. G. Pendergast, P. J. Russell, Alex. Cameron, A. Gilmour, Col. J. P. Taylor and I. W. Langaerd.

The sixteen delegates chosen in Dakota county were instructed to vote as a unit. They are anti-Hearst.

The Fillmore delegates are strongly anti-Hearst.

Freeborn county sends a Hearst delegation.

The four delegates elected in Kanabec county are for Hearst.

The ten delegates from Kandiyohi favor Parker or McClellan.

An attempt was made to stampede the Le Sueur convention for Hearst, but it failed, and an uninstructed delegation was sent.

A majority of the delegates elected in Martin county are anti-Hearst and anti-Parker.

The Meeker county delegation is uninstructed, but is anti-Hearst.

Otter Tail's delegation is said to favor an uninstructed delegation to St. Louis.

Pope county's eleven delegates are uninstructed, but are anti-Hearst.

Pine county elected the following delegates: R. C. Saunders, J. J. Folsom, M. B. Hurley, B. J. Rolle, William Russell, Walter Scott, Charles Reinholdson and Charles L. Eaton. They are anti-Hearst.

Rock county elected an uninstructed delegation.

Most of the Rice county delegates favor Parker.

Seven of the Steele county delegates are for Parker, two are for Hearst and two favor Towne.

The Sherburne county delegates are uninstructed, but the majority are for Hearst.

On the Swift county convention the prevailing sentiment was for an uninstructed delegation to St. Louis.

The eight delegates from Traverse county are for Hearst.

The Wabasha delegation is about one-half for Parker, with the rest anti-Parker, but not united on a choice.

In Waseca, the largest number of the delegates favor Hearst, but no instructions were given.

Washington county elected anti-Hearst delegation of twelve.

Winona county's delegation is uninstructed, but is headed by Judge H. L. Buck, who favors Hearst.

The Watonwan delegation is anti-Hearst.

Morrison county elected a Hearst delegation.

The Polk county convention elected a anti-Hearst delegation of twenty. The Hearst men bolted and elected a contesting delegation.

Nicollet county chose an anti-Hearst delegation.

The Meeker county delegates are anti-Hearst.

The Olmstead county convention endorsed Hearst as first choice for president.

Chippewa county elected Hearst delegates.

ALREADY FORMED

Line For the Cass Lake Land Opening Is Begun.

Nearly Thirty Men Slept on Sidewalk Sunday Night.

With the opening of the lands in the Chippewa and Winnibigoshish Indian reservations, Wednesday morning, of this week, there will be one of the largest rushes for entries at the new Cass Lake land office than has probably ever occurred before at any land office in the Northwest.

Previous to this year Duluth held the record for persistence on the part of intending settlers when, on two occasions, men and women were in line in the corrdior of the federal building for more than twenty-four hours waiting for the land office to open for the entries.

The Cass Lake land office will now take the record, for although the opening of the land does not take place until 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, last evening there were between twenty and thirty men sleeping in line on the sidewalk outside the land office waiting for the opening.

The line first formed yesterday afternoon when five settlers located by one of the Cass Lake attorneys, marched into position and announced that they would form the head of the line into the land office Wednesday morning.

As soon as the news spread that the line was being formed, there were a number of others who made haste to get as near the front of the line as possible.

One of the men near the head of the line claimed last evening that he had already been offered $25 for his place.

For practically three days and three nights the men will camp on the sidewalk to hold their places in the line. Whenever one man wishes to leave for his meals it has been arranged so that his adjoining companions hold his place in line for him. In case of sickness or other urgent maters that might take a man out of line it is said that agreement has been made that he can put in a substitute to hold his place.

In all there are 71,168.56 acres to be opened in the Cass Lake land district.

EPISCOPAL CONVOCATION

To Be Held In Duluth Three Days This Week.

The annual convocation of the Duluth diocese of the Episcopal church will be held in this city tomorrow and it is expected that between 100 and 150 clergymen, delegates and women of the auxiliary will be entertained this week by the members of the local churches.

The convocations correspond to the conferences held by other classes of churches. The assembly is a delegate body comprising the clergymen and representatives of the parishes.

The convocation will close Friday. The first day's session will be held in St. Paul's church and Thursday's meeting in St. Luke's church. Wednesday evening the pulpits of the Episcopal churches will be occupied by visiting clergymen.

There will also be an annual meeting during the convocation of the Women's auxiliary, a missionary body connected with the church.

During the convocation, delegates will be selected to the general convocation at Boston.

St. Luke's church was first opened following repairs by Bishop J. D. Morrison, last evening.

The church will be consecrated Thursday morning at 10 o'clock, the bishop being assisted by all the clergy of the diocese. The sermon will be preached by Rev. W. J. Moody, of Brainerd.

BACKWARD IS ITS COURSE

Superior to Make Street Railway Traffic to Duluth Difficult.

The city council of Superior has ordered the Duluth-Superior Traction company to remove one of its tracks on Main street, Connors Point.

The request is about to be complied with, but as soon as the track is up the street railway company will substitute a 20-minute service between Duluth and Superior instead of a 10-minute service as heretofore.

The company officials claim that it is absolutely impossible for it to keep up a 10 or even a 15 minute service with one track on the point and the interstate bridge.

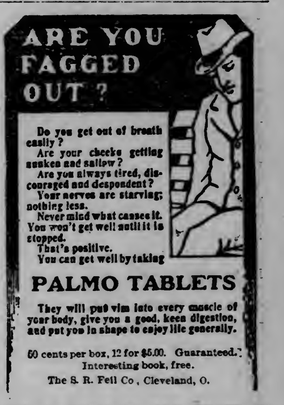

The curtailing of the service between the two cities will be a serious inconvenience to a very large number of people.

It is claimed that only a small number of people ever urged the removal of one of the tracks.

The street railway officials say that the work of tearing up the track will begin at once.

The former schedule for the street cars between the two cities was cut down from 20 minutes and finally to 10 minutes to meet the demand for travel between Duluth and Superior. The going back to the old 20-minute schedule will, it is claimed, cause no end of annoyance for the reason that the travel on the interstate line is quite heavy.

It pays to advertise in The Herald—ask Simon Clark.

MEANS MUCH TO DULUTH.

It is authoritatively announced that at last the fondest dream of loyal and progressive Duluthians—improvement of the St. Louis river water power—is about to be consummated. While delay has been caused by the unsatisfactory condition of the market in its relation to industrial securities, the unusual merit of this water power proposition finally found its way to the minds of leading capitalists with the result that more than sufficient money to carry on the work has been pledged.

Besides furnishing further evidence of the fact that the monied interests of the East do not look upon the present slight business depression as likely to be of long duration, the successful closing of this financial deal shows the high esteem in which Duluth and its securities are held in financial circles generally.

The expenditure of $3,000,000 in the construction of dams and purchase of machinery canot fail to have a very beneficient effect upon local business, and it will no doubt stimulate a lively building campaign throughout the city, especially in the western end.

The probability of the establishment of a mammoth paper-making industry in connection with this water power enterprise is almost a certainty, and this will lead to the expenditure of an additional million and a half which will go into the pockets of local labor.

The effect that the beginning of work on this water power will have in inducing other manufacturers and industries to locate at the head of the lakes will also prove a stimulus to all lines of trade and Duluth can look forward to one of the most prosperous periods in her history. It is bound to bring on an era of great growth and expansion.

THE NEW COURTHOUSE.

An attempt has been made by certain interests to create the impression that the people of Duluth, and especially the largest taxpayers, are in favor of building the proposed new courthouse on the site of the old building. It does not require a very extended investigation to show that the preponderance of public sentiment on this question is in favor of locating the courthouse in the central business section of the city. It is almost generally agreed that a new courthouse must be built in the near future, and that a combined courthouse and city hall should be constructed when the decision to build has been reached. There are so many arguments in favor of a combined courthouse and city hall, from the standpoint of public convenience, that the idea receives very general support.

The inconvenience of a courthouse at Sixth avenue east and Second street is apparent to every one who has business at the courts or the county offices. The time and money lost by the public in traveling to that out-of-the-way location is a heavy item. The inconvenience of the public should be the first consideration when erecting any public building, and it is undeniable that the present location of the courthouse is most inconvenient. Public interests demand that the new courthouse be erected in the central business section at some point not farther up the hill than Second street. There are many desirable properties that could be secured, and never will the county be able to buy a site cheaper than at the present time.

The taxpayers who believe in a more central location for the courthouse should not fail to let the county commissioners know where they stand on the question. If it be shown that those who pay the largest proportion of the taxes want a central site for the new courthouse, the county board will undoubtedly act accordingly.

WHAT BREEDS ANARCHY?

If, as a result of the outrages now being perpetrated in Colorado, several hundred deported miners become anarchists and march up and down the land preaching death and destruction to all government, it is to be expected that the president will send an appealing message to the next congress to pass more rigid laws for the suppression of anarchistic teachings.

Yet, who is it that creates anarchists?

When the Republican party, without warrant of law or authority of the constitution, sends the army of the United States into another country to force into submission the people justly entitled to govern, it sets the example. No doubt Governor Peabody and the mine owners of Colorado argue that it this can be done in the Philippines with approval of the people, why can not the same thing be done with the members of the miners' union in that state? Why should not the state forces proceed, at the behest of organized greed, without warrant of law or authority of the constitution, to break up and destroy the workingmen's organization, to drive its members from the state and to shoot down all those who would attempt to defend their rights as citizens of an allegedly free country?

If the supreme court of the United States can deprive American citizens in the Philippines of the rights guaranteed to them by the constitution, why cannot the military and the courts of Colorado deprive citizens of that state of the rights guaranteed to them by the constitution and laws of the commonwealth?

If the great trusts and combines succeed in purchasing congress to pass laws which will protect them in their wholesale thievery from the people of the nation, and in inducing courts to render decisions contrary to the laws and the constitution, why should not the corporations of the state bribe the legislature to disobey the popular will and persuade courts to render decisions that will uphold their violation of the laws?

Again it becomes apparent that the question is not what we will do to the Philippines, but what the Philippines will do to us. The present situation in Colorado is one of the direct results of that state of public mind which permits the organized greed of the nation to strike down both laws and constitutional guarantees for its own benefit.

There are anarchists and anarchists. Some of them sit in high places. Some of them sit on the supreme court bench, and, because invested with a little brief authority, destroy more laws and bring more contempt upon the government than could all the avowed anarchists that might preach from now until doomsday.

If there is to be general respect for the law it must be respected by rich and poor, high and low. We cannot have laws to govern the lowly when the "rich and respected" are permitted to violate the same laws at their own sweet will. Abraham Lincoln never spoke a greater truth than when he said in effect that no people could undertake to deprive others of their liberty without endangering their own. The liberty of American citizens is not only in danger—it has flown.

INSURANCE IN THE CHURCH.

Some weeks ago The Herald discussed the insurance orders in their relation to churches, and suggested that the religious societies might benefit themselves if they would seek by practical means to emulate the example set them by the fraternal organizations. The discussion was called out by the assertion of a preacher that insurance orders were devices of satan and that insuring one's life was "flying in the face of Providence," or words to that effect.

At the time the article was written the fact was unknown that a start had been made along those lines. But the information comes through the Congregationalist and Christian World, from the pen of Rev. E. N. Hardy, that an excellent model of this type of organization is the Pilgrim Fraternal association of the Pilgrim Congregational church, Dorchester. A little more than ten years ago the pastor, Dr. W. H. Allbright, wrought out the plan of the fraternity which has become widely known. The dues are $1 to join and 50 cents per month for eight months of each year. Benefits derived from the fraternity: $5 a week in sickness; relief to the extent of $25 in case of financial distress; $50 to nearest relative in case of a member's decease; an occasion for pleasant association with other men of the church not otherwise offorded. The present membership of the association is 110. The average attendance at the regular meetings is about 65. More than $3000 has been paid out in benefits, and the financial conditions of the fraternity were never in better shape. Even though "religion is not the direct concern of the society," the religious interests of the church have been gratly increased, the audiences enlarged, and the financial resources of the church much developed through this association.

Among other church clubs that have been successful in attracting and holding the interest of men is the educational club, and Mr. Hardy is of the opinion that Protestants have much to learn from Roman Catholics concerning work for men.

It is a fact that the principle of mutual helpfulness exemplified by the fraternal insurance organizations will attract and hold men together in bonds of brotherhood more strongly than all the preaching that can come from the pulpits. People of today are practical. They are convinced by deeds, not words. They want something more substantial than fine-spun theories and they are more concerned as a rule over the affairs of this life than over the possibilities or the probabilities of the life to come. Anything that has a tendency to enable them to live better lives here and now, will receive their sympathy and co-operation. It is not necessary for churches to go into the insurance business, perhaps, but it is necessary for them to give practical effect to at least a few of the beautiful theories they preach.

HOW TRADE IS CREATED.

A recent issue of the Manila Daily Bulletin, a representative of American interests in the Philippines, said: "Stripped of all the silly vestments of sentiment, the expression 'trade follows the flag' means nothing more or less than that trade follows the people who by their lives, their example, their love for country which that flag represents and their disposition to establish on a foreign soil the same ideals of life and manners to which they were formerly accustomed, create a spirit of emulation on the part of those with whom they are associated. Trade follows Americans. Every American in the Philippine islands is a missionary of American commerce.

"Mr. Taft states that there will never be more than 20,000 Americans in the archipelago, while the native population numbers at the present time more than 7,000,000, and there is every probability that this will be greatly increased. Our only opportunity, therefore, is the opening of a market for American manufactured goods. Trade will follow ships to these lands when a demand exists for the goods of the United States, and that depends on the little army of American pioneers who are blazing the trails of commerce in the islands."

In other words, while the Philippines may never expect to accommodate more than 20,000 Americans, and most of these paid representatives of the American government, the people of the United States are asked to continue to tax themselves for the support of these pap-suckers in the hope that at some time in the far-distant future they will have created, by their example, a demand for American manufactures.

This is, of course, a specious plea, put forward in behalf of those who would keep their government jobs no matter at what cost to the American people. The fact of the matter is that the only increase in American exports to the Philippines since American occupation has been occasioned by the demands of those comparatively few Americans who reside in that country. They would have consumed more of American goods had they remained at home and earned their living at some productive employment. And that would not have cost the taxpayers a single penny.

It is a mighty expensive way of encouraging exports to send a horde of salaried Americans to some dependency in order to create a "foreign demand." Those 20,000 Americans have a strenuous job on their hands to induce over 7,000,000 people to abandon their established habits and customs in order to create a demand for American goods. The Manila editor is altogether too sanguine of the ability of his salaried fellow-countrymen.

The inventor of the submarine boat, the Fulton, recently demonstrated its safety and practicability by allowing it to remain all night at the bottom of Newport barbor with nine men on board. If submarine ships are to be permitted in warfare what is the sense of building big battleships? The submarine boat may prove a double blessing in that it will reduce the cost of navies and prove to the world the absolute folly of continual preparations for warfare.

The Sauk Center Herald suggests that the wearing of fancy hose and patent leather shoes by ladies has one good effect. It induces them to cut their skirts shorter and stop sweeping the streets.

Yesterday was a beautiful day outdoors, and, better yet, nearly everybody who tried caught a few fish.

HOTEL GOSSIP

Daniel M. Gunn, the Grand Rapids hotel proprietor, was here yesterday on his way to St. Paul, where he goes to secure some help for his hotel. The near approach of the Itasca county Republican convention, the Grand Army encampment and the firemen's tournament makes it imperative that the hotels be well equipped to look after the crowds, and as Mr. Gunn was unable to secure hotel help in this city he had to go farther. The local hotels have been having considerable difficulty this year in keeping properly supplied with help of the desirable kind, and consequently there is no surplus on the local market.

Mr. Gunn says the Itasca county Republicans have given their outlying delegations six days between their caucuses and the convention and then do not expect that they will be able to get people in from all the country districts. He says that Itasca county is in line for Dunn and he expects to see the Princeton candidate take the plum in that county without any great show of a contest.

Few actors who have facial adornments of the hirsute variety are allowed to keep them long, if at all. Richardson Cotton, who plays in the Florence Stone company the roles that the gallery like to hiss at, has had to part with his. Mr. Cotton, while the company was here before, had a fine mustache and the only natural one that was allowed to appear in the productions at the Lyceum. He took it away with him when the company left for St. Paul a month ago, and later decided to part with it. When he registered with Mrs. Cotton at the St. Louis this morning for breakfast his physignomy was whiskerless.

Bill posters have no snap. There are nineteen of them with the Ringling Brothers circus, with A. G. Ringling in charge, and they are here in their private car, in which they sleep en route. "John Smith."

The name was uttered in a coarse tone across the counter of one of the hotels. It was evidently directed toward the clerk behind the counter and was pronounced by a large, stern looking man, who was evidently bent on making the clerk think that he was a prominent proposition. The clerk is a mild looking young man and did not know why the name had been shouted at him.

He began looking about confusedly and failing to find anything that would give him a clew to what the man meant, meekly said,

"Beg pardon, what was it you wanted?"

"Mail."

"What's the name?"

Once more the man uttered the name, with more vehemence than ever. The clerk looked for the mail but found none.

"Nothing this morning."

So the large man with the abrupt way turned about and passed across the lobby.

"They come up here and ask us all sorts of questions," commented the clerk, "and seem to think that if their request is not in the form of some cohesive words in the English language, that we ought to know what they are driving at. There's a fellow I never saw before and I don't know that he ever saw me, but he comes up to me and pronounces two words together and seems to think I ought to know what he is after. Ot course 'John' and 'Smith' fit pretty well togeher, but I have no way of telling whether the man is after mail, looking for his regular room or waiting for his bill.

"Is it any wonder that hotel clerks get all sorts of afflictions when they haven't occult power or are not mind readers? They do all sorts of things to make the lives of the clerks burdensome. Once in a while some fellow comes along with a dog that he wants accommodated in the hotel, and hotels are not places for dogs. Well, the hotel takes the dog and keeps it while the owner is in the house. What does it do with it? Puts it behind the counter with the clerk and he has to be closer than a brother to the dog all day long no matter how unpleasant it may be. The dog is all right some times, but a little of him goes a long way very frequently.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A man has to spend a great deal of money to make people thing he has more than he has.

If a man is in love with a girl she can forvige him having very little sense about the other things.

The way to convince a girl you think she is pretty is to look at her so she can guess wou are thinking it.

When a woman is mad clear through sometimes you can tell it by the extra sweetness in her smile.

You can never make a man believe there is any sort of housekeeping in his house when he comes home late and finds the decanter empty.

Bit of Advice By John L. Sullivan.

Boston Record: The redoubtable and only John L. is credited with giving this advice to two small boys who paid homage at his shrine not long ago: "Boys, if you want to get along, do your work. Work is the only thing that makes men happy and successful. Don't be like the boy whose father wrote to the boy's boss asking where his son slept. The answer the man sent back was:

"'We don't know where your soon sleeps at night; he sleeps in the shop daytimes.'"

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Bemidji Pioneer: It is passing strange that justice cannot be done to Poor Lo without holding back the development of Northern Minnesota so many years. The north country is ripe for a great growth, but the dead weight of everlasting reservations hangs about its neck and what it achieves it must win against nermous odds. Northern Minnesota should stand together as one man for the speedy solution of the Indian question in this part of the state. A little shoulder to shoulder work in this matter will do much to hasten the day when Northern Minnesota will be free from the entangling Indian alliances, now suffered per force.

Mankato Free Press: After all the fuss that was made by some persons who profess to be wiseacres, Mr. Cotton of Duluth will help to place Theodore Roosevelt in nomination for the presidency. Mr. Cotton will deliver one of the seconding speeches, and he will do justice to the subject and the occasion; at the same time he will reflect great credit upon himself and his state.

Little Falls Herald: The Republican party of Minnesota presents a spectacle these days which can hardly be pleasing to the masses of the organization, who witness daily revelations showing that trusted leaders have been untrue to honor, to the party and to the state. The corruption appears to be so deep that it is doubtful whether even the nomination of a good man yet unmentioned would purify the party. A defeat is sometimes a wholesome dose for a party drunk with power, and that is what the G. O. P. of Minnesota needs.

Minneapolis Tribune: Anna Held has gone up against her Waterloo with "Mlle Napoleon" and vulgar gossip in Chicago has it that she took it out on poor Florence Ziegfeld the closing night of her engagement by boxing his devoted ears and slapping his tender jaws. And yet Florrie is not to be blamed because a long-suffering public refuses to be entertained any further by the shrugging of shapely shoulders, the serpentine twisting of lissome limbs, the suggestive sibilations of rosy lips, and the tantalizing display of French lingerie.

BILLBOARDS REMOVED.

Important legislation against the billboard nuisance is reported this week from different parts of the country. The members of the board of public works of Seattle have announced that they will refuse to sanction the existence of any billboards in the residence section of that city. Citizens objected to these billboards and the authorities had them removed at once.

At Omaha the nuisance has been considerably abated by the adoption of a city ordinance whiche makes it compulsory for billboard men to get the consent of every property owner within 200 feet of the site where the boards are to be erected. A heavy yearly license is also imposed.

S. E. Edwards, superintendent of buildings of Kansas City, has refused to issue any permits for billboards in that city. A new law gives him the right to do what he pleases in this matter, and he has announced that he is strongly opposed to the billboard nuisance.

An ordinance has been passed at Akron, O., which prevents the erection of billboards within 300 feet of any schoolhouse.

THE FUNNY FELLOWS.

Philadelphia Telegraph: Wagner—Is it proper to say "drank," or "drunk?"

Insurer—It depends altogether on how far gone you are.

Town Topics—Brown—Mrs. De Smythe seems to be extremely up-to-date.

Jones—Yes—they say her husband is one of the latest things out.

Cincinnati Enquirer: Fred—Were you at the wedding of young Softun and Miss Leaderer?

Joe—Yes; it was quite a swell affair.

Fred—Who was the best man?

Joe—As the honeymoon isn't over, I hardly think it is settled yet.

New York Sun: Othello had just smothered Desdemona.

"I couldn't help it," he exclaimed. "It was the ninetieth cosy corner pillow she had made that I wasn't to lie on."

Herein we may see to what lengths even a brave man may be driven.

Yonkers Statesman: Patience—Does she ever speak of her family tree?

Patrice—No; I think it was one of those shady sort of trees.

Princeton Tiger: "Did ye hear that Casey were in an accident?"

"Phwat! Did he git married?"

"Whist, no; not that bad; he only hed a leg took off."

What cooling dreams come laughing with Each vigorating quaff,
And as we keep on quaffing, how
We linger, love and laugh.
Oh, how we drift, and drowse, and dream,
And watch the humdrum pass,
When the mint is in the julep,
And the frost is on the glass!

Raisuli.

I am the bandit, Raisuli;
Never a bandit half so fly.
Talk of your fierce marauding Greeks—
Only a parcel of swaggering sneaks.
What of Diavalo? He's outlone—
I'm the bandit that takes the bun.
Scrambling down from my Moorish lair,
Snatching the victims here and there,
Hustling up to my mountain den,
Claiming the ransoms there and then.
Never a life that's half so gay—
Woe to the victim who doesn't pay!
Clipper of noses and trimmer of ears,
Arch arouser of terrible fears,
What care I for all their threats?
Still do I spread my ready nets.
I am the bandit, Raisuli—
Never a bandit half so fly!

SHAW'S KEYNOTE.

New York Sun: Knowing that time is money, the Hon. Leslie M. Shaw has taken it by the forelock. He has begun to answer Democratic campaign arguments before they are made. To a Roosevelt Workingmen's club in Wilmington he spake this prophecy:

"I venture the opinion that at least one-half of our opponents' argument during the coming campaign will be directed against alleged unreasonable living expenses. You will be told that the price of bread is unreasonable; in short, that the price of everything you buy has been unduly advanced, and all because of Republican policies and Republican legislation."

Mr. Shaw is sure that before the campaign begins to hum "data from the highest possible authority" will show that average wages have increased "in larger proportion than the average articles of ordinary household consumption."

The highest possible authority in the matter of each wage earner's wages is himself. His wife is the highest authority as to the price of articles of home consumption consumed in his home. "Data," however authentic and however carefully compiled and neatly tabulated by the clerks in the department of commerce and labor, cannot compete with these homemade statistics. This is our own remark, not Mr. Shaw's.

Fortunately some nobler food than the husks of statistics is to be within the reach of the wage worker and the salaried man. Mr. Shaw offers this sentiment:

"Employment for all our people at a given wage, with living expenses high, is preferable to employment for only one-half our people with living expenses however cheap."

This is a generous, an altruistic sentiment. It smacks of the higher ethics rather than of political economy. Why will sordid employers insist that wages are too high? Why will sordid employes insist that wages are too low? And how can anybody have the face to complain that living expenses are too high? As Mr. Shaw cries piously, "May the good Lord deliver us from another period when living expenses are cheap!"

Mr. Shaw's "keynote" is early, but sweet. Increased Living Expenses a Positive Blessing. Hurrah for Roosevelt and Bigger Household Bills! Some of the cold-headed Republican managers may think that Secretary Shaw is a little rash and sudden, but thoughtful sociologists must find him refreshing. A Stoic philosophy has been the best mood most of us could bring to the paying of bills. Mr. Shaw supplies a higher motive. Bigger living expenses are to be met joyously. Think of the good they do.

"CIVIL LAW SUSPENDED."

New York World: There was no news in the announcement yesterday that the civil law had been suspended in the Cripple Creek country.

It has been too much, too often and too long suspended. When men are put in a "bull-pen" without process of law, when courts are defied by the executive, when the will of the people at the polls is denied by the legislature, when citizens are exiled by "regulators," when elected officials are driven by threats of hanging to resign, and when the terrors of dynamite are invoked to blow men by wholesale to atoms—then civil law is not "suspended" merely; it is trodden under foot.

There is now no issue in Colorado between law and order and lawlessness. There is only an issue between lawlessness and lawlessness. There is the real issue. From top to bottom—from subservient governor and corrupt legislature to lawless dynamiters and lawless vigilantes—the state is utterly demoralized.

The peace that is at last proposed will be an excellent thing in itself—most excellent if all parties to this hideous private warfare take advantage of the truce to renew their allegiance to law. Colorado must reform or be shamed in the sisterhood of the states.

Why Some Forest Reserves.

Omaha World-Herald: By methods best known to themselves and their tools, the railroad managers have had vast areas of their worthless land included in the "forest preserves." This, of course, gives them the right to select equal areas of land elsewhere. And Uncle Sam still owns vast tracts of fine land from which to make selections. Thus the railroad managers are enabled to rid themselves of their worthless land and add hundreds of thousands of acres of good land to their holdings.

While this scheme was being pushed through congress not a voice was raised in protest. The scheme was clandestine. It was a species of grand larceny characteristic of the administration that is owned body and soul by the trusts. Some day—perhaps—the people will expel the money changers from the temple.

Some Good From Finland.

The "Russification" of Finland, cruel, heartless and perfidious as it has been, has had one good result, according to Harold Drage. It is not a decade since Norway manifested every sign of restiveness under Swedish predominance, and in particular demanded the right to manage her own foreign affairs and to be seperately represented at foreign courts.

The treatment which Finland has experienced from Russia has since served as an object-lesson to Norway, and that country now recognizes that her only defense against Russia lies in a cordial union with Sweden.

An Omitted Question.

"Some years ago, while a resident of Athens, Ohio, I became involved in a quiet little game in a hotel room," said Dr. W. E. Webb the other morning to a Macon (Mo.) correspondent of the New York Sun. "The ante was modest, and nobody was going broke, but I suppose under a Puritanical construction of the statutes we were gambling. Around the board were a congressman, a judge of one of the lower courts and two others of equal prominence and reputation.

"Running at large in Athens was an energetic reformer named Coleman. He got wind of our little debauch and climbed up on a stepladder to observe over the transom.

"He heard a learned discussion regarding antes, blinds, straights and chips and saw the stakes. He recognized four of us, but the fifth man was sitting with his back to the door, directly under the transom.

"Coleman told his harrowing discovery to Prosecuting Attorney Jewett and gave him our names. He said he was ready and willing to give his evidence to the grand jury. Jewett thanked him, and warned him that when the jury convened he would be summoned.

"Of course we got wind of the affair, and uneasily waited for what would come of it. Court came on, and true to his promise, Coleman was before the jury with his evidence.

"Jewett, as the custom was, did the interrogating for the benefit of that terrible body. He asked Coleman minutely touching his knowledge of violation of the liquor laws. He inquired if he had seen any infractions of the Sunday ordinances. He sought from the witness his information concerning several recent homicides in the county. Coleman was asked if any carrying of concealed weapons or church disturbances had come under his observation.

"Then he was abruptly excused. At recess he hunted up Jewett.

"'Why the devil didn't you ask me about that poker game up in the hotel?' he demanded, indignantly.

"'Oh, yes,' said Jewett. 'I remember now. I believe you said you recognized all of them fellers except one who sat by the door?'

"'Certainly I did, and am willing to go before any court and swear to it.'

"'Yes,' responded Jewett, dryly; 'that's commendable. I'm sure—very commendable. That man with his back to the door was me.'"

Commuting a Sentence.

New York Tribune: Judge Gary, at the recent meeting of steel trust stockholders in Hoboken, said in the course of an argument:

"Your objection reminds me of the objection a lawyer once made to a judge's sentence. This judge had given a prisoner, convicted of second degree murder, thirty years' solitary confinement, whereupon the lawyer cried out:

"'But, your honor, my client is old. He won't live thirty years.'

"'Well, then,' said the judge, 'I'll shorten his sentence to life imprisonment, if you prefer it.'"

Where the Boss Made a Mistake.

Louisville Courier-Journal: A senior of one of our large manufacturing concerns came through the store recently and noticed a boy sitting on a counter, swinging his legs and whistling merrily. The senior eyed him severely as he confronted him and inquired:

"Is this all you have to do?"

"Yes, sir."

"Very well; report to the cashier and tell him to pay you off. We don't need boys like you around here."

"But, sir," said the astonished boy, "I don't work for you. I have just bought some goods and am waiting for the bill!"

Practical Suggestion.

Washington Star: "Do you think that honesty pays in politics?" asked the young man with the alert countenance.

"My friend," answered Senator Sorghum, "I don't like the style of your question. Any man who takes up honesty as a speculation is liable to get tired of waiting for dividends and run to the opposite extreme."

IN WOMAN'S SPHERE

Social, Musical and Art Circles.

BY LUCY E. KELLER.

Some folks predict that future years will see the wholesale district covering all the land adjacent to the canal. But the census for many years to come will count enough children to fill the four-room building called the Webster school.

These children need a playground. The business instinct is in them, for they are heard discussing ways and means. "How much does the land cost?" "We must begin to earn money?"

Once a week Miss Poirier shows them the uses of raffia. A little 12-year-old girl composed the following poem in language hour. Land comes high, but so does millinery:

BUSY WORKERS.

On every Friday afternoon,
In a little school you will visit soon,
With eyes that laugh just like the moon,
You will hear girls humming a tune,
As their fingers diligently work
On a little straw hat they are going to make.

Six thousand dollars must be earned
By these little girls,
Whose fingers fly over the raffia light,
While a very nice lady, so jolly and bright,
Teaches them to make their hats just right.

These little girls work so hard,
But never a word do they say,
Because they want to buy a playground gay,
Where all the little children in their district may play;
So their needles they ply, day by day,
To buy a playground where all their friends and they themselves may play.

ALBERT S. CHASE WEDS.

Married Miss Douglas, of Lynchburg, O., Thursday.

Word has been received in Duluth of the wedding at Lynchburg, O., of Miss Douglas and Albert S. Chase, of this city. Details of this wedding have not yet reached the city, and the news of the wedding came as a great surprise to the friends of Mr. Chase in this city. It is not expected that Mr. Chase and his bride will visit Duluth soon, or make their home here. Mr. Chase is well known here, where he has lived for a number of years.

FORMER DULUTH PASTOR.

Invitations have been received in Duluth for the wedding of Miss Jane Deakins Serpell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Goldsborough M. Serpell, of Norfolk, Va., and Bower Reynolds Patrick, formerly of this city. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride's parents, at Norfolk, Tuesday evening, June 30. Rev. Mr. Patrick was formerly pastor of the First Baptist church of this city, and is well known here. He is now acting as chaplain in the United States navy, and the announcement of his wedding will be of interest to many in Duluth.

FONDNESS FOR DISPLAY.

Chicago University Professor's Comment Upon It.

One of the latest protests against the vanity and fondness for display has been entered by Prof. Herbert J. Davenport of Chicago universtiy. He says:

"The force that wheels the ladies about in the unappreciated glory of gorgeous equipages, denies to children the right to go barefoot that the parents may not be ashamed. For a like reason it keeps them in their Sunday clothes, when they were happier and healthier in dirty; determines the marriage preparations and imposes the attendant donation party; determines the quality of our dress goods, the name of our tailor, the cut of our collars, the shape of our shoes, the length of our beard; prescribes for women—now wings on her shoulders, and again, for other decorative purposes, bustles, humps, and bolloons, the straight front, the baggy waist, the tortured walk; empties our pocketbooks in order that our wardrobes may be filled with exhibition garments; makes half our garments unwearable when not yet outworn; compels us to be ashamed of our poverty, and yet allows us no joy of our riches; and when all the weariness is done buries us in one final crash and blare of ostentatious effrontery. We waste our wealth. That which was once comfort has become privation by comparison. The cloth that once went with elegance would answer our purpose equally well if only others had not the dearer. Splendor, no matter how much it has cost, is not splendor when it has become general; so material progress, in the way in which we use it, mostly cancels itself in a strife for precedence, and leaves behind it weariness, disillusionment, and envy; our energies are wasted in a general, and therefore fruitless ministry of vanity. All may as well stand still as run in an equal race; when things are measured by comparatives and averages, scramble and scrabble count for nothing but exhaustion. No beautiful or graceful fashion, if once attained, is safe to stay. If grace and simplicity come as fashions, they go as fashions. The greed of novelty leaves the beautiful behind as antiquated, to be succeeded by the ugliness of hoops and humps and wings. Furniture changes in varieties of material and into new grotesquenesses of pattern; houses from all styles in succession to a nightmare in misjoinder of styles. From champagne to plumes of slaughtered birds, from skunk-skins to jewelry, there is nothing permanent but novelty, no custom but change."

PUPILS GRADUATE.

Exercises of St. Anthony's Church Take Place.

Last evening the graduating exercises of St. Anthony school took place at Polish hall. Although there were but four graduates, the other members of the school also took part in the exercises. The hall was prettily decorated with the class colors, old rose and green, and the motto of the class "Perseverance Wins," was suspended above the platform. The graduates are, Misses Anna Milek and Blanche Junker and Masters Henry Gruesen and Allen Wagner.

An opening chorus, "Der Lenz," was given with spirit by the pupils of the school and the same members sang the last number "Good Night." Miss Anna Fiebiger gave a recitation "Don't," which was well delivered and was followed by a pretty ring drill by the junior girls dressed in white gowns and blue ribbons. A song by the senior girls "Die Lilien auf dem Felde," was much enjoyed and the junior boys gave a sword drill and march. A drama "The Runaways," was well acted by Masters Henry Gruesen, Allen Wagner, Edward Schlender and Carl Gruesen. A recitation in German, "Das Amen der Steine," was given by Miss Emily Scharabon and the graduates sang "Sweet Home."

The valedictory was delivered by Miss Anna Milek and short speeches and presentation of diplomas and medals were made by Rev. T. Corbett and Rev. F. S. Kosmerl. Miss Katherine Fiebiger was the accompanist.

A Great Purchase of fresh, dependable

on sale at less than wholesale prices.

We have been watching for weeks for an opportunity to duplicate the very successful purchase and sale of a year ago. Up to a few days ago the prospects for securing a really desirable assortment of patterns looked doubtful. There were seconds and out-of-date patterns to be had—any quantity—but we were determined that no seconds, no remnants and no auction goods should find a place in this sale. It's the unexpected that happens. Luckily we located a carefully chosen stock of fresh, new wash fabrics in the hands of a jobber who had begun to feel uneasy about the backwardness of the wash goods season. As a consequence he was glad to accept our very low offer. While they last you buy wash goods at less than mill prices.

3½c for Batiste selling in the regular way at 6c and 8c. These are full pieces. No remnants or mill ends. Only while this lot lasts 3½c.

6½c for pretty lawns selling regularly at 10c and 12½c. No matter how many house dresses you have, you will want more at this price.

9c for dainty wash fabrics—worth 15c here—outside of our store you would expect to pay 20c for the equal. All very desirable qualities.

15c Your summer dress—and a fine one at that, at barely half the price you'd pay anywhere—over 50 different patterns of 25c fabrics.

35c for Japan silk waistings—half silk, half cotton. We've sold hundreds of patterns this season at 50c a yard.

29c for fine waist and dress fabrics, superb goods for which other stores would charge you 50c a yard.

THE EVENING STORY.

THE STORY OF A WISE FOOL

By Homer Fisk.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Bohemia was in full session at Maffioli's. Everybody knows, of course, where Maffioli's is—Maffioli's, right around the corner in little alley, where all the middle sort of actors and artists and musicians and that sort, go at unholy hours to restore tired nerves and fill empty stomachs, with the sparkling wit and the good viands set forth—the latter by Maffioli at a most scandalously reasonable price.

Well, this was well past the hour of midnight and the choice spirits present were just beginnig to cut loose and enjoy themselves. Three tables had been dragged into the middle of the room and placed to end. About this improvised banquet board were sated a score or more of the devotees of innermost Bohemia. The feast was over and the mugs of beer and clouds of cigarette smoke told that the "session" was on. Never were better stories told, never were songs better sung, never did laughter ring merrier.

There was but one solemn countenance at the board—and it was a veritable death's head at the feast. It was Benton, Russell Benton, who did juveniles so cleverly at the Bijou. And usually he was the gayest and most fun-loving of all Bohemia. Now he sat in his chair moody and sullen, drinking his beer savagely and responding not at all to the sallies of wit. Even the raillery of Tony Neiman, the original and slangy sporting editor of the Universe, whose brains, it was generally conceded, accorded with his 300 pounds and the dry wit of Archy Neville, the tall, thin, bearded artist, failed to arouse him. Finally, Mamie de Vere, the dashing little soubrette from the Academy, took the matter in hand. Perching on a chair and swinging her beer mug in her hand, she screamed:

"Look at Russ sitting there like a professional mourner at a funeral. I move, most potent, grave and reverend seignors, that he tell a good story, sing a good song or be fined the drinks."

"Hear, hear!" shouted the company.

"Oh, go on," he growled. "It's all a fake anyhow. Booze and laugh and laugh and booze and then sleep it off and do it all over again to-morrow. I'm sick of the game. There's nothing in it."

"Why don't you quit it?" shouted little Veleni, the leader of the orchestra at the Grand, in his high treble.

"By heavens, I wish I could," returned Benton savagely. "I'll tell all you lobsters something. I wish I was back in the country, ramming about at the business end of a plow, dodgin' stumps and rocks—and that's no joke, either. Here we are—all of us thinkin' we're the wisest people on earth, makin' fools of ourselves before a lot of idiots for so much per and spendig what we get giving ourselves parcels in this old tenth-rate joint. And when the season's over we haven't enough coin to get through the summer in a fourth floor, hall bedroom, without hawking next season's salary. Quit it! I'd quit so quick it'd make your head swimm if I hadn't cut my bridges behind me."

While he spoke a girl had entered the place, glanced about in a half frightened manner and shrank into an obscure seat at a corner table. She was fresh-faced and her attire bespoke the country. She seemed utterly out of place in Maffioli's. At the sound of Benton's voice she glanced toward him quickly and a startled look came into her eyes. The party in the middle of the room were so engrossed in Benton's strange words that they did not notice her at all.

"Oh, cut it," cried the de Vere from her perch on the chair. "No preaching at Maffioli's, hey boys? A song, a story or a drink and 'do it now.'"

"Wait a minute," spoke up George Preston Brooks, the long-haired poet in frayed trousers and the new and astounding Prince Albert, "Forsooth I have an idea. Russ evidently has a pastoral tale on his mind or conscience. I move he tell it. A little touch of the serious won't harm us at all."

"Good, good!" cried the crowd.

"By heavens, I will," said Benton, pushing the beer mug from him and rising.

The girl in the corner had ordered coffee and a sandwich, which she left untouched, being absorbed apparently in the scene before her.

"There was, once upon a time, a thick-headed young fool, who lived up in the country," began Benton grimly. "His father had a good farm and the young fool grew up where there was air to breathe and good stuff to eat and a soft bed to sleep on. He worked out in the open, ate like a hired man, slept like a baby and got up in the morning with a clear head and feeling like a fighting cock. Over yonder in the next farm but two, was a buxom, brown-eyed lass with cheeks like peaches and lips as red as roses. She milked the cows and churned the butter and washed the dishes and laughed and sang all day long. The fool used to go over to the other farm evenings to see the girl, and after awhile he took her to singing school or to meetin'. Once he took her to the county fair. He got to sayin' foolish things to her and she used to blush and look at the ground. Once he kissed her. That night after he went home he swore to himself he would marry her. You see he didn't know then that he was a fool. The symptoms came on later. One time his father sent him to the city and he went to a show and the glare of the footlights dazzled him so that he conceived the idiotic notion that an actor was the greatest man in the world and that an actor's life was one long dream of bliss. He went back home and began to read about actors and plays. Then some other idiot in the neighborhood got the amateur theatrical craze and the fool took part, and a lot of well-meaning, but addle-headed people told him that he did well and was cut out for an actor.

"Well, the fool got stage-struck and decided that the farm and fresh air and the good living and the good old father and mother and all the honest friends he had were not good enough for him and that he must go to the city and carve out a career. His mother was heartbroken and his father righteously angry at his decision. But of course the fool knew better than they. All fools know better than their mothers and fathers—especially cub-fools. So he went bravely away to the city, and by the sheer force of the physical vigor of the country air and good living and decent hours had given him, he wormed himself into the perfesh and for ten years has been living in ill-smelling hotels and stuffy back rooms and eating everything from free lunch weinerwurst to the sort of rot this dago concocts in his rotten kitchen.

"The fool's father was a strong man and just, and when he died a few years ago he left his property to the fool's brother, who was a wise man and stayed with a good thing, and knew enough to come in when it rained. This proves that the fool's father knew his business. So now the fool is elected to eke out his miserable existence in company with other fools of both sexes in stuffy lodgings and on liverwurst and beer and other abominations, while his brother peacefully smokes his pipe in comfort and happiness and watches his boys and girls grow to manhood and womanhood in the green fields which will be their heritage—unless they inherit their uncle and become fools."

"And the girl," suggested the poet.

"Or, yes, the girl," replied Benton. "That is the most pitiful of all. You see the girl really loved the fool and her love blinded her to his folly and she thought it was all right for him to go to the city and demonstrate the depths of his idiocy. And the fool loved the girl, too, in a fool way and when he left he took her in his arms and kissed her and swore eternal fidelity and promised her a future part in his future triumphs. A few letters passed and then the fool graduated from the supe class into a speaking part, met up against this sort of a bunch and the abandon and the wit and al the rest of it, as exemplified in our charming de Vere, appeared to the fool as the real thing and he thought the little girl in the country too plain and simple—an he forgot to write for a long time. When he came out of his trance the shoe was on the other foot und he realized that he was not worthy to tie her shoe and that his life was not fit even to suggest to her. And so the fool is alone and will continue to paint his mug nightly, when the managers are good enough to let him, and make faces at the gaping crowds and to nurse the shylocks until some day when you, my dear friends, will have the proud privilege to chip in for a cheap coffin and a cheap preacher and a cheap grave somewhere."

Benton sat down and plunged his face into the beer mug. Archie Neville said "dam" and the de Vere leaped again into the chair to try and dispel the atmosphere, when a sudden interruption occurred. The girl sitting in the corner had moved quietly to Benton's elbow. She laid her hand on his arm.

"Russell," she said softly. "You said you would come for me and I said I would wait. I have waited all these years and you have not come. So I have come for you. Father is dead and the farm is mine—ours. Come home. Oh, it has been so hard to find you."

Benton rose as one dazed and looked at the girl. Then without a glance at the party he put his arm about her and together they walked out of Maffioli's.

"Well, wouldn't that make you articulate!" exclaimed Tony Neilman, in a low voice to Brooks. But the poet was busy making notes.

TURN OVER TIME

When Nature Hints About the Food.

When there's no relish to any food and all that one eats doesn't seem to do any good then is the time to make a turn over in the diet, for that's nature's way of dropping a hint that the food isn't the kind required.

"For a number of years I followed railroad work, much of it being office work of a trying nature. Meal times were our busiest and eating too much and too quickly of food such as is commonly served in hotels and restaurants, these together with the sedentary habits were not long in giving me dyspepsia and stomach trouble which reduced my weight from 205 to 160 pounds.

"There was little relish in any food and none of it seemed to do me any good. It seemed the more I ate the poorer I got and was always hungry before another meal, no matter how much I had eaten.

"Then I commenced a fair trial of Grape Nuts and was surprised how a small saucer of it would carry me along, strong and with satisfied appetite, until the next meal, with no sensations of hunger, weakness or distress as before.

"I have been following this diet now for several months and my improvement has been so great all the others in my family have taken up the use of Grape Nuts with complete satisfaction and much improvement in health and brain power.

"American people undoubtedly eat hurriedly, have lots of worry, thus hindering digestion and therefore need a food that is predigested and concentrated in nourishment." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

CONDITION OF TRADE

James J. Hill Says Manufactured Articles Are Too High.

No Great Prosperity Until Prices Reach Proper Level.

St. Paul, June 13.—"Knox was named to succeed Senator Quay by the Eastern railroads. I do not know what kind of a senator he will make, but I do know that he is a capable lawyer, for he demonstrated his ability as an attorney when he took from the United States Steel company $600,000 for the aid and advice he gave in the formation of that corporation."

In substance this was the opinion President James J. Hill expressed at his home last night when asked what he thought of the selection of Attorney General Philander C. Knox to succeed the late Senator Matthew Stanley Quay. Mr. Hill returned yesterday from New York.

"Will Mr. Spooner, of Wisconsin, succeed Mr. Knox as a cabinet member?" Mr. Hill was asked.

"Ms. Spoonce is one of the cleanest men in American politics," replied President Hill, "and I think he would rather be a United States senator than the successor of Attorney General Knox."

President Hill's opinion regarding the recent shiftings of positions in the high councils of the Republican party came at the close of an interview regarding the business conditions and the cause of the great decrease in railway earnings throughout the country.

"The excessive cost of production is the cause for the present unfavorable suing a policy of rigid economy. Expanroad builder. "People cannot afford to pay the high prices demanded for the manufactured article. More than eighteen months ago I sounded a note of warning. I said then that we were bound to have a long period of depression and the vanguard of that depression has arrived.

"Until prices reach their proper level there can be no prosperity, such as we have enjoyed for the past few years. The railroads have ceased extending their lines and have canceled orders for equipment. Big mercantile houses are pu-9lwBut sse hrdlu mfwycp vbgkq xzfllll sion has come to an end. Few buildings are being erected and many manufacturing plant have found it necessary to suspend operations.

"This cessation of commercial activity has caused thousands of men to be thrown out of employment. The army of the unemployed is bound to double its present muster roll, for besides the enlistments caused by the decrease in the manufacturing activity, thousands of immigrants are annually landing on our shores, and for them there is no work.

"The public or government lands formerly solved the problem of how to care for the foreigner, but the freel tillable lands have all been taken up by thrifty immigrants and one occupation has been closed to the new American from the old world.

"I have no suggestion to make as to how business conditions may be improved and the dull period delayed. The conditions must work out their own natural solution. There is bound to be a long period of business depression. When the cost of production grows less and when we create a new market for our production, prosperity may return."

Mr. Hill was asked when the new transPacific steamer Minnesota is to go into commission, and he replied:

"I do not know. Business conditions must show a great improvement before the boat will be commissioned. The steamer is nearly completed."

President Hill returned Saturday from New York, where he had been for the past six weeks. While in the East he was an interesting witness before the congressional committee which is investigating the cause for the decline of the American merchant marine.

"IVAN THE TERRIBLE."

Richard Mansfield Presents Most Revolting Character.

Richard Mansfield presented "Ivan the Terrible" at the Lyceum Saturday evening. The character is truly named "the terrible," for a more revolting, diabolical, tyrannical old villain probably never lived. It is needless to say that Mr. Mansfield invests him with all of the devilishness of which it is capable for he is a past master in the art of simulating a character of that kind. His Ivan is something awful, a being to make the very blood run cold and to keep the chills chasing up and down the spine. In voice, feature, pose, and every expression it is perfectly played, a most artistic and remarkable performance. Most strikingly is Mr. Mansfield's wonderful voice displayed. A more versatile organ than that which has been given this man is rarely heard. He seems with every new character to create a new voice, and this wonderful control makes him lose his personality in the part he plays as no other American actor can.

But artistic and perfect as is this impersonation, of what use is it other than to give Mr. Mansfield opportunity to show what an awful being he can present? In Ivan there is not a redeeming feature, not one thing that can appeal to the better nature or the better emotions, it is simply the presenting of a moral monstrosity by a man who can do it as no other can. It can excite nothing but horror, repulsion and disgust. It may, perhaps, be personally gratifying to the leading actor of the American stage to present such a character, but could not he, with his extraordinary abilities and occupying a position which assures him of a hearing for whatever he does, give the stage something better, something more uplifting?

The play is of one part. Outside of the character played by Mr. Mansfield, there is but one—Boris Godunoff—who has anything to do, and that is merely to play the conventional plotting minister, who, in a court of constant, murderous intrigue, is the one at whom most of the conspiracies are aimed. The part is well taken by Arthur Forest.

Miss Ida Conquest, an actress of much merit and wide reputation, has nothing to do that could not be done by a woman of half her ability.

In the staging and working out of effects is displayed all of that lavishness that characterizes all of Mr. Mansfield's productions.

Mrs. Wagner was removed to a hospital, where she said that for some unexplained reason her husband had been jealous and this had led him to shoot her. He had been out of work for some time and had been drinking heavily.

TRAIN STRUCK AUTO.

One Occupant Killed, Others Severely Injured.

New York, June 13.—Rounding a curve at Van Cortlandt park yesterday afternoon, a train on the Yonkers division of the New York & Putnam road crashed into an automobile owned by George Noakes, a restaurant keeper, who lives on Riverside drive. Frank B. Read, a paper manufacturer, of this city, was killed; the sixteen-year-old daughter of Mr. Noakes had her left foot cut off by the train and John Spencer, a negro, the chauffeaur, was so badly injured that it is believed he cannot recover. Mr. and Mrs. Noakes and their 6-yeor-old son escaped with a few bruises.

The train was hidden by a heavy clump of trees as it approached the Van Cortlandt park station and just as it came into sight from the crossing the auto came swiftly along towards the tracks. It was impossible then to avoid a collision, and hundreds of persons on the golf links which parallel the tracks saw the heavy touring car demolished.

RAILWAY LOGGING

Traffic at Present Far Below Last Years.

The railway logging traffic has shown a great falling off as compared with a year ago. At the present time not more than sixty cars of logs a day are being delivered in the city from the Duluth & Northern Minnesota railway, and that represents practically all the logs coming in over any road.

The reason is apparent. There is very little summer logging being done, and practically all the last winter's cut that will be hauled by rail has been brought to the mills. The largest portion of the log receipts from now on until the close of the season will be by raft, principally from the north shore.

The local sawmill companies that depend on railroad logging have now about all the stock in booms they expect to cut this season.

The St. Louis river and its tributaries have been high during the past week, and the logs were sent down in large numbers. It was claimed at the close of last week that the booms at Cloquet and at Grand Rapids, Minn., which is on the Mississippi river, were getting well filled with logs, with the probability that about 100,000,000 feet more would be landed soon.

The drives have been going down the river to Cloquet ever since May 1, and it is estimated that about three-fourths of last winter's cut along that river is now in the booms. The logs jammed at Pine island, about five miles above Cloquet, and what is claimed to be the greatest accumulation of logs that was ever seen at Cloquet, filled the river for four or five miles back from the jam.

TRIUMPHS OF MODERN SURGERY.

Wonderful things are done for the human body by surgery. Organs are taken out and scraped and polished and put back, or they may be removed entirely; bones are spliced; pipes take the place of diseased sections of veins; antiseptic dressings are applied to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, which causes them to heal without maturation and in one-third the time required by the old treatment. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principle. It is an antiseptic and when applied to such injuries, causes them to heal very quickly. It so allays the pain and soreness. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money, not to mention the inconvenience and suffering which such injuries entail. For sale by all druggists.

THIRTEEN THOUSAND

Found on Man Unconscious From Inhaling Gas.

Chicago, June 13.—Unconscious, with $13,000 in cash fastened in a belt around his waist, a man whose name was afterward discovered to be Henry Lutterman, was today found in a boarding house bedroom in which gas was escaping from an open jet. Lutterman, who was a stranger to the boarding house people, was taken to the Alexian Brothers hospital. Upon searching at the hospital for a clew to his identity the Brothers uncovered $2800 in gold and $11,000 in paper money tucked away in a leather belt. Lutterman is said to be an agent for a Milwaukee publishing house. He will probably recover. The escape of gas is attributed to an accident.

DEFEAT OF DUNN

If Accomplished Will Be By Collins-Eddy-Eustis Combine.

Dunn's Friends Making Fight of Their Lives In Hennepin.

St. Paul, June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—The belief is gaining ground among the politicians of the Twin Cities that if R. C. Dunn is defeated for the Republican nomination for governor of Minnesota, it will through a combination of the forces of Judge Loren W. Collins of St. Cloud, Frank M. Eddy of Glenwood and William Henry Eustis of Minneapolis.

Friendly relations have existed for some time between Judge Collins and Mr. Eddy, and there are now evidences of a working agreement between the supporters of Mr. Eustis and the St. Cloud judge. One of these signs is the announcement of United States marshal Grimshaw, a strong Eustis man, in favor of Judge Collins. Mr. Grimshaw is fighting hard for the St. Cloud judge in Hennepin county, and there are some who believe that his influence will be decisive in the Hennepin county contest.

This talk of a combination of Collins, Eddy and Eustis has resulted largely from statements of some of the friends of Judge Collins that if R. C. Dunn does not have enough delegates to win on the first ballot, he will lose out in the end. Those who talk along this line point to the Illinois fight where Lowden had the largest and most cohesive personal following of any candidate, but failing of a majority was defeated through a combination of his opponents. Lowden was within a few votes of being nominated; the friends of Deneen and Yates knowing that further delay would mean the success of Lowden, got together and defeated the representative of the Cook county machine.

It is in anticipation of this event that the friends of Dunn are making the fight of their lives in Hennepin county. With the 113 delegates of that county, Dunn could defy all the other candidates in the field. Without them he might be defeated through a combination of the opposing forces. Although the Dunn men are putting up a hard fight in Hennepin, few of the friends of the Princeton candidate do not look with alarm at the fact that such influential politicians as United States Marshal Grimshaw, Judge Robert Jamison, Frank M. Nye, George Matchan and other supporters of William Henry Eustis are working hard for Judge Collins. Whom has Dunn got to counterbalance the influence of these leaders, is the question that appeals to the disinterested spectator.

"If Dunn is defeated, mark my word it will be through a combination of Collins, Eddy and Eustis," said one of the leading Republicans of the Southern part of the state who was in St. Paul yesterday. "And if Dunn does not get Hennepin, this combination will work. Just look at the situation for a minute. Everybody knows that the people of Minneapolis are for Eustis first, last and all the time. This talk that his strength is disintegrating is all bosh. If he is a candidate at any stage of the game, he will have the 113 delegates of Hennepin county. He can have several counties in the First and Second congressional districts, so it is only fair to concede at least 200 deelgates out of the 1170 for Eustis. A conservative estimate ought to give Collins at least 300 delegates, and if Eddy gets 100, the three will control the convention. The forces behind the three men are opposed to Dunn and his crowd, and you can imagine what will happen the minute it appears that Dunn will be nominated. There will be a combination as there was in Illinois, and Dunn will be defeated."

It is reported in St. Paul that Frank Wilson has definitely decided not to get in the congressional race against Congressman Davis of the Third congressional district.

"I saw Mr. Wilson not long ago and he told me that he had decided not to make the run for congress," said a leading Republican from the Third district who was at the Merchants hotel yesterday. "This means that Congressman Davis will have no opposition for a renomination."

DOWIE CHASED BY MOB.

Londoners Pursue Zionists After Evening Meeting.

London, June 13.—All day long yesterday crowds were in the vicinity of the Zion tabernacle on Eustis road. John Alexander Dowie arrived at 10:30, had his meals inside the tabernacle and remained there throughout the day.

While three services were held the attendance was confined strictly to ticket-holders.

Towards 9 o'clock last night Dowie ventured to leave the building with wife and son and the long waiting mob with frantic shouts dashed after their cabs while reporters in hansoms joined in the chase over a circuitous route to the Hotel Cecil. It is said that Dowie obtained rooms at the hotel by withholding his name, but that he has been requested to leave in the morning.

At the evening service Mr. and Mrs. Booth-Clibborne, the latter the oldest daughter of Gen. William Booth, founder of the Salvation army, were ordained elders of the Zionist church.

LAKESIDERS AGAIN SUFFER

Baseball Season Demoralizes Car Service at Evening Hour.

Again the Lakesiders rise to register a vigorous kick against the street car service their section of the city is afforded, and there appears to be even better grounds for objections now than in the previous instances, because of the opening of the baseball season.

Residents of Lakeside have been bothered ever since the establishment of the new car service to get home at certain times of the day without adopting the old-fashioned method of walking, but the way conditions now are they find it a difficult matter and almost an impossibility at times to get on a Lakeside car at all, late in the afternoon, when they are about to go home for supper. This fact is due to the baseball crowds. To make the matter worse, the company has considerately taken off the extra cars which formerly ran at 5:25 and 5:35 in the afternoon. The remaining cars, coming way through from West Duluth, are literally jammed from door to door while passing through the business district, for they reach the ball park just after the game, and even standing room is denied the frantic baseball fans. Filling one car apparently makes no impression on the size of the crowd.

On one car the other day there were 250 fares rung up before Lakeside was reached, and 208 fares on another. These are but two of several instances.

In addition to all this it is charged that the signs are often switched, so as to read to Lakeside until they enter the business district. This has been noticed on different occasions. One Lakesider, in waiting from 5:15 to 5:40 o'clock Friday afternoon for a car walked down as far as Eighth avenue west where he waited for one. A friend caught a car at about 5:20 o'clock at Fifth avenue west with the Lakeside sign in evidence. No Lakeside car passed Eighth avenue, which is taken to show that the sign was changed within three blocks.

ONE-SIDED AFFAIR

News Tribune Suppressed Interviews Favorable to Courthouse Removal.

Suggestion of Heavy Taxpayer as to the Question.

Since the publication in the News-Tribune, a few days ago, of several interviews with local taxpayers whose views were opposed to the location of the new county courthouse other than on the old site, expressions have been heard from taxpayers on all sides who were not asked for opinions and who believe that a courthouse site nearer the business center would be preferable.

A good many who gave the paper their opinions and did find them published are also being heard. Those whose views did not coincide with those published in the News-Tribune, were not quoted at all, the aim evidently being to give but one side of the controversy over the new courthouse site.

One of the heaviest taxpayers in St. Louis county, while talking about the courthouse site, recently, made the following suggestion which has been broached to a number of other large taxpayers and which seems to meet with general favor:

"My idea is to have a committee of from 25 to 30 of the largest taxpayers in the county meet with the board of county commissioners and urge on that body the reasons why the new courthouse should be located on a more convenient site.

"I make this suggestion with the full assurance that the great majority of the heavy taxpayers in St. Louis county are in favor of a site nearer the business center of the city.

"I do not mean that the taxpayers are to go before the board with any political influence or contempt to tell the commissioners what their business is.

"The county board has expressed itself as being open to argument, if not conviction, in this matter of a new courthouse site and I fully believe that the views of 25 or 30 of the men who pay a large part of the taxes of the county would have some weight."

It is understood that the committees that attended the county board session last week and secured a delay of action in the condemnation proceedings, are already circulating their petitions among the taxpayers, which ask the commissioners to select a more convenient site down town.

There are a few who still have the idea that Judge Ensign, who was appointed trustee of the present courthouse property, can easily give the county a clear title by signing over a deed, but he has expressed his position clearly to Assistant County Attorney Crosby and it is claimed that should set at rest any talk of his making a new deed.

Judge Ensign has stated that when he was made trustee of the property it was the desire of the donors that the ground should be used for a courthouse, that a courthouse should be maintained on it. He also says that it was the desire of the former owners that if the county did not maintain the property for a courthouse, it be made into a public park. Under these circumstances, Judge Ensign, laying aside any personal feelings in the matter, felt it his duty to oppose the county's acquiring title until it has alone something to show that it will permanently occupy the old courthouse site.

Knocked Insensible.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Saturday evening as my wife was walking west on Fourth street near Third avenue west, she was struck in the face by a batted ball and knocked insensible. Hearst Men In County Convention Have Their Own Way.

Charles d'Autremont Is Endorsed as Delegate From District.

In the St. Louis County Democratic convention Saturday at city hall the program was carried out by the Hearst adherents as indicated in Saturday's Herald. The committee on resolutions, of which Charles d'Autremont was chairman, reported a set of resolutions favoring William Randolph Hearst for the presidency, which read as follows:

"We, the Democrats of St. Louis County, Minnesota, in convention assembled reaffirm our adherence to Democratic principles as set forth in the platform adopted by the last national Democratic convention held at Kansas City in 1900 and we hereby instruct our delegates to the Democratic state convention to be held in Duluth, June 22, 1904, to use their utmost endeavors to secure a reaffirmation of said Kansas City platform by the Democratic state convention and by the next Democratic national convention.

"We commend the able and fearless leadership of William Jennings Bryan and believe that by standing with him and those splendid leaders, who have so ably supported him in his fight for justice, for humanity, for democratic institutions and for equal rights to all, is the only hope for Democracy and the surest and shortest path to success.

"The problem which most prominently confronts the people of the United States today and in the correct solution of which their material welfare is most vitally interested, is the trust question. In his business life, in his congressional career, and in his legal battles uncompromisingly fought with great criminal aggregations of capital, William Randolph Hearst has displayed an executive force, a superb mental equipment and moral courage, and an unswerving and invincible purpose and determination to thwart trust domination in business and political life, which peculiarly and signally qutlify him to lead the Democratic hosts to victory next November, and we instruct our delegates to the state convention to work and vote for delegates to the national Democratic convention who will use their best endeavors to secure his nomination to that office and to vote to instruct such delegation to vote for his nomination for the presidency at St. Louis.

"We hereby instruct our delegates to the state convention to vote as a unit upon all questions coming before said convention."

As soon as he was through reading the resolutions he moved their adoption and it was seconded. Harris Bennett, of the Third ward, Duluth, an anti-Hearst delegate, asked the reading of the following amendment to the resolutions, which he handed to the chairman, D. G. Cash:

"Resolved, that it is the sense of this convention that its delegates shall do all in their power to secure the election of delegates to the national convention who can be relied upon to support for the presidential nomination some man of national reputation, tried ability, unquestionable integrity, purity and personal character, who has not only been loyal to the party in the past, but who is also in hearty sympathy with the principles of the Democratic party as enunciated in the Kansas City platform and expounded by W. J. Bryan."

Mr. d'Autremont said the committee had no minority report to make, but Mr. Somers said he was in favor of giving everybody a show, and did not want to see the amendment smothered. Mr. d'Autreimont again moved the adoption of the committee's resolutions, when Mr. McKeon said that he was opposed to gag rule and that all the men present were Democrats. He wanted to have fair play. He moved the reading of the amendment, and David Brown, of Ely, secretary of the meeting, seconded the motion, so that the amendment had a hearing.

But that was all it had, for on motion of Mr. Somers it was placed on the table and the committee's resolutions were adopted without an audible protest.

T. T. Hudson, chairman of the committee on preparing a list of names of 36 men to be suggested to the convention as delegates to the state convention June 22, reported the following names, which were indorsed by the convention:

Charles d'Autremont, Jr., D. G. Cash, H. H. Hawkins, M. H. McMahon, T. J. McKeon, Alfred Jaques, Martin Hughes, J. D. Jewett, T. J. Walsh, David Brown, T. T. Hudson, P. J. Murray, Bert Fesler, Theodore Hollister, J. D. Brady, J. L. Nylander, P. McDonnell, W. B. Getchell, Frank Crassweller, F. T. Little, J. J. O'Brien, Charles Banks, John T. Dow, J. T. Culbertson, W. E. McEwen, E. E. Bannidge, M. J. Filiatrault, J. A. Grochowski, F. H. Cutting, Conrad Wicklund, W. E. Kern, J. S. Grover, John Beutner, G. L. Roberts, Emil Tessman, Walter Johnson.

On motion of Mr. Hudson the convention approved the instruction of the above delegates to further the candidacy of Charles d'Autremont as district delegte to St. Louis at the national Democratic convention, July 6.

In a speech Mr. d'Autremont thanked the members very much for the honor and said that he was opposed to the action of Democrats who voted for McKinley and Palmer in 1896 and for the Republican ticket four years ago. He was for William Randolph Hearst for president for the reason that that candidate had for eight years drummed against trusts through the columns of his newspapers and he alone had taken up the fight and carried it through against the coal barons.

On motion of T. T. Hudson, the chairman of the convention, Mr. Cash, was authorized to appoint a new county committee, to consist of one member from each ward of Duluth and fifteen at large, a total of twenty-three members.

The convention then adjourned.

During the lulls in the convention Mr. Somers created considerable amusement by suggesting that as the city had a Democratic mayor he thought the committee ought to instruct that official to keep the desks of the council room in a less dusty condition. Later he said the dirt was explained by the fact tht the janitor was a Republican. Mr. Somers also took the platform and did a song and dance, which was highly appreciated.

HIGHWAY DAMAGED

By Logging Company and Settlers Are Inconvenienced.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Coming home late last Tuesday from Duluth with a load, the team fell through a poor corduroy bridge that the lumber company had put in for the good one the county made on the Erikson road and for a while it looked very much like we would lose the team then and there. The horses' legs got in between the logs with stringers, and the water was rising very fast on account of a log jam below. After half an hour's hard work in three feet of cold water we finally managed to pry the horses' legs out, but the horses were so cut, bruised and strained that they are very likely permanently injured. With the aid of a 70-foot cable we also got the load out.

For many years the logging company operating on the Cloquet river has damaged this public highway and even closed it up as much as thirty-three days at a time with logs and three feet of water, and we have petitioned and complained to the powers that be, only to learn that this is a class government and that we are not of that class. Federal troops were sent to Chicago to shoot working men down under the claim that the United States mail could not go over the roads. It was contracted for; Socialist Labor party speakers have frequently been arrested for obstructing the public highways when advocating the cause of the working class, but we are yet to see any move against the capitalist concerns that obstruct the United States mail and public traffic on the Erikson road, which has been the United States mail route for ten years.

In Independence Weyerhaeuser floods the road and makes the United States mail carrier take to the woods or not go through at all; in Industrial, at Barnett, Rockefeller has dug a gravel pit over it and makes the United States mail carrier take a round-about turn in to the woods or not go through at all, and no United States government troops to shoot them or sheriff to arrast them.

I have met quite a few citizens that say this government is not of, by and for the people, but the trouble with them is they don't understand who is the "people" now. Yours not of the "people,"

E. S. ERIKSSON.

CAME FROM BAY CITY

Young Woman Shot By "Reddy" Bishop Has a History.

The true name of the woman who was shot in the Cummings avenue resort Friday evening by "Reddy" Bishop was not Laura Lee, but Mrs. Jack Murphy, and her maiden name was Nora St. Charles.

This information comes from people who have known the young woman ever since she came to Duluth from Bay City, Mich., about two years ago.

The story of her fall and her terrible end is but the old, old story of the pretty girl who listens to the flatteries of bad people with whom she happened to come in contact and was led astray.

It is claimed that when Nora St. Charles came to Duluth she was a bright good girl of about 21 years of age. She obtained employment in the California restaurant and there met a man called Jack Murphy, who, after leading her astray, married her in 1903, a year after their little daughter was born. The child is said to be now living with her grandmother in Bay City, Mich.

According to people who knew the St. Charles woman, or Mrs. Murphy, she worked in the restaurant for some time after the marriage to help support the family, after which her husband took her to Superior and placed her in a house of ill-repute while he went out to North Dakota.

Murphy is said to still live in Duluth a portion of the time.

The story that Bishop knew Nora St. Charles, or Murphy, ever since they were children together is claimed to be incorrect; that she never met him until two years ago.

KILLED WITH BARE FISTS.

Terrible Fight Between Father and Son.

Halifax, N. S., June 13.—Word was received here yesterday of a bare-fist fight during last night at Glace bay, C. B., in which a father was literally pounded to death by his son. The principals, "Bully" McRae and his son Jack, are men of giant physique and known throughout the Cape for their fighting ability. Both are over six feet in height and weigh 225 pounds. They met in a bar room and quarreled over money matters. When interference was attempted, the Scotchmen drove the other occupants of the saloon from the place and, locking the doors, fought for an hour and until the elder McRae was dead. The police finally effected an entrance to the bar room and placed Jack McRae under arrest.

The dead man's face had been battered to a jelly, his ribs broken and chest crushed in. The younger McRae was frightfully injured.

BOAT GOES DOWN

Five Persons Lose Lives on the St. Lawrence River.

Steamers Canada and Cape Breton Were In Collision.

Montreal, Quebec, June 13.—The Richelieu and Ontario Navigation company's steamer Canada, bound from Quebec for Montreal, came into collision with the Dominion Coal company's collier, Cape Breton, six miles below Sorel, early yesterday. Twenty minutes later the Canada went to the bottom. At the time of the collision there were 110 people on board the Canada. Five were lost, the others were rescued. Those who perished were:

ALFRED THIBEAULT, ticket agent of the company at Quebec, and his two sons, aged 12 and 15.

PURSER BONNETTERRE, of the Canada.

A man named BRUNETT, of Sorel. He is missing, and it is supposed that he perished.

The collision occurred just as dawn was breaking. The Cape Breton lay at the entrance of Lake St. Peter channel, waiting for daylight, so as to find her way through. She was getting under way when the Canada, making for Sorel at full speed, came into view. Just what the collision was due to, and who is responsible for it has not yet been determined, for the officers of the Canada decline to talk, but from the statements given out it would appear that the Cape Breton had not headway on enough to answer her rudder, and that she swerved across the path of the passenger boat, her bow striking the Canada just forward of the paddle box on the starboard side and tearing its way half through.

Then the Cape Breton swung clear, and the two steamers came alongside one another.

The shock of the collision aroused the sleeping passengers. The Canada at once began to settle, and as the Cape Breton did not appear to be seriously damaged the passengers were hurriedly transferred to this steamer. In the excitement some of the passengers jumped overboard and were picked up by boats from the Canada and the Cape Breton, but a great majority of those on board did not become excited, while the discipline shown by the crew of the Canada was excellent. Twenty minutes later, when the Canada went down, alongside the Cape Breton, resting on her sides in the mud, all the passengers who could be found had been transferred. Thibeult and his two sons occupied a stateroom near where the Cape Breton's bow entered the Canada, and it is supposed that they were killed in their berths. The body of the father was recovered later in the day, but the remains of the two sons have not been found.

Bonnetterre, the purser, was seen after the collision making his way to his quarters on the lower deck, with the intention of saving his cash and his records, and it is supposed that he perished in the attempt. Brunnett was a second-class passenger, and no one saw him after the collision, though it is just possible that he went ashore with the crew of one of the boats which was sent to secure help from Sorel.

Assistance arrived about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the steambarge Prefontaine having been found in the harbor with steam up. The Prefontaine took the passengers and crew to Sorel, and they were brought up to this city on board the company's steamer Columbian.

CHARITIES ROUND-UP

National Conference to Meet at Portland, Me., on Wednesday.

Social Workers From All Sections of Country to Attend.

New York, June 13.—The great round-up of the year in philanthropy comes off this week in Portland, Me. From June 15 to June 22 the National Conference of Charities and Corections will be in session there and social workers from all parts of the country will be in attendance.

A year ago the national conference was held in Atlanta, Ga. As a result the city stockade at Atlanta has gone the way of all such relics of the past, a juvenile court has been instituted there, new vim has been infused into the institutions and organized charities of the South and a national child labor committee has come into existence.

That the Portland program ought to mean as much for New England is the editorial opinion expressed by Charities, charity workers, settlement residents, prison reformers, institutional men and women, alienists, public ocifials, those who are grappling with the tasks of caring for the deliquent and the dependent, and those who are pushing so some of the most notable social movements of the day will carry down East with them the message of a year's work worked out in a hundred different sections of the country.

Hon. Joshua L. Chamberlain, ex-governor of Maine, will give the address of welcome at the opening meeting and he will be followed by the president of the conference, Dr. Jeffrey R. Brackett, who was head of the mayor's committee which carried on the remarkable relief work following the Baltimore fire.

The conference is divided into seven sections. The newest of these is under th chairmanship of Miss Jane Adams, of Hull House, Chicago, who has the past week been made a doctor of laws by the university of Wisconsin. Her section is that of "Neighborhood Improvement" and under it there will be addresses by such social workers as Professor Graham Taylor, of Chicago Commons, who will speak on recent developments in municipal activities in this field; by Mrs. Mary Kingsbury Simkhovitch, of Greenwitch, New York, who will urge the enlarged use of the public school plant. This idea will be carried further by Joseph Lee, of Boston, millionaire and philanthropist, who has made the development of playgrounds a life work. Another speaker in this section is Robert Hunter, whose marriage to the daughter of one of New York's oldest and wealthiest families at the time that he was an East Side settlement worker, created much comment.

The section on the "Treatment of Criminals" is under the chairmanship of Frederick W. Wines, of New Jersey. Mr. Wines was assistant director of the census of 1900 and is one of the verterans in correctional reform. A speaker of the same generation who will take part is Z. R. Brockway, whose name was in every newspaper in the country in the years when, as superintendent of Elmira reformatory, he was subjected to fierce and unfounded attacks for his methods of administration. Since the program was made up, death called a third of this group of remarkable men identified with the advances of the last twenty-five years in the treatment of the criminal—Dr. Charlton T. Lewis, of Morristown, N. J., president of the National Prison association and the former exponent in this country of the principles of probation and the indeterminate sentence.

The section on "Children," under the chairmanship of Ames W. Butlre, who has probably done more for the small fry of the Hoosier state than any other man in Indiana, will be of interest for at least two reasons. Manual training as an educational lever in dealing with all sorts and conditions of children will be taken up. The head of a Massachusetts school for bad boys and girls will tell what it means to work with white children, the superintendent of Kowaliga institute will tell what it means to the colored boys and girls of Alabama, and the United States commissioner of Indian affairs will show how the present day papoose grows up to the full stature of an American through this addition to the three R curriculum of the reservation school house. Mrs. Florence Kelley, secretary of the National Consumers' league, will tell of progress in the child labor campaign. Juvenile court judges and probation officers from half a dozen different states will describe the work of the childrens' court.

The section of "Needy Families in Their Homes," despite its rather technical title, calls out some of the most interesting contributions to the conference from the experiences of charity workers in such varied environments as make up city life and neighborhoods in the United States. Ernest P. Bicknell, of the chicgao bureau of charities, is chairman.

There is an immense amount of work ahead in the education of the public as to the defective and the insane, the idiotic, the feeble-minded and the epileptic—what they really are, who they are and what can be done with them. Dr. Walter E. Fernald, superintendent of the Massachusetts School for the Feeble-Minded, is head of this section on defectives. Michael J. Scanlon, of New York city, is chairman of the committee on state supervisors and administration of charitable institutions, and Frederic Almy, of Buffalo, of the committee on public dependents. Men and women prominent in this field of administration in Omaha, Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Boston and Chicago, in Richmond and in many more of the similar cities will take part.

Something unique is expected in the way of the conference sermon by Rev. Samuel L. Crothers, of Cambridge, Mass.—perhaps the wittiest and most facile essayist in New England today. The author, who last month set all Boston agog with his whimsical portrayal of "A Half Hour With Our Prejudices," will contribute something equally sparkling and incisive in his discussion of the practical propaganda—modern philanthropy.

Of Principal Articles of Domestic Consumption In May.

Practically All the Farm Products Show an Advance.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU

Washington, June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Prices of the principal articles of domestic consumption of for use in domestic manufacture show a decline in aMy, 1904, as compared with May, 1903, except those of farm production and a few of foreign production imported for use in manufacturing. The department of commerce and labor present through its bureau of statistics each month a series of price quotations on some seventy-five leading articles and grades of articles. These quotations, which are wholesale rates in the leading markets of the country, are presented for each week in the current month, and thus give opportunity to compare price conditions at any given date with the corresponding date of the preceding year. The prices quoted are, in most cases, the wholesale rates in the New York markets. Those of cattle and hides are prices in the Chicago market; of the various grades of iron and steel, those of the great manufacturing sections in which they are produced; of cotton and rice, the prices given are those in New Orleans and New York, respectively; and of wool, the prices given are those in the Boston market.

A comparison of the prices named in these tables for the last week of May, 1904, with the first week of May, 1903, shows an advanue in prices of wheat, corn, oats, cotton, wool, native steers, cows and certain grades of hides; also oleo stearin, rice, tea, pig iron, both crude and refined; sugar, both raw and refined; lead and silver. The above named are all the articles which show an advance.

The articles which show no change are jute and steel rails.

Articles which show a decline are family beef, mess pork, lard, tallow, oleo stearin, rice, tea, pig niron, both Bessemer and Southern foundry iron bars, steel bars, steel billets, tin plates, coke, raw silk, mohair, manila hemp, sisal henp, hides of certain grades, leather of all grades, copper, tin and speiter.

Practically all the farm products in their natural state show an advance, including cattle, though beef, pork and lard show a decline.

A large proportion of the various grades of hides show an advance, though leather of all grades shows a decline.

Crude petroleum shows an advance from $1.35 per barrel to $1.77 per barrel, and refined petroleum, in cases, an advance from 10.5 cents per gallon to 10.55 cents per gallon; but refined in barrels shows a decline from 8.35 cents per gallon to 8.10 cents per gallon.

Muscovados sugar of 89 degrees polariaztion, imported, shows an advance from 3.19 cents per pond to 3.44 cents per pound; centrifugals of 96 per cent polarization, from 3.69 cents per pound to 3.95 cents per pound, and granulated sugar shows an advance from 4.75 cents per pond to 4.80 cents per pound .

SERMON ON JOB.

Rev. Charles Fox Davis Preaches Second of Series.

The second of a series of sermons on the "Book of Job" was delivered last evening in the Lester Park Methodist Episcopal church by Rev. Charles Fox Davis, the pastor. Four new actors in the drama were introduced—the wife of Job and three friends, who came to sympathize with him in his affilictions. Satan had been unssuccessful in his attempt to make Job curse God to his face, notwithstanding the loss of his family and his wealth, so he appeared again before the Almighty with the request for more power over Job, which was granted.

Satan's contention that a man will do anything for his life was disputed by Rev. Mr. Davis, who quoted Paul as having freely given up his life for the Christ. "Every missionary, both man and woman," said Mr. Davis, "who goes out into the foreign field offers his life as a sacrifice for the spread of Christianity."

In introducing the wife of Job, the speaker became an illustrator, and pictured the woman who, instead of being a comfort, became a blasphemer, an aethist. "Curse God and die," was her advice to the afflicted Job, who showed his integrity and moral worth in his answer: "Thou speakest like one of the foolish women."

The three friends who came to sympathize with Job he characterized as true friends. They rent their mantles, and for seven days they uttered not a word. In great calamities and afflictions there are times when silence is eloquence.

That Satan can come also was believed to be literally true by the congregation, for in the disguise of the pestiferous mosquito he invaded the church in such numbers as to bring the services to an abrupt termination.

RHEUMATISM

JOINTS AND MUSCLES SWOLLEN AND STIFF

A disease so painful and far-reaching in its effects upon the human system as Rheumatism, must have a deep and well-laid foundation. It originates and develops in the blood, and, like other diseases of the blood, is frequently inherited. The poisonous acids with which the blood is charged circulate through the system, breaking down the health, irritating the nerves, settling in joints and muscles, and causing the sharp, cutting pains peculiar to Rheumatism. Unless the blood is purified, joints and muscles become coated with the acrid matter and are rendered stiff and sore, and the nerves completely wrecked. Rheumatism, being a constitutional blood disease, requires internal treatment. Liniments, plasters and such things as are applied outwardly, give only temporary relief. S.S.S. is the recognized greatest of all blood purifiers and tonics, and in no disease does it act so promptly and beneficially as Rheumatism, neutralizing the acids and restoring the blood to a pure, healthy condition and invigorating and toning up the nerves and all parts of the system. It is guaranteed strictly vegetable. Write us should you desire medical advice, which will cost you nothing.

Columbus, O., May 30, 1903.

I had a severe attack of Inflammatory Rheumatism. I was laid up in bed for six months, and the doctors I had did me no good. They changed medicine every week, and nothing they prescribed seemed to help me. Finally I left off their medicine and began the use of S. S. S. My knee and elbow joints were so swollen and painful that I could not close them when opened. I was getting discouraged when I began S. S. S., but as I saw it was helping me, continued, and to-day am a sound, well man.

COMMISSIONER SAW THE BANDIT RAISULI.

Tangler, June 13.—J. W. S. Langerman, commissioner of the Moroccan section of the St. Louis exposition, arrived here yesterday from the camp of Raisuli, the bandit. In an interview given to the Associated Press, Mr. Langerman said:

"I left here by steamer for Arzill in company with a friend and three Moors, the object being to see Raisuli and try to arrange the present difficulties.

"I met Raisuli and his band, fully armed, and suspicious of the visit. For a few moments the situation was critical, but all passed off well.

"Ion Perdicaris, the American whom Raisuli holds captive, is much better and in good spirits over the prospect of his speedy release."

GASOLENE FOR VINEGAR.

Mistake of Grocer Causes Death of One Person.

Kansas City, June 13.—A mistake of a grocer in filling a customer's jug with gasolene when vinegar was asked for, resulted in an explosion at the home of Antone Schoen, in this city last night which caused the death of one person and the injury of three others.

Mrs. Schoen bought what she believed to be a jug of vinegar at a grocery store and in preparing dinner she poured a portion of the jug's contents into a hot skillet. Instantly there was an explosion which enveloped her in flames and set fire to the house. Rosa Schoen, who was in the room, was badly burned before her brother rescued her. Anton and Charles Schoen were burned in their efforts to save Mrs. Schoen and the little girls.

Mrs. Schoen died at the hospital several hours afterwards. The grocer of whom Mrs. Schoen said she purchased the gasolene denied that she had been in his store.

COCKRELL IS BETTER.

Washington, June 13.—Senator Cockrell, of Missouri, who was painfully injured Saturday by being knocked down by a boy with a bicycle, was considerably better yesterday. The wounded shoulder is painful, but it is thought will yield readily to treatment. The senator is of robust physical condition and fortunately suffered no shock to his nervous system as a result of the accident.

STARTLING EVIDENCE.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds to be unequaled. A recent expression from T. J. McFarland, Bentonville, Va., serves as example. He writes: "I had Bronchitis for three years and doctored all the time without being benefited. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and a few bottles wholly cured me." Equally effective in curing all Lung and Throat troubles, Consumption, Pneumonia and Grip. Guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free, regular sizes 50c, and $1.00.

ROBBERY AT TOWER.

Albert Weinzel Suffers a Loss of $1000.

Tower, Minn., June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—On Friday night robbers entered the jewelry store of Albert Weinzerl, and secured valuables to jewelry and solid silverware. Entrance was gained through a rear window which not being securely fastened was easily lowered. No sound was made and nothing was known of the robbing until Mr. Weinzerl came to open the store Saturday morning and discovered the loss. There is no clue whatever but two men who have been hovering around are under suspicion.

ALFRED THIBEAULT, ticket agent of the company at Quebec, and his two sons, aged 12 and 15.

PURSER BONNETTERRE, of the Canada.

A man named BRUNETT, of Sorel. He is missing, and it is supposed that he perished.

The collision occurred just as dawn was breaking. The Cape Breton lay at the entrance of Lake St. Peter channel, waiting for daylight, so as to find her way through. She was getting under way when the Canada, making for Sorel at full speed, came into view. Just what the collision was due to, and who is responsible for it has not yet been determined, for the officers of the Canada decline to talk, but from the statements given out it would appear that the Cape Breton had not headway on enough to answer her rudder, and that she swerved across the path of the passenger boat, her bow striking the Canada just forward of the paddle box on the starboard side and tearing its way half through.

Then the Cape Breton swung clear, and the two steamers came alongside one another.

The shock of the collision aroused the sleeping passengers. The Canada at once began to settle, and as the Cape Breton did not appear to be seriously damaged the passengers were hurriedly transferred to this steamer. In the excitement some of the passengers jumped overboard and were picked up by boats from the Canada and the Cape Breton, but a great majority of those on board did not become excited, while the discipline shown by the crew of the Canada was excellent. Twenty minutes later, when the Canada went down, alongside the Cape Breton, resting on her sides in the mud, all the passengers who could be found had been transferred. Thibeult and his two sons occupied a stateroom near where the Cape Breton's bow entered the Canada, and it is supposed that they were killed in their berths. The body of the father was recovered later in the day, but the remains of the two sons have not been found.

Bonnetterre, the purser, was seen after the collision making his way to his quarters on the lower deck, with the intention of saving his cash and his records, and it is supposed that he perished in the attempt. Brunnett was a second-class passenger, and no one saw him after the collision, though it is just possible that he went ashore with the crew of one of the boats which was sent to secure help from Sorel.

Assistance arrived about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the steambarge Prefontaine having been found in the harbor with steam up. The Prefontaine took the passengers and crew to Sorel, and they were brought up to this city on board the company's steamer Columbian.

SERMON ON JOB.

Rev. Charles Fox Davis Preaches Second of Series.

The second of a series of sermons on the "Book of Job" was delivered last evening in the Lester Park Methodist Episcopal church by Rev. Charles Fox Davis, the pastor. Four new actors in the drama were introduced—the wife of Job and three friends, who came to sympathize with him in his afflilctions. Satan had been unssuccessful in his attempt to make Job curse God to his face, notwithstanding the loss of his family and his wealth, so he appeared again before the Almighty with the request for more power over Job, which was granted.

Satan's contention that a man will do anything for his life was disputed by Rev. Mr. Davis, who quoted Paul as having freely given up his life for the Christ. "Every missionary, both man and woman," said Mr. Davis, "who goes out into the foreign field offers his life as a sacrifice for the spread of Christianity."

In introducing the wife of Job, the speaker became an illustrator, and pictured the woman who, instead of being a comfort, became a blasphemer, an aethist. "Curse God and die," was her advice to the afflicted Job, who showed his integrity and moral worth in his answer: "Thou speakest like one of the foolish women."

The three friends who came to sympathize with Job he characterized as true friends. They rent their mantles, and for seven days they uttered not a word. In great calamities and afflictions there are times when silence is eloquence.

That Satan can come also was believed to be literally true by the congregation, for in the disguise of the pestiferous mosquito he invaded the church in such numbers as to bring the services to an abrupt termination.

COMMISSIONER SAW THE BANDIT RAISULI.

Tangier, June 13.—J. W. S. Langerman, commissioner of the Moroccan section of the St. Louis exposition, arrived here yesterday from the camp of Raisuli, the bandit. In an interview given to the Associated Press, Mr. Langerman said:

"I left here by steamer for Arzili in company with a friend and three Moors, the object being to see Raisuli and try to arrange the present difficulties.

"I met Raisuli and his band, fully armed, and suspicious of the visit. For a few moments the situation was critical, but all passed off well.

"Ion Perdicaris, the American whom Raisuli holds captive, is much better and in good spirits over the prospect of his speedy release."

CHARITIES ROUND-UP

National Conference to Meet at Portland, Me., on Wednesday.

Social Workers From All Sections of Country to Attend.

New York, June 13.—The great round-up of the year in philanthropy comes off this week in Portland, Me. From June 15 to June 22 the National Conference of Charities and Corections will be in session there and social workers from all parts of the country will be in attendance.

A year ago the national conference was held in Atlanta, Ga. As a result the city stockade at Atlanta has gone the way of all such relics of the past, a juvenile court has been instituted there, new vim has been infused into the institutions and organized charities of the South and a national child labor committee has come into existence.

That the Portland program ought to mean as much for New England is the editorial opinion expressed by Charities, charity workers, settlement residents, prison reformers, institutional men and women, alienists, public officials, those who are grappling with the tasks of caring for the deliquent and the dependent, and those who are pushing so some of the most notable social movements of the day will carry down East with them the message of a year's work worked out in a hundred different sections of the country.

Hon. Joshua L. Chamberlain, ex-governor of Maine, will give the address of welcome at the opening meeting and he will be followed by the president of the conference, Dr. Jeffrey R. Brackett, who was head of the mayor's committee which carried on the remarkable relief work following the Baltimore fire.

The conference is divided into seven sections. The newest of these is under th chairmanship of Miss Jane Adams, of Hull House, Chicago, who has the past week been made a doctor of laws by the university of Wisconsin. Her section is that of "Neighborhood Improvement" and under it there will be addresses by such social workers as Professor Graham Taylor, of Chicago Commons, who will speak on recent developments in municipal activities in this field; by Mrs. Mary Kingsbury Simkhovitch, of Greenwitch, New York, who will urge the enlarged use of the public school plant. This idea will be carried further by Joseph Lee, of Boston, millionaire and philanthropist, who has made the development of playgrounds a life work. Another speaker in this section is Robert Hunter, whose marriage to the daughter of one of New York's oldest and wealthiest families at the time that he was an East Side settlement worker, created much comment.

The section on the "Treatment of Criminals" is under the chairmanship of Frederick W, Wines, of New Jersey. Mr. Wines was assistant director of the census of 1900 and is one of the verterans in correctional reform. A speaker of the same generation who will take part is Z. R. Brockway, whose name was in every newspaper in the country in the years when, as superintendent of Elmira reformatory, he was subjected to fierce and unfounded attacks for his methods of administration. Since the program was made up, death called a third of this group of remarkable men identified with the advances of the last twenty-five years in the treatment of the criminal—Dr. Charlton T. Lewis, of Morristown, N. J., president of the National Prison association and the former exponent in this country of the principles of probation and the indeterminate sentence.

The section on "Children," under the chairmanship of Ames W. Butlre, who has probably done more for the small fry of the Hoosier state than any other man in Indiana, will be of interest for at least two reasons. Manual training as an educational lever in dealing with all sorts and conditions of children will be taken up. The head of a Massachusetts school for bad boys and girls will tell what it means to work with white children, the superintendent of Kowaliga Institute will tell what it means to the colored boys and girls of Alabama, and the United States commissioner of Indian affairs will show how the present day papoose grows up to the full stature of an American—through this addition to the three R curriculum of the reservation school house. Mrs. Florence Kelley, secretary of the National Consumers' league, will tell of progress in the child labor campaign. Juvenile court judges and probation officers from half a dozen different states will describe the work of the childrens' court.

The section of "Needy Families in Their Homes," despite its rather technical title, calls out some of the most interesting contributions to the conference from the experiences of charity workers in such varied environments as make up city life and neighborhoods in the United States. Ernest P. Bicknell, of the chicago bureau of charities, is chairman.

There is an immense amount of work ahead in the education of the public as to the defective and the insane, the idiotic, the feeble-minded and the epileptic—what they really are, who they are and what can be done with them. Dr. Walter E. Fernald, superintendent of the Massachusetts School for the Feeble-Minded, is head of this section on defectives. Michael J. Scanlon, of New York city, is chairman of the committee on state supervisors and administration of charitable institutions, and Frederic Almy, of Buffalo, of the committee on public dependents. Men and women prominent in this field of administration in Omaha, Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Boston and Chicago, in Richmond and in many more of the similar cities will take part.

Something unique is expected in the way of the conference sermon by Rev. Samuel L. Crothers, of Cambridge, Mass.—perhaps the wittiest and most facile essayist in New England today. The author, who last month set all Boston agog with his whimsical portrayal of "A Half Hour With Our Prejudices," will contribute something equally sparkling and incisive in his discussion of the practical propaganda—modern philanthropy.

ROBBERY AT TOWER.

Albert Weinzel Suffers a Loss of $1000.

Tower, Minn., June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—On Friday night robbers entered the jewelry store of Albert Weinzerl, and secured valuables to jewelry and solid silverware. Entrance was gained through a rear window which not being securely fastened was easily lowered. No sound was made and nothing was known of the robbing until Mr. Weinzerl came to open the store Saturday morning and discovered the loss. There is no clue whatever but two men who have been hovering around are under suspicion.

GASOLENE FOR VINEGAR.

Mistake of Grocer Causes Death of One Person.

Kansas City, June 13.—A mistake of a grocer in filling a customer's jug with gasolene when vinegar was asked for, resulted in an explosion at the home of Antone Schoen, in this city last night which caused the death of one person and the injury of three others.

Mrs. Schoen bought what she believed to be a jug of vinegar at a grocery store and in preparing dinner she poured a portion of the jug's contents into a hot skillet. Instantly there was an explosion which enveloped her in flames and set fire to the house. Rosa Schoen, who was in the room, was badly burned before her brother rescued her. Anton and Charles Schoen were burned in their efforts to save Mrs. Schoen and the little girls.

Mrs. Schoen died at the hospital several hours afterwards. The grocer of whom Mrs. Schoen said she purchased the gasolene denied that she had been in his store.

COCKRELL IS BETTER.

Washington, June 13.—Senator Cockrell, of Missouri, who was painfully injured Saturday by being knocked down by a boy with a bicycle, was considerably better yesterday. The wounded shoulder is painful, but it is thought will yield readily to treatment. The senator is of robust physical condition and fortunately suffered no shock to his nervous system as a result of the accident.

STARTLING EVIDENCE.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds to be unequaled. A recent expression from T. J. McFarland, Bentorville, Va., serves as example. He writes: "I had Bronchitis for three years and doctored all the time without being benefited. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and a few bottles wholly cured me." Equally effective in curing all Lung and Throat troubles, Consumption, Pneumonia and Grip. Guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free, regular sizes 50c, and $1.00.

WHEAT IS HIGHER

After Opening Weaker, the Market Takes a Good Brace.

Visible Supply Shows a Large Decrease—Flax Slightly Higher.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 13.—The wheat market was weak and dull at the opening this morning and there was little or no life to it. Toward the noon hour it stiffened up somewhat and finally closed with prices higher. World's shipments were about the same as a year ago. The visible supply showed a large decrease.

The July option in Duluth advanced ⅝c, in Chicago ¾-⅞c, in Minneapolis 1½c and New York 1¼-⅜c.

Liverpool closed ⅜d lower and Paris 1½@2c lower.

World shipments of wheat and corn last week, the previous week and last year were as follows:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Decrease In Exports Causes Weakness In Wheat.

Chicago, June 13.—A heavy decrease in weekly exports from America, as shown by official figures of the world's shipments, was mainly responsible for weakness in wheat today. Lower cables and a fairly good weather map were additional bear factors. July opened ¼c to ⅛c lower at 85¾c, advanced to 85¾c, and reacted to 85¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago report d receipts of 344 cars, compared with 352 cars last week and 457 cars a year ago.

Later in the day there was considerable purchasing due to the strength of corn and as a result the market became quite strong. After advancing to 86⅝@⅞c, July closed at 86⅝@⅝c, a net gain of ⅞@⅞c.

Notwithstanding weakness of wheat sentiment in the corn pit was firm, due to much smaller receipts than had been expected. July opened 1@1⅛c higher at 48½@48⅝c. An advance to 49⅛c was followed by a decline to 48⅝c. Local receipts were 429 cars, with 48 of contract grade.

The market continued strong throughout the day in consequence of a good demand for Sept. from provision interests. July sold up to 49¼c and closed at 49¼@49⅜c, a gain of 7@9c.

Smaller receipts and a good cash demand caused firmness in oats, there being a fairly active demand from shorts. After opening unchanged to ⅛c higher at 29½c to 29⅝c, July sold up to 29⅝@29⅞c, and then reacted to 29⅜c. Local receipts were 155 cars.

Provisions were strong on light receipts of hogs at all Western points, and on a 5@10c advance in prices at the yards. The best demands came from packers. September pork opened a shade lower to 10c, 12½c up at $12.28 to $12.30, and advanced to $12.45. September lard was up 5@7½c, opening at $7.00 to $7.02½ and selling up to $7.10. Ribs were 5@12½c higher at $7.42½@7.50. The price later advanced to $7.57½.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Chicago Record-Herald: Indications are that the advance shipments of new wheat from the southwest will begin to trickle into Kansas City and St. Louis this week. It will be some time, of course, before the crop movement is commercially important, but it is the business of the speculator, the owner of old cash wheat, the exporter, the miller and the jobbing distributor to anticipate the early wheat marketings and prepare for them. That they have been doing this is clearly demonstrated by the general tendency shown during last week to run away from the cash wheat. It was shown also in the greater relative decline in the July delivery which is at a large premium over the more districts new crop futures. Hour stocks everywhere were low and there were a normal call for old wheat from millers the matter of premiums for old wheat would be legitimate and natural. Just now, however, the flour trade is stagnant there are resales between over loaded jobbers and the mills are running short time.

If the marketings of old wheat increase to any marked extent this week it will be a good thing for the owner of old wheat. There is new no demand while further weakness would probably increase rather than decrease the tendency of buyers to let it alone. Meanwhile the speculative trade is inclined to over do the selling. This is not difficult, in view of the small quantities of contract grain on which the speculative transactions are based. The local stock of contract wheat is but 791,000 bushels and practically all in one man's control. Nevertheless anybody attempting to apply muscle to a support of the July futures on the theory that it is strictly an old crop future would expose himself to the danger of getting a large quantity of high priced property. The government report showed the slight gain in condition of winter and the high promise for spring wheat that everybody expected. The report is bearish for the present and bullish for a long look ahead. Its effect abroad is much more inclined to bullishness than the reverse.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Foreign markets are dull. The weather is favorable for crops. The whole situation remains slow and demand unimportant. It was a dull market with trade mainly local. The sharp advance late in the day was mainly caused by pit buying and covering of shorts. The decrease in the visible was a little more than had been expected, and this, with the strength in corn and oats, caused buying for a reaction, which after several days of declining tendency was due.

Corn—It was a firm market from the start. Count ryeceirngs are not large, and while local receipts are liberal, the corn seems to be going into private houses and the increase in the visible was less than expected. The weather also is estimated to be a little better for the growing crop. The demand is only moderate.

Oats—It still has the support of moderate receipts and a fairly good cash demand. Speculative operations in that option are rather small and unimportant. September and December were active and advanced sharply. There is a large short interest in both and the buying is improving. We are inclined to think September and December oats may be bought on the soft spots.

Provisions—It made a greater advance than this early part of the day, but only held a portion of it. It closed 20c higher. It was the same strong market that has prevailed for the past ten days, and for the same reason. While large receipts had ben expected, they are running below last year. With the improving quality of arrivals this is not easily accounted for, but it serves to disturb the short interest and incline packers and other sellers to cever. While the action of the market is bullish, we are inclined to think would only buy now after a fair decline.

Chicago: Following from Fort Worth, Texas: "Been raining all over this section; rained incessantly. No wheat will move from Northern Texas for three weeks and then only on best weather conditions."

Kansas City Wires: Saw several letters from traveling men in Southern Kansas and Oklahoma to A. Taylor. They were not of a tenor to make one bearish on wheat. All reported incessant rains. They say the yield will be disappointing and marketing delayed in that section.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Aged Man Kills Another Who Was Bothering Him.

Manistique—Matt Wilson, about 35 years of age, was shot by a shoemaker named Thomas Doonin at Corinne, thirty miles east of here. Wilson was brought to the Manistique hospital and died at midnight. Doonin is about 70 years old. He was bothered by the young man and took a shotgun, loaded with buckshot, and fired. Seven shot took effect in the left side. Wilson was a Canadian and has no relatives in this vicinity. Doonin gave himself up to a deputy sheriff.

A valuable Percheron stallion owned by a syndicate at Manistique fell through a floating bridge over the Munoskong river a few miles west of Pickford. Chippewa county, and was drowned. The horse cost its owners $2800.

Gladstone—A judgment for $250, rendered in January, 1902, in the Delta county circuit court against the city of Gladstone and in favor of Mrs. Mary Hannon, of Gladstone, has been affirmed by the supreme court. Mrs. Hannon was injured by stepping from a sidewalk up to which the street had not been raised to the proper level.

Dollarville—Repairs at the Dollarville mill are practically completed, and it is expected that the big plant will be ready to go into operation by the 15th of this month. A large force of men is now employed building a railway into the company's timber holdings, and considerable steel has already been laid. Mr. Danaher expects to receive the first shipment of logs at the mill this week.

Ironwood—E. A. Dear, M. H. Lesselyong and a number of others have formed the Ironwood Cement company and will engage in the manufacture of cement blocks for sidewalks, basement floors, etc. The blocks will be two inches thick and twenty inches square, and when put in place will be imbedded in concrete covering cinders. An expert cement worker from Appleton will have charge of the concern's operations.

BOYLON NEAR DEATH.

Victim of Race War at Canton, Cannot Live.

Canton, O., June 13.—Clifton Boylan, the victim of Sunday's race riot, is still alive, but his injuries are regarded as fatal and death is momentarily expected. The night passed without disorder. Railroad men who were in a threatening mood for a few hours after the shooting, did not go near the county jail or city prison, where the negroes were held. Officers of the railroad went among them at the roundhouse and other places where they were congregated, counselling them to commit no violence and urging them to go home. This had a salutary effect. The sheriff took extra precautions at the county jail, where two of the negro principals were confined.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Opening Was Strong But Weakness Soon Manifested Itself.

Regarded as Natural Reaction From the Recent Advance.

New York, June 13.—Opening prices in the stock market today were a small fraction higher throughout the active list. Some of the less conspicuous stocks were a shade lower. Dealings were on a moderate scale but were well distributed.

Outside of a few specialties, the opening prices proved to be the highest of the first hour. Weakness in United States Steel preferred, and effective selling of the coalers and grain carriers undermined the market and prices sagged below Saturday's close. United States Steel preferred dropped below 94 but otherwise the losses were slight. Metropolitan Street Railway and Metropolitan Securities were largely dealt in at improvements of ⅝ and ¾ respectively with some reaction. Canada Southern advanced 1, Cotton Oil preferred 1¼, and Kansas City Southern preferred, 2½.

The completion of selling to realize relieved the market from pressure. After a period of dullness, Ontario & Western was advanced a point on large buying and the market hardenede in sympathy. Enamelling preferred rose a point. Prices fell back again before noon. Erie first preferred fell ¾. Bonds were irregular.

Selling of selected stocks forced prices down again. Practically all of the leading stocks were quoted from ½ to ¾ below last week's finals. St. Paul and United States Steel preferred suffered losses of a point. Pittsburg, C., C. & St. Louis and Sloss Sheffield Steel gained 1.

The decline in prices cahe to a halt in the afternoon when offerings ceased, but there was no effective rally. O. & W. rose anew to above 26, but other stocks hugged the low point closely.

Prices sank to the low level today in spite of offering declines running to about a point in Pennsylvania, Wabash preferred, Delaware & Hudson, Metropolitan Street Railway and Tennessee Coal. Realty preferred jumped 2 points and Virginia-Carolina Chemical a point and Brooklyn Union Gas dropped 3 and Cotton Oil 2. The closing was dull and heavy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is fractionally easier. It signifies nothing except after a week of advancing prices the traders will naturally play for a reaction whether they are long the stocks or bearish. Because the market does not blossom into activity at once there are always some who cannot wait. After the experiences of the last two or three months, with a market absolutely bare of pressure, we can see very little to create one now. There is a rumor that the attorney generall's office will in the future begin proceedings against the coal roads. As all actions of this kind are in the end futile, so far as any disturbance to the value of the properties is concerned, this one, if it happens will likely have the same experience. We advise buying stocks.

* * *

Ridgely to W. H. Laidley & Co.: It is not safe to carry much long stock; there is no big bull market coming. Of that you may rest assured, and stocks are not oversold. The short interest is only about normal. large interests in Steel pfd, Baltimore & Ohio, Atchison, Pennsylvania and Sugar in the order named. Sugar should get above 130. Rock Island should rally a few points. There is some short interest in Rock Island. Smelters are good for a long pull. But probably the whole market will move more or less by stepping from a sidewalk up to which the street had not been raised to the proper level. present outlook is a moderately active trading market with upward trend.

* * *

Randolph to Paine, Webber & Co.: Today's market has been somewhat irregular but in the main reactionary. This is to be expected after the steady advance that the market has had for seven days and can be looked at as merely a normal reaction. It was at no time weak and although such a decline always impairs bullish confidence, some good judges consider that the market acted pretty well. There has been no special news to affect prices. The general situation remains unfavorable and there are no signs that business is improving in any quarter.

* * *

Coe Commission Co.: American stocks in London were firm. Our market opened strong and fractionally higher all around. The weakness which followed the early strength is only a natural reaction. We have had a strong market nearly all of last week and some recessions in prices must be looked for and should be taken advantage of to replace stocks sold on the bulges. Stocks are gradually working into stronger hands and the good dividend paying stocks should be bought.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 13.—The cotton market opened at a decline of 16 to 24 points in response to lower cables and generally favorable weather. There was a renewal of the covering noted toward the close of last week at the decline, however and shortly after the call prices were rallied to within 2 or 3 points of Saturdays finals.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: There was not much buying demand this morning and traders sold the market. It seems to be the general opinion that these fluctuations will gradually increase the interest of the public and lead to a more active market. There is no news of a character to encourage trading on either side of the market. We would buy stocks moderately on weak spots and would sell on small rallies. Copper sagged again in London and Amalgamated Copper was quiet and heavier. We think the outlook more favorable for an advance in coppers than anything else.

MUSSER'S LIFE THREATENED

Muscatine Lumberman Called On For $4,000 or Death.

Muscatine, Iowa, June 13.—Death or the payment of $3000, later raised to $4000, to be placed in a designated spot, is what has confronted Peter Musser, a prominent lumberman, and his daughter.

Two boys, each about 15 years of age—Robert Morrison, son of Joseph Morrison, deputy county auditor, and Charles Stocker—are in custody and will have a hearing on the barege of sending threatening letters through the mails. The penalty is a fine of $500 or eighteen months in prison on each count. The boys have confessed.

Three letters were sent to Mr. Musser, threatening him and his daughter with death. The first letter demanded $3000 and gave directions that it be placed on the steps of the Cedar street schoolhouse at 10 o'clock the night of May 31. The second letter raised the price to $4000.

The money was to be dropped on Cedar street when somebody, presumably hidden, said, "Drop it." The third letter also held the proce at $4000, the money to be dropped from a bridge on Cedar street. None of the letters were signed.

Inspector Leland arrived in Muscatine Saturday and at once consulted Officer McElravey, with the result that Morrison and Stocker were taken into custody. After being sweated, both confessed. Morrison connived the plot, but concluded he needed help and let Stocker in.

GOMPERS IS COMING

Masters and Pilots Expect Him In Day or Two.

Will Hold Conference With Advisory Board of Union.

Cleveland, June 13.—Officials of the Masters' and Pilots' association except President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor to arrive here tomorrow or next day for a conference with the advisory board of their union. The meeting will also, it is said, be attended by Capt. J. H. McGregor, of the International Pilots' union.

No boats belonging to the Lake Carriers' association cleared from this port today. Several boats, however, heretofore reported as having cleared, remain tied up to the breakwater, evidently awaiting to secure a full complement of officers.

COAL IS COMING.

All Varieties Now Being Received at Docks.

All varieties of coal are now arriving at the head of the lakes in daily increasing quantities. Most of the cargoes, however, consist of bituminous coal, although some anthracite is being received.

The quantity of ore shipped from the local docks also increases daily in proportions. Where a short time ago the majority of vessels arriving in the Duluth harbor were for lumber, now many of them bring up coal and return with ore or grain, or are light for ore. Lumber boats appear to be rather scarce at present. The reason for this is said to be that the vessels in the lumber trade all got started about the same time, arriving and departing in bunches. While there are not enough of them in port at the present time to hardly keep members of the longshoremen's union busy, within a short time there will be more in Duluth than the union men can handle, and non-union men will be called in to assist in loading the boats, as was done during the first rush of the season.

GOES THROUGH SAULT.

The great steamer Augustus B. Wolvin passed through the canal at Sault Ste. Marie at 9 o'clock this morning and is expected to land in Duluth about 9 o'clock tomorrow evening. She is expected to make the most remarkable appearance for size of any craft that has ever been in Duluth. If she should come a little earlier than 9 o'clock, it will probably be light enough so that she can be plainly seen approaching the bay.

DECLINING FREIGHT RATE.

Chicago, June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Grain rates dropped off to 1½ cents on corn today. So many big carriers are reported as heading for Lake Michigan that a break in rates was easily forced by shippers. With some Chicago vesselmen, whose boats have not yet gone into service it has become a question if it is worth while trying to start them with the declining freight rates.

THIEF IS CAUGHT

Man Who Has Been Robbing Duluth Houses Recently, Nabbed.

Caught In Act of Going Through Garfield Avenue Home.

The unknown thief, who has been causing no little anxiety to the residents of the city by his daring daylight thefts, was caught at his work today and landed in the city lock-up.

Shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon the man was discovered by a couple of men on Garfield avenue going through one of the houses in that locality. He was stooping over a trunk, ransacking its contents when he was discovered, and he was held until Detective Fritz arrived on the scene.

At police headquarters he gave his names as Alfred Hall, and admitted having visited the house of Mr. Kohagen, on East Seventh street, where he secured a watch and some other trinkets.

He also admitted having taken $7 from a widow living at 1309 West Third street, but denied all knowledge of the robbery of the home of Victor Huot, on Memorial day, stating that he did not arrive in Duluth until that evening.

"Where did you come from?" he was asked.

"I came here from Fargo on a freight train on the evening of Memorial day," he replied. "I was working up there for a farmer for $28 a month, until an Italian came along and offered to work for $15, and I was out of a job. I could get no work to do here, and I had to have some money to live, so I stole it."

He afterwards admitted spending the $7 in the Parlor theater last Saturday evening.

He is a young man, not more than 25 years of age, and does not have the appearance of a professional thief. The middle finger of his right hand is missing as the result of an accident with a threshing machine.

A charge of grand larceny will be preferred against him in the municipal cour, and he will be arraigned for a preliminary hearing tomorrow morning.

AMONG THE RAILROADS

Omaha Well Satisfied With Location of Its New Office.

When the Omaha city freight and passenger office was moved to the Lonsdale building at Third avenue west and Superior street a good many people thought it was putting the office a good way out of the old time limits for such establishments. Originally, the Omaha people did not intend to get as far away from the regular district, and were negotiating for a room near the old location in the Phoenix block, which is just a few doors practically, from the old location.

But the railroad company expects to derive more benefit than loss from the move. It is becoming the tendency of ticket offices in various cities of the country to get as far away from the depots as consistent, for the depots can take care of the business in one location and the city offices in another.

At least two freight and ticket offices in the city, are within a block of the depot, which centralizes them in a way, which to some people seems out of the line of economy.

The Omaha has, by its experience in Minneapolis, at any rate, demonstrated that earnings were larger in a location well removed from the depot. The first year after the office was moved the earnings increased 40 per cent, and in the two following years the increases were $15,000 one year and $20,000 another.

Might Be Embarrassing.

If the Interstate Commerce commission should find the action of the Michigan Central and Pere Marquette in working the Armour car lines exclusive contract, one in which the law is violated, it is said that the former road at least will be in an unpleasant situation.

Some years ago an injunction was issued against the Michigan Central to prevent it from exercising rate discrimination, and it is said that this inunction has never been dissolved. On the other hand railroad men say that no large railroad would go into any proposition of the kind without the very best of legal advice, as all railroads have this, and are paying large salaries to their council to get the best instruction and guidance as to how to conduct their business.

To Make Rate.

It is expected that the Duluth & Iron Range railroad and the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad will soon make known the basis of their excursion fares to Duluth on account of the Democratic state convention, June 22. Up to this time no decision has been reached. These roads are independent of the Western Passenger association. The Omaha and Wisconsin Central are said to be the only roads belonging to that body which run into this city.

Election of Officers.

This morning a meeting of the Duluth-Superior Passenger association was held, at which A. J. Perrin, city passenger agent at Superior of the South Shore, was made president, to succeed Martin Adson, resigned; and August Brostedt, northern passenger agent of the Great Northern, was made secretary, to succeed F. L. Bacon, who has been transferred from Superior to St. Paul for the Omaha road.

ROBBED A DOMESTIC.

Young Man Takes Watch and Sum of Money.

A domestic in the employ of Dr. D. D. Murray is shy a gold watch and chain and fifteen cents as the result of the taking ways of a young man who was employed by the health commissioner to work on his lawn and garden.

This morning the young man entered the house and asked the girl for a pitcher of water. She directed him where to find the desired article and, being compelled to go down cellar for a few moments, left him alone in the kitchen.

A little while later she happened to open a drawer in a cupboard where she kept her watch and purse, and found them both missing, although a check for $17 was undisturbed.

The young man was nowhere to be found, and the matter is now in the hands of the police.

REPAIRING SHIPS

Russians Working Night and Day at Port Arthur.

Chinese Spy Brings Information From Beleaguered City.

Newchwang, June 13.—A Chinaman, who was smuggled by the Japanese into Port Arthur to act as a spy, escaped from there seven days ago and was arrested at Newchwang last night. He told a correspondent of the Associated Press that the Russians were working a large force of men day and night repairing the warships. They expect that the work will be completed in a fortnight. Four cruisers under Golden Hill (at the entrance of Port Arthur, have their guns trained landward, to assist in repulsing a land attack. The channel is partly cleared, but Admiral Togo's blockade is effective.

The spy estimates the total strength of the Russian forces, including the sailors, at less than 30,000 men. There are many sick and wounded.

There is food sufficient for two months. All the Chinese foodstuff has been seized by the authorities.

Two armored trains, on board of which are mounted guns landed from the Russian battleship, Retvizan, recently ran to a point near the Japanese lines and opened fire. The Japanees replied, and their shells badly damaged the train, though it managed to return to the Russian lines. The stern of the sunken battleship Petropavlovsk is visible at low tide.

The Russians at Port Arthur are gloomy, though hoping that Gen Kuropatkin will send an army south to assist the garrison of Port Arthur.

Admiral Togo is stopping many native boats attempting to land foodstuffs near Port Arthur. Forty-two junks from Che Foo have been sent to Tung Chou Foo.

The Chinese guilds are petitioning Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel (the commander of the Russian military forces at Port Arthur) to permit their members to leave.

A flour mill belonging to Chi Feng Tai, the richest Chinaman in Port Arthur, is grinding wheat brought from Seattle in a French ship, which is still at Port Arthur.

An enormous amount of damage was done to the new town by the Japanese shells.

The Russo-Chinese bank is totally destroyed.

The coal supply at Port Arthur is low. It is estimated at 2400 tons of cardiff and 3000 tons of Japanese coal.

He was then leaving the Miautao islands, forty-five miles south of Port Arthur. It is believed he has effected an entrance into Port Arthur or has been captured or drowned. Secretary Hay and the Russian government have been notified.

OUTPOST ENCOUNTERS

Gen. Kuroki's headquarters in the Field,, June 12, via Fusan, Korea.—According to information here the only hostilities now occurring at the front are daily encounters between outposts, resulting in the loss of a man or two every day. A few Russian prisoners are being brought in, but no Japanese are being captured. This is taken to show that the Japanese are getting the best of the encounters.

Chinese are giving trouble by cutting the telgraph wires nightly; they probably are in the pay of the Russians.

The work of keeping Gen. Kuroki's army in supplies of all kinds continues to be performed with excellent results and is beyond criticism.

The conduct of the Japanese soldiers is irreproachable and their spirits are high.

LEFT THEM IN THE LURCH

Florence Stone Walks Out Between Acts at Hancock.

Between the reported death of one of the managers of the company and the uncertainty as to the movements of Miss Florence Stone, the recent star of the stock company, which is at the Lyceum theater again after a month's absence, that theatrical combination appears to be having a very interesting time.

Charles P. Elliott registered "from over there" at the Spalding today in company with his partner, Mr. Courtenay, and appeared to be alive in every sense of the word, but Miss Stone, who registered there yesterday, went on down to Minneapolis. She left the company rather unexpectedly in Hancock Saturday night without appearing in the third and final act of the performance on the boards there, and the managers were left to do the best they could without her in the third act.

They say they had given her permission to leave after the performance, but had no warning that she would not appear in the third act. Mr. Elliott says arrangements had been made with the railroad company to hold the train, due to leave at 10:05 p. m., fifteen minutes, so that the play could be finished and yet permit Miss Stone to catch the train. But she was afraid she would be left, so at the conclusion of the second act put on her street clothes and took the carriage, which the managers had ordered for her, but in advance of the time they expected her to leave, and saved the railroad company, the trouble of holding the train as intended for her benefit.

Mr. Elliott says that she had notified him of an offer from the Ferris Stock company in Minneapolis, and that he told her if it was good enough, to go ahead and take it. He thought the offer as it stood was not enough to justify her leaving the place she had, but told her if it was raised to a certain figure, to accept, and that she could be released from the company last Saturday night.

This was in the middle of last week. She wired Minneapolis, so it is said, and reported to the management that the people down there had given her the stipulated figure, and she would go Saturday night. But she said nothing of leaving before the third act, and it was this which upset the managerial plans and caused discomfiture to the entire company.

Charles A. Marshall, manager of the Lyceum theater, on the other hand, says that Miss Stone is to return to Duluth and that she had arranged in advance to get away for this week. He says she had agreed to go on a tour if she was given a week off, and he further asserts that she is in Minneapolis under the care of a physician for tonsilitis. But the Minneapolis Journal of Saturday said she had been engaged by Dick Ferris.

Mr. Courtenay says he is at a loss to explain Miss Stone's intentions, but that he knows she ordered Mrs. Minnie Longstreet, her attendant, to have her costumes al cleaned. The "Cleopatra" wardrobe, he says, is in Duluth, although she is expected to use in opening at Minneapolis.

Mr. Elliott says that Miss Eulalie Bennett has been engaged for leading parts. She was with "Heart of Maryland" last year and is to go with "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," Miss Henrietta Crosman's success, when the regular season opens this fall.

Between the statements of the three gentlemen, it is hard to say what Miss Stone expects to do, but it is certain that they agree she is not in Duluth.

Miss Lelia Shaw, known in private life as Mrs. Leslie Morosco, is to take the leading part, a soubrette character, in tonight's performance, and it is said that Miss Bennett is expetced here the middle of the week to begin work with the company.

NO RUSH IS LOOKED FOR

"We do not anticipate that there will be a rush for lands next Wednesday, June 15, when parts of the Pigeon River, Bois Fort and Red Lake Indian reservations will be opened to settlement," said Register W. E. Culkin, of the local land office, today. "There will probably be anywhere between four and fifteen applicants. Possibly there will be more than this number, but it does not look that way from present indications."

The lands to be opened in this district Wednesday will amount in the aggregate to 49,517 acres. On the same day 71,168 acres in the Cass Lake district and 128,045 acres in the Crookston district, also Indian reservation lands will be opened. More people will be attracted to the Cass Lake and Crookston openings than to Duluth, for more land will be available there to entry. Yesterday the line had started forming at the Cass Lake office.

Most of the inquiries being received locally are in regard to the opening to settlement of the Rosebud reservation, in South Dakota. The unallotted and unreserved land to be disposed of in the Rosebud reservation approximates 382,000 acres of prairie land. It has been stated that there will be about twenty-five applicants for every 160-acre tract.

"While the big rush will be at the Rosebud opening," said Register Culkin today, "the reservation lands in Northern Minnesota, in my opinion, will be more valuable in the long run than those in South Dakota. The people flock to prairie land openings, where they have an aversion to lands covered with timber. It is more work to get a farm started in a timber country, so they prefer land already cleared, although it may be of much less value than that in the timber belt. There are some very fine tracts in the reservations which are to be thrown open to entry Wednesday in the Duluth office. To my mind they are preferable to the Rosebud lands."

THE WEEK OF CONVENTIONS

Three to Be Held In Duluth—Big One Next Week.

This is convention week in Duluth. For several days Duluthians will be busy entertaining delegates from outside the city. First, from Tuesday until Friday, inclusive, will be the convention in the Zenith City of the State Sunday School Teachers' association. This will mean a very large attendance from outside points. An elaborate program for the reception and entertainment of the visitors has been prepared, and before leaving the city they will be able to truthfully say that they have hugely enjoyed themselves.

From Tuesday until Friday, inclusive, there will be another church convention in Duluth. The annual convocation of the Duluth diocese of the Episcopal church will open here tomorrow with about 150 clergymen and women of the auxiliary in attendance. The convocations correspond to conferences held by other classes of churches.

The State Music Teachers' convention will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday. This convention will be the means of bringing several hundred people to the city from outside points. Great preparations have also been made for their reception and entertainment.

Next week comes the big Democratic state convention.

REVISION AT PRINCETON

Faculty Announces Complete Change of Undergraduate Courses.

Princeton, N. J., June 13.—The Princeton faculty this afternoon announced a complete revision of under-graduate courses of study leading to the bachelors degree and the action passed by the trustees. It is the most important restatement of the Princeton course of study that has been made since President McCosh reorganized the course in 1870. Candidates for admission to the bachelor of arts course will be examined in the following subjects only:

The classics, mathematics, English, one modern language and history and candidates for the courses of bachelor of science or bachelor of letters will be examined in mathematics, elementary physics, Latin, English, history and two modern languages.

There will be a reduction in number of courses to be taken, each student taking five instead of seven studies each term, with a consequent increase in the amount of time given to each course, in order to make it more substantial.

Provision is also made for insuring coherency and continuity in the elective choices without interfering with the student's full freedom after this essential condition for the exercise of freedom has been complied with.

Princeton continues to stand for the full four-year college course consisting solely of liberal studies and organized under as many, and only so many bachelors degrees as represent the leading types of liberal education. Full recognition is made of the increasing class of students who come to college without Greek. Those who come to Princeton without Greek will be thoroughly drilled in Latin and will be expected to replace matics and modern languages. Both the classical and modern sides are thus organized on equal terms and without confusion.

AFRAID OF BANKS

So He Carries His Money on His Person.

Milwaukee, June 13.—Henry Luterman, who had a narrow escape from death in a boarding house in Chicago, is said to reside in Burlington, Wis. He is said to have lost considerable money, the result of a bank failure in 1893 and since that time has carried his money on his person. This accounts for the large sum of money found in his possession. He is in the employ of a Milwaukee publishing concern.

BEAVERS' CASE

Begun In Brooklyn and Adjourned For a Week.

New York, June 13.—The examination of George W. Beavers, former superintendent of the salaries and allowances division of the postoffice department, on the Washington indictment charging that he accepted compensation for securing government contract for book typewriters, was begun in Brooklyn today before United States Commissioner Benedict. Counsel for Beavers gave notice that they wished to be heard further in opposition to the move of the government for the transfer of Beavers to Washington, but without announcing any decision on several pending motions an adjournment was taken for one week.

CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS

Receive a Token From Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy.

Concord, N. H., June 13.—Christian Scientists, who had come from the convention of the Mother church in Boston to Concord today, inspected the new First church of Christ, now building here through the gift of more than $120,000 by Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy and gave Mrs. Eddy, their leader, a greeting of affection as she took her daily drive through the streets.

The visiting Scientists were grouped on the green in front of the high school building and the Unitarian church and as Mrs. Eddy's carriage approached the throng, E. F. Bates of Boston, president of the Mother church, addressed Mrs. Eddy in the name of the communicants of the faith throughout the world. Mrs. Eddy replied briefly and tendered to him a casket containing a loving token, for the Mother church. The casket is of rosewood, bound with burnished brass, and is to be opened at the annual business session of the church in Boston tomorrow.

THE KAISER IS HEALTHY

Southampton, Eng., June 13.—With the sole object of ascertaining on first-hand authority the actual truth respecting Emperor Williams' condition, a correspondent has made exhaustive inquiries among the officers and the crew of Mrs. Robert Goelet's yacht, Nahma, which has just arrived here from the Mediterranean.

The emperor more than once visited the Nahma and he lunched aboard the Syracuse, Sicily, a few weeks ago. Capt. Harvey, who has known the emperor seven years, said:

"The story of Emperor William's ill health is all lies, hatched by financial cliques for their own purposes. When I saw him in Sicily the emperor was as well as you or I. We had him aboard five times. He was the same healthy, happy-looking man on each occasion and was taking an interest in everything in life, as he always did. When leaving his majesty asked me whether he should see me at the Kiel regatta. That inquiry only shows you that he is not oppressed by any kind of illness."

It is very evident, by the way one and all spoke, that the emperor was a favorite aboard the Nahma. All maintained, when questioned separately, that he is perfectly fit. The steward who stood behind the emperor's chair at Syracuse every time he had meals aboard said:

"I waited on the emperor, and every time he laughed, chatted and joked as though he had not a care in the world. He was the life and soul of the company. Not only that, but he enjoyed the good things with the appetite of a schoolboy. He drank no spirits or wine, but only mineral waters flavored with natural fruit juices. You would never think he had been ill if you had not seen it in the papers."

Your correspondent made very particular inquiries of all hands about the condition of the emperor's voice and how he used it. All declared taht there was nothing wrong with his voice; that it was perfectly clear and strong and that he spoke just as freely as anybody else. The unanimity of these witnesses was remarkable. But they denied that they had been advised of warned against saying anything tending to confirm current reports.

FAMILY FEUD ENDS IN DEATH OF THREE IN VILLAGE STREET

Startling Tragedy Occurs at Election In Bryantville, Ill.

Two Bout Brothers, Three Low Brothers, Fight Duel.

Three Killed, One Fatally, Another Seriously Wounded.

Bryantsville, Ind., June 14.—Three are dead and two wounded, one fatally, as the result of a duel fought on the streets of this village today. The dead:

JAMES ROUT, aged 32.
CHARLES ROUT, aged 36.
MILTON LOW, aged 24.

Fatally wounded: James Low, aged 32. Severely wounded: Frank Low, aged 26.

The fight is the culmination of a feud between the Rout and Low families which has existed for several years. The Routs reside at Bedford, near Bryantsville, and the Low boys are farmers near here. The latter are relatives of the Low family which participated in the notorious Low-Bass feud which formed a bloody record for Lawrence county and Southern Indiana. A free gravel road election is being held here today and the little village of 300 was crowded. Farmers from the surrounding country were gathered and there had been considerable drinking. Today the two Rout brothers drove into town in a livery rig. The Low boys were standing near each other in the crowd around the election booth, when the Rout boys drove past and it was whispered through the crowd at once that trouble would follow.

Two weeks ago, at a social affair, the smouldering hostility between the two families had been rekindled by a fancied insult to Charles Rout by a young woman, who favored one of the Low boys. Hostilities were averted at the time. Today the Rout brothers openly announced, on their arrival here, that they had come to "even things up." Within five minutes from the time the Rout boys arrived in town they were seen approaching the booth. The Low brothers got together, and after a conference, stood about ten feet apart awaiting the arrival of the Rouths. There is a dispute as to whether there were any words before the shooting began, and it is also in doubt as to who fired the first shot. Each of the five men drew a revolver, and each side advanced, all firing. They were not fifteen feet apart when the firing ceased, and on the ground lay three dead, one dying with a bullet through his neck, and one still stood with a bullet wound through his arm and one in his side. The crowd had scattered hastily when the shooting began, and none of the bystanders was struck, although over twenty-five shots were fired. The wounded were taken to a store and their wounds were dressed. Three dead were laid side by side on the counter to await the arrival of the coroner and officers from Bedford. There is intense excitement here.

WHEN PORT ARTHUR FALLS

British Tenancy of Wei Hai Wei Will End.

London, June 14.—It appears from a question and answer in the house of commons today that the fall of Port Arthur will mark the end of British tenancy of Wei Hai Wei, on the Shan Tung promontory. Earl Percy, the under foreign secretary, informed the house today that under the Anglo-Chinese convention of 1898 Great Britain's lease of this Chinese port was only valid so long as Port Arthur remained in the occupation of Russia.

ASCOT WEEK OPENS WITH BRIGHT PROSPECTS.

London, June 14.—Ascot week opened today with brilliant prospects. All the houses in the vicinity had large parties. King Edward, Queen Alexandra and the prince and princess of Wales drove in state from Windsor Castle to the races.

The Ascot stakes, with 2000 sovereigns added, two miles, the principal race of the day, brought out a big field of twenty-two. Merry Andrew won, Pure Gold second and Pradella third.

OLD MURDER

Confessed By Aged Man, Who Surrenders.

Kansas City, June 14.—William Merrill, aged 60 years, surrendered at the police station here today, saying that he had killed John Edwards, a railroad brakeman at Deer Lodge, Mont., nineteen years ago. Merrill said that a man named Murphy had been sentenced to life imprisonment for the crime, and is now serving time in the Montana prison.

BONDS OVERSUBSCRIBED.

New York, June 14.—J. P. Morgan & Co. announce that $10,000,000 of New York Central & Hudson River railroad 4 per cent debenture bonds offered publicly today at 97½ were oversubscribed.

ALUMNI DAY AT PRINCETON.

Princeton, N. J., June 14.—Alumni day of Princeton's commencement was marked by annual meetings of the Phi Betta Kappa, the whig and the cliosophic societies in the morning, after which the polls were opened for the election of an alumni trustee. The day's exercises will close with a concert on the campus.

EUSTIS WILLING TO BE THE CANDIDATE

For Governor If the Republicans Want a Third Man.

Thinks He Could Have Hennepin County Without a Fight.

St. Paul, June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—William Henry Eustis, of Minneapolis, has at last made known his views on the gubernatorial contest. While at the state capitol yesterday he said he had heard many Republicans throughout the state say that both Robert C. Dunn, of Princeton, and Judge Loren W. Collins, of St. Cloud, has disqualified themselves for the gubernatorial nomination. The Minneapolis man further stated that if the Republicans of the state want a third man, he would be very glad to receive the nomination and that if he were nominated, not having taken any sides in the gubernatorial contest, he would be a strong candidate.

"When I returned from Porto Rico and my Southern trip this spring I saw that both Mr. Dunn and Judge Collins had made considerable progress toward the nomination, and I thought that it would not be fair to either for me to get in the race," said Mr. Eustis yesterday. "Since then, in spite of the fact that many of my friends in Hennepin county and in other counties in the First and Second congressional district have urged me to make the run, I have carefully kept out of the contest. I don't think that I exaggerate the situation when I say that I could have Hennepin county and, perhaps, several other counties in the state without a fight, and you see it was quite a temptation for me to make a run.

"Lately I have heard lots of talk about a dark horse candidate. Many Republicans have told me that both Mr. Dunn and Judge Collins have, to a certain extent, disqualified themselves. If the Republicans should want to nominate a third man, I, of course, would be glad to receive the nomination. Should this come about it would place me in a position of unusual serength, for I have kept aloof of the guberna-

STREETS IN MINING DISTRICT ASSUME NORMAL APPEARANCE

Man With a Rifle Can Now Rarely Be Seen Although Many Are Carrying Revolvers—Gen. Bell Makes Another Statement.

Cripple Creek, Colo., June 14.—With the resumption of work in the mines, the streets of all the cities and towns in Teller county have taken on their normal appearance. A man with a rifle is now rarely seen, although many are carrying revolvers. The district, apparently, is as safe today to the visitor or the resident as ever it has been.

Two posses scoured the country to the west of Cripple Creek without encountering the armed bodies of men reported to be entrenched on West Four Mile and North Four Mile creeks. Gen. Bell says he will send out military expeditions daily until he rounds up all refugees in the surrounding mountains.

STATEMENT BY BELL

Concerning His Actions In the Mining District.

Cripple Creek, Colo., June 14.—Adjt. Gen. Sherman M. Bell, in command of the militia, has issued a statement concerning the deportation of the union miners and others from the Cripple Creek district. The statement was prepared at the request of an Eastern newspaper for an opinion as to why the deportations do not conflict with the provisions of the constitution of the United States against depriving any person of life, liberty or property, without due process of law. It reads in part as follows:

"The powers of the military in dealing with an organiaztion engaged in insurrection against the lawful authorities of the state, in a criminal conspiracy against the lives of its citizens has recently been defined by the honorable supreme court of this state in re Moyer, to which I refer you for my authority. I am taking only such steps as are necessary to restore peace in this community and to render safe the lives of its citizens. Many innocent lives have already been sacrificed and the authorities of Colorado propose that these assassinations shall cease.

"The people of Colorado love order and peace and law, just as much as those of the older communities, but they sometimes make their election of citizens in a hury and the murderous, unspeakable outrage at the Independence station a week ago, coming as a culmination of many hidden crimes, all traceable to the Western Federation of Miners, precipitated such an election."

CONDEMNED MEN ATTEMPTED TO ESCAPE FROM PENITENTIARY

Columbus, O., June 14.—An attempt was made by four of the nine condemned men in the annex at the penitentiary to escape about 1 o'clock this morning by overpowering the guard. The guard was badly beaten but two guards from one of the halls came to his rescue and the prisoners were forced back into their cells and locked up.

The prisoners in the plot to escape were Moses Johnson, of Scioto county; Philip Nagle, of Wyandotte county; Louis Harmon, of Franklin county, and Ben Wade, of Lucas county. Guard Richards, of Williams county, was in charge of the prisoners. He was unarmed, no weapons being allowed in the annex. The prisoners beat him down with their fists and secured the keys to the cage in the annex, but failed to find the key to the outer door. Guard Richards made such an outcry that two guards in an adjoining hall were attracted and they came to his rescue. The prisoners were overpowered and locked up in their cells.

Guard Richards was badly beaten but his condition is not regarded as serious. It was evidently the purpose of the prisoners to get out of the rear door of the annex which leads into the prison yard and scale the walls. They had no weapons but expected to secure one from the guard. It is not believed that the other five men in the annex were a party to the plot to escape.

WOMEN DELEGATES ARE GIVEN AUDIENCE BY THE EMPRESS

Berlin, June 14.—The chief interest of the American delegates to the International Women's congress today attached to an audience given to twenty-one members of the international council by the empress. The deputation comprised the retiring and newly elected officers of the council, the president of each national council and several leaders of the movement. The Americans on the deputation were Miss Susan B. Anthony, Mrs. May Wright Sewall, of Indianapolis, and Mrs. Swift. Her majesty engaged all the delegates in conversation, evincing great interest in the progress of the woman movement. She expressed much pleasure at hearing from the foreign delegates of the success of the Berlin meeting of the council. The American delegates were charmed by the empress' gracious bearing, which Mrs. Sewall said was a lesson in kindness and courtesy. The reception lasted an hour and a half.

The sessions of the congress this morning were again well attended. Mrs. Emmeline B. Wells, of Salt Lake City, made the first address in the first section, on "The Education of Girls in American Public Schools."

In the second section, Mrs. Lydia K. Commander, of New York, spoke of "Industrial Work for Women and Maternity," and Mrs. Frederick Nathan, of New York, delivered an address on "Factory versus Home Work."

In the third section, Mrs. Cummings, of Toronto, spoke on "Custodial Care of Feeble-Minded Women of Child-Bearing Age."

In the fourth section, Mrs. M. L. Carr, of Longmont, Col., made an address on "Parental Authority."

PLEADS NOT GUILTY

But Nan Patterson Reserves Right to Withdraw Friday.

Alleged Murderer of Caesar Young Is Arraigned In Court.

New York, June 14.—Mrs. Nan Patterson, the former actress, against whom an indictment for murder in the first degree in connection with the death of Bookmaker "Caesar" Young was returned by the grand ury yesterday, today entered a plea of not guilty, before Judge Newburger, in the court of general sessions. The plea was made with leave to withdraw by next Friday, and in the meantime her counsel will serve notice on the district attorney that he will move to inspect the minutes of the grand jury.

The proceedings in court were very brief, occupying hardly more than two minutes, and not one word was spoken by the prisoner.

Attired in deep mourning, with a heavy black veil, which she was not compelled to raise, Mrs. Patterson entered the court room with her father, Miss Martha McLaughlin, a friend, and her counsel, just before the clerk called the case. With a jaunty air she walked up the aisle to the bar, and when asked to plead to the indictment, she turned to Mr. Levy, her attorney, who said:

"The defendant pleads not guilty, with leave to withdraw by Friday."

"That is a practice I do not approve of," the court replied, "but I will give you until Friday in which to plead."

This ended the formal arraignment, and the prisoner was at once taken back to the Tombs. As she was led from the court room, she bowed and smiled towards her father and friends sitting at the rear of the room.

SPORTSMANLIKE

Is Decision of American Riflemen to Return Trophy.

London, June 14.—Lord Cheylesmore president of the British National Rifle association commenting on the action of the American National Rifle association in deciding to return the Palma trophy to the British association, said to a representative of the Associated Press today:

"At present no official communication announcing the resolution of the American association has reached us, but I feel certain that our council appreciate the sportsmanlike decision. Until we have received an official communication of its course, it is impossible to say what action our council will take. I can only express my personal satisfaction that an agreement satisfactorily to all has been attained and repeat that it has never been the wish on this side to impart any bitterness into the correspondence or to in any way attempt to upset the result of the match."

BOOKBINDERS MEET.

Annual Convention of Brotherhood Held at St. Paul.

St. Paul, June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Delegates to the annual convention of the Brotherhood of Bookbinders assembled in the senate chamber of the state capitol today as a preliminary to the business sessions, which will be held tomorrow, Thursday and Friday. Today's session was taken up almost wholly by addresses of welcome by Governor Van Sant on behalf of the state, by Mayor Smith, on behalf of the city and by President A. G. Anderson, of the brotherhood, who responded to the welcoming speeches. This afternoon the visitors were given a steamboat ride on the Mississippi by the local bookbinders and another excursion on the river will be enjoyed tonight. Numerous other entertainments have been provided for the delegates.

HUNDREDS OF POLICEMEN

Will Be at Derby to Prevent Bookmaking.

Chicago, June 14.—Assistant Chief of Police Schutter has announced that he will have 300 policemen at Washington park Saturday to make sure of being able to carry out Mayor Harrison's orders to prevent bookmaking at the race meet.

Detectives, it is declared, will locate each bookmaker and provide for him a guard of three patrolmen. Others will be scattered through the crowd with orders to arrest any person found attempting to make books.

GONE TO IOWA.

Governor Van Sant to Preside at Anniversary.

St. Paul, June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—After Governor Van Sant had hurriedly made addresses of welcome at the bookbinders' meeting and the Minnesota immigration meeting, both of which are being held here today, he left for Mount Vernon, Iowa, where he will preside tomorrow at the semi-centennial exercises in connection with the commencement of Cornell college, which will be held there.

Addresses will be delivered during that celebration by Governor Cummins, Secretary of the Treasury Shaw, Governor Van Sant and Senator Allison and other notables.

NEW POSTMASTER.

Washington, June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—F. B. Smith has been appointed postmaster at Hill City, Aitkin county, Minn., vice Minnie F. Gill, resigned.

FUNERAL OF MISS MORTON.

Paris, June 14.—The funeral of Lena Morton, daughter of Levi P. Morton, of New York, who died here June 10, from the effects of blood poisoning following an operation for appendicitis, took place today at the Church of the Holy Trinity. Many Americans, including Ambassador Porter and the staff of the American embassy, attended.

JAPANESE AGAIN MINING ENTRANCE TO PORT ARTHUR

One Exploded Killing One Officer and Eighteen Men.

Japanese Displaying Great Activity In Advance Lines.

Russians Calling Out Reserves All Over Empire.

Tokio, June 14.—While the Taihoku was engaged in laying mines at the entrance to Port Arthur last night, a mine exploded killing one officer and eighteen men and wounding two officers and seven men. The Taihoku, which is a naval transport, was not seriously damaged.

St. Petersburg, June 14.—The Japanese are displaying activity at all their advance lines. According to information in possession of the war office, two divisions of the enemy are now marching north along the railroad toward Vatangow (twenty-five miles above Kin Chou). They are having constant skirmishes with the retiring Russians, but the advance is not being seriously contested. Although it is too early to determine the exact purpose of the advance, the presumption of the general staff is that the northward movement is intended to effect a juncture at Kai Chou with the column from Siu Yen, which is still moving westward.

The bombardment of the coast near Kai Chou and the blockade of Newchwang might indicate that the ultimate object of the combined movement is to clear the Liao Tung peninsula of Russians and occupy Newchwang as a new base. The garrison at Newchwang, it is claimed here, remains undiminished, but it is not believed that the Russian plans contemplate a serious attempt to hold Newchwang. North of Feng Wang Cheng the Japanese are also moving. The war office has no advices confirmatory of their abandonment of Saimastza (north of Feng Wang Cheng and east southeast of Liao Yang). On the contrary, the latest reports are to the effect that the Japanese hold Samiatsza, their outposts reaching so far north as Feng Shuy Lin pass) about due east of Liao Yang, (which is held by the Russians). A Japanese force of 3000 men is reported to be moving north from Huan-Dian-Siang, thirty miles from Saimatsza.

NOT GOING SOUTH.

But Few Russian Soldiers Above Port Arthur.

St. Petersburg, June 14.—The Novo Vreyma's military expert authoritatively denies the report that Gen. Stakelberg is on the march south. He declares that the only Russian forces on the Liao Tung peninsula, above Port Arthur, consist of cavalry and railroad guards, and adds that it is scarcely possible to interfere with the siege operations before Port Arthur. The chief mission of the Russian cavalry detachments, he says, is to hamper the movements of the Japanese columns from the south to the north.

The Novoe Vreyma devotes a long editorial to arguing that wireless communication with neutral territory does not constitute a breach of neutrality, the enemy having practically the same remedy as in the case of cable communication, namely, as previously cabled in one case of cutting the cable, and in the other, of stationing a vessel rigged with wireless apparatus between the sending and receiving stations, thus interfering with communication.

The calling out of the army reserves in the Kazan, Kieff and Moscow military districts was announced today. The step is for the purpose of filling up the skeleton reserve corps, and to replace the regular troops already gone or going to the front. It also foreshadows the dispatch of four Volga corps, which was predicted in these dispatches a month ago. The latter would give Gen. Kuropatkin 200,000 more men.

RESERVES CALLED OUT.

Voronezh, Russia, June 14.—An imperial order calling out the reserves of this district has been published.

Bobcroff, Russia, June 14.—The partial mobilization of the reserves in this district has ben proclaimed. Two thousand reserve men are wanted here.

Petropavlovsk, Russia, June 14.—The last two classes of the reserves of this district have been called out.

TO USE U. S. ARMY TENTS.

St. Petersburg, June 14.—The war office has adopted recommendations made by Lieut. Botkin, embodying the use of the United States army tents. These are convertible into ponchos for the protection of troops during the rainy season.

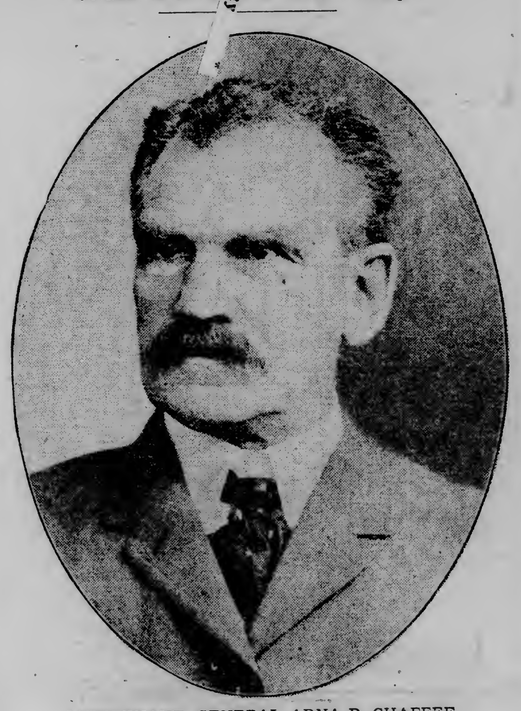

Orders have been telegraphed to Manchuria to equip as ponchos the ordinary tents in use now, so as to protect the men from rain during the day without impeding their movements, and afford them shelter at night.

ANARCHISTS ARRESTED.

Johanneshurg, Transvaal, June 14.—Three foreigners, supposed to be anarchists, weer arrested here during the night. One of the men had been heard to boast that he would attempt to assassinate the British high commissioner, Lord Milner, if it was made worth his while.

GEN. CHAFFEE COMING TO DULUTH IN JULY

The Head of the United States Army Will Be Here One Day.

LIEUTENANT GENERAL ADNA R. CHAFFEE,
Chief of Staff of the Army of the United States.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU

Washington, June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Gen. Chaffee, chief of staff and head of the army, has arranged for a tour of inspection of the prominent military posts of the country during July and August. He will be accompanied by Gen. C. F. Humphrey, quartermaster-general, and Captain Grote Hutchinson, Eighth cavalry, aide to Gen. Chaffee. Since the return of Gen. Chaffee from active service in the Philippines and China, he has felt the necessity of getting better acquainted with the country, much of which he was perfectly familiar with as a line officer but which has grown beyond his knowledge in a personal sense since he became division commander and later chief of the staff.

The itinerary of the party calls for about fifteen thousand miles of railroad travel in addition to coach transportation. Many practical questions will be solved on this trip of inspection by Gen. Chaffee, particularly those of mobilization at important centers. Railroad facilities will be looked into, equipment will be gone over and the general mobility of army will be inquired into, to save the country from the scenes antecedent to the Spanish-American war.

Generals Chaffee and Humphrey will leave Washington on June 25, for Detroit, where Fort Wayne will be visited. The party will then go to Duluth by United States Engineer boat, stopping en route at Mackinac and one day will be spent at Duluth, thence they will go to St. Paul and visit Fort Snelling. A stop of two days will be made at Snelling before proceeding westward.

HARRISON-HEARST MAKE COMBINATION

Their Followers Unite to Control Illinois Democratic Convention.

Springfied, Ill., June 14.—The plan of John P. Hopkins, of Chicago, and the majority of the members of the state central committee, to make Frank P. Quinn, of Peoria, temporary chairman of the convention, which meets today, has forced the Hearst and Harrison factions of the party into an alliance, defensive and offensive. The deal between Harrison and Hearst was arranged last night, but the fact that it had been made was guarded with the greates secrecy. There were six men representing Harrison and Hearst in the conference, and each man pledged himself to say nothing of the compact until after the adjournment of the subcommittee of the state central body. It was feared that if the Hopkins men knew of the arrangement, they would offset it by unseating a sufficient number of Harrison and Hearst men to leave them in full control of the convention. The deal is advantageous to the Harrison people, for while they have about one-fifth as many delegates as Hearst, they are to have one-half the delegates-at-large to the national convention and equal voice in naming the candidates for the state offices, provided the alliance is able to control the convention, as its leaders express themselves confident of doing.

The Harrison people, on their part, have agreed to vote for an instructed Hearst delegation and to secure the withdrawal of Chairman James R. Williams from the presidential race. Edward Lahiff, of Chicago, who was one of the Harrison men present at last night's conference, pledged himself to the fact that Mr. Williams would pull out, if requested to do so by his backers from Chicago. The great interest still continues in the fight for party control and the candidates for office are in the background so completely that no attention is paid to them. George E. Dickson, of Chicago, has come out as a candidate for lieutenant governor and will make a good run for the nomination, if the candidate for governor is not a Cook county man.

Stringer, Prentiss and Crolius are still the leading candidates for governor, and all of them are liked by the delegates. Stringer, however, is showing the most strength.

The situation was made more complex this morning by the announcement of Congressman Williams that he was not inclined to withdraw as his Cook county friends had said he would do. Williams has eighty-seven instructed delegates in the convention who would be left to him if Cook county should abandon him.

There is talk of two conventions to be held in the same hall in the event of the Hopkins people being able to prevent a roll call.

It is certain that Hearst and Harrison can control the convention if ever they get a roll call and equally sure that Hopkins will rule it as long as he prevents a roll call.

The convention was called to order with all the delegates keyed up to the notion of the fight which was expected on the selection of a temporary chairman. Policemen were scattered liberally throughout the hall, and the Hopkins people, who had the appointment of doorkeepers and controlled the seating arrangements of the hall, used their utmost endeavor to see that as few people who were not "right" were admitted to the floor of the convention hall. Every ticket holder was compelled to pass the inspection of a line of doorkeepers. Just before the opening of the convention, Frank P. Quinn, the Hopkins selection for temporary chairman, was asked if he had prepared a speech. "Not a word," he replied, as he pointed to his gavel. "Just the wood, that's all I have."

IN WOMAN'S SPHERE

Social, Musical and Art Circles.

The college students returning from schools and universities all over the land where are met students from all the states bring with them a fund of stories and descriptions of strange personalities that are equalled only by those returning from another college. The college people bring with them a breeziness and an indifference toward the apparent worries of life that is almost startling to the stay-at-homes. Little reck they if the presidential year be a poor one in business. Their only worry through the year is whether or not the "jolly" they have been working for the two months previous to final exams. has been artistic enough to avert the "flunk" that has been impending. If it has, the time is ripe for a self hand shake; if not, (imagine here a French shrug) "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof" and that one flunk can easily be passed off next year.

Duluth is well represented in the colleges of the country from one end to the other, and by those who have returned some delightful stories of college life are being told. One student who has returned from a far western university tells a story of keen college wit that is particularly enjoyable in view of the reputation woman has for writing long telegrams. The class in old English of this university decided that in the interest of the work of the class it would be desirable to have Ben Greet's company of players present the old English play "Everyman" at the university. All the arrangements were made and the class was busy assuming the proper spirit for the enjoyment of the great morality play when a telegram came from the manager from one of the towns on his tour asking whether a personal representation of Jehovah was desired. He explained that in the old English version Jehovah was always personally represented but if the class felt that any sacrilige would be apparent, he could be represented some other way.

The chairman called her committee together and after mature deliberation it was decided to have the real old English representation. The telegram that was sent overturns all the carefully piled up ideas of the verbose telegrams of woman. The heming or hawing or useless explaining. The telegram read "Manager Ben Greet's Company of Players. Let the Lord Come." How the company and all its members came and the play left not the desired impression and the same member of the class wrote an old English play of her own called "Every Freshman" is another story.

In one of the eastern colleges for women who admit several hundred into the freshmen class each year, a girl from the far West was one of the interesting features of the campus for the first few weeks. She was a tiny bit of a creature, some inches less than five feet in height. Most girls who attain the first year at college also acquire some mode of dressing their hair that places it in some position on their heads. No so the freshman from the far West. She had quantities of long thick hair and she wore it in two braids down her back. She aroused in every other member of the class and even in the sophomores a motherly feeling of protection, a feeling that she must be shielded from every possible annoyance. So it went for some weeks but as in other walks of life familiarity breeds knowledge. At one of the fudge parties to which the freshman from the far West was a guest and at which the students of Harvard for this women's college is not far from Harvard, were being discussed pro and con, the voice of the smallest one rose and so seldom did she talk she was heard in breathless silence. She said:

"From my experience with the men of the two sections of the country it is my opinion that it's lots harder to bring the men of the East to the point."

That was all, but it dispelled any desire for motherliness on the part of the freshmen classamtes for the remainder of the year.

"The eastern characteristic," accounted for a hesitancy on its part of the eastern men in extending an invitation to a foot ball ganie as well the greater invitation of sharing his joys and sorrows for life.

TO AID WOMEN.

Information Disseminated For St. Louis Fair Visitors.

The international committees of the Young Women's association and the Young Women's Christian association have issued posters which are to be distributed and displayed all over the land, which warn the women who visit the St. Louis exposition against the evils that may there confront them. The posters explain where in the city they may secure help and advice, and a list of seven or eight warnings of what one should do and what should not be done.

A matron will be at ever depot of St. Louis, as well as a representative of the Young Women's Christian association, and strangers in the city will be sent to good places during their stay at the fair. Several of these posters are displayed in the local rooms of the Y. W. C. A., and several times have they been the means of helping women who are planning to visit the fair. With the attention which has been given this subject, it is hoped that unpleasant conditions, which have marked the other expositions of the country, may be avoided at the St. Louis exposition.

Rescued From Savagery.

In her chamber at the college,
At the far-famed Vassar college,
On a couch of dreamy softness,
Rested Hiawatha Tame Goose,
When the study hours were over,
Say, but wasn't she a peach
Dressed in rather loud kimona,
And, of course, some other toggin'.
Lay she there and gazed about her,
Rubbernecked at her surroundings,
And her maiden thoughts sped backwards
To the days of auld lang syne
When she was an untamed Injun,
In her warrior father's tepee,
On the Pawnee reservation,
And her musing thus were fashioned:
"Gee! but isnt' this a contrast!
What a trans-mog-ri-fi-ca-tion!
Wouldn't it congest your liver!
Warp your slats all out of kilter!
Seems but yesterday, at furthest,
Since I lived in horrid tepee,
Savage emblems all around me,
Smell of roast dog in the ozone,
And my finest robe de chambre
Was a gunnysack kimona
And a pair of soldier breeches
Mamma haggled down to fit me.
Now my duds are all de rigueur,
I'm a redskin rara avis,
From the wilds of Ok-la-ho-ma,
On my walls are Christian mottoes
Worked in ecru by myselfie,
Gathered from the wisest sayings
Of my dear beloved teachers,
When they thought I did not listen;
"Rolling Stone No Moss Collecteth."
"Poor the Rule That Won't Work Double,"
"Every Dog His Day Possesseth,"
"Music Soothes the Savage Bosom,"
"Think Twice Ere You Shoot Your Mouth Off,"
"Wise the Child That Knows Its Author,"
"What Is Home Without Some Parents?"
"Never Chew the Rag—Chew Tolu,"
"Curb Your Anger—Keep Your Shirt On,"
"Long the Lane That Hath No Elbow,"
"How'd You Like to be the Ice Man?"
"Great Aches Grow From Little Toecorns,"
"Love at Locksmiths Gives the Ha-Ha,"
"Never Trump Your Partner's Joker."
Wise the teaching they present me,
As my pliant Injun nature
Is my hand of learning molded
Into something just as better.
Then she stuck her wad of Tolu
On the wall for future action,
Drew her limbs up closer to her,
O'er her eyeballs closed the shutters,
And a snore soon told the story
That she's hied her hence to Dreamland.

PRESIDENT FIRM

In Resolve to Have Cortelyou as the National Chairman.

Story Which Gives Fine Insight Into Politicians' Ways.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—President Roosevelt is moored to George B. Cortelyou for national chairman notwithstanding the protests that have been made by practical politicians against Secretary Cortelyou's selection for that highly important place in a presidential contest. Mr. Cortelyou will be chosen not because a majority of the national committee want him but because the opposition cannot agree upon a man to succeed the late M. A. Hanna. In short it is not a matter of a man but of the man who wants to run the man. Roosevelt has fixed upon Cortelyou because he knows he can be implicitely trusted and that he has no ambitions other than to be a faithful servant burying his individuality, if need be, for the success of his chief.

Out of this anomolous situation a most interesting story of political ambition is evolved, a story full of human interest which gives a fine insight into the ways of the politician.

It is a well known fact that if Franklin J. Murphy, of New Jersey, had been made the national chairman, as was intended at one time, he would have organized the Republican machine with regard to the success of Fairbanks in his candidacy for the presidency in 1908. Murphy was one of the field marshals of the old Republican regime. Fairbanks always regarded himself as the crown prince of the Hanna-McKinley dynasty. It required many months of meditation to convince him that he could not defeat Roosevelt in the convention. After reaching this reluctant decision he began looking upon the vice-presidency as a means of securing the greater prize four years from now. He has changed his views regarding the value of the vice-presidency to a man with presidential aspirations. In Philadelphia Hanna wanted to use the name of Fairbanks to stop the rush for Roosevelt, but the Indiana statesman declined to be considered for the second place.

This time it appears to him that the second place is a good stepping stone for the first place and he tells his friends that he wants the nomination, although he is careful not to go on record himself. If he did and should fail to secure the second prize it would operate against his future political plans. Naturally Mr. Fairbanks desires control of the Republican organization. It would be of material aid to him in carrying on his own campaign which will begin soon after the next election. It would be very agreeable to him if Mr. Murphy was chosen. In fact the New Jersey politician could be expected to get the organization in shape for Fairbank's use.

The Indiana politician was greatly surprised when informed that Roosevelt would not select Murphy. The president did not say so to Fairbanks but he did to others that he wanted a man to run the present campaign and not run a campaign for a successor to the president. He wanted the organization for his own use and not for other men with ambitions.

The story in relation to J. W. Blythe, of Iowa, and the national chairmanship is just as interesting as that of Franklin J. Murphy. They differ, however, in atmosphere, as they say in art. When the name of Secretary Shaw became prominent as a vice-presidential candidate there suddenly appeared in a newspaper far away from Iowa an account of how he had pardoned a notorious criminal to help a congressman out in a political way. There was nothing in the story, as politics go, but it was sufficient to set a number of men thinking and Shaw suffered. Up to this time the friends of Shaw, who is a candidate for president in 1908, had looked upon the vice-president as most desirable. Mr. Shaw became interested in having J. W. Blythe chairman of the national committee and Mr. Blythe's eminent capabilities were suggested diplomatically to the president. Naturally his purpose was to have Mr. Blythe, his strongest Iowa friend, control the national organization in the interest of his presidential ambition. Naturally Shaw's enemies saw through this and made their plans accordingly.

Senator Dolliver and a few other politicians from Iowa called upon the president to tell him that Blythe would be an excellent man for the place. Their praise of the Burlington lawyer was most effusive and cordial. Also it would be a great satisfaction to the president to have a man in control of his campaign who would be in such close touch and cordial sympathy with his secretary of the treasury, Mr. Shaw. Were they close friends? The president ought to know. Oh yes, like brothers. That was enough. Mr. Roosevelt could see no reason why his campaign should be run in the interest of Mr. Shaw's presidential canvass. "We did what we could for him," said Mr. Dolliver to one of Shaw's friends, with a smile so friendly and regretful, "I hardly see how you could have done more," replied the other with a warm shake of the hand. And yet we wonder at the ways of oriental diplomacy.

Mr. Penrose had some notions about the use he would like to make of the national chairmanship. It would help him close his grip on the Republican organization in his own state. It would raise him to a high position in politics and, perhaps, he would become a president maker if not a president. Senator Penrose has served a long and faithful apprenticeship and feels that now he would like to do a few things on his own account. But Mr. Penrose was, apparently, not personally interested in Roosevelt and he was pushed aside.

If all the secret and open opposition to Cortelyou as chairman could combine on one man it would be sufficient to defeat the president's wishes. Many efforts will be made to bring about such a combination, but very likely will fail on account of the separate ambition controlling the different groups interested in the succession. The Shaw crowd will not help Fairbanks and the Indiana man's friends will not help any one but the Hoosier favorite. Through the division of the opposition Mr. Roosevelt will probably have his own way about the chairmanship.

From politics to potatoes is a far cry, but the latter, so far as results go, is even more profitable than the first, particularly when you run for office and get left. Did you ever hear of a pound of potatoes 17s 6d ($4.29)? Well, that is what a Sheffield (England) gentleman recently paid for a pound of "Sutton's New Discovery." In view of the fact that the Greeley, Colorado, district ships in the neighborhood of $4,000,000 worth of potatoes a year, the importance of this industry is readily understood. While the price per pound paid by the Sheffield man for the "Sutton's New Discovery" seems a fairly good price for potatoes of any sort, even that long figure is easily beaten, according to United States Consul C. H. Daniels, at Sheffield, England, who, in a letter to the consular division, states that in Peterborough market the other day one pound of Eldorado potatoes fetched £100 sterling ($487). The owner who sold the Sheffield gentleman his little lot writes that there has just been on his premises a raiser who declined £30 sterling ($146) for a single potao of that variety. Even this price, says Consul Daniels, was eclipsed at the Smithfield show on Wednesday, when a firm of York potato merchants sold four pounds of Eldoradoes at the rate of £150 sterling ($723) per pound. This is reckoned to work out at £3336,000 sterling $1,635,144) per ton, or about thrice their weight in gold. The raiser, it might be added, declined an offer of £70 sterling ($341) for a single specimen of the Elorado.

It is calculated that in expert hands a small potato of this variety, weighing a couple of ounces, will produce about forty plants, each weighing about two pounds, or about forty pounds return from two ounces. It is related that a farmer near Boston—the Lincolnshire seaport—realiezd thirty-seven hundreds (4144 pounds) from a single stone (fourteen pounds) of these potatoes, which indicates that this potato can reproduce itself 300-fold in weight in one season.

The Eldorado is of a kidney shape and a darkish green color, with a metallic sheen, and appears from the foregoing figures to be worth more than its weight in gold. It may be added that this fabulous value is treaceable, in a large degree, to systematic cornering, the originator of the variety letting out samples in small quantities to only two persons, so far as is known. He will dispose of no more at present, it is said, even at the extraordinary prices now ruling, preferring to plant what he has retained—about two tons—and sell the product in 1905 at three guineas ($15.35) a pound, which he expects will be readily paid. An enthusiast predicts that with favorable conditions the yield from the two tons of seed potaoes will be such that the price will realize a total of about £3,000,000 sterling ($14,599,500).

It is now little more than four months since the business district of Baltimore was wiped out by fire. For three or four weeks after that event a legal holiday prevailed in the Monumental city, and then it was announced that the fire sufferers had shaken themselves together, and that a new Baltimore would arise which would be a city far superior to that which had been destroyed. But in four months very little has been done except to clean the brick and haul away the useless debris. Legislation has been enacted for the widening of the streets in order that any future fire may not have such an easy sweep. But unfortunately the authorities have not the money necessary to provide for this widening of thoroughfares, although the council of the city will probably place several hundred thousand dollars at the disposal of the municipal authorities for this purpose at its next meeting.

Washington visitors to Baltimore, and they make daily trips, are surprised at the character of the buildings which are going up in the burned district. On some of the most valuable sites on Baltimore street the structures thus far erected are of the cheapest possible construction, and there is no evidence anywhere that the buildings which are to replace those consumed by fire are to be in any way better than those destroyed. Contractors and architects assert that the disposition of the Baltimorean seems to be to cheapen in every possible way the building material which they must use, and altogether it looks as though Washington's sister city has profited but very little by the severe ordeal which she passed on the 7th of last February.

Baltimore, by the way, is likely to get into a very hot controversy with Chicago, if the people of the latter city ever pass through and see the signs which are displayed in some of the windows of the business houses. One

Mrs. Fairbanks tells how neglect of warning symptoms will soon prostrate a woman. She thinks woman's safeguard is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and neglect are the cause of untold female suffering, not only with the laws of health but with the chance of a cure. I did not heed the warnings of headaches, organic pains, and general weariness, until I was well nigh prostrated. I knew I had to do something. Happily I did the right thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound faithfully, according to directions, and was rewarded in a few weeks to find that my aches and pains disappeared, and I again felt the glow of health through my body. Since I have been well I have been more careful, I have also advised a number of my sick friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they have never had reason to be sorry. Yours very truly, MRS. MAY FAIRBANKS, 216 South 7th St., Minneapolis, Minn." CATARRH ROBS WOMEN OF HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Pe-ru-na Makes Women Healthy and Beautiful.

Women All Over the United States Praise Pe-ru-na for Diseases Peculiar to Their Sex.

Miss Florence Miller.

Miss Florence Miller, 492 Alabama St., Buffalo, N. Y., writes:

"I am proud and happy that I am able to praise Peruna as it deserves, for a better medicine I do not know for the ills so many women suffer from and do not know which way to turn for help. If all women who suffer as I did with periodical backache, headache and all worn-out feeling would take Peruna they would soon find that it put new life into the body and took away all the aches and pains and weariness.

"That has been my experience, and I gratefully acknowledge the blessing Peruna has been to me."

MISS FLORENCE MILLER.

Disguised Catarrh.

There are a great many people who are actually invalids from chronic catarrh of some internal organ who have not the slightest suspicion that they are victims of this universal disease.

This is especially true in cases of chronic catarrh of the organs in the lower part of the abdomen or pelvic organs.

There are a multitude of women, especially housewives, and all other women obliged to be on their feet continually, who are wretched beyond description, simply because their strength and vitality is sapped away by catarrhal discharges.

Peruna is such a specific for such cases that when patients have once used it they can never be induced to quit it until they are permanently cured. It begins to relieve the disagreeable symptoms at once. The backache ceases, the trembling knees are strengthened, the appetite restored, digestion made perfect, the dull headache is stopped and the patients are gradually cured. These results certainly follow a course of treatment with Peruna. We have on file many thousand testimonials like the one given above. We can only give our readers a slight glimpse of the vast array of unsolicited endorsements we are receiving every month. No other physician in the world has received such a volume of enthusiastic and grateful letters of thanks as Dr. Hartman for Peruna.

TO REVISE THE TARIFF

Republican Leaders Consider Change In the National Program.

Washington, June 14.—A change of program in the national Republican convention at Chicago next week is to be considered at a conference between President Roosevelt and several senators and representatives who are delegates to the convention.

Quite a number of prominent Republican politicians will come to Washington this week, en rolute to Chicago, for the purpose of talking over some recent developments with the chief executive. The revival of the Canadian reciprocity talk in Massachusetts and the stand taken by Republicans there are making things rather interesting for Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, who is coming on to Washington before he goes to Chicago.

Ten days ago it had been arranged that Lodge should be chairman of the committee on resolutions at Chicago and the first plank agreed on was a stand pat declaration. But there is apprehension among Republicans.

The revival of the reciprocity discussion and the situation in Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa are not reassuring. Of course, no Republican will admit that there is any possibility of Roosevelt's losing any of these states, but they do admit there is danger of losing some congressional districts on the tariff and reciprocity issues. Wisconsin Republicans of both factions are free to say that they expect to see a Democratic state administration, no matter what the outcome may be in the courts.

Should it be declared that the La Follette ticket is "regular," the stalwarts will not support him, but will turn in and vote for the Democratic candidate. The feeling is so bitter between the two factions that each would prefer to see a Democratic state administration rather than see its Republican rival triumph.

The strife will have its effect on the congressional campaign, and this is where the Republican leaders desire to call a halt, and warn the standpatters.

Without doubt the Democratic national convention at St. Louis will make tariff revision a paramount issue, especially if there is an out-and-out standpat plank in the Chicago platform. Hence the conservative element of the Republicans are at work for a modification of the tariff plank as agreed on, and they hope to succeed, although the prospects are not bright.

It is understood that the president favors a declaration in the resolutions in favor of revision of the tariff. He does not want a meaningless platitude, either, but some special pledge or promise that will commit the party to its performance. Senators Aldrich, Foraker, Platt, of Connecticut, Spooner, and Representatives Payne, Dalzell and Grosvenor have been communicated with regarding the latest phases of the situation.

BURIED IN ATLANTIC.

New York, June 14.—The steamer Rotterdam arrived here today from Rotterdam and Boulogne. Mrs. Thomas Jones, of Pittsburg, who, with her husband, was returning from a European visit, died suddenly, June 8, and her body was buried at sea.

BURRIED UNDER THE SNOW.

Eccentric Montana Prospector Perishes In An Avalanche.

Butte, Mont., June 14.—Word from Hecla, Mont., says information has reached there of the death of Mike O'Flaherty, an eccentric prospector who is supposed to lie buried beneath an immense snowslide which swept over his lonely cabin in the Wise river country. The snow is from twelve to twenty feet deep in the Beaverhead mountains, and a search for the remains of O'Flaherty is impracticable until midsummer.

O'Flaherty was noted for his quaint characteristics and odd ways, being a firm believer in fairies, and his tales of phantom creatures are known throughout the Hecla region. He was once superintendent of the Hecla Mining company, one of the largest concerns of its kind at that time in Montana. He was 70.

SCARED HIS BURGLAR.

Taveling Man Empties Revolvers at Night Maurader.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 14.—"Don't shoot, don't shoot!" (Bang.) "Oh, my God. Don't shoot me." (Bang). "I'll get out and never come back. (Bang again). I'm killed. I'm killed. I know. (Bang.) I'm dead already."

Thus the burglar, who, crawling into a second story window, was discovered by Carter Harrison, a traveling man and distant cousin of the mayor of Chicago. Mr. Harrison bombarded him until all the contents of two revolvers were exhausted. If the burglar was hit he didn't show signs of it, scrambling down the porch and running like a Russian cavalry-man on retreat.

COWARD PROVES COURAGE.

Afraid of Dogs, But Gives Police a Battle.

Chicago, June 13.—Only last week Joseph Clinton was publicly branded as a coward and discharged from his position as city dog catcher by the civil service board, after his brother canine chasers had testified that his courage oozed away at the slight of even a rat terrier.

In a cell at the De Plaines street station Joseph Clinton is a prisoner, charged with highway robbery and attempting to throw a policeman from a river bridge after one of the most desperate recent battles between hold-up men and the police.

Joe Clinton, the cowardly dog catcher, and Joe Clinton, the alleged robber and fighter, are one and the same man.

Alienists will study with great interest the psychology of a man who flees before the tiniest dog, but voluntarily seeks the dangerous role of highwayman, battling with men and guns.

SUED BY HIS DOCTOR.

"A doctor here has sued me for $12.50, which I claimed was excessive for a case of cholera morbus," says R. White, of Coachella, Cal. "At the trial he praised his medical skill and medicine. I asked him if it was not Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy he used as I had good reason to believe it was, and he would not say under oath that it was not." No doctor could use a better remedy than this in a case of cholera morbus, it never fails. Sold by all druggists.

THE EVENING STORY.

THE DERELICTION OF CAPT. PARKS

By J. C. Plummer.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

I've a charge to ke-e-p,
A God to glorify-y."

So sang Capt. Jared Parks, as he peacefully sat on the cabin house of the pungy Betsy Fuller, lying at anchor in the inlet awaiting a favorable wind for Baltimore.

Capt. Parks had recently experienced a change of heart during a revival service, hence his song of praise, hence his peacefulness during a provoking calm. It was provoking because the Betsy Fuller was loaded with watermelons, the first shipment from the western shore, and naturally her skipper wished to be among the first to land his luscious cargo in the city. Along the deck, with a narrow passage way in the middle, were piled hundreds of melons. Symetrical, pear-shaped and some round as a cannon ball, but all bearing beneath their green rinds a message of the best of cheer to hungry mortals. Capt. Parks was proud of his cargo, and so was Ned, the deck hand. That sable seaman, who had already devoured two "passably-sized melons," passed his hand longingly over a huge specimen and murmured:

"De Lord's own eatin' is matermilyun!"

A boat put out from the pungy Dart, similarly laden and also at anchor in the inlet, and Capt. Ezra Wheelock climbed on board the Betsy Fuller.

"Kind o' a dead calm," said he. "I looked for a breeze this evening."

"Like to breeze up at sunset," replied Capt. Parks, cheerfully.

"Ef it does," said Wheelock, expectorating with vigor, "I'll beat you to Baltimore, Parks."

"The Betsy Fuller might run aground," said Capt. Parks, sattricaly; "then you'd have a chance, Ezry."

"A ten-dollar note says I'm first at the wharf," said Wheelock, producing a note that had done loyal service as a circulating medium.

This was touching Capt. Parks in a tender spot. Among the many crosses which he had taken up as a converted man was the giving up of betting. Capt. Parks loved to bet, and in the days of cakes and ale he would bet on most anything offered.

He shook his head.

"It's a ten-dollar note that's talkin'. I think it's sayin' you're 'fraid to make the bet," persisted Wheelock.

Capt. Parks mentally commanded Satan to get behind him, but that fiend is obstinate at times and did not budge.

"I'm a church member," began Parks.

"It's ten dollars I'm at the wharf fust," said Wheelock.

"Done," thundered Parks. "We settle on Long dock."

Wheelock went back to the Dart, and Capt. Parks gave himself up to remorse.

But at sunset conscience was dulled by the instincts of a sailor, for with a rattle of thunder and a sweep of rain a squall came up out of the southwest which carried both pungies out into the bay. In two hours the storm had ceased, and with it the wind; the sky, however, remained overcast and the night fell intensely dark. The Betsy Fuller lay on the water like a log, the sails not even giving that occasional spasmodic flap that so frequently torments the sailor with futile hopes.

Spurred on by an ambition to beat the Dart and by a sinful longing at the bottom of his heart to win the ten-dollar wager, inactivity became insupportable to Capt. Parks. There were no signs of the Dart, but in that darkness she would have been invisible an oar's length away.

"Ned," said he at last, after walking nervously up and down the passageway between the melons, "you and I'll get in the boat and pull. Pete can take the tiller. We may make a mile or two that way and be that far ahead."

Accordingly, the skipper and Ned bent their backs to the oars. It was very tiresome and discouraging work, but it was better than doing nothing. Then a noise came out of the darkness. The regular thumping of a propellor.

"A tug," said Ned.

"Much good that'll do us," grumbled the skipper.

The cost of a tow was prohibitive, besides it would have vitiated the wager.

The tug passed close to them, then turned to starboard with such suddenness that something towing behind was jerked out of the water and over the rail of the little boat, striking Capt. Parks on the knee. Involuntarily he grasped the object; it was a hawser. Evidently when the tug had cast off her tow the sleepy crew had neglected to pull in the hawser, and left it towing behind.

Quick as a flash Capt. Parks saw his opportunity. He grabbed the hawser fiercely.

"Ned," he gasped, "lay hold and hold on for grim death."

And the tow boat, her crew serenely unconscious of the assistance they were lending, towed the Betsy Fuller into the harbor of Baltimore.

"My dear," said Capt. Parks to his wife that same morning, "I beat the melon fleet into Baltimore, and I felt so good that I bought you a ten-dollar organdie dress."

"You're a duck, darling," chirruped Mrs. Parks. "But, Jared, ought we to have spent such a sum?"

"Oh," said Parks, thoughtlessly, "I bet Wheelock $10 I'd beat him to Baltimore, and I won it."

"Oh, Jared, Jared," moaned his wife; "betting, and you a lamb of the church. I'll not touch the dress."

"You are right," groaned her husband, with contrition. "I'm a backslider. I was tempted and fell. I'll tell you what I'll do. Wheelock won't take back the money. It would insult him. I'll give the dress to his wife."

"You say, Jared," said his wife eyeing the dress, "that you brought the first cargo of melons to the city."

"I did."

"I suppose they brought more than the next cargo will?"

"Dollar a hundred more."

"I was thinking, Jared, that it was your bounden duty to do your best for your employers. Now, maybe if it wasn't for that bet you wouldn't have tried so hard to be first."

"Indeed I wouldn't," said Parks, thinking of the stolen tow.

"Maybe it's for the best, as the bet urged you to do your duty, and, besides, Mrs. Wheelock is such a worldly woman, a dress like this would only attach her more to earthly matters. I'll keep the dress, but don't bet any more, dear."

NEGOTIATIONS DRAG.

Perdicaris May Not Be Released This Week.

Tangier, June 14.—A courier from Raisuli, the bandit chief who kidnaped Messrs. Perdicaris and Varley, arrived here during the night. United States Consul General Gummere and the British minister subsequently visited Mohammed El Torres, the representative of the sultan of Morocco to discuss the contents of Raisuli's message. The distance of Raisuli's headquarters, makes the negotiations drag. It is now thought possible that the captives will not be released this week.

HAVE RIGHT TO REMARRY.

Chicago Pastor Discusses the Question of Divorce.

Chicago, June 14.—In a sermon on divorce Rev. Pearse Pinch declared in Forestville Congregational church that the attempts on the part of the stronger ecclesiastical bodies to whip preachers into line will only result in fresh disaster to the home. "Instead of settling the divorce question," said the minister, "Jesus left the whole subject open. Ministers are not compelled to say that all persons divorced for anything but the 'one cause' shall not marry again. They are free to teach what obvious justice and humanity require, and not a harsh law that Jesus never gave. If for example a woman refuses to live with a man who makes himself a drunken brute, and gets a divorce from him, and later marries a decent man, no preacher is bound to denounce such marriage.

"Divorce is too light a punishment for offenders against the marriage tie. The most serious offenses ought to meet imprisonment for life. It is not laxity for which I plead, but the right to teach not some outrageous rule that Jesus never gave, but that which the situation justifies."

DEARTH IN DISGUST

Quits as Supporter of Gubernatorial Candidacy of Dunn.

Move By Republicans to Change Supreme Court's Personnel.

St. Paul, June 14.—The Dispatch today says: State Insurance Commissioner Elmer H. Dearth is no longer an active supporter of the gubernatorial candidacy of Former State Auditor Dunn.

Mr. Dearth informed the Dispatch today that Mr. Dunn had disgusted him by his antagonistic and uncalled for attitude toward Governor Van Sant and that he would not any longer be counted among his supporters.

"I was a Dunn man; I still have a kindly feeling towards him," Mr. Dearth said to the Dispatch today, "but he has made mistakes and one of them is his antagonistic attitude toward Governor Van Sant. I owe my position to Governor aVn Sant. He appointed me and I would be an ingrate did I not resent uncalled for attacks on my superior. Mr. Dunn's attacks on Governor Van Sant have been persistent and unwarranted."

Referring to a published interview of some months previous, wherein he expressed himself as a warm advocate of the candidacy of the man from Princeton, Mr. Dearth said that it had been actuated by his admiration for Mr. Dunn.

"I told Mr. Dunn then," said Mr. Dearth, "that I thought a whole lot of him and that he could count on me as a friend. I did not think then that he would make as a part of his campaign unwarranted attacks on Governor Van Sant, the man who appointed me. I have worked for Mr. Dunn; I have spoken a good word for him whenever I could, but I will not now longer actively support him."

Mr. Dearth, would not say, however, that in renouncing allegiance to Mr. Dunn, he would support Judge Collins. He insisted that he would be neutral.

THE SUPREME COURT.

Movement to Elect Democrat to the Bench.

Minneapolis, June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—The quartet of Republican justices of the supreme court, who are said to have formed an offensive and defensive alliance, will not have clear sailing at the state convention, which will be held on the last day of the month.

There is strong opposition to the re-election of at least three of them and some Republican attorneys of Hennepin county are not backward in saying that all should be retired and new men elected to succeed them.

The terms of Justices Lovely, Brown and Lewis expire, and Judge Douglas, who was appointed to succeed Judge Collins, when the latter finaly entered the field as a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, will have to seek re-election, for his term will expire as soon as his successor is elected.

Saturday there will be an important meeting of attorneys in one of the Twin Cities. This will have to do with the supreme court ticket, and the sentiment of the men who have been at work to bring about the conference, which is expected to be participated in by attorneys from all parts of the state, is that the bench should be nonpartisan and there should be at least one Democratic judge in the quartet that will be nominated by the Republican state convention.

Of Democrat these men have centered upon is Judge Brooks. Four years ago he was the Democratic candidate for chief justice against Chief Justice Start, at the time Justice Collins was re-elected to the bench. The Democrats took down their judicial ticket and Judges Start and Collins had a clear field.

Now the Republican friends of Judge Brooks and others who believe the bench should be composed of representatives of both parties are determined there shall be a change in the order of things, and the result of Saturday's conference will be of great import to some of the men who are candidates for the high court.

The men who are behind this movement are Republicans and they are determined to change the personnel of the supreme court of Minnesota.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

The State Bank at Trent Robbed of About $400.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Egan—Robbers entered the State bank at Trent by prying open a rear window. A hole was drilled through the side of the vault large enough for a man to crawl through. Some $300 or $400 were secured by the robbers, and they made their escape without leaving any trace or clew. That the job was done by experienced men there is no doubt. An oversight on the part of the robbers was the leaving of three or four sacks of silver, which became covered with the debris from the wall as it crumbled on the inside. Luckily the bank had paid out heavily the day previous for hogs and cattle which were marketed, or the loss would have been much greater.

Madison—Anton Zwack, of Dubuque, has been awarded the contract for building the new Catholic St. Thomas church here at a price approaching $25,000. The church is to be 55 by 114 feet in size, with a steeple 114 feet high, and is to be completed some time next November.

A mass meeting of Madison citizens is called for the purpose of listening to the report of the committee of business men recently sent to Sioux Falls to induce the management of the new Dakota Central railway to extend its line to Madison. There is a general feeling that it would be a great mistake to lose this extension, and there is no doubt that Madison will deal generously with the new road to get it here.

Deadwood—In the circuit court Fred Dore was sentenced to one year in the state penitentiary. He was found guilty of stealing machinery from a mining company. He is well known and has been in good standing heretofore.

Miss Freda Hartzell, of this city, who has a wonderful record as a crack rifle shot, has left for St. Louis to give exhibitions.

Sioux Falls—Marshal Kennedy and Deputies Carleton and Collins, left with Edward Morris, a negro, who will be transferred to the national hospital for the insane at Washington for treatment. Morris was a soldier at Fort Robinson, Neb., where he shot and killed a sergeant.

Miller.—The head of a buffalo, near which was the evidence of a grave, probably that of an Indian, was discovered by City Marshal Dunn while overseeing the excavation of the cellar of the new $20,000 Masonic Temple.

The head of a buffalo is a curiosity here now, although about twenty years ago the prairies were covered with them. The early settler would have on hand barrels of them, and his spare moments were occupied in polishing them off for the adornment of the parlor of some Eastern friend. It was only about twenty years ago that two or three wild buffalo were killed not far from here—last ones killed in the state east of the Missouri river.

Lead.—The president of the Venture corporation of London, Frederick W. Baker, is expected in the hills this week. A deal for $40,000 is pending on the large tract of ground in the Yellow Creek district, and it is stated he is coming for the purpose of making final examination of the property.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Mayville.—John Broadway, a laboring man, was arrested by Sheriff Olson for a murder alleged to have been committed some seven years ago in North Carolina. The arrest caused a sensation, for the man had been employed on farms near here and by business men for about six years and had borne a good reputation. Nothing could be learned as to the nature of the crime of the person murdered. Broadway would not say anything, but did not seem to be much disturbed.

Sheriff Olson acted at the instance of Sheriff Julian, of Rowan county, North Carolina. The prisoner was taken to Hillsboro to await the coming of Julian.

There is a good deal of sympathy for Broadway, as he has been a quiet, industrious fellow. He is without means and is unable to read or write.

Starkweather.—The Scandia Lutheran society will build a parsonage to cost $3000.

Jamestown.—The Democratic county convention met to elect delegates to attend the convention at Fargo on June 21, the state convention at Grand Forks and the judicial convention, the time and place for which has not as yet been determined upon.

Theer were two candidates in the field for delegate to the national convention at St. Louis, P. Blewitt and J. B. Field. The latter was chosen and the convention granted him the privilege of naming the delegation to Fargo.

Committees of five were named by the chair to name the delegations at Grand Forks and to the judicial convention.

Resolutions were introduced by Former State Senator Williams instructing the delegates to the judicial convention to use their influence in securing the nomination of Judge S. L. Glaspell as the Democratic candidate for the judgeship in the Fifth district. The resolutions caused much discussion and were finally tabled.

MURPHY AND HILL AGREE

And Former Will Support Parker, It Is Now Claimed.

Washington, June 14.—The New York Tribune prints a story, which, if true, will have an important bearing on Judge Parker's candidacy for president. It says in part:

"It was announced last night that an understanding had been reached between ex-Senator David B. Hill, leader of the Parker forces in this state, and Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, whereby Murphy will abandon his fight against the candidacy of Judge Parker. In return it was said Hill would withdraw all support from Senator P. H. McCarren, who is fighting to retain the leadership in Kings county and would take steps to minimize the importance of August Belmont in the campaign. This report could not be substantiated from any authoritative source, but it was generally believed.

"According to statements made last night negotiations looking to harmony between the state rganiaztion and Tammany Hall have been under way for a week. The Tribune last Monday morning announced that the fight between Murphy and Hill was more a financial than a political fight. It is said to be a war of rival traction interests. August Belmont, one of the strongest Parker leaders, is president of the interborough company, which owns subway and elevated roads. In his traction plans, he has clashed with Thomas A. Ryan, who is the controlling power in the Metropolitan. Ryan is a close friend and adviser of Charles F. Murphy.

"The traction feuds, according to general belief, have been carried into the field of politics. As announced in the Tribune last week, Murphy offered to abandon his war on Parker if Hill would agree to drop McCarren and Belmont. At that time the offer was refused. According to reports last night Hill had reconsidered his attitude, and McCarren is to be left to shift for himself. Belmont is to be sidetracked, and Murpy and Hill will hook up together to promote Parker's fortunes."

FAMOUS BANK FORGER

Has Now Become Petty Thief In Chicago.

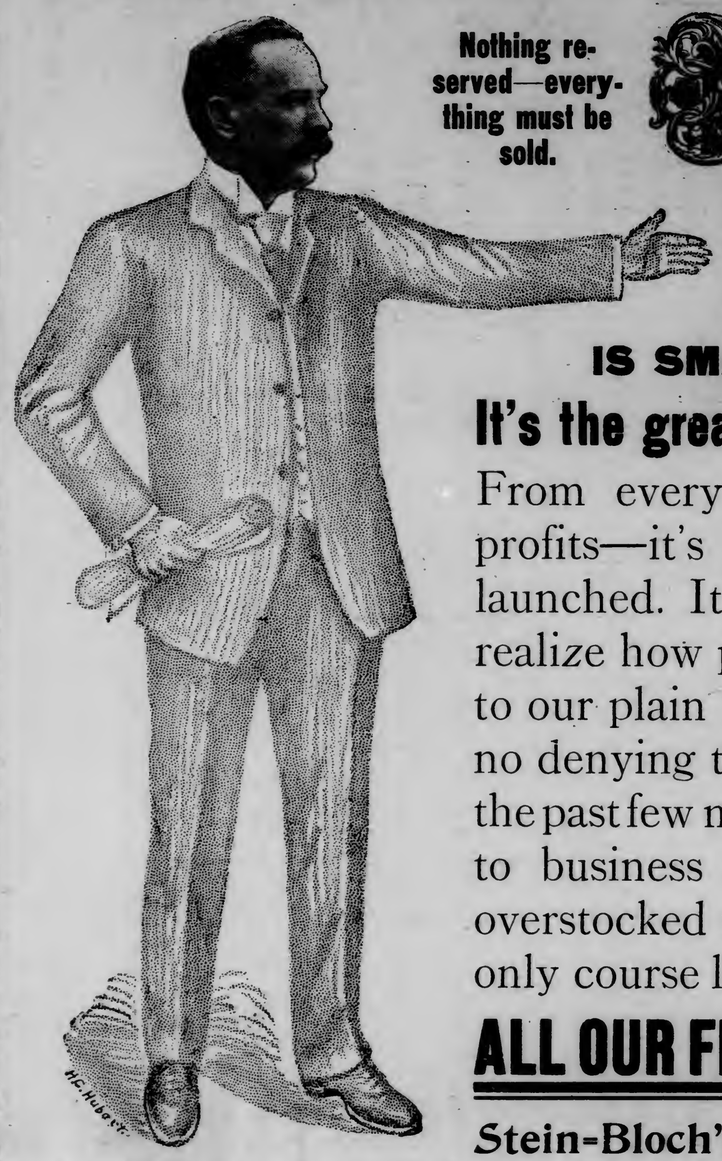

Chicago, June 14.—From the ranks of the most expert bank thieves who could float $100,000 worth of forged paper to a sneak thief who will rob the till of a saloon for $10.

This is the fall of "Father Ed" Rice, who is locked up at the detective headquarters. Rice was last night positively identified by Mrs. William Nau as one of the boldest and most successful bank sneak thieves in the history of the country. With the aid of a partner he robbed a Brooklyn bank of $100,000. In addition to this robbery he is said to have at the same time secured $35,000 by means of a clever sneak.

But a year before he was caught in New oYrk he was released from a Canadian prison. He robbed a bank in Kingston of many thousand dollars. For this robbery he served eleven years in Canada.

NEW SELLWOOD VAULT

Finest in the State of Minnesota.

The new vault just eerected by Joseph Sellwood, in Forest Hill cemetery, in this city, is regarded by many as the finest in the state. It occupies a prominent position on the brow of the hill, close to the main roadway, and is attracting considerable attention at present amongst visitors to the cemetery. The outside is constructed of the famous Barre (Vermont) granite. The sides show the granite in the natural, unfinished state, while the roof and upper part exhibit a splendid 12-cut workmanship. A highly polished bronze gate and very heavy marble folding doors guard the entrance to the vault, and inside this is the vestibule, finished in beautiful white marble, with a tiled floor. All the compartments are fitted with heavy marble doors. The vault contains twelve catacombs, each of which can be sealed air-tight after a body is placed within. This magnificent work was put up by the well known monumental firm of Sheldon Bros., Port Huron, Mich., and speaks well for the high quality of their goods and workmanship. This firm has a high reputation throughout the East, and have recently opened a shop in this city at No. 25 Fifth avenue west. They will no doubt meet with the same unbounded success here as in their home state.

New House Cleaner.

The Interstate Rug company has just introduced an innovation in the way of a compressed air cleaning plant for carpets, rugs, drapery, etc. The machine cost about $3,000 and the motive power for the compressed air is a gasoline engine.

The compressed air cleaner is a portable machine and is taken about the city to the homes where it is desired to do the cleaning. The rugs and carpets may be taken out of doors for the cleaning, but the usual rule is to use the compressed air directly in the houses by means of hose. The dust and dirt is collected in a special receptacle.

The advantages claimed for the machine lie in the fact that the compressed air while cleaning the material thoroughly does not have any deleterious effects on the fabrics.

Alleges Preferment.

Charles A. Parker, as trustee of Gust Sundeen, a bankrupt Akeley merchant, has started suit in federal court against the Gowan-Peyton-Twohy Wholesale Grocery company. Judgment is asked in the sum of $728.96, with costs and disbursements. It is alleged that the grocery firm received the money in preference over other creditors of the same class while Sundeen was insolvent, and that the money was paid with intent to delay and defraud the other creditors.

Sundeen filed his petition in voluntary bankruptcy April 2, 1904. On February 17, he was indebted to the mercantile company $778.96, according to the complaint.

RATES FROM RANGES

One Fare For Democratic State Convention.

General Passenger Agent Hanson, of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern, has announced an open rate of one fare for the round trip from points on that road to Duluth during the Democratic state convention. The convention will be held June 22 and the rate will be applied to tickets sold on June 21 and 22. The round trip rates from certain of the points will be as follows: Alborn, $1.05; Keicey, $1.40; Iron Junction, $1.95; Mountain Iron, $2.20; Virginia, $2.20; Eveleth, $2.10; Sparta, $2.10; Biwabik, $2.10; Hibbing, $2.20.

Nothing has been heard officially from the Duluth & Iron Range road, where, it is said, the officials are in favor of giving one fare for the round trip to delegates only, rather than to make an open rate for the public. The matter is still under consideration by that road.

Shows Fine Increase.

As indicated by an item in The Herald yesterday, the removal of the city office of the Omaha to a point farther from the Union depot, is having the effect of increasing the receipts. General Agent George M. Smith this morning said that the recent weeks had shown an average incerase in ticket sales of 10 per cent compared with last year's income.

Passenger Agents.

Traveling passenger agents were here in considerable force today. Among them were the following, all from the Twin Cities: Albert W. Arnold, of the Pennsylvania lines; F. Haas, of the Baltimore & Ohio; David Brown, Jr., of the Grand Trunk, and C. W. Tyler, of the Pere Marquette.

COLORED EDITOR,

Publisher of Iroquois at St. Paul Visits Duluth.

Cornelius A. Hughes, of St. Paul, editor and publisher of the Iroquois, a weekly publication, and the only paper in the Northwest representing the Democratic colored people, is in Duluth for a few days in the interest of his publication.

Mr. Hughes was formerly in the internal revenue service in San Francisco, Cal., under the Grover Cleveland regime. He has also figured to some extent in political circles of the far Northwest, having stumped the state of Oregon for Governor Chamberlain, the Democratic executive.

Mr. Hughes says that the object of his publication is to teach the colored people whom he can reach to think for themselves. He aims to advance the colored citizens along the lines of political science, education and industry.

"There is no reason why the 10,000,000 colored people in this country should hold the same views on political and other questions, than for the white citizens to have the same views," said Mr. Hughes, this noon.

"The interests of the colored citizens of this country are as diversified as those of the white citizens and this will be more and more demonstrated when they learn to think for themselves.

"It has been said that it is the natural thing for the negro to be a Republican. I cannot see it that way. When you consider that the colored citizen is not a manufacturer, protected by a high protective tariff, when you consider that he is not an employe of those highly protected manufacturers, but that he is a consumer all the time, and not directly benefitted by the protective tariffs, you can easily see why he should not be a Republican.

"I became a Democrat through the knowledge that I gained of the results of the protective tariff while I was employed in the custom house service. I found that I was paying about 60 per cent more for the clothing and care of my family by reason of a protective tariff, than I would had there been

CRUSHER BOUGHT

City to Purchase Another to Aid In Street Improvement.

Ordinance Relating to Carrying Concealed Weapons Passed.

The council last evening:

Ordered purchase of portable rock crusher.

Received report of board of public works on property assessment for improvement of Garfield avenue.

Passed ordinance in regard to carrying concealed weapons.

Received notice of reduction of hydrant rentals from $60 to $40.

In spite of vigorous protests on the part of the West Duluth aldermen, the purchase of a new portable rock crusher was authorized by the city council last evening.

The cost of the new crusher will be about $1500 and Alderman Wilson showed where over $750 could be saved on the improvement of London road alone, if the crusher were purchased. The price of crushed rock on cars at the West Duluth crusher is $1.20 per cubic yard, and the freight to Lakeside 50 cents, making a total of $1.70 The rock can be crushed at Lakeside at a cost of $1.20 and the haul from the crusher to London road is about the same as the haul from the cars to London road. The saving will therefore be 50 cents per cubic yard, or just the cost of the freight from West Duluth to Lakeside.

Aldermen Barnes, Chesney, Sang and Olson opposed the purchase, saying that the city's funds were not in a condition to stand the expenditure at the present time, and that Lakeside would be the only part of the city which the new crusher would benefit, as the central part of the city already had a crusher, and West Duluth could get rock cheaply from the crusher on the hill-side.

"If conditions were reversed and that West Duluth crusher were situated at Lakeside," said Alderman Wilson, "you would see how long it would take for the West Duluth aldermen to bring in a motion to purchase a portable rock crusher."

The motion finally carried, Aldermen Barnes, Sang, Olson and Chesney voting no.

* * *

In accordance with the request of the council, the board of public works reported on the condition of the property adjoining Garfield avenue in regard to the possibility of assessing it for the improvement of that avenue.

The report stated that the lots differ in size in the different divisions. The lots in Rice's Point division are 25 by 120 feet, and for the sake of convenience the board reduced all lots to this size. Figuring on this basis there are 1156 lots abutting on the street and owned by private individuals. All of the lots on the west side, with the exception of ninety-three, are owned by the Northern Pacific railroad, but on the east side there are 1103 lots owned by private individuals.

There are also 1396 lots on the east side partially or wholly under water and a considerable amount of unplatted property owned by the Consolidated Elevator company and the Ohio Coal company. The board reported that any pavement laid at the present time would probably be worn out before the property now under water would be improved and in a position to benefit from the paving of the avenue.

* * *

Manager Case, of the water and light department, reported that the water and light commissioners, and the council committee on light and water in joint conference, had decided to make the price of fire hydrants installed since May 1, $40, in place of $60. The members of the council have been anxious to have the price of fire hydrants reduced for some time past, and the cut in price means that just 50 per cent more hydrants can be installed without any added expenditure.

* * *

Manager Case also recommended, on behalf of the water board, the condemnation of the two blocks in West Duluth which are desired for a supplementary reservoir. He stated that a fair price for the blocks would be $480, but that the man in whose name the title was vested had died recently, and that one of his executors was not in a fit mental condition to transact business. It would, therefore, require some time to secure a title, and Mr. Case recommended condemnation proceedings as the most expeditious method of securing the land.

* * *

President Haven's ordinance in regard to the carrying of concealed weapons passed its second reading, was placed upon its final passage and carried without a dissenting vote. The ordinance is now in effect.

* * *

Authority was granted the board of public works to circulate a petition for paving Fifth avenue west, from Superior street to First street. The paving from Railroad street to Superior street, has already been ordered.

At the Lyceum last evening it was announced that Elliot & Courenay's Stock company will open a summer engagement at the theater, beginning Thursday evening in "Pink Dominoes." Miss Eulalia Bennet will be the leading woman.

The production of "Shamus O'Brien" gave very good satisfaction. The play is one dear to the Irish heart and interesting to every lover of the drama. It was well cast. Richardson Cotton made a good Shamus O'Brien, and received much applause. Lelia Shaw as Kitty O'Reilly and Kate Tancray as Mary Donoughsmore were very pleasing. John Milton had a satisfactory part, and the others in the cast were capable.

The play will be repeated this evening.

PRESIDENT SCORED

General Tyner Says Executive Did Him Great Wrong.

Blasted His Good Name on Mere Say So of Bristow.

Washington, June 14.—James M. Tyner, who was removed as assitsant attorney general for the postoffice department, during the investigation of the department, and who was recently tried and acquitted by a jury, has addressed the following letter to President Roosevelt:

"Washington, June 11, 1904.

"To the President:

"Sir—On November, 1903, on the strength of certain charges contained in a report by Mr. Bristow, the fourth assistant postmaster general, you gave to the press of the country a statement to the effect that gross corruption in the case of Assistant Attorney General Tyner has gone on for a number of years.'

"After referring to me, as 'the chief offender,' you say that in my case, 'the corruption took the form of favoring get-rich-quick concerns and similar schemes; in other words, the criminals whom it was his (my) sworn duty to prosecute, paid him (me) for permission to fleece the public unmolested.' After thus giving your official opinion as chief magistrate of the nation as to my guilt, you referred to the fact that there were three indictments pending against me and you called upon a jury to do its duty.

"No verdict of jury nor sentence of judge could have had such far-reaching or irremediable consequences for me as this extraordinary official proclamation of guilt by you, and the ordinary machinery of justice is probably powerless fully to rectify the injustice done. Immediately upon seeing your charges in the press, I addressed a letter protesting that on the mere says-o of Mr. Bristow, you had no right, without at least first giving me a chance to be heard in my defense, or without confronting me with the charges or the evidence, thus prematurely and rashly to prejudge and perhaps forever blast the good name and character which for nearly eighty years I had endeavored to establish.

"When I wrote this letter I had little hope that a merciful and just God would spare my life long enough to enable me to face a jury of my peers, and I wished merely to record what I believed to be a death-bed protest against your unusual, unjust and arbitrary action. Fortunately I have now had my day in court and, according to the law of the land, I have established my innocence of any crime, or of any misconduct in office. I instructed Messrs. Worthington and Hearsy to lay fully before the court and jury every act of my official and private career, and to take advantage of no legal technicality.

The jury were asked by me and by my counsel and by the court to ignore my age and physical condition. I asked not for an acquittal, but for a vindication; and, so far as possible, every act of mine referred to in Mr. Bristow's report, was placed before the jury fully and exhaustively. The jury without a moment's hesitation, pronounced me 'not guilty,' on all the indictments. Their verdict, I am advised and believe, expresses the unanimous sentiment of every member of the bar and the community who followed the case. And I may add that I was not content to rest my vindication on the government's failure to prove a crime, but I insisted on proving my innocence of any wrongdoing.

"Such a verdict in a trial brought in good faith would ordinarily be a sufficient vindication of an accused party, but unfortunately in this case your official proclamation of my assumed guilt has had such weight, that to many it practically overrides the verdict of the jury. I notice that many of your friends do not hesitate to say that your verdict, given before the trial, is to be more relied upon than the verdict of court and jury given after trial. Against such injustice I have no recourse, except by appealing to your sense of right and fair dealing.

"In my letter to you of Dec. 2, 1903, I intimated briefly that your action was unjust and wrong, and that you would not have taken the course you did if you had not been misled and deceived by Mr. Bristow. I charged that his report suppressed the facts, garbled the evidence, misquoted the records, made untrue statements, and was in every way calculated to mislead and deceive you as well as the public. I now reaffirm these charges and I call your attention to the fact that. It is no longer merely my statement against Mr. Bristow, but that witness after witness on the stand for the government in my trial, denied the accusation in his report, and document after document from the government files disproved his charges.

"I do not mean for a moment to question the good faith and entire sincerity of your proclamation; I wish merely to emphasize the fact that you have been deceived and that your laudable zeal for public and official decency has been imposed upon. You accuse me of 'gross corruption;' the attorneys for the government constantly disclaimed any such charge before the jury. You charge that 'I was paid by criminals not to prosecute them;' not a scintilla of evidence was offered to sustain such a charge, nor was a single witness nor a single document produced to show special favors to 'swindling schemes' or a single violation of duty. Every charge in the Bristow report in anywise reflecting on me has been diproved by the recent trial—disproved not by virtue of the verdict, but sworn evidence of the government's own witnesses.

"In my letter to you, I prayed that my life and mental powers might be spared until I had convinced the American public and you as chief magistrate that all my acts have been honest honorable and straightforward, in the sight of God and man. My remaining hours are few, and though my house is in order and with clear conscience, I await from day to day the irrevocable summons, nevertheless. I cannot close my eyes without first appealing to you, Mr. President, as my chief accuser, to endeavor insofar as you can, to right the great wrong which you have unwittingly done me.

"I am sir, very respectfully,

"JAMES N. TYNER."

ROSING IS AT THE HEAD

Of Goodhue County Delegation—Strong Resolutions Adopted.

Red Wing, Minn., June 14.—At the Democratic county convention, held here yesterday, an uninstructed delegation of eleven stalwart Democrats, headed by L. A. Rosing, was selected to represent the county at the Duluth convention.

The convention adopted resolutions presented by a committee of which Mr. Rosing was chairman, as follows:

We hold these truths to be self evident; That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these rights are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

That governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

The United States is not to hold dependent colonies. Territories in possession of the American people must either be on their fair way to statehood or we must at the earliest possible moment bid them go in peace.

Trusts have power to oppress chiefly from tariff privilege and railroad favor. Cut off those privileges. And give the proper tribunals power to establish just rates and prevent and punish railroad discriminations.

Grafting must stop. The protective tariff is a gigantic graft that stinks for correction. Where it gives shelter to monopoly it should be revised with an ax.

Reciprocal treaties, particularly with Canada and Mexico, offer a quick way of relief from its silliest strictures, until American free trade, as Jefferson foretold, expands in commercial union over the Western world.

Extravagance must be checked. Revenues raised by taxation should be limited to the needs of the government economically administered.

The nation should mind its own business. There should be a navy ample for defense. And not another ounce.

Laws of legal tender should be confined to gold and silver. The government should not extend the sanction of its credit to any currency based on hot air, fresh water or flimflam.

Constitutional amendments should be submitted for direct election of United States senators and for an income tax.

The nation is going right ahead with the Panama canal, only sorry that the way it was got mars a good stroke.

President, courts and people are under the law and only in fear of the law is the republic safe.

The executive has to enforce the law, not to manipulate it.

Courts are to determine the law, not to decree it. Process by injunction must not be allowed to supersede the law.

And let all the people look to it that they heed the law.

UNINSTRUCTED

Are the Democratic Delegates From Itasca County.

Grand Rapids, Minn., June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Itasca county Democrats have elected an uninstructed delegation to the state convention at Duluth, and the delegation will be in line with those who favor sending an uninstructed delegation to the St. Louis convention.

BRYAN AGAINST GRAY

Or Any One Else Who Opposed 1896 Ticket.

Wilmington, Del., June 14—The Jeffersonian, a Democratic paper of this city, prints the following telegram from W. J. Bryan, dated last Monday, in response to a question. He was asked whether it was true that he had agreed to support Judge Gray should the latter be nominated for the presidency.

"No. I do not favor the nomination of Gray or anyone else who opposed the ticket of 1896."

It is believed the Democratic convention last Tuesday was persuaded to instruct for Gray on the strength of a report that he would have Bryan's support.

The telegram, however, was not produced in the convention.

A WEEK OF CONVENTIONS.

Duluth is just now in the midst of the convention season. The State Sunday School convention begins its labors this evening and will continue in session until Friday evening. The Episcopal convocation will begin its sessions tomorrow and these will continue through Thursday and Friday. The State Music Teachers will hold their meetings on the last three days of the week. Next week on Wednesday the city will entertain the Democratic state convention.

This insures a rather busy season for hotels and restaurants, but there is no danger of overcrowding, and all will be nicely taken care of. If the present delightful weather conditions prevail throughout the week, the delegates to these different meetings can hardly fail to receive a pleasant impression of Duluth's climate, for it is little short of the ideal.

In like manner these visitors should be favorably impressed with the social spirit of Duluth's people, and The Herald again calls upon all loyal citizens to do everything in their power to give these strangers a cordial welcome and a gracious reception.

WHY UNCLE JOE FORGETS.

Uncle Joe Cannon has been sucking at the public teat a great many years and as a result is not affected by untoward conditions as he was during the "good old Democratic times" of his boyhood, when he was compelled to subsist on "hog and hominy, corn bread and New Orleans molasses." If he had been a boy residing on a new farm during the years from 1873 to 1876, when the Grand Old Republican party was directing affairs in this country, he certainly would have seen worse conditions confronting millions of American people than they ever experienced since, certainly much worse than the people of this neighborhood witnesed during the last Cleveland administration, when a howl was raised by the plutocrats and their assinine allies in an effort to blame the Democratic party for a period of depression brought about by Republican policies; in an effort to still further increase the poverty and destitution of American workingmen that they might be punished for taking the government out of the hands of Mr. Cannon's party associates and fellow pap-suckers.

The speaker of the house of congress would not be compelled to go very far today to find millions of his fellow citizens living without carpets and furniture and other material comforts, while their children are compelled to go without education and without proper food and clothing. He would find conditions no better than those of "good old Democratic times" if he would go into the mining regions of Pennsylvania, Virginia, Indiana, Illinois or Minnesota, or into some of the backwoods agricultural districts of the South and Southwest.

People who have provided themselves against adversity by getting their hands deep in the public purse or by taking to their own use a large portion of other people's heritage, find it easy to talk about present-day prosperity as compared to the conditions of "good old Democratic times," but the man who lives by the sweat of his brow and is constantly robbed of the fruits of his labor through the connivance of the Republican party knows that it is not a sign of general prosperity because the wealth of the country has more than doubled in half a century. He knows that this great increase in the country's wealth has gone to the few in whose interest the government is manipulated by the Cannons and the other pap-sucking assistants of predatory hoggishness.

THE TEACHER'S PAY.

The position of The Herald in regard to salaries paid to public school teachers ought to be well understood. It believes that sufficient wages should be paid to attract the highest order of talent. That the average wages paid to public school teachers in this country are woefully inadequate to effect that purpose is a patent fact.

Recently George F. James, dean of the department of pedagogy of the state university, added some testimony on that score, when he delivered a lecture before the St. Paul Federation of Teachers. "More than 100,000 school teachers will this year quite an occupation which does not yield them a living wage," he stated.

"Scores and hundreds of schools are this day closed in the most prosperous sections of this country because the bare pittance offered will not attract teachers of any kind. Why, over at the university we often get applications for a high school teacher. He must teach several sciences, we are informed, and Greek or Latin; he ought to have a good voice and help in musical circles; and he certainly should be able to take charge of the boys' athletics. His salary? Well, they'll seldom offer more than $50 a month for ten months in the year. Yet the rawest laborer, with no head and only two hands, is assured daily by Minneapolis employment agencies $52 a month for every month in the year.

"In a prosperous town in Massachusetts dressmakers are quoted at $3 a day and meals, but the best grade teachers in that town get less than $2 a day. In Ohio 24,000 school teachers are paid at the rate of 81 cents a day.

"Conditions are but little better in the West, and they are not improving. In the wealthy state of Wisconsin, country teachers receive 16 per cent more pay than they received eight years ago, while the cost of living has risen 26 per cent; in Wisconsin cities the teachers' salary is 9 per cent less than it was eight years ago; that is, he is 35 per cent worse off.

"We are the worst-paid workers in the world."

This is a sorrry outlook and there is reason to believe that it is the result of competition of incompetent women, as well as the competition of some women who are competent to teach, but incompetent to measure the true value of their services and insist upon getting it.

The theory that teaching is a sort of sacred calling and that therefore the question of salary should not be taken into consideration is all bosh. The teacher, like every other worker, is worthy of his hire, and while teaching is a noble profession that should not be undertaken except by those especially qualified, the one who is so equipped should receive as good pay as that received by men in other callings requiring equal ability.

The trouble is that we have set our standard too low and that wages are fixed by figuring from the standpoint of incapable females rather than from the standpoint of competent males. Both schools and universities pay about half what a man of the same ability and equipment can earn at other professions. The consequence is that they are constantly losing the best talent.

Money paid to teachers who cannot get results is worse than wasted. It would be much better to have only half as many at double price. The public schools have been used as charitable institutions long enough. When 100,000 people quit the teaching profession in one year there is certainly something wrong.

LOOKING FOR EXCUSES.

The report that the Roosevelt administration is supposed to have turned to France for assistance in dealing with Morocco in the Perdicaris case, leads the New York Times to find some justification for the sentiments expressed by the president in his Cuban letter: It says:

"The recent utterance of the president, which has been so much criticised, was open to criticism, we admit, as to its form and tone. It was calculated to wound the susceptibilities of self-respecting nations which have not defaulted and are not likely to default in their international obligations. But what the president essentially meant was by no means objectionable. On the contrary, it was needful as a reminder of the obligations we assume in assuming what, for some purposes, may fairly be called a protectorate of the Western hemisphere."

The fact is that the Monroe doctrine was never promulgated with the idea of protecting any American nation from the just wrath of other countries when they failed to meet the obligations of international law. The sole objects was to prevent European governments from gobbling more American territory in any part of the hemisphere. The fact that the United States did not interfere with the recent bombardment of Venezuela, although it should have done so in the interests of humanity and ordinary decency, is sufficient evidence of the fact that the Monroe doctrine does not make this nation the defender of wrong-doing on the part of any other, nor yet general regulator of Western hemisphere morals.

The United States has no more right to call upon France to assist it in dealing with Morocco than it has to call on the man in the moon. Neither has it need to do so. But the probability is that the French government offered its mediation in the hope of settling the matter without violence and bloodshed, which was perfectly proper. It was also perfectly proper and legitimate for our government to accept the proffer in the same spirit. If the United States could do anything by arts of diplomacy and by peaceful methods to induce South American nations to meet all their international obligations it is certainly justified in doing, so, but when it comes to threatening them with a big stick if they do not pay their debts then it is time to call a halt. To put the Monroe doctrine to such base uses is profanity and idiocy.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

Now is the time for everybody to get a piece of Duluth real estate. It is bound to grow in value. Twenty years ago corners on Superior street sold for $1000 each. Today they bring over $1000 per front foot. Duluth has only started to grow and Superior street is not the only place in town.

The "right to work" is most strenuously contended for by the people who want the American laborer to toil for less than decent living wages, while a few aristocrats roll in countless wealth. The "right to work" ought to be accompanied by the right to live as human beings ought to live. Until that right is generally accorded it will be necessary for the scab and the strike-breaker to take a secondary place in the affections of the general run of American citizens.

The mine owners of Colorado, assisted by the Citizens' alliance, are enforcing a new set of laws of their own making by violating the laws made by the people's representatives.

As might have been expected from a man who would throttle the liberty of the press, Governor Pennypacker of Pennsylvania overrides the state constitution in appointing Attorney General Knox to the vacant senatorship.

* * *

The workingman or other citizen who is restive under injustice is always advised to obey the law and redress his grievances by peaceable means at the ballot box. When the Colorado miners adopted that plan to secure an 8-hour day, their desire was defeated by a corrupted legislature. What law is higher than the popular will expressed at the ballot box? What incentive is there for the workingman to obey the law when such conditions prevail?

* * *

If the South American republics desire an example of an "orderly and prosperous" community to pattern after let them turn their eyes in the direction of Colorado.

* * *

Says the Pittsburg Dispatch: "As attorney general, Mr. Knox's action was circumscribed by administration interests. As senator he will be able to speak and vote exactly as his conscience dictates." Or as instructed by the interests that dictated his appointment.

The Chicago Tribune blames it on American parents themselves, who are barred out of flats that they do not bring up their children in the way they should go. The Tribune certainly has a bad attack. Hear it: "Wherever a scrap of written or spoken information about America can be found, there also can be found a fear and an awe for the disrespectful, disobedient, unmannerly brat who is treated by his parents as if he were an independent householder, and who treats the rest of the world as if he were a combination of absolute monarch, prerogatived to despotism, and of irresponsible maniac, privileged to caprice." Chicago children must be pretty bad, or else the writer came to work the morning he wrote that with a revengeful heart, stirred to wrath by some depredation of a thoughtles or willful child. But it is not difficult to agree with him that American parents generally the too lax in the care and correction of their offspring. It is coming to be a national failing. To use the rod seems brutal, but until human nature greatly changes, its free use will save both parents and children much misery and heartaches.

HOTEL GOSSIP

Newspaper men sometimes play queer tricks on their friends, according to popular report, but once in a while their friends get back at them in the elusive manner that is a specialty of the press agent, and the result is that the score is even.

A story told by John Ryan, traveling freight agent of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific at Minneapolis, illustrates this, and shows how two railroad men were caricatured at the expense of the newspapers that printed the matter offered about them.

L. W. Landman, traveling passenger agent of the Hocking Valley, who makes his headquarters at Detroit, and Fred Tristram, assistant general passenger agent of the Wabash road, are the two men concerned, and the time was several years ago. These gentlemen were prominent on a committee which was arranging for a traveling passenger agents' meeting in one of the Southern cities, and whoever was press agent for the event was responsible for bunkoing a number of trusting newspapers.

"I don't know all the newspapers that the scheme was worked on," said Mr. Ryan, "but I know of one in Columbus and a couple in Louisville. The press agent did not need to see Tristram or Landman for the work they were about to perform. They visited several photographers, I suppose, before they managed to get what they wanted, or else borrowed the photographs from some of their friends. At any rate, they had a dozen or so pictures of different appearances, but all of an old-fashioned sort of man. One would be with a full beard, another with the Dunkard style of whiskers, with the upper lip bare and the face shaved under the mouth. They also had the Buffalo Bill style of mustache and goatee, and one picture looked very much like Horace Greely, with whiskers that got root under the collar somewhere.

"Now, Landman is a good-looking man, comparatively young, and Tristram is a large, fine-looking man, with a black mustache and one of the best appearing railroad men I have ever seen. When the pictures of these old-timers were sprung in the newspapers as likenesses of Tristram and Landman it was a pretty good joke on both those gentlemen and the newspapers, at least so everybody thought who knew of it.

The varying pictures were published simultaneously so that none of the newspapers would have had time to compare notes and get onto the discrepancies in the accounts or in the pictures, for the accounts were just as varied as the pictures. One of these stories about Landman made him look like an old Confederate soldier and went on to state that he was the oldest traveling passenger agent in the country, both in point of service and in years of life. He was born long since the time when the article credits him with having started his railroad work, and the notice stated that he had a son as old as the real Landman was at the time."

Robert C. Dunn will have over 700 votes on the first ballot at the state Republican convention, according to Darius F. Reese of St. Paul, former clerk of the supreme court of the state. Mr. Reese was here yesterday on his way to Bemidji, where he will deliver an address this evening for the Dunn Republican club.

"I believe Dunn will carry Hennepin county, and if he does he will be nominated by acclimation," said Reese. "His strength in the country is marvelous. Some sections of the state that were early considered Collins strongholds are now certain to be in the Dunn column. There is every indication that he will be one of the most popular candidates that ever aspired to the governorship of Minnesota. He is popular with the farmers and enjoys the confidence of all classes. At the rate the sentiment in his favor is growing he may have enough strength to nominate him outside of the three principal cities.

"No truth is in the report of a Collins-Eustis-Eddy combine, at least not as far as Eustis is concerned, for Judge John Steele, of Minneapolis, who is probably Eustis' closest friend and chairman of the state central committee is working hard for Dunn, as are other friends of Eustis."

Song of the Automobile.

In the chug of the panting motor,
In the hum of the whirling wheel,
Acrest of the wave of sound is hear
The song of the automobile:

"Way for the modern god of Speed,
Way for the slayer of Space!
For the engine born of the ages,
Way! Give way—make place!"

Where the tide of the city's traffic
Rolls through the crowded street,
Through shady lanes and pleasant ways
Where the city and country meet;

Where Peace broods over the valleys,
Where war's red demons reel—
Through every land with pauseless march
Advances the automobile.

"Not a toy for the rich man's pleasure,
But Power engendered anew—
A line in the epic of Progress,
And to the metre true."

Then it's "Way for the god of Speed,"
And it's "Way for the slayer of Space!"
And the great machine in the lead is seen,
In civilization's race.

Another Type of Man.

Chicago Tribune: Here the person with the projecting waistcoat butted into the conversation.

"I wonder," he said, "if any of you could draw a picture showing the difference between the sting of a wasp and the sting of a bumblebee."

There appearing to be nobody who could do this, he resumed:

"Yet you all are grown men, and most of you, perhaps, graduates of some institution of learning. I tell you, gentlemen, education didn't use to be what it is now. Here you are, half a dozen of you, supposed to be educated, and yet not one of you can draw a picture showing the difference between the sting of a bumblebee and the sting of a wasp. Why, my little 8-year-old boy can do it! He knows all about it. He draws a picture of the two stings, magnified fifty diameters, and can show all the points of difference. These are some of the practical things they teach in the schools nowadays—things that a boy can take an interest in and understand. And my little boy takes an interest in them and understands them. And only 8 years old, mind you. Think of it, gentlemen! An 8-year-old boy knowing more than half a dozen grown men!"

But such was the forbearance and self-control taught in the schools attended by those men when they were young that not one of the half dozen yielded to the mad desire to kill the person with the projecting waistcoat.

What Annoyed Him Most.

Exchange: Like the traditional Englishman, Arthur Stanley, dean of Westminster, wore home from his first visit to America an expression of amazement which only time could efface.

He was at once beset by interviewers, says the author of "Out of the Past," who asked the usual questions.

"What was the thing which most impressed you in America?" was one of these. Without a moment's hesitation Dean Stanley replied:

"My own ignorance."

The "Trust Busters."

St. Paul Globe: The Roosevelt administration has met the trusts and it is theirs. Nowhere in the entire life was as significant as the selection, by and with the advice and consent of the authorities at Washington, of Attorney General Knox as United States senator from Pennsylvania. The Roosevelt anti-trust campaign flag has been struck and fluttered to the ground. This last pretense that the Republican party is not the personal and private property of corporate interest has vanished. Interesting details of the arrangement for Quay's succession are given to the Globe by private and entirely reliable advices from Philadelphia. On Wednesday morning there was a meeting of representatives of some of the biggest trusts in the country in that city. Frick, the heaviest stockholder in the Steel trust, was present. Cassatt, of the Pennsylvania railroad, one of the defendants in the coal trust suits now pending, and Don Cameron, representating the Standard Oil and other big interests, were present. They met in Cassatt's office, and served notice on Senator Penrose, adjutant boss of Pennsylvania, that Knox must be removed from office of attorney general and made senator. On Thursday morning Knox met these same gentlemen and gave his consent, which he stated was agreed to by President Roosevelt.

Maxims of a Monopolist.

If a business falls in line
And opposes your combine,
Buy it up!

Do not stop to argufy
On the wherefore or the why:
Make them sell when you would buy—
Buy it up!

If some private little mill
Grinds its corn against your will,
Buy it up!

Let the workers of a town
Sink or struggle, float or drown—
Take their mill and close it down—
Buy it up!

So it is in social life:
If you want a handsome wife,
Buy her up-

Little matter how you woo,
Or the things you say or do—
Let your money talk for you—
Buy her up-

You can show that black is white;
They will preach your wrong as right—
Buy 'em up!
If the laws defy your skill
Introduce a Robber Bill—
There are congressmen who will—
Buy 'em up!

The Explanation.

Chicago Tribune: Outsider—Are school teachers so scarce in your town that you have to advertise for them?

Chicago Mother—Teachers are not scarce here at all, but the number of children we expect to save by having a sensible Fourth of July celebration this year will make a great many more teachers than usual necessary next fall.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A girl is pretty sure she can read a man's thoughts when he hasn't any.

The man who knows how to make love too well forgets to ask the girl to marry him.

What puzzles a man is how a woman reads the thermometer to wear a low-neck gown in winter and a ton of stuff in her bathing suit in summer.

Man and His Belief.

Many a man who doesn't believe in himself or in God has implicit confidence in an old, warped horseshoe.

Protected Sufficiently.

Boston Post: We recently learned from a source which we regard as strictly trustworthy that the czar of Russia paid $1,000,000 for a war cruiser made in France. As soon as the weather is favorable this cruiser will be shipped to St. Petersburg; where it will be hauled ashore and kept in the castle to protect it against the Japanese.

P. S.—It is not a protected cruiser.

FUNNYGRAPHS.

Yonkers Statesman: She: That new boarder who came today has a beautiful olive complexion.

He: Well, after she's been here a few weeks I guess she'll have a prune complexion.

Chicago News: "Shay, officer," began the belated citizen, "I—hic—want you t' shee me home. You—hic—know where my housh is, don't you?"

"Let me see," mused the policeman. "What's the name of your cook?"

Cornell Widow: Mistress: Did the fisherman who stopped here this morning have frogs' legs?

Nora: Sure, mum, I dinnaw. He wore pants.

Philadelphia Press: "Goodness!" exclaimed the nervous visitor, "what vulgar little hoodlums those noisy boys are out there in the street!"

"I can't see them," said the hostess. "I'm rather near-sighted, you know."

"But surely you can hear how they're shouting and carrying on."

"Yes, but I can't tell whether they're my children or the neighbors."

Fliegende Blatter: First Man (quite drunk)—Heavinsh; I've forgotten my night key!

Other (equally so)—Here ol' chap, take mine.

Chicago News: "Say, maw," queried small Tommy Toddles, looking up from his picture book, "am I descended from monkeys?"

"Not on my side of the house, Thomas," replied Mrs. Toddles with much emphasis.

Boston Post: Mr. Duffer—It's no use, I've got to discharge that butler.

Mrs. Duffer—Why, dear?

Mr. Duffer—Well, I've tried to look as dignified as he does, but he beats me every time.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

McIntosh Times: American citizens who have the blue blood of patriotic forebearers in their veins will not be driven from their homes without resistance, and when civil process is denied them they instinctively turn to thoughts of arms and resist violence with violence. The union miners of Colorado may not have respected the laws of their state in all things, but they have certainly come as close to it as the mine owners' association, which is responsible for many outrages as well as the presenting of the enforcement of the eight-hour amendment to the Colorado constitution, which it did by buying up the legislature.

St. Cloud Times: Those pestilent fellows known as "anti-imperialists" predicted two or three years ago that our national immorality in plundering the Filipinos and cheating the Porto Ricans would re-act at home upon ourselves. Did the reader of this paragraph ever know a time when there was so much embezzlement, highway robbery and motley violation of the rights of others? Perhaps this is the purity of our administration abroad reflected upon the people at home, as Senator Beveridge predicted.

Wabasha Herald: Every time Judge Parker gets a good start Cleveland speaks a few words in his favor. Then the judge has to commence all over again.

Red Lake Courier: The bottom has dropped out of the Hearst movement of late, and there is little likelihood that the New York editor will cut much of a figure at the St. Louis convention, as he has but little more than a hundred delegates pledged to him. Parker will probably not have more than two hundred delegates pledged, so the fight for the nomination will not be settled in advance of the convention. A dark horse is not unlikely, and the name of former Senator Charles A. Towne is frequently mentioned as being most likely to appease the warring elements of the party.

Wabasha Herald: Why do Republican papers criticise W. J. Bryan as severely as they do? Bryan is not a candidate for presidential nomination honors and if he is the disorganizing factor in the Democratic party that they say he is why don't they push the good work along of bringing him to the front. The fact is that they don't believe their own mouths. Bryan is a big man before the men who toil and who today are producing the nation's wealth and he will gain a respectful hearing in any American community he may visit. Say what they will Bryan is wonderfully consistent and has his ideals of what constitute sound governmental policies well founded. He is one of America's biggest men, big in character, big in intellect, big in statesmanship and big as a citizen and big in the minds of the American people. These are the qualities these serfs of party fear, and this is why cartoonist and editorial writer make these fierce assaults which fall with as little effect upon him as do the waters of the Atlantic on the rocks of the coast of Maine, or the winds on the pyramids of Egypt.

TREASURE OF THE HUMBLE.

Agnes Repplier in Life: An exchange grows eloquent over the sturdy democracy of Mr. Roosevelt, who permits and encourages his children to associate—at least occasionally—with the children of the poor. One of these occasions is enthusiastically described, and we are assured with an earnestness that borders on solemnity: "There were no caste distinctions, the president's children and some of their playmates participating in the merriment along with the children of the humble."

I wonder where the "humble" are to be found in this land of social equality and of unblushing self-assertion. And what are "caste distinctions"—antique and exquisite phrase—among a people who are taught, and presumably believe, that all men are born free and equal? Of poverty there is no lack, nor of ignorance, nor of degradation. But the poor are not of necessity the "lowly." On the contrary, they jostle the elbows of the rich, they march side by side with them along the highways of life, they are more prone to inflation than to abasement. The French artisan and the French peasant are so convinced of their equality—in all the vital things that make for manhood—that they feel they can afford to treat the wealthy and well-born with admirable courtesy. Their manners are frank, cordial and invariably polite. This lesson of amenity has still to be learned in the United States, but the absence of politeness does not necessarily imply the presence of humility. It merely means that we lack one of the essentials of civilization.

It is well to be humble. Mr. Maeterlinck has told us, in language that admits of no denial, what treasures lie in wait for those who dispossess themselves of pride. But the commonality do not make a close study of Maeterlinck. They do not practice virtues portrayed with such delicate bewilderment of phrase. Their standards are simpler and more robust. They "hold their own," and grasp at something more. And they will be patronized by no one. There is a pleasant sketch of Mr. Du Maurier's which represents a duchess of ratified tendencies giving august permission to her small daughter to play in St. James' park "with those nice little children of the people." The infant aristocrat offers her splendid society, which is firmly and coldly rejected. "Our mother," explains a child of the people, "doesn't let us play with little girls we don't know."

What a terrible thing it would be if this should happen nearer home!

How to Make High Wages.

Springfield Republican: Secretary Shaw's expressed confidence "that before the campaign proceeds very far there will be furnished from the highest possible authority in the United States" proof that wages have been rising faster than prices, indicates, of course, that the administration has put one of its bureaus at work on such a demonstration for campaign use expressly. What the cost will be to the public treasury is a question, but the chairman of the Democratic congressional campaign committee calculates that it will be $30,000 or so. That appears to be a moderate estimate. New significance attaches to the choice of Secretary Cortelyou as chairman of the Republican National Committee from the fact that it is unquestionably one of the bureaus of his department which has thus been set at work preparing republican campaign documents. He has thus assured himself and the president of help from the United States treasury, whether or not they meet with ample success in frying out the fat among private individuals.

A Few Words of Cheer.

Louisville Herald: A prominent local singer recently took charge of a choir in one of the local churches. An enthusiastic member of the congregation, wishing to encourage her, yesterday approached her with this:

"Miss Jones, you can't realize how great your success has been with the choir. Why, you have got the whole church interested. Before you began to sing in the choir scarcely a person in the congregation joined in the hymns, but last Sunday morning every one sang so loud that it was impossible to distinguish the choir at all."

How Do You Fight?

Did you tackle that trouble that came your way
With a resolute heart and cheerful?
Or hide your face from the light of day
With a craven soul and fearful?
Oh, a trouble's a ton, or a trouble's an ounce,
Or a trouble is what you make it;
And it isn't the fact that you're hurt that counts,
But only how did you take it.

You are beaten to earth? Well, well, what's that?
Come up a smiling face—
It's nothing against you to fall down flat;
But to lie there—that's disgrace.
The harder you're thrown, why the higher you bounce;
Be proud of your blackened eye!
It isn't the fact that you're licked that counts,
It's how did you fight—and why.

And though you be done to the death, what then?
If you battled the best you could.
If you played your part in the world of men,
Why, the Critic will call it good.
Death comes with a crawl, or comes with a pounce;
And whether he's slow or spry,
It isn't the fact that you're dead that counts,
But only how did you die.
—American Grocer.

Knox and His Backers.

Detroit News: Editor Hearst and those other Democratic journalists and statesmen who have delighted to represent Attorney General Knox as the conscientious servitor of the capitalistic combinations which he has been placed in the position of officially opposing could hardly have asked for stronger support of their charges and insinuations than lies on the very surface of the circumstances surrounding his selection as successor to the late Senator Quay. Such are the character, reputation and affiliations of the Keystone state machine that no man could have accepted this honor at its hands without laying himself open to the almost universal suspicion of being in league with the forces against which the attorney general has been forced to assume an attitude of hostility. Even if the negotiations by which an agreement on him was finally reached have been conducted with the utmost discretion and with due regard to appearances, the popular belief would still have been that corporate interests were potent in determining the outcome.

Center and Periphery.

Chicago Tribune: The man from Seattle, who was visiting his Boston cousin, took occasion to contrast the two cities.

"You people here as so slow," he said. "You ought to come to our town and get your eyes open. We make more progress in one year than you do in ten."

"That is merely a familiar optical illusion," replied the Boston cousin, with impassive dignity. "The speed with which you seem to move in a forward direction is due to your remote position from the hub."

WEST DULUTH

MAY RAISE MONEY

Chance For Securing Repairing of Grand Avenue Bridges.

Commercial Club Making Efforts to Interest New Manufactories.

The meeting yesterday afternoon of the committee from the West Duluth Commercial club, consisting of J. W. Holmes, Ben Getchell and Charles Kauppi, with the board of public works and council committees on finances, bridges and viaducts, for the purpose of discussing the matter of necessary repairs to the Grand avenue bridges, west of Sixty-first avenue west was not without results. Committee members say they believe some means of raising the money to strengthen the bridges will be devised.

The first thing discussed at the meeting was the proposed bridge over Lester river, to replace the present one, which has been pronounced unsafe. The construction of a new bridge at this point will require an expenditure of $10,000 or more. The West Duluthians made an effort to have the building of the structure put off another year, in view of the fact that with care the present bridge might be made to answer the purpose for that length of time.

Alderman Wilson, who is back of the Lester Park proposition, would not hear of this, however. The cost of strengthening the West Duluth bridges will come to something over $5000, and it was argued that these repairs were more necessary than the construction of an entirely new bridge at Lester Park.

The city comptroller, who was present, figured out the standing of the various city funds. After a long discussion it was finally determined that funds to take care of all the bridges might be provided if they were taken from the permanent improvement and public works funds. It was agreed that the finance committee should this week secure the opinion of the city attorney on the matter and also get definite figures from the comptroller, so that a comprehensive report might be prepared for the council meeting next Monday night.

There appeared to be some question as to the legality of taking money from the public works fund. It is believed, however, that it will be found to be perfectly proper to take the necessary amount for the West Duluth bridges from the fund, as the money would be used for repair work.

It is thought this money could not be used on the Lester Park proposition for the reason that the brige there is to be a new one, and the work expended there will not be for repairs, as is the case with the Grand avenue bridges.

AFTER INDUSTRIES.

Commercial Club Working Toward Securing Some.

The West Duluth Commercial club is still hot after new manufacturing establishments. Two or three institutions of the right sort are in sight, but as yet none of them has been safely landed. John Cashin, one of the most enthusiastic boosters of West Duluth's interests, this morning said:

"We have some pretty big industries here now, but we want more. This is the right location, and there is room enough for all. Just now our most orgiing need is for a pulp mill, furniture and chair factory, wooden ware works, more box factories and a toy, novelty and spool works.

"The material used in making the products of these factories is right at hand, so that the cost of delivering it to the factory doors would be small. Duluth is also a good distributing point and growing beter in this respect every year. The extra cost of shipping pulp wood from here to the mills now in operation is $3.25 a cord. This amount would be saved on every cord were the factory in West Duluth."

WOMAN KILLS HUSBAND AND COMMITTS SUICIDE.

Cleveland, June 14.—T. D. Allen and his wife were found dead in their room in an apartment house today, the woman having shot her husband to death and then fired a bullet into her own brain. The young woman evidently fired four bullets at her husband, two of which took effect, after which she wrote a farewell note to relatives and then killed herself. The cause for the tragedy has not been learned.

FARGO VS. DULUTH

IS ARRESTED FOR FORGERY

William Coffin Held to Grand Jury at Brainerd.

Brainerd, Minn., June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—William Coffin was arrested at Litchfield a few days ago charged with forgery and was brought back to this city by Sheriff Erickson. He is charged with forging two checks for about $20 each and passing them on well known merchants of the city. He waived examination before Judge Reimstead yesterday and was held to the grand jury.

William Lamekin, charged with assault in the first degree, was arrested yesterday afternoon and had a hearing in the municipal court. He waived examination and was held to the grand jury. He is the man who assaulted Poundmaster Woodbbry a few days ago while the latter was taking up a cow belonging to the accused.

John Powers has been arrested, charged with robbing the Merrifield postoffice last March.

Company F, Third regiment, left last night for St. Paul, to join the other companies of the regiment, and will camp at Lake City for ten days.

Rumor is again in circulation that R. R. Wise will soon commence the erection of a $25,000 modern hotel in this city.

Dan Stuart, a river driver, who has been working on the J. M. Quinn Little Pine drive, is reported to have mysteriously disappeared on June 7. The find of his peavey near a big eddy in the river gives rise to the theory that he was drowned. If so, his body cannot be found in the river. A thorough search is being made for the body.

LEG IS INJURED.

Theodore Lammers Suffers Severe Accident In Mine.

Theodore I. Lammers, a mining engineer of this city who has a wide acquaintance, is lying in bed at 1430 West First street, with a badly injured right leg, the result of an accident in a mine at Leadville, Col.

Mr. Lammers went out west some time ago and while going through a mine in Leadville was struck by a piece of falling rock, which crushed his right leg below the knee. At first the injury caused such a swelling that physicians could not tell whether the leg was broken, but when this was reduced it was found that the bone had fortunately escaped, and no fracture had taken place.

The accident ocurred June 8, and Mr. Lammers arrived home a couple of days since. It may be a couple of weeks before he will be able to walk.

HIS NECK BROKEN.

Physicians Hope to Save Ball Player's Life.

Philadelphia, June 14.—Charles Binder broke his neck sliding to the home plate in a baseball game Saturday, but the physicians at Jefferson hospital are in hopes of saving his life.

Although Binder has remained unconscious ever since the accident, the results of the operation performed by the doctors, who reset the dislocated spinal column, were satisfactory.

In operating on Binder, the doctors made two incisions in the back of the neck, exposing the vertebrae and laying open the flesh to the shoulder blades. The bones were then replaced and the spinal cord, which was also injured, was dressed. Then the head and shoulders were carefully dressed.

Those who saw him make the slide declare that the force of his fall was diminished when his chin struck the leg of the catcher, who stood guard at the home plate, catching the ball. Binder is 21 years old, and was married nine months ago.

TWO BROTHERS

Fighting In Law For Thirty Years Past.

Columbus, Ohio, June 14.—James L. and Emory P. Lockhart, brothers, have been court litigants for thirty years. They live in Bellefontaine, Ohio, and in the United States court the case of James against Emory was reached. They were partners in business from 1851 to 1873, when James alleged that Emory was getting the better of the deal. The action was fought up and down the courts and finally James recovered judgment for $14,133.

When the sheriff attempted to collect on the judgment Emory, said to have been one of the wealthiest men of his neighborhood, declared that he had no property and but 19 cents in money. Then James asked that his brother be declared an involuntary bankrupt.

The bankruptcy case came up yesterday. Emory pleaded for time, but the court found cause for the action, and the case will go to Judge West, of Logan county, referee in bankruptcy in that district.

CHEAP RATE PASSENGERS.

New York, June 14.—About 150 of the $10 rate steerage passengers, booked for the Philadelphia, but which that steamer was unable to accommodate, were brought here today on the Red Star line steamer Zeeland from Antwerp.

Baseball Games, Northern League.

Call at "North-Western Line" City Ticket office, 302 West Superior street, for schedule of Northern league baseball games.

LAXDAL IS HERE

Northern League President to Investigate Kicking Against Umpires.

Will Insist Strenuously That Orderly Games Be Played.

President Laxdal, of the Northern league, is at the head of the lakes today in an effort to straighten out the difficulties between Umpires Hogan and Gatewood and the players of the four teams in this neck of the woods.

The games during the past week have been marked by more or less kicking against the decisions of the two umpires, and the trouble culminated yesterday in Umpire Gatewood declaring the game between Superior and Crookston forfeited to the latter team, and in the disgraceful exhibition of Capt. Werden and his men at Baseball park.

President Laxdal gave notice to the umpires at the opening of the season to deal strictly with any attempt at rowdyism, and that the league management would back them up. He is determined to put a stop to the growing tendency of the game to develop into kicking matches, where the players congregate in the center of the field every second or third inning to dispute some decision of the umpire. He will investigate any complaints against the umpires and hear both sides of the story, remaining in Duluth and Superior for two or three days to witness a couple of games and endeavor to find out whether the fault lies with the umpires or the players.

He arrived in the city this morning and registered at the Spalding, and almost imediately left for Superior, accompanied by Manager Van Praagh. A meeting will be held there with Manager Cameron, of the Superior team, and yesterday's tangle straightened out.

The visit of the president of the league should have a good effect in putting an end to the senseless and objectionable kicking against the decisions of the umpires, which has marked the games during the past week.

Hogan, who has been in Duluth since the season opened, has made a fair impression. He is not strict enough in handling the players, but his decisions have been impartial on the whole.

Considering the fact that he is called upon to pass anywhere from 500 to 1000 judgments during a game, his mistakes have been few, and the impartial fans who have watched his work have no complaint to find with him as a whole, except his lack of control over the men.

The deal between the local club and Manager Watkins of Minneapolis, whereby O'Leary was to be traded for three of the Millers, is declared off for the present, and the popular backstop will remain with Duluth.

Fargo and Duluth are playing again this afternoon, and any of the players who attempt a repetition of yesterday's kicking are apt to find themselves in the bad graces of the league management.

DISPLAYING THE COLORS

General Observance of Flag Day By Putting Out Flags.

Today is Flag day, and it is being generally observed by the business men and citizens as a whole. Nearly all of the stores, banks, business blocks and office buildings are flying flags and the city presents a gala appearance.

Mayor Cullum issued a proclamation a few days ago requesting the citizens to observe the day, and the request has been generally complied with.

The only services in honor of the occasion will be held this evening at the First Methodist church, when the members of the G. A. R. will join with the delegates to the Sunday school convention, which opens here today, to hold appropriate exercises in honor of "Old Glory."

American's Summer Resorts.

When it begins to get hot and dry one's thoughts naturally turn toward the lakes and rivers and the seashore of New York and New England, and we begin to wonder how much it would require of time and money to make the trip. A lot of these questions are answered and a lot of information given free in "Four-Track Series" No. 3, "America's Summer Resorts." Sent on receipt of a two-cent stamp, by George H. Daniels, general passenger agent, New York Central & Hudson River railroad, Grand Central station, New York.

PROVIDES FOR NINE BLOCKS

Council's Action on Improvement of London Road.

But nine blocks of London road will be improved in place of twelve as originally intended.

At the meeting of the council last evening the board of public works was authorized to advertise for bids for the improvement of nine blocks in place of twelve. The change was the result of the report of City Engineer McGilvray, who stated that the appropriation of $5000 would not be sufficient to improve the twelve blocks as planned.

The distance between the curbs is 48 feet of which 24 feet in the center of the road has been macadamized. The strip along each side has been gravelled only. The plan was to add a layer of four inches of crushed rocks on the macadamized portion. The appropriation will not be sufficient to fill in any depressions in the road or to grade the "shoulders" which will be formed at each side of the strip of improved road where the crushed rock ends and the gravel commences.

It is thought likely, however, that the saving which will result from the use of the new portable stone crusher, authorized to be purchased last evening, will enable the city to fill in the depressions and grade these "shoulders," making the road smooth and level like East First street, which has been treated in a similar manner.

ON A SOLID BASIS

Is General Business Throughout Country, Says Walter Wellman.

Business Men Are Sure the Worst Is Now Over.

Chicago, June 14.—Walter Wellman, in a special from New York to the Record-Herald, says: General business throughout the country is good, but not booming; the railroads doing well, though not quite as well as last year; no disturbance of business by the presidential election; easy money and few failures, but with Wall street dull almost to flatness and with no probability of any marked increase of activity or advance in prices for many months to come, is the outlook for the remainder of the year 1904, as I gather it from financiers and business men with whom I have talked during the past few days.

These men admit that there has been something of a slump in business during the last six months. They say the depression has not been great, though noticeable. It has shown itself in the decreased earnings of the railways and in diminished bank clearings. But they agree that it was, on the whole, a wholesome reaction from the extraordinary boom of the preceding two or three years, and they congratulate themselves and the country that the inevitable reaction was experienced with so little trouble and such a small number of embarrassments or failures.

They believe, moreover, that from now on the trend will be an ascending one and that the bottom of the down grade has been reached. They do not look for another boom and do not want one. But they are of one mind in predicting a good year. They say it cannot be otherwise, with the crop outlook that is now before us. The wheat crop promises to be of at least an average size. The corn crop promises to go much above the average. The cotton yield probably will equal the highest record in the history of the country. There are no financial troubles, except the trouble the banks and trust companies are experiencing in keeping their money in profitable use. With plenty of idle money and big crops to be disposed of at fair prices, the pessimist and disaster-predicter may as well go off into the woods and bury himself.

While this is the encouraging outlook for general business, Wall street is unmistakably in the dumps. Some of the most influential financiers here tell me they do not expect any improvement in the speculative world till the end of the year. Moreover, they do not want present conditions changed to any great extent. The men who are in a position to exert almost a controlling influence upon speculation are determined to sit tight till after the presidential election and the fall crop movement are over. They know it would be impossible to start a boom in midsummer, and it would be a fatal mistake to attempt a revival prematurely. There is no lack of appreciation of the fact that the country is sick and tired of Wall street and that it is going to take a long time to restore popular confidence. Some time or other that confidence doubtless will be restored and the public will come into the market and dabble in its securities. But this is not an opportune time to encourage a return of the public to the ticker. When confidence does come back it will have to come naturally, of its own motion, and it would be a mistake to attempt to force it or hot-house it. All the big bankers, therefore, frown upon schemes designed to catch the attention of the public and instill more activity into speculation.

This stand-pat or waiting policy may be satisfactory to the big people who are rich enough to be patient, but it is rough on the smaller fry. Not in many years has such depression been seen in Wall street. Few, if any, of the brokerage houses are paying their office expenses, let alone the expenses of the families of the partners. They are compelled to live o ffttheir resources, if they have any, and happy the man who has sense enough to put something by in the boom days and not let it all go in vying with his neighbors as to pleasure and display in this age of luxury—this age of luxury so-called. This extravagance in living prevails in nYrk and causes this metropolis to be known throughout to world as the city which beats all creation for high and expensive living. There are plenty of people in New York who are making and spending money. The streets are filled with automobiles, and the roadhouses and race tracks are crowded with their gay passengers. Wine corks pop as of yore. The bookmakers take in their usual thick wads of popular production. Apartment houses with suites at from $3000 to $15,000 a year have no lack of tenants. The Waldorf, Sherry's and the other fashionable cafes are as crowded as ever with men and women, particularly women, eating and drinking at an average of $5 per sitting. Gorgeous diamonds and magnificent gowns and wonderful millinery, worn with the latest corsets and the most assiduous and scientific of cosmetic and facial massage treatments, fill theaters, hotels and restaurants with pictures gay and rich, and well calculated to justify the remark made the other day by a distinguished German tourist that our American women are growing year after year in grace and beauty. They sure are advancing by leaps and bounds in their assimilation of style and their love for luxury.

But very little of this lavish and rather pretty, though somewhat hollow, and now and then just a trifle vulgar, display, comes from Wall street people. They are not, as a rule, riding about in automobiles, nor opening wine. The majority of them are struggling with might and main to get through the long, dull summer without going to the wall. The price of a seat on the Stock Exchange has dropped from the $90,000 of boom times to about $50,000. Some one has figured out that the sales on the exchange suffice to give each broker a daily compensation of about $4. Four dollars a day is mighty poor pay for the man who works on Wall street. Two years ago the average successful broker spent that much per diem for his midday luncheon and cigars.

They tell me that now the brokers go down to their offices in the morning, open a few letters in the hope that among the many bills there may be an order or two for stocks, and then put in the remainder of the day cursing their luck, wondering where the good people are who poured business in upon them during the boom, and thinking up excuses to make to the landlord's agent when he comes around for the rent. It is tough on the brokers and their employes, all of whom are feeling the pinch of hard times. But it is not difficult for fancy there are tens of thousands of men and women scattered throughout the country who laugh with ghoulish glee as they read of the woes of the poor brokers. It is time for the lambs to bleat with delight, and the lambs are just now attending to their legitimate business, buying and selling groceries, clothing, millinery, boots and shoes and what not. It is the lambs who are riding in the automobiles and sitting at bewitching tables beside glittering silver wine-coolers.

Wherever one goes in the financial district one hears only words of praise for the manner in which J. P. Morgan & Co. handled the Panama canal payment. For a time there was a good deal of uneasiness over that $40,000,000 outgo of gold. Bankers were worried and borrowers were more worried. It was feared there would be a disturbance of the money market. But Morgan & Co. evidently knew their business. Within twenty-eight days from the signing of the papers in Paris, which made the Morgan firm the fiscal agents of the government in the canal deal, the entire sum of forty millions in gold was on its way to Paris. Probably the resources of a modern banking firm of the first rate never were more graphically illustrated than in this achievement. Morgan & Co. gold bonds in Berlin, in London, in Frankfort, in Vienna. They bought exchange against the credits thus created. In a few days they literally had money flowing in steady streams to Paris from all over the world. The forty millions were paid by drawing only eighteen millions of dollars of gold from the United States. And the whole thing was done so easily, so quietly, that bankers say that there was not a moment's disturbance of the money market. and if some one had not told them, bankers and borrowers would have been wholly unaware that such a giant transfer of funds was under way. In Europe, when a banking firm carries out an admirable piece of business like this, its chief is decorated by the government. Here he is invited to subscribe to the campaign fund.

Why Women Should Study Their Color.

A pale face—a face without color, the lifeless look that gives a plain appearance to an otherwise beautiful woman or child—is the sign of anaemia, and anaemia means blood without vital power or color. It is corrected by nourishing the blood with the food elements of Father John's Medicine, pure and wholesome, making flesh and strength. Its gentle laxative effect strengthens the stomach and corrects the digestion, which in turn gives increased vitality or power to the whole system. This strong vitality is the only protection against disease. It is the same with growing children—sometimes their growth is too rapid and they use up tissue faster than it is made. Then you should supply the food from which blood and tissue is made, and that is found in Father John's Medicine. This explains why it cures scrofula and skin diseases, all of which are due to thin and impure blood. We again warn you of the danger in patent medicines depending on alcohol and other weakening stimulants and injurious drugs for their temporary effect. Father John's Medicine is for sale by all druggists, the L. W. Leithhead Drug Co., Wholesale Distributors.

REPUBLICANS ARRIVE AT CHICAGO

Chicago, June 14.—Incoming trains brought large numbers of the Republican national advance guard to Chicago today. Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, was an early arrival. Others who reached Chicago were Senator Hansbrough, of North Dakota; Senator Ankeny, of Washington; Judson W. Lyons, of Georgia, and George E. Paxton, of Wyoming, and Cornelius N. Bliss, of New York. Many persons who are not members of the national committee, but who like to be on the ground at Republican conventions, also came.

The leaders have settled down to a discussion of the two disputed topics which will occupy the convention and the national committee—the vice presidency and contests.

While a number of the states will present contests, Illinois' principal trouble will lie in the selection of a national committeeman and the delegate who will lead his colleagues on the floor of the convention.

THE ADVANTAGES OF MINNESOTA

St. Paul, June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—For the purpose of forming a permanent organization to proclaim the advantages Minnesota offers to settlers, a large gathering of Minnesotans was present at the People's church today, when Judge A. E. Jaggard rapped for order and called on Governor Van Sant to make the opening address. Governor Van Sant spoke of the future of the state and its opportunities to settlers and urged cooperation in working for the upbuilding of the commonwealth of Minnesota. Henry A. Castle, of Washington, D. C., read a paper on Minnesota, a place for homes, educational and moral advantages. Dr. A. H. Tomlinson, of St. Peter, Minn., discussed climate and health and this afternoon the convention listened to a paper on transportation and markets by M. D. Grover, general counsel for the Great Northern railroad.

It is quite likely that a permanent organization will be formed tomorrow and then action will probably be taken looking to the formation of a state immigration bureau.

MARQUETTE REDUCES

The Arbitrary Assessment Placed on Mining Companies.

Marquette, Mich., June 14.—Rather than drive them out of the state, as threatened, the Marquette city board of review has put four of J. J. Hill's companies on the assessment roll for $50,000.

The assets of the companies consist of ore lands near Hibbing, on the Mesaba range, and are said to be worth more than $1,000,000. It was intimated if this valuation was fixed the concerns would pull out and incorporate in West Virginia, thus saddling their heavy tax on the city itself unless the county board gave relief.

The taxes on the $50,000 will amount to about $1000, and this is satisfactory to the companies.

WARNE SAYS

Mother In Heaven Beckoned Him to Come.

Kokomo, Ind., June 14.—Linsey Warne, aged 22, and unmarried, a plate-glass worker, whose home is in Chicago Heights, was found in the back yard of the home of Rev. W. M. Pursley, on Valle avenue, in convulsions from arsenic poison, self-administered.

In his pocket was found a letter to friends, which stated that in his dreams he saw his angel mother in heaven with outstretched arms begging him to come to her at once. He stated that the letter he had written was almost an exact copy of a letter written by his father's great-grandfather, who had also committed suicide.

A physician was called and an effort is being made to save the unfortunate man's life.

COMPLETE MYSTERY

Search Reveals No Clue to Whereabouts of Dahl.

Disappearance of Aged Man and Daughter Puzzles All.

Bemidji, Minn., June 13.—The whereabouts of N. O. Dahl and his daughter, Miss Aago Dahl, who are missing from their homestead near Quiring postoffice, is still a mystery, despite the fact that a very diligent search of the surrounding country has been made and every clue that might lead to their discovery, dead or alive, has been followed to the end.

The case is one of the strangest that has ever come to the attention of the public in this section. At first foul play was feared, but there is absolutely no clue to base specific charges against anyone and no suspicious circumstances to connect anyone with the matter in any way, beyond the fact that Dahl was believed to have a large sum of money on his person. If the pair were murdered there is not the faintest clue about the premises to warrant the belief. There are no marks of a struggle, the interior of the cabin in which they made their home was found in almost perfect order and the wildest suspicion is unable to connect anyone with the disappearance with any degree of reason. Relatives of the missing pair have communicated with every place where they might have gone, but nothing has been developed and the deepest mystery surrounds the whole affair.

The citizens in the vicinity of Quiring are much exercised over the case and today every available man in the neighborhood is engaged in a systematic search of the entire country in that vicinity in an effort to discover some clue that will lead up to a solution of the strange disappearance.

Many people believe that both were enticed from the cabin on some pretext, murdered and the bodies buried in some remote place in the woods. About two months have elapsed since they weer last seen alive and there has been plnty of time for the elments to efface any trace of a grave made in the woods.

There are no lakes or streams in that vicinity that they would cross in going anywhere and the theory that they may have been drowned in some manner is very unsatisfactory.

The case baffles all efforts at unraveling so far and investigation only surrounds it with more impenetrable mystery.

STATE INTERVENES

In Action to Condemn Bed of Cloquet River.

St. Paul, June 14.—Attorney General W. J. Donahower, on behalf of the state of Minnesota, yesterday intervened in an action brought in the district court at Duluth by the Minnesota & North Wisconsin Railroad company to condemn a portion of the bed of Cloquet river and Alden lake for the purpose of constructing a boom in which to sort logs. The railroad applied for the appointment of commissioners to condemn land and the petition is opposed by Frank W. Higgins and others representing a boom company, who argue that the construction of the "sorting" station will destroy the navigability of the river.

The case involves the question whether the right of eminent domain extends to lands held by the state in its sovereign capacity. Mr. Donahower argues that the right of eminent domain does not cover the beds of navigable rivers, and that if the construction of the proposed improvement will interefer with the navigability of the river it is the duty of the state to see that the land is not condemned. Whether the improvements will so interfere with the navigability of the river is a question for the district court with which the petition is filed to decide.

A FALL IN WATERS

Of Mississippi Necessary For Stocking Streams With Fish.

Work of the United States Fish Commission Delayed.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Unless the waters of the Mississippi river recede within the next few weeks, very few streams, rivers or lakes in Minnesota can be stocked with fish this year. If the Mississippi river falls sufficiently for the work of catching fish to be commenced, some 300 or 400 applicants will receive a supply of black and rock bass, croppie and catfish.

These applications have been on file with the fish commission for some months and more are being received daily, but no attention will be given to any of them until after the first of July, the beginning of the new fiscal year. Then, if conditions are favorable, a corps of men will be sent out o obtain the supply necessary and all the applications will be given attention.

The supply of black and rock bass, as well as croppie and catfish, can only be obtained from the Mississippi river. The high water comes inland covering the land for miles, and when it recedes the lakes, streams, ponds and rivers are filled with fish. Then the fish commission employes obtain what they want. Last year the water was too high for work. It is now a question as to whether the water will be low enough by the beginning of next month to make the work of catching the fish successful.

The applications received from Minnesota last year came from all parts of the state, and the requests were confined to rock and black bass, crappie and catfish.

The department officials are unable to estimate the number of fish sent to any one part of the state or to any one individual. If they be of a small size as many as 80,000 may be shipped in one of the regulation cars, but as the sizes vary the number runs between 10,000 and 20,000.

W. R. Holloway, consul-general at Halifax, Nova Scotia, has sent an interesting paper to the department of commerce and labor relative to immigration into Canada from the United States. According to the figures given by Consul General Holloway the Dakotas were the heaviest losers through this exodus to Canada, 6000 citizens from these states having crossed the border during the years 1902-3 and taken up homesteads in Canada. Next in point of loss comes Minnesota. During the same period 5990 residents of the North Star state moved northward and settled across the Canadian line. Third in the northern movement it is found 822 Nebraskans became affected with a desire to go over into Canada.

"The large immigration into Western Canada from the United States and Europe," Consul General Holloway says, "has caused numerous inquiries as to the price of land in that locality, and while the tendency has been upward it is not believed there will be any material advance in the near future. All of the cheaper lands of the Canadian Pacific Railway company have been sold.

The following table shows the number of entries made during 1902 and 1903, respectively, by persons coming from the United States:

United States Consul O. H. Baker, of Sydney, N. S. W., under date of April 22, 1904, reports as follows as to conditions of American flour trade in China:

"The New South Wales government some time ago appointed a commissioner to investigate the conditions of trade in Japan and China. He has recently reported at length. Among other things the report states:

"On all sides it has been remarked to me that the Americans and others are rapidly getting a footing in connection with products that could easily be supplied from Australia. * * * To introduce our flour and burst up the American flour monopoly, New South Wales millers must be prepared to sacrifice a little and adopt the same plans as the Americans, and not send small hand musters by post as samples, as they are absolutely useless. The miller must send at least five tons, so that proper distribution can be made to likely buyers. The American millers send trial shipments of 100 to 200 tons and some continue to do this for from three to six months. They do not think of making any profit on these trial shipments, but then they come out on the right side in the long run, for once any particular brand gets favorably known they can always get firm offers at workable limits."

torial contest and cannot be said to be identified with either faction. My nomination, I should say, might have the effect of uniting the opposing factiones of the Republican party, since neither the Dunn nor the Collins men could claim victory."

Mr. Eustis called on the governor and several other state officers. He said that he has gained ten pounds since his return from the South and seemed in excelent spirits.

"I don't know how the contest between Dunn and Collins in Hennepin county will terminate. Both sides are making a hard fight."

Mr. Eustis asked about Ramsey county and said he had heard that Dunn is in the lead and that he will carry the county.

United States Marshal Grimshaw and George P. Wilson, of Minneapolis, state senator and formerly attorney general, were at the Windsor hotel yesterday and discussed the gubernatorial situation in Hennepin county.

"I don't see any reason why we can't beat the Dunn men in Hennepin if we only succeed in getting our men out at the polls," said United States Marshal Grimshaw. "We certainly have a majority of the Republican voters of the county with us."

"Yes, but there is a circus in town on the day of the primaries and we may not be able to get our men out," said Senator Wilson.

"The circus won't cut any ice," replied the United States marshal. "Our people are not the kind that go to circuses."

Senator Wilson told The Herald correspondent that he thought Judge Collins will carry Hennepin county overwhelmingly.

"Judge Collins has the support of nine-tenths of the business men of Minneapolis and of seven-tenths of the common people," said the senator. "If we can get the people out at the polls we will win hands down. The Dunn men are putting up a hard fight, and spending lots of money, but we have a majority of the Republican voters."

The supporters of Judge Loren W. Collins tell a story of a straw vote among the jurors of the federal court at Fergus Falls, which indicates either that the jury was packed, or that Judge Collins is the most popular candidate in that section of the state. According to the story, there were 149 Republicans on the jury, and one of them suggested that they take a straw vote on the gubernatorial contest. It is reported that 148 voted for Collins and one for Dunn.

Mr. Crawford received a telegram from Lakefield stating that his brother, John Crawford, had drowned in Canada.

COPPER IS LOWER

Price of Metal Is Now Well Below Thirteen Cents.

Foreign Demand Better at Lower Prices—Shares Are Firm.

George L. Walker again reports copper slightly lower and sales of lake have been made at 12¾ cents. The foreign demand is picking up. Copper shares he finds to be somewhat firmer. In his weekly letter he says:

"Copper continues quiet, and is slightly lower. Lake is 12¾ cents and electrolytic is about 12½ to 12⅝ cents per pound. Sales of lake have been made this week at 12¾ cents. Consumers are buying sparingly, hoping that a lower level of prices will be reached. Producers are not pressing copper for sale, and all of the largest interests express confidence in the maintenance of prices.

"The foreign demand for copper has shown improvement since quotations dropped below 13 cents, and the prospect now is that this month's exports will equal those of May. It is now generally accepted by consuming interests that the foreign demand for copper has been in every way legitimate, and that there are no surplus supplies in existence anywhere, either in this country or abroad. Domestic consumption is holding steady at about a 20 per cent decline from last year's average.

"According to the best statistics obtainable, the export movement of copper this year has so far shown an increase of 80 per cent over that of last. In view of the fact that about half of the American production is exported, it will be readily seen that the 80 per cent increase in exports greatly overbalanced the 20 per cent decrease in consumption. There is a quite general feeling in the trade that the price of copper will soon recover its decline, and that the average price of this year will be fully 13 cents per pound.

COPPER SHARES.

"Coppers have displayed a firmer tone recently. Amalgamated interests in New York have been buying Utah Consolidated stock in the Boston market, and have thus indirectly conveyed to local investment and speculative interests knowledge of the fact that they are not bearish on the future of copper. Some Lake Superior people who have witnessed the recent big boom in Arizona stocks, realize that it was all based on the rich developments of the Calumet & Arizona mine, and they are now asking themselves why there should not be a boom in Michigan coppers, based on the recent discoveries that show more extended and continuous richness in the Kearsarge and Baltic lodes than was originally dreamed of. They have already, as a result of such reasoning, begun buying Osceola, Isle Royale, Atlantic and Copper Range.

"At this writing there is a good prospect that the buying for copper stocks will continue to increase until prices have a substantial advance. The only thing that stands in the way is the fear on the part of traders that any attempt to boom the Boston market will be checked by a decline in Amalgamated. Somehow there has been an abrupt downward movement in Amalgamated every time the Boston list has developed activity for so many months past that there has now come to be a quite general belief that Amalgamated interests are determined that there shall be no copper share speculation here until they are ready.

"It is not improbable that the Boston coppers may break away from Amalgamated and go up regardless of the course of that stock. The good developments at Lake Superior, the increased output and earnings of the Utah mines, in which Boston has a large interest, and the prospect of early payments on the stocks of two or three companies that are not now in the dividend list make the outlook very propitious for an upward movement in copper share stocks."

HERERRA KNOCKS OUT YANGER IN THE EIGHTH.

Butte, Mont., June 14.—Benny Yanger, the "Tipton Slasher," took the count in the eighth round last night when Aurelio Hererra, of Bakersfield, Cal., landed his famous punch. Yanger's fighting was faster than any former opponent. Hererra has met, but, notwithstanding his advantage in speed, he was comparatively an easy victim for the Mexican, who played a waiting game, plodding slowly for the opportunity to land that single blow that has sent so many to the mat. Toward the last of the eighth and while close to the ropes Hererra landed an awful right swing on Yanger's jaw during a fierce mix-up. Crossing with his left to the same point, he dazed the Italian, and before Yanger could recover two more fierce right arm swings found the jaw and Yanger went down. At the count of nine he started to rise, when Hererra again tapped him on the jaw which sent him down for good. Hererra only used his crouch once or twice when the mix-ups got too warm and generally fought open, and his clever work showed him to be at his best. The purse was $2500, winner taking 75 per cent.

JEFFRIES-MUNROE FIGHT POSTPONED TO JUNE 30.

San Francisco, June 14.—Owing to the injury to Jeffries knee, the Jeffries-Munroe fight will be postponed. Delaney wired from Harbin Springs last night that the champion would not be ready until June 24. Manager Cofforth, of the Yosemite club, announced that the fight would take place June 30.

COFFEE AND CUCUMBERS.

It is a matter of history that on the morning before one of the decisive battles of the Civil War, General Grant's breakfast consisted of a cucumber and a cup of black coffee. The dread disease, which finally overcame him in the vigor of his manhood, was the direct result of his repeated disregard of the laws of health. Such a fate would be unlikely to the keen, active-minded men of today, who make pillsbury's vitos their principal article of diet.

GIRLS KILLED BY ENGINE.

New York, June 14.—Two little girls, seven years of age, playing on a railroad trestle at Brooklyn Hills, near Jamaica, L. I., last evening, were struck by a Long Island freight engine. Ethel Elwell, whose home was in Brooklyn, was instantly killed, and Jessie Burness, at whose home in Jamaica, Ethel was visiting, was so badly injured that she cannot recover. In the dusk of evening the presence of the children on the trestle was not observed by the engineer.

¶ Do you ever think your boy plays too hard?

¶ I tell you a boy that knows how to play has good stuff in him. He'll work all the better for it bye and bye.

¶ But remember, he's burning up a lot of energy.

¶ Give him plenty of "FORCE."

Sunny Jim

A boy can easily grow thin and starved and anæmic, even if he does stuff his stomach three times a day—unless the food is the right sort.

It isn't what you eat that counts—it's only what digests—the part that is absorbed and builds up muscles and nerves and brain.

"FORCE" is the ideal food for growing children, because it not only digests itself but helps to digest the other food substances that are eaten with it.

THE TITLE CASE

County's Action Against Judge Ensign to Be Heard Soon.

Will Learn Whether It Has Clear Title to Courthouse Site.

Aside from four or five court cases, some of which may yet be continued over until September, there remain about five or six actions for trial in district court.

One of the most important of the remaining cases for trial this term is that of the county of St. Louis against J. D. Ensign, the suit to clear title to the present courthouse grounds.

So far as can be learned there has been no date for trial set yet, but Assistant County Attorney Crosby has stated that the case would likely be tried sometime during the present month.

Judge Ensign being a party concerned in the action the case will be tried before one of the other judges, whether Judge Cant or Judge Dibell, not yet being determined.

The suit has been instituted at the direction of the board of county commissioners at a meeting held some time ago. The board desires to learn whether the county has, by occupying the ground for so long a period of time acquired, under the terms of the donors absolute title to the grounds.

The terms under which the county acquired the grounds were that it should erect and maintain a courthouse building. It is held, on the part of the county, that all the requirements have been met and that the title should now be vested absolutely in the county, regardless of what action it may hereafter take as to the maintainence of a courthouse building on the property.

At the county board meetings, various commissioners have stated that in case the county will definitely decide to locate the new county courthouse on the old site, Judge Ensign has indicated his willingness to deed the property over to the county absolutely.

As trustee of the property, for the donors, Judge Ensign has stated that he would not be carrying out the intentions of the former owners if he vested an absolute title in the county before the terms relative to the permanentcy of the courthouse on the old site is determined. The erection of a courthouse, such as the county figures on building within the next few years is taken to be the best indication of the permanency of any site that may be selected and, as trustee, Judge Ensign would give the county a clear title without the necessity of a suit if it is decided to erect the new county buildings on the old site.

Sentiment among the commissioners, however, and for that matter among the taxpayers, generally has been in favor of a friendly suit to test the question of title. If the county has a clear title it wishes to know it, and if it has not a clear title to the old courthouse site, this fact may have some influence on the action that may be taken by the commissioners in the future.

In the action to clear title, Judge Ensign, as trustee, will be represented by John G. Williams, and the county commissioners will be represented by Assistant County Attorney W. G. Crosby.

If through the suit it is decided that St. Louis county has absolute title to the half block where the courthouse and jail now stand, the argument that the new courthouse must be erected where the old building now stands will be greatly weakened, for if the county owns the site, without any strings to it, the ground, which would be excellent for residence purposes, could be sold at a good figure and the proceeds applied to the purchase of ground elsewhere.

In case the county cannot show its right to absolute title, the same will remain vested in Judge Ensign, as trustee, and in event of his death, it is said that the title will descend to his heirs.

PROPAGATE BASS

Fishermen Will Agitate Establishment of State Hatchery.

Deerwood Suggested as Good Location—Bass Becoming Scarce.

Duluth fishermen want a state black bass hatchery established somewhere in Minnesota, perefarbly at Deerwood. They also want the bass fishing season shortened, giving as their reason the fact that black bass do not spawn until late, and that by allowing people to angle for these gamy members of the finny tribe from May 30 on, the more accessible of the Northern Minnesota streams and lakes are becoming rapidly cleaned of the fish.

At the present time there is no bass hatchery in the state. One can be constructed only at great expense, but the Duluth men who are interested in the matter say that no matter what the expenditure necessary a hachery should be established to prevent Minnesota waters becoming entirely depopulated of the fish.

"It would certainly be a good thing to have the proposed hatchery started," said Deputy Game Warden John Green today. "Black bass are growing very scarce in the rivers and lakes which are easily gotten at. Of course there remain dozens of little lakes in the forests of Northern Minnesota where good bass fishing may yet be had, but unless additional measures are taken for the protection and propogation of bass, it will be only a matter of time, with the rapid manner in which this section of the country is being settled up, before the bass here becomes as good as extinct.

"This is just what has already happened in Pike lake, to the north of Duluth, and the nearest place to the Zenith City where bass may be fished for. Formerly there was excellent bass fishing in the lake, but now scarcely any of them are caught. People go after pike and have small hope of catching any of the more gamy fish.

"I understand that bass fishing is getting worse each year in the vicinity of Deerwood also. It is the same with all such places which are easily accessible to city people.

"Besides restocking such waters, if we had the hatchery, other streams and lakes might be stocked with the bass. A number of our north shore streams are hardly adapted for bass, but there are places enough where the fish would flourish. There appears to be a popular opinion that bass fishing is to be had along the north shore of Lake Superior, in the near vicinity of Duluth. This is not the case, however. The streams in question are more adapted to trout.

"I understand that a fish hatchery is to be established at St. Paul, but I have not heard that attention will be paid there to the propogation of bass.

"It is now allowable to catch any variety of bass from May 30 to March 1. The Duluthians advocating a change of season would have it last from July 1 to September or October. This, I think, would be no more than reasonable, until the bass became plentiful again, at least. It is pretty cold in the spring up in this country, and the bass do not spawn until along in June. Fish with roe in them are being caught at Deerwood every day now.

"The early opening of the season was fixed for the benefit of enthusiasts from Southern Minnesota more than any one else. The object was to make it lawful to go after bass on Decoration day. I agree with the Duluth fishermen in their claim, that this date is entirely too early.

"The exponents of the shorter season argue that with the opening of the hunting season in September all interest is lost in fishing, and that the season for bass might better close Sept. 1, than the following March."

Hints To Advertisers

It is a serious mistake to discontinue your advertising because trade is dull. There are certain seasons when it is necessary to cut down your advertising appropriation, but remember, the public forgets easily, and that the firm which is not represented in some degree the year round, is sure to lose the value of the cumulative effect of its publicity.

Many mistakes have occurred by rushing in an ad at the last moment, but no merchant has ever had reason to regret having his copy in the day before.

"Fortune brings in some boats that are not steered;" and one store in a million succeeds without adequate advertising. But the unsteered boat and the unadvertised store usually do not "come in."

Formerly store-advertising figured merely as an item of operating expense; now, with enterprising merchants, the amount set aside for it equals the total amount of all other operating expenses—and the ratio is growing all the time.

"Today's strength is ruled by today's food;" and today's store-activity is ruled by today's store-publicity.

If you hope to make more money this summer than you did last, plan your advertising accordingly. If you want to make twice as much, spend twice as much for space, and you won't miss the mark very much.

Accuracy and adequacy are the twin-essentials in a store-advertisement. It must be all true, of course; and it must be all there.

BLOW TO UNIONISM.

Rochester Firm Declines to Renew Agreement.

Rochester, N. Y., June 14.—What is regarded as the most crushing blow trade unionism has received in Rochester is the refusal of B. Rothschild & Co. to renew their agreement with the United Garment Workers of America. This action leaves the organization without a single factory of importance in this city. The 8-hour working day is now a thing of the past as all the great clothing houses have gone back to the 9-hour system. The employes of the Rothschilds factory have decided to remain loyal to the firm. At a mass meeting of the men held yesterday President Chambers of local No. 136 and other leaders of the garment workers of America, were present and used all their powers of persuasion without avail to induce the Rothschild factory operatives to oppose the wish of their employer. The men voted unanimously in favor of remaining at work even with the extra hour. As a final alternative, Chambers and the other labor leaders told the men that they must choose between remaining in Mr. Rothschild's employ or expulsion from the union.

THREE DROWNED.

Greensburg, Pa., June 14.—Locked in each other's embrace the dead bodies of three young men were last night taken from the dam at the Mutual No. 4 plant of the H. C. Frick Coke company, Mount Pleasant township. The dead are:

NEWTON STUCHEL, of Indiana, 21 years old.

CHARLES HOBURN, of Yesksburg, 18 years old.

OSCAR NEWBURG, of Greensburg, 17 years old.

All were employed by Jacob Stuchell in the operation of his steam sawmill near United. Last evening Hoburn and Newburg went to the dam and undressing, went in wading. Neither could swim and after going about 100 feet from the bank, got beyond their depth and in their frantic efforts to return to the bank they got into deeper water. Newton Stuchel went to their rescue and was dragged under by the boys who grappled his arms and legs. Stuchel was married only a week ago.

Perry Werden and his bunch of rowdies from Fargo gave the spectators at yesterday's baseball game one of the most disgusting exhibitions ever witnessed on a local diamond.

Werden's conduct was the kind that brings ball players into disrepute, and a player like the Fargo captain should rouse the ire of every decent player in the business who desires to bear the name of a gentleman. His conduct yesterday was more befitting a police court character than a baseball player, and two or three of the other members of the team went him a good second.

Occasional differences with an umpire will occur and are now and then excusable, so long as the protests are made in a gentlemanly way, but when they take the form of Mr. Werden's profane heratings, it is time to call a halt. It is not this bully's first offense, for his career in the league seems to have been a trail of fines, and yesterday was not the first time that police interference has been called for. He has evidently come into the Northern league with the idea of bullying and browbeating his way, but Northern league umpires are happily made of sterner stuff, and he is getting what every rowdy and bully ought to get. If he continues he should be dealt with more severely.

The Fargo management owes it to the fans in every city in the league to suppress this cast-off rowdy of another league and make him keep within proper bounds. The public will not go to games where but four innings are played in an hour and a quarter and the remainder of the time is spent in fighting and brawling.

Hogan's decision was justifiable, but that is neither here nor there in considering Werden's conduct. The umpire is the official of the league, and if protests must be made, let them be made to the management of the league and not in the form of disgraceful wrangles on the field, tiring and disgusting the people who pay their money to see the game.

It is but fair to say that Hogan's work has been generally commended during the time he has been on the Duluth grounds. He has been fair and impartial, and though possibly he may in the judgment of some of the spectators have erred, it has not been wilful on his part.

The trouble came about in this way:

Zink was caught between the bases and in attempting to run him down two of the Fargo players who did not have the ball in their possession, obstructed the base line. Zink ran out of the line, as he had a right to do when the line was obstructed and then Werden threw his arms around the Duluth first baseman and held him while another man tagged him.

Hogan gave Zink his base, and then Werden's kicking commenced. Hogan finally fined him and put him out of the game, and when he continued to vilify him from the side lines, ordered him from the grounds, and the police escorted him out. If he had been a judge and sentenced the Fargo captain to thirty days for disorderly conduct, the spectators would have been better satisfied. Demontreville was also ordered out of the game for attempting to emulate the example set by his captain.

The exhibition was no fault of the local management's. Manager Van Praagh has notified his players that any one of them who is fined by the umpire will receive a like fine from the management. If the Fargo management would adopt a similar plan, it might have a beneficial result.

As for the game itself, it wasn't a game. It was just a massacre—a plain massacre with the rowdies in the stellar role of the Kishineff villagers. Little Jimmy Foulkes who comes of the finest selected stock of Fargo twirlers, started to supply the benders for Van Praagh's pennant pursuers, and maybe he didn't get mauled. It took the White Sox about three innings to discover what a bluff the little southpaw was putting up, and then—oh, barrels of joy!

Koukalik, the man with the mysterious curves, took just three innings to get settled down. The rowdies scored eight runs in the first three sessions, and then passed quietly off the scene with one more in the next six innings. Their only two runs came in the third when Rose lifted one of those sizzling slants far over the heads of the outfielders, and over the new addition to the fence for four cushions. Then the high king of the rowdies hit the next ball pitched for two bases and came home on a single by Edwards.

After that Koukalik had the rowdies on his staff and they never came within yelling distance of the coveted gutta percha. As a trundler Coke is a three-ply baby and a dandy. He has an out drop that caused a portly old gentleman in the grand stand to swear he would never touch another drop of nose-paints as long as he lived. Those serpentine twists certainly had the rowdies sawing some.

As for the fourth and fifth innings—oh joy. Will the orchestra kindly play a slow dreamy waltz?

Captain Artie Ball started the slaughter by a long drive to center field which looked good for two bags. Furlong speared it but failed to hold it, and Ball was safe. Newt Randall failed to connect, but O'Leary, that King de Swat Stick, pasted the bulb for a single, and Lagger got a life on Demontreville's error. Then little Lee Quillan didn't do a thing but hit the next ball for two bases, and Ball, O'Leary and Lagger ambled home. Then "piano legs" Zink gave the ball a crack that would give you an appetite for supper, and Quillan raced in.

Then came the little wordy battle number one, when Zink started for second and got caught between the bags. As a result of this little unpleasantness between Mr. Hogan and Mr. Werden, Mr. Werden decided that he would retire to the shade of the score board for the remainder of the game, and tender the sum of ($5, or was it $10 Mr. Werden?) to Mr. Hogan for the privilege of the short conversation.

Rose came in from the right garden to first, and was replaced by Hillock. Then came another mere trifle of four runs in the fifth. Ball was presented with the first cushion and tried to show his generous nature by taking another, but got caught. Randall singled, stole second and came home when O'Leary gave the thing a most memorable mop to center field for two bases. Lagger died for Foulkes' sake, struck at three good ones, and then Lee Quillan had to rub it into the rowdies by lacing out a single and bringing the Duluth backstop home. He continued his picturesque prance around the diamond on errors by Lynch, who had meanwhile replaced Foulkes in the box, and Manka.

Another shift took place in this inning. Further unpleasantness between Mr. Hogan and Mr. Demontreville had caused Mr. Demontreville to seek solace in the company of Mr. Werden beneath the shade of the sheltering score board. Lemke went to the right garden, Lynch moved from third to pitcher, Foulkes went to first, Rose went to third, and Hillock moved from right field to short stop.

But the shift availed the Sad Affairs but little. Two more runs came in the eighth and ninth, and the final tale of carnage was 11 to 2.

The rowdies from the plains of North Dakota left the grounds sighing for "just a dear, old-fashioned country home, down on the farm." The peace and quietude of a country life for them.

WINNIPEG SHUT OUT.

Newmeyer Allows the Canadians a Single Hit.

Grand Forks, N. D., June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—The first game of the series with Winnipeg on the home grounds was played here yesterday. The locals won by a score of 5 to 0, making the fourth straight from the Maroons.

Newmeyer was on the delivering table for the Tigers and pitched in elegant form allowing the visitors one little hit which caused no trouble. Annis got the only hit for the Maroons and that was in the sixth inning. Green, the first man up, was thrown out on first, and Annis got a clean hit to right. Sullivan and Kelly were unable to get to first.

Green was the gentleman on the slab for the visitors and he failed to make good. He gave seven passes. It was in the eighth inning that he left the earth for a time, and during his flight he issued four passes. Singles by Hutchison and Hanrahan account for the three scores in the eighth.

In the seventh inning the fans were treated to a double on the part of the locals. Spooner struck out. Howard drew a base, the third and last pass in the game. Dillon, the next man up, sent a grounder to Dunn who sent it to Sharne and then to Cole. Hutchison took a couple of hits, just to help his batting average out. Cheek quit the game with a batting average of 1000.

It was in the third inning that the Tigers made their first scores. Cheek led off with a hit and Newmeyer went safe on an error by Spooner. Then two singles in rapid succession by Nagel and Hutchison, and two men on fielder's choice gave the Tigers their first score.

Dunn, Sharnweber and Hutchison played an excellent fielding game for the Tigers, while Annis did likewise for the visitors. The score:

TROUBLE AT SUPERIOR.

Crowd Gets Very Wrathy at Umpire Gatewood.

Van Praagh's remnants across the bay got sore at Umpire Gatewood yesterday over a close decision in the eighth inning, and kicked so strenuously that Capt. Cameron was put out of the game. The swamp-jumpers did not have an extra man in uniform and they had to forfeit the game by a score of 9 to 0.

The crowd was feeling in such a loving and amiable mood toward Mr. Gatewood, that the police escorted him to the hotel to protect him from their objectionable advances.

Currie had the longshoremen at his mercy until the eighth. Meanwhile the Woodpeckers had rolled up four runs, and the fans had not even had a chance for one little cheer. But in the eighth, after two men were out, Anderson, O'Dea and Cameron singled, and Leach cleared the bases with a two-bagger. Simmonds went in to bat for Hughes and was called out at first on a close decision. The kicking which followed cost Superior the game.

Off the Bat.

Two rowdy games yesterday.

* * *

What a lovely time Umpire Smith must have had with both Superior and Fargo to handle.

* * *

Perry Werden can't be getting rich quick at the baseball business. He has paid some $30 in fines since coming to the head of the lakes.

* * *

Dan O'Leary only got five hits out of five times up yesterday, and two of them were for two bases each.

* * *

Quillan had an off day yesterday in the field, making three errors, but he showed up well at the bat with two timely hits, one of them a double.

* * *

Koukalik struck out ten men yesterday. After the third inning he was invincible.

* * *

Fargo has two or three gentlemanly players in spite of Werden's bad example. The outfielders had nothing to say yesterday.

* * *

Duluth has about two players on the list who should take lesson from yesterday's game, and learn to let the captain do whatever talking is necessary, which is very little.

* * *

Crookston continues to play good ball, and if fortune favors the Woodpeckers there is no reason they should not climb the percentage table.

DECLINE IN WHEAT

Northwestern Markets Are Very Strong as Compared With Chicago.

Foreigners Very Bearish and Resell New Crop Wheat.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 14.—The wheat market was lower today, but the strength of Northwestern markets as compared with Chicago, was very marked. In Chicago, the July option dragged all morning, and finally closed 1¾c lower, while in Duluth the decline was only 5½c and in Minneapolis but ⅜-½c lower. The Minneapolis mills were reported as buying wheat very strongly. This was about the only bullish feature, however. The crop outlook was better, the weather being favorable. Liverpool being off ½@⅝d, and Paris was unchanged, Buda Pesth was 1c higher and Berlin ½@¾c higher, while Antwerp was unchanged.

Foreigners are very bearish on wheat and this morning a Duluth exporter bought back eight loads of new crop wheat which he sold abroad three months ago. He made the statement that to be in line for selling wheat abroad today, Duluth September would have to be at least 5c lower. The splendid outlook for all crops other than America is creating the bearish feeling in the mind of the foreigners.

Bradstreet reported a decrease of 2,707,000 bus in the world's visible of wheat. East of the Rockies there was a decrease of 2,807,000 bus, and in Europe and afloat an increase of 100,000 bus.

Car receipts of wheat at Duluth were 78, against 96 last year, and at Minneapolis 154, against 110 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 212 against 206 last year. Chicago received 24 bus.

Primary receipts of wheat were 335,000 bus, last year 246,000 bus. Shipments 177,000 bus, last year 140,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 99,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ⅛@¼d higher. July corn in the Chicago market closed 5c lower. July oats closed ⅝@⅝c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 816,000 bus, last year 760,000 bus. Shipments 541,000 bus., last year 564,000 bus. Clearances were 42,000 bus. Bradstreet reported an increase of 972,000 bus. in the world's visible supply of corn.

Trading in wheat on the Duluth board was very dull. The July option opened ⅛c lower at 94c and fell to 93¾c at 9:45. After that for a couple of hours it worked back and forth between 93¾c and 93⅞c and then fell to 93⅝c 12:35. It sold up to 93⅝c at 1 o'clock and closed at 93¾c, a decline of 5¾c. September lost ¾c, closing at 81½c.

Cash offerings were light though receipts are running somewhat larger than a short time ago.

Flax was not very active but the price was very strong and advanced 1¾ for all options.

Oats and rye were unchanged.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Excellent Weather Caused Weakness In Wheat Prices.

Chicago, June 14.—Weakness prevailed in wheat today, due to the lower cables and excellent harvesting weather in the Southwest. The arrival of the first car of new wheat at St. Louis was also an important bear factor. Owing to a lack of demand the volume of business was very light, July opened 1@1c lower at 86@86¼c and declined to 85¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 246 cars against the same number last week and 232 a year ago.

Prices continued to decline throughout the entire session, the demand being extremely light. A smaller decrease in the world's visible supply than had been expected, and bearish reports concerning the French crop, were into weakening influences. July sold off to 84⅝@84¾c and closed at 84¾@⅞c, a net loss of 1¾c.

Commission houses were free sellers of corn the entire day, chiefly under the influence of weather conditions. The market showed no rallying power, closing near the low point. July was down ⅝c at 48⅝@⅝c after touching 48¾@¼c.

In the fact of firm cables a weak undertone was manifested in corn. Perfect growing weather, liberal receipts and a large increase in public and private stocks were influences that created bearish sentiment in the pit. Weakness of wheat was an additional motive for selling. July opened a shade to ⅝c lower at 48⅝@49c to 49¼c, and sold off to 48⅝@⅝c. Local receipts were 614 cars, with 36 of contract grade.

Oats were easier in sympathy with other grains, but prices showed only slight declines. There was some profit-taking following yesterday's advance. July opened unchanged to a shade lower at 29¼c to 29¾@⅜c, and eased off to 29⅝c. Local receipts were 185 cars.

Notwithstanding a firm hog market, provisions were subjected to considerable liquidation, and in consequence declines were made in all products. Weakness of grains and liberal estimates of hogs for tomorrow were the bear factors. September pork opened unchanged to 5c higher at $12.95 to $13 and declined to $12.75. September lard was unchanged to 2½c higher at $7.65 to $7.67½, and sold off to $7. Ribs were unchanged to 2½c lower at $7.50 to $7.52½. The price later dropped to $7.45.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

B. E. Baker's Chicago Grain Letter: Wheat—Wheat developed into a very weak market before the close, losing all of yesterday's gain and more besides. It was ruled by the sentiment of the situation, being without bull influences. The weather was ideal and the cash and crop news was bearish. The government weekly bulletin on winter wheat was favorable and it described spring wheat conditions as very promising. Private advices from the Northwest were of the same tenor. The consumptive cash trade is dull. On the other hand further free purchases have been made of new wheat for July delivery here which had a depressing effect upon that option. Our private Antwerp cables estimates the French crop at 12½ per cent larger than a year ago. Budapest was 1 higher and Berlin ¾ higher. Local receipts, 34 cars with the same number estimated for tomorrow.

Corn—The universal bullish sentiment which dominated corn yesterday gave place to the revise conditions today. At the opening selling orders were urgently in excess of the buying and a quick break of ½c followed. Trade was light with the September strong. The bearish features were the two million bus increase in local stocks last week, the slow shipping demand and the warmer weather over all the belt, which offset for the present at least, the probability of a lighter movement by the end of the week. Government wkly bulltin rports slow growth in Kansas and Nebraska and much of the crop still weedy although the crop is in an improved state of cultivation. In Missouri, Illinois and Indiana the fields are generally clean. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 266 cars.

Oats ruled fairly steady at from ¼c to ½c decline. There was some gossip of the crop heading out short in this state, but the government weekly bulletin says the outlook is very promising, with the oats heading in Missouri, Kansas and Tennessee. The sample market was dull with prices ruling from steady to a shade lower. The shipping demand was fair. Estimate 1003 cars for tomorrow.

Broomhall's weekly foreign crop report: Conditions in Eastern Europe are slightly improved, but in the Western half there are increasing complaints of drouth.

United Kingdom—Wheat is looking rather better.

France—Some complaints of plant being thin and damage to crop by storms, but on whole condition not seriously lowered.

Germany—Complaints of drouth increasing. Affecting rye and oats, particularly rye.

Russia—Reports from Southern districts mostly favorable.

Roumania—Crop reports continue pessimistic.

Hungary—Weather past week improved and farmers most hopeful.

Bulgaria—Weather now favorable.

Italy—Complaints of dry weather.

Spain—Weather continues drouthy; crop will be poor. In largest wheat districts, however, fair yield is expected.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—It was a heavy market from the opening to the close. Liverpool showed considerable weakness on crop situation and our market was further depressed by continued fine weather and almost no cash demand. The weekly government crop, while nothing some delay to harvest by rains in the Southwest is yet bearish. The indications are that wheat will move quite freely as soon as harvesting is completed in the Southwest and the movement in Northwest is increasing. On conditions as they are, we look for lower prices.

Corn—It is the same scalping market, weak one day and strong the next. Country offerings are still irregular and uncertain but current receipts are in excess of demand which is only moderate. While weather is a little cool, it is early yet for the crop to suffer from that cause. There will be plenty of time for hot weather later on. Taking all the crops into consideration, the weather is about as favorable as it could be.

Oats—Considering the weakness in other grains it was a fairly steady market. The July held rather the best and was without much selling pressure. We are inclined to think September and December oats at present discount will not hurt to buy them on weak spots.

Provisions—It was a natural reaction after the advance of the past ten days. Receipts are also a little more than last year and estimates for tomorrow are liberal. There was scattered liquidation and quite a little re-selling by packers who have been recent buyers. The whole situation as we see it is a matter of receipts of hogs. There is a fair demand for meats but lard demand is by no means strong.

"It looks to me as though the holders of cash wheat in Chicago had overstaid their market," said H. S. Kennedy, the well known millers agent from Buffalo, who has been here to oversee the shipments of wheat bought several weeks ago. "During the last few weeks the crop prospect east of here, while still moderate, has improved so much that country offerings of wheat have increased, and we have been getting country run No. 2 red whter wheat at Buffalo at a cost of about $1.06 there. The movement is small but it is enough to supply current demands. That is equal to $1.00 Chicago, and I believe your No. 2 red here is held at $1.08. The Chicago No. 1 Northern is held at 98c, while cash wheat in Duluth is about four cents cheaper. These things make the Chicago cash prices look high."

To Leave Duluth.

Rev. R. A. Montgomery, pastor of the Glen Avon Presbyterian church, has tendered his resignation to accept a call to the leading Presbyterian church at Xenia, O. A meeting of the Duluth presbytery has been called for Sunday, June 26, when Mr. Montgomery's resignation will be accepted.

Rev. Mr. Montgomery has been a very popular pastor at the Hunter's Park church, and will be missed, but it is understood that the field to which he will go is a much larger one, and the call is regarded in the light of meritorious promotion.

ADVANCE IN STOCKS

Market Was Dull But There Was a Good Undertone.

Closing Quite Active and Strong at About Best Prices.

New York, June 14.—Opening prices in the stock market here today did not respond to the advances established in London and the principal railroad stocks were slightly lower. Small gains in some of the industrials and specialties made the opening tone irregular.

Spirited buying of the local tractions gave a momentary stimulus to the market but the railroads fell off again when the leaders stopped rising. Manhattan was unusually active at an advance of 2½. Metropolitan Street Railroad gained 1⅛ and Brooklyn Transit ⅞. Lackawanna opened 3 points higher.

Large buying of Reading hardened the market and the more active stocks rose ½ to ¾ over last night. Hocking Valley, Canada Southern, Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis preferred and Realty preferred gained about a point. Anaconda fell 2, Ice preferred 1¼, St. Louis Southwestern preferred 1 and Chicago & Alton ⅞. Bonds were irregular.

Stocks were held firmly around the best prices of the morning although dealings were reduced to nominal proportions. Chicago Great Western preferred "A" advanced 2¾ and International Paper preferred 1. St. Paul moved up ⅞ at 1 o'clock and O. & W. was taken freely around 26.

Unimportant stocks contributed the widest fluctuations. International Power advanced 1, Republic Steel preferred 1¼ and Snuff preferred 1. Some easing off was perceptible in the coolers and Pacifics.

The decline was checked by new buying of Manhattan which carried it to 145½ and other active stocks to the top level of the day. Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Wabash, Atchison, Rock Island preferred, Northwestern and Pennsylvania and St. Louis & Frisco preferred rose from ⅞ to 1 over last night. New York, Chicago & St. Louis second preferred dropped 3. The closing was strong and quite active.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Waldorf to B. E. Baker: Commenting on yesterday's developments of the stock exchange a broker in close touch with recent movements in the market said last night: "Quite a number of professional traders turned sellers this morning, some taking profits, others going short, on the theory that the market is still narrow, a reaction of a couple of points at least was reasonably certain. It is significant, however, that these offerings were well taken. There was no real liquidation. Therefore, I expect to see prices improving again, although possibly not until some further hesitation and irregularity. It is generally remarked that the sudden weakness in United States Steel preferred, on the opening of the week gave the market a temporary set-back. Bear operators made capital of it arguing that it reflected increased uncertainty to the next dividend, a reduction in which, it is conceded even by bulls would for a time at least weaken the speculative situation. But in this connection it is to be noted that people who a month ago were very positive that at the July meeting of the directors Steel preferred would be put on a 5 per cent basis are now less confident of this outcome, many of them having information that the regular 1¾ per cent will be declared. At all events this uncertainty, accordin gto unbiased critics has not the serious bearing on the general market which it had a few weeks ago.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The absence of any pressure to sell during the past month or two and a moderate buying demand among investors, has caused Wall street to be a little more hopeful of the future. The offerings of good stocks are limited and readily find a market. But though the present tendency of prices seems to be upward and many recent developments have been favorable, there are no substantial reasons for a permanent or prolonged upward movement. Recent letters cover the situation from my point of view. I look for a moderately active trading market with gradual upward trend, until towards the first of July. During midsummer, there will probably be more or less break, the extent of which will depend on the result of the Democratic convention. A bull market likely in September or October, this forecast is based on the present outlook and may be changed if new developments arise.

TEMPLARS MEET

Grand Lodge of Independent Order In Session Here.

Addressed By High Officers of Order—The Program.

The grand lodge of the Independent Order of Good Templars of Minnesota is now in session in Duluth, with forty-five delegates from different parts of the state in attendance. The meeting, which will come to a close tomorrow evening, was called to order at 10 o'clock this morning, at Sloan's hall, corner of Twentieth avenue west and Superior street, by Rev. C. W. B. Ellis, of Hawley, Minn. Rev. Ellis is grand chief templar, and is also conference evangelist of the M. E. church.

Today only routine business is being taken up. Neither will there be any special features tomorrow, except for a banquet, which will probably be held in the evening.

Last night the visiting delegates were tendered a reception in convention hall. The address of welcome was delivered by Rev. Roderick J. Mooney. Other addresses were made by Rev. C. K. Dykeman, of Dakota, Minn., past grand chief templar and right worthy grand secretary of the state order, and by B. F. Parker, of Milwaukee, right worthy grand secretary for the international order.

All the speakers took temperance as their subject and spoke very interestingly, Rev. Mooney in particular delivered an eloquent address. There was music and refreshments were served.

At this morning's session, Rev. C. H. Crawford, of Minneapolis, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, delivered greeting from the league, and briefly addressed the grand lodge on the importance of all temperance organizations uniting their forces and working together. He spoke of his pleasure at visiting Duluth, and said he did not see how anyone in the Zenith City could patronize a saloon when several cubic miles of Lake Superior's crystal water stretched out at their feet.

Tonight or tomorrow night the delegates will attend the state Sunday school convention in a body. Some will remain in the city over Thursday to attend the convention, which will be in session here.

Tomorrow the election of officers will be held. The present officers of the grand lodge, all of whom are present at the meeting, are as follows:

Grand chief templar, Rev. C. W. B. Ellis, Hawley; past grand chief templar, N. T. Moon, Ada; grand council, Rev. C. K. Dykeman, Dakota, Minn.; G. R. T., Lizzie P. Cole; G. R. S., Emma M. James; G. S. J. T., Irving E. Thompson; grand chaplain, Jessie Barnes; grand treasurer, A. G. Macauley; G. E. S., J. J. Flikkie; grand guard, T. J. Froyland; grand sentinel, E. Sloan; G. M.; W. W. Smedley; G. M. K. C. Sloan; G. D. M., Mrs. O. J. Ogg.

The Good Templars' order in the state of Minnesota has about 6000 members. The Duluth membership is 300. A delegate to the international supreme lodge, which will meet in Europe next year, will be elected tomorrow.

The City Without Strikes.

San Francisco presents an extraordinary and significant new phase of the labor problem. For two years past, while other cities have been having serious industrial conflicts, not one of importance has occurred there. With the introduction of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, over fifty years ago, a new phase in curing stomach ills was presented, and during those years it has demonstrated its wonderful curative powers so conclusively that it is now recognized everywhere as the leading family medicine in the world. For poor appetite, coated tongue, bad breath, sour stomach, constipated bowels, indigestion, dyspepsia, insomnia, or malaria fever and ague, the Bitters is unequalled. Be sure to try it. The genuine has our private stamp over the neck of the bottle.

WILL GET A PREFERENCE

"St. Louis county will look largely for its supply of teachers, this coming year, from among the list of those who attend the summer school at the normal," said County Superintendent of Schools A. T. Park, this morning.

"There will be something like 50 vacancies in the county schools, and, between teachers of equal qualifications, the teacher who has been a regular attendant at the state summer school for teachers here, will be given the preference."

The state summer school for the four counties of St. Louis, Itasca, Lake and Cook, will begin in the state normal school here next Monday morning and will continue through until July 29.

This is the first time that Duluth has ever been given the privilege of a state summer school in the normal, and under the direction of the normal school faculty. A larger sum of money is also available for the summer school this year than ever before and on it success will depend the possibility of getting a teachers summer school here every season hereafter.

President Bohannon, of the normal school, who will be conductor of the summer school, says that present indications point to an even larger attendance than was at first anticipated. Letters of inquiry are being received not only from teachers in the four counties named, but from those in other parts of the state, outside of this district, who are anxious to take up the summer school work here rather than nearer their homes.

It has been decided that those teachers taking the review course will not have any entrance examination. They may take up such line of work as may be desirable and that meets with the approval of the conductor.

HENRY MAYHEW ILL.

Very Low With Pneumonia at St. Luke's.

Henry Mayhew, of Grand Marais, is lying at St. Luke's hospital in a critical condition from a severe attack of penumonia. He was reported to be very low last evening, but a slight change for the better has taken place today.

Mr. Mayhew spent the winter in the hospital, but insisted upon returning to his home this spring, where he contracted a cold which developed into pneumonia.

He and his brother, Dr. Thomas Mayhew are two of the oldest settlers in this part of the country, having resided at Grand Marais for the past thirty years. They are both over 70 years of age. Dr. Thomas Mayhew is also in feeble health.

THE GREATEST PREVENTIVE OF DISEASE.

Rea Bros.' Cascarin, Made From Roots, Barks, Herbs and Berries.

Disease never enters until the system is unable to defend itself. Nor does Nature strike without giving fair warning. These warnings are so plain that a child can observe them. Slight fever, coated tongue, loss of appetite, headache, pain in the limbs, slight jaundice, depression of spirits, sleeplessness, troublesome dreams vertigo, buzzing in the ears and irregular heart action. Do you recognize the symptoms? They warn you that you have intestinal indigestion resulting from fermentation or decomposition of food. You need a laxative tonic that will clear out the cause of the evil and tone up the irritated walls of the canals. If not attended to at once, serious illness may result. Cascarin is what you need. It is a mild liquid laxative, easily taken, being pleasant to the taste. Cascarin does not gripe and leaves no unpleasant effects. It cleanses the whole system, thereby preventing disease. Try a bottle today. You will find it the best laxative you ever used and the only one worth using. At all druggists, one size, 50c.

ARMORY, Tomorrow Evening.

Rev. J. M. Cleary, of Minneapolis, will lecture on

"AMERICAN SYMPATHY IN THE RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR."

Under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus, for the benefit of St. James' Orphanage.

PLANKING ROTTEN.

Horse Breaks Through Fifth Avenue Dock.

Thet fact that the freight and passenger dock at the foot of Fifth avenue west is sadly in need of repairs, as related in The Herald a short time ago, was emphasized this morning, when one of a team of horses hitched to a light delivery wagon broke through the planking on the approach to the dock and narrowly escaped breaking his legs. The plank broke squarely in two in the middle. It, like the rest of the planking in the structure, was old and rotten.

People who use the dock daily say that it is in a very dangerous condition, and that it will be only a matter of time before the city will have a damage suit on its hands unless the repairs which are so urgently needed are made. It is suggested that an arc lamp be placed on the dock, and that a railing be put along the west side, which is several feet from the ground. The boards are loose and a person stepping on their ends is liable to be precipitated to the ground below at serious injury to himself.

OFFICERS ELECTED

By the Crookston District Epworth League.

Frazee, Minn., June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following are the officers elected for the ensuing year for the Crookston district Epworth League at the Detroit convention: President, J. S. Uland, Fergus Falls; first vice president, W. B. Auxer, Moorhead; second vice president, Rev. C. H. Flesher, Thief River Falls; third vice president, Mrs. John Knight, Sebeka; fourth vice president, Mary A. Hanson, Detroit; secretary, Rev. G. E. Tindall, Warren; corresponding secretary, Rev. J. T. Brabner Smith, Frazee; treasurer, J. G. Nunn, Detroit; junior superintendent, Mrs. L. Dodds, Crookston; advisory board, Revs. John Watson, W. H. Prugh, George E. Satterlee.

Thief River Falls was selected as the next place for the convention in June, 1905.

Bishop Isaac W. Joyce returned to Minneapolis at the close of the convention. His sermon Sunday was preached to a large congregation in the Congregational church in the morning. The congregation both wept and smiled, and it was conceded that it was the greatest sermon ever heard in the Northwest. Bishop Joyce said he was glad to be reappointed to Minnesota and to Minneapolis. He loved the people and they said they wanted him as resident bishop and the committee put him down at Minneapolis for another four years. He said his life would be spared for that term and he hoped to be of added worth to Minnesota and Minneapolis.

EXCITING COMMENT.

Many Interested In $150,000 Sacrifice Sale at Burrows.

Each day a keener interest is taken in the M. S. Burrows big sacrifice sale, which differs from most events of this nature in that all the staple articles of merchandise are also included. This means that every article on the entire three floors is marked at a tremendous sacrifice, absolutely without reservation. While the assortments are so vast that the wants of all may be supplied, it is advisable to come as early as possible in order to obtain the full benefit of the complete assortments.

SISTER'S TRICK

But All Came Out Right.

How a sister played a trick that brought rosy health to a coffee fiend is an interesting tale:

"I was a coffee fiend—a tremelving, nervous, physical wreck yet clinging to the poison that stole away my strength because for a fleeting moment it stimulated my weakened powers. I mocked at Postum and would have none of it.

"One day my sister, Mrs. U. S. Showalter, substituted a cup of crisp, hot Postum for my morning cup of coffee, but did not tell me what it was. I noticed the richness of it and remarked that the coffee tasted fine, but my sister did not tell me I was drinking Postum for fear I might not take any more.

"She kept the secret and kept giving me Postum instead of coffee until I grew stronger, more tireless, got a better color in my sallow cheeks and a clearness to my eyes, then she told me of the health-giving, nerve-strengthening life-saver she had given me in place of my morning coffee. From that time I became a disciple of Postum and no words can do justice to the good this cereal drink can do. I will not try to tell it for only after having used it one can be convinced of its merits." Name given by Postum company, Battle Creek, Mich.

"Ten days' trial shows Postum's power to rebuild what coffee has destroyed. There's a reason.

WOULD SEE DULUTH

Minneapolis Realty Dealers May Come Here Next Week.

Would Take Advantage of Low Rate For Convention.

Half a hundred real estate men from Minneapolis are expected to come to Duluth during the time of the Democratic state convention, taking advantage of the cheap excursion rate. Inquiry has been made through the Great Northern road as to what entertainment might be provided for them if they come and the Commercial club will offer them a boat ride and other features of entertainment to be determined later.

The men who are considering such a junket are members of the Real Estate exchange of Minenapolis, who wish to see Duluth as she is and look at the possibilities for their line of business here, as well as to pay a neighborly and fraternal visit to the men of the profession in this city.

In all probability the visitors will arrive here on the afternoon of June 21, a week from today, over the Great Northern road, landing in Duluth about 2 p. m. The boat ride will be given the same afternoon from about 3 until 5 o'clock.

If there should be no hitch in the plans and the real estate men should come in the expected force, it will be a very important feature of the convention period, and second in importance only to the convention itself.

There are a great many men in Minneapolis real estate circles who have never seen Duluth since her greatest strides have been taken, although it is understood that a number of them have frequently made deals here by correspondence, and these men are particularly anxious to get an adequate idea of the city's growth and possibilities, especially as applied to their business.

The men are expected to remain a couple of days, and will probably arrange to visit the state convention in a body to get a glimpse of how politicians do their work.

Part of the News.

Herald want ads. are "the little busy bees of publicity"—and they may be harnessed at your service.

"Calamity is man's true touch-stone," and to lose your job is often to find one twice as good if you try The Herald "want ad. way."

Publicity that is still privacy — your friends need not know that you want another job if you advertise for it anonymously.

What you want and what you will get are two things which grow to resemble each other only after you have used The Herald want ad. columns.

The house you would most like to buy is probably not known to be for sale—but a "real estate want" ad. would probably uncover the fact.

FIVE HUNDRED WOMEN AND CHILDREN LOSE LIVES IN AWFUL CATASTROPHE ON STEAMER

Steamer Samuel Slocum, With Church Excursion Aboard, Burned to Water's Edge.

Hundreds of Women and Children Plunged Overboard to Escape the Flames.

Frantic Cries of People Burning to Death Could Be Heard Above Every Sound.

Many Children Who Jumped Overboard Were Carried Away In the Swift Current.

New York, June 15.—Five hundred persons, mostly children, perished today by the burning of the excursion steamer Gen. Slocum near Hell Gate, in the East river.

The Slocum, with the annual Sunday school excursion of St. Mark's German Lutheran church of this city on board, was proceeding up the river to one of the many resorts of Long Island sound. When near One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, persons on shore saw smoke and flames spring from the upper part of the crowded steamer. A panic ensued on the boat almost instantly. The crowds on the forward deck began to spring overboard or to crowd to the after part of the boat.

The screams of the terrified passengers could be heard on shore, and hundreds of small boats immediately put off to the rescue. Owing to the rocks on either side of the channel at this point, it had been impossible to beach the ship. The captain stuck to his post at the wheel and headed the vessel straight up the river for North Brother island, where she was put aground in the shallow water. Several hundred feet of open water still lay between the burning steamer and the shore, and many persons perished either in the water or on the burning vessel after she had been beached. It was estimated that the steamer carried more than 2000 persons. She was the largest excursion steamer in these waters and could carry 4000 persons.

The Slocum sailed from the foot of Third street, East river, shortly after 9 o'clock. The exact point she had reached when the flames were discovered in the forward part of the boat was off the "Sunken Meadows" at the extreme east end of Randall's island. So quick was the spread of the flames that the captain of the Slocum could not turn and was forced to make head-on for North Brother island under full steam.

By the time the Slocum reached One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street, the excursionists, driven to the rail, many of them with their clothing on fire, began to jump overboard by twos and threes. When One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street had been reached, heat from the fire had become so intense that men, women and children plunged overboard by the score. There was a terrific crash when the boat was beached.

The boat was beached at the reef at the northern end of North Brother island, where she rapidly burned to the water's edge.

It is said the fire started in the lunch counter in the forward part of the boat. When the alarm spread among the passengers, the hurricane deck was crowded, and when off One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street, this deck collapsed. Many persons were thrown into the water, but hundreds were precipitatel into the lower deck, which itself was a mass of women and children. A tug of the New York Central railroad saved nearly a score through the heroism of some unknown man. This man stood on the paddle-wheel box of the Slocum and passed women and children to the tug until he was driven back by flames. He then jumped onto the tug himself. Neither police nor firemen when they arrived, waited to remove coats or clothes, but jumped overboard and saved a great many who would otherwise have drowned.

Many of the bodies recovered were horribly burned. Wreckers say that it will be hours before the fire in the hold of the boat is out and the bodies there can be recovered. Both firemen and wreckers say that the greatest loss of life, extending into the hundreds, will be found in the hold.

Many of those picked up alive in the river will die in the hospitals. Most of them were frightfully burned, having delayed leaping from the boat until their clothing caught fire.

Some died in the improvised ambulances, in which they were hurried from the shore.

Every man on board who could swim went overboard loaded down with children. Many of these heroes lost their lives, because, burdened as they were, they could not make headway against the overpowering swirl of the tide as it rushed from the East river into the sound.

John Edell, 22 years old, one of the survivors of the disaster, gave the following account of his terrible experience, his mother and little brother being drowned before his eyes:

"When we left the pier the decks were packed to the limit of their capacity. The band was playing, the children were frolicking about and we were all having a fine time.

"As we neared Hell Gate, children were called down to the lower deck where ice cream and soda water was served.

"The children were falling over each other in an effort to get to the tables which held refreshments. With my mother and little brother Paul, I went to the engine room to watch the machinery.

"Suddenly and without the least warning there was a burst of flames from the furnace room that rushed up through the engine room and flashed out about us. The flames spread with the rapidity of an exp[illegible]on, setting fire to the clothing of the women and children who were grouped about the engine room watching the machinery.

"There was the most terrible panic as the burning women and children rushed out among those surrounding the ice cream and soda water tables screaming with pain.

"In the terrific scramble my mother and little brother were swept from me and carried toward the side where the children and women with their clothes burning had begun to jump into the water.

"But in a moment after the flames had burst from the engine room great numbers began to jump overboard. The women were wild with fright, and, snatching their children to them, leaped into the whirlpools that carried them toward the rocks on both shores.

"I endeavored for a few minutes to break through the mad crush and get to my mother and little brother, but I was swept into one corner of the boat and held there unable to move.

"As the boat kept on her way, the breeze drove the flames toward the after part of the ship, where those who had not jumped overboard were huddled together. It seemed but a few seconds before the flames had swept down upon the children, who were struggling about the ice cream tables and set their clothing ablaze.

"They all rushed to the after part of the ship in a stampede that carried those who were near the rail overboard against their will.

"At one time it seemed to me as if the women and children were pouring over the sides like a waterfall. As they made for the shore the captain blew his whistle in one continuous blast and soon boats of all descriptions were making for us from every side of the river.

"I was rescued by a launch just as the boat was settled close to the shore.

"When she was grounded the flames had spread over the entire upper and lower decks. There were only a few spots on the boat untouched by the flames and in these were piled up men and women who had fainted and, falling had pinned others to the deck.

"The men from the tugs who could get near the steamer shouted for those on board to jump, and then the small boats picked them up by the score."

A GREAT NAVAL ENGAGEMENT IN PROGRESS BETWEEN JAPANESE AND RUSSIAN SHIPS IN KOREAN STRAITS

Admiral Skrydloff Known to Have Sailed Out With Vladivostok Fleet.

The Battle Will Probably Be Decisive One---Results Not Yet Known.

London, June 15.—A dispatch to the Central News from Tokio filed this (Wednesday) afternoon says a naval engagement is now in progress off Tsuschima island, in the Korean straits, between three Russian cruisers, which escaped from Vladivostok, and a number of Japanese ships. No details have yet been received.

The Central News dispatch adds that the Vladivostok squadron was first reported June 14 from Oki island, (off Kioto, Japan, in the Sea of Japan).

Later in the day cannonading was heard northwest of Nagato (on the Japanese coast, in the Straits of Korea).

The captain of a Japanese merchant ship reports this morning that his ship was fired upon by a Russian warship. Heavy cannonading was heard early this morning in the neighborhood of Oki island, and subsequently came news of the engagement already referred to in the Tokio dispatch.

Tokio, June 15.—Private advices have been received here from Katsumoto, a town at the north end of Oki island, in Krusenstern strait, to the effect that an engagement was in progress between Japanese and Russian warships.

Tokio, June 15.—The entrance to the harbor at Port Arthur having been cleared of obstructions, is now open for the passage of ships in and out. Yesterday the Russian protected cruiser Novik steamed out to sea and engaged with vessels of the Japanese blockading fleet.

Nagasaki, June 15.—A telegram received from Oki island says that Japanese warships have engaged a Russian squadron near there and that the result of the encounter is not yet known.

Tokio, June 15.—It is reported here that the Japanese protected cruiser Niytaka engaged the Russian Vladivostok squadron, off Tsu island, in the strait between Korea and Japan. This report, however, lacks confirmation. The Japanese transports Ugo and Fuyo, homeward bound, met the Russian vessels near Oki island. The Russians pursued them and fired sixteen shots at the Japanese ships. The transports escaped and reached Katsumoto.

Tokio, June 15.—The Japanese transports, outward bound from Shimonoseki, met the Russian warships this morning outside the strait of Korea. The Russians fired eighteen shots at the Japanese ships. One transport escaped. The fate of the other two is not known. It is believed at Sasebo that a naval engagement is imminent.

LEAVES VLADIVOSTOK.

Admiral Skrydloff Sails Out With Squadron.

St. Petersburg, June 15.—No information is obtainable here regarding the reported engagement between the Russian Vladivostok squadron and a Japanese squadron in the Korean straits. But it is quite likely that a naval fight has occurred or is about to occur. Vice Admiral Skrydloff has left Vladivostok with the armored cruisers Gromoboi, Rossia and Rurik and some torpedo craft.

As this fact is already known abroad, the Associated Press betrays no confidence of the authorities here in making this definite announcement. If the report that the Russian protected cruiser Novik made a sortie from Port Arthur yesterday is true, it demonstrates that the entrance is free and doubtless for the purpose of effecting a juncture with Skrydloff's fleet. The news of a decisive sea battle may therefore arrive at any hour.

Before Admiral Skrydloff left Vladivostok the Russian protected cruiser Bogatyr, which went on the rocks off Cape Gamova, was hauled off and towed into the harbor of Vladivostok. She is now in dock there.

REVIEW OF WAR.

St. Petersburg Magazine Says Russians Are Well Satisfied.

St. Petersburg, June 15.—The Vazvedchik, the leading service magazine, in reviewing the war, arrives at the conclusion that after three and a half months the Russians find themselves exactly where they expected to be, while the Japanese are behind hand. The Russian flanks at Vladivostok and Port Arthur remain unshaken, the magazine points out, and the main army at Liao Yang is being constantly and rapidly reinforced.

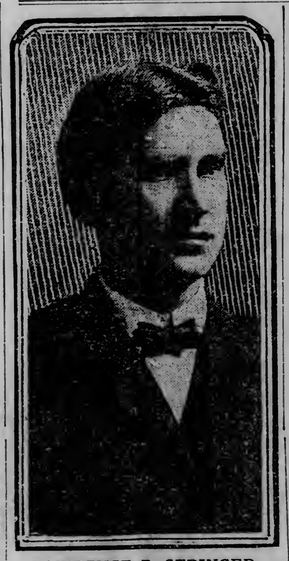

On the other hand the Japanese have accomplished little despite the fact that they took the offensive at the start. Their obvious plan to rout Gen. Kuropatkin before he becomes too strong has been delayed by the necessity of assuring the mastery of the sea, which is imperilled as long as the Port Arthur squadron remains in being. This fact and none other, in the opinion of the magazine, is responsible for the siege of Port Arthur.

Had the squadron not been there the Japanese would not have stopped to reduce the fortress, but would have combined their land forces to crush Gen. Kuropatkin.

Discussing the chances of Port Arthur holding out, the Vazvedchik says:

"The Japanese hitherto have displayed a fanatical desire to sacrifice their lives for their country, and some of the survivors of the battle of Kiulencheng wrote home, deploring their failure to die on the battlefield.

"Such fanaticism must be taken into account as a strategical and tactical factor. We cannot count indefinitely on holding the passage against such a foe. No fortress is really impregnable if its assailant is willing to move enough men against it. As it happens this Japanese fanaticism is eminently suitable to the enemy's present plan of campaign, which hinges upon the rapid conduct of operations but which is worthless in the slow and earnest game they will be compelled to play against Kuropatkin on the arrival of Russian reinforcements."

LAWRENCE B. STRINGER, Democratic Nominee for Governor of Illinois.

LARGER REINFORCEMENTS

To Be Placed at Gen. Kuropatkin's Disposal.

St. Petersburg, June 15.—The appointment of Lieut. Gen. Leonidas Dembowski as commander of the Fifth East Siberian army corps, is evidence that larger reinforcements are to be placed at Gen. Kuropatkin's disposal. The four corps originally formed of Siberian troops are mobilized in Manchuria and other drafts have been sent out to the far East. The organization of the new corps, independent of the Russian corps, now ordered out from European Russia, shows that Kuropatkin now has almost 200,000 troops, irrespective of frontier and railroad guards, and that probably he has an effective army of 160,000 men at Liao Yang.

Gen. Dembowski is a distinguished

POSTMASTER GENERAL PAYNE COLLAPSES IN CHICAGO HOTEL

Just Before Time For Convening Republican National Committee.

Illness Will Preclude Possibility of His Taking Active Part.

Senator Scott of Virginia Will Be the Executive Head.

Chicago, June 15.—Postmaster General Henry C. Payne, chairman of the Republican national committee, collapsed at the Auditorium Annex today. Mr. Payne has not been in good health for some time. He recently took an ocean trip for the purpose of recuperating. He was in his room when the attack came.

His ailment, apparently, was of an neurasthenic character.

The time was shortly before the hour set for the convening of the Republican national committee, over which Mr. Payne expected to preside.

It was said that Chairman Payne's illness was such as to preclude the possibility of his taking active part in at least the preliminary work of the convention. News of his prostration was immediately telegraphed to Washington. It was stated that Senator Scott, of West Virginia, would probably succeed as executive head of the committee and would preside at the meeting of the committee this afternoon.

Chicago, June 15.—Today marked the beginning of Republican national convention week. Almost all of the national committeemen were in Chicago. Their first meeting, however, was intended solely for organiaztion purposes and the passing of resolutions on the death of Senator Hanna and Senator Quay. Tomorrow claims of warring delegations will be taken up from eight or ten states. The contests will be introduced alphabetically, Delaware coming first.

POSTMASTER GENERAL H. C. PAYNE.

CRUISER GOES IN SEARCH OF VESSEL.

San Francisco, June 15.—The cruiser Tacoma has sailed on a long cruise. Recent orders from Washington directed Capt. Nicholson to go in search of the missing steamer Conemaugh, and in order to ascertain definitely the fate of the vessel the Tacoma may go as far as the eastern coast of the United States. The Conemaugh, laden with a full cargo of sugar, sailed from Honolulu last January, and after touching at Coronet, Chile, twenty days later, was never heard from. It is believed that she foundered off Cape Horn during a heavy gale.

CUT RATE PASSENGERS.

New York, June 15.—The steamer Friederich der Grosse, which arrived today from Bremen and Cherbourg, brought among her passengers 153 cut rate steerage passengers, who were added to the great throng already at Ellis Island.

REPORTS READ

Opening Business Session of Sunday School Association.

President Irish and Other Officials Review Work.

After a short devotional service, conducted by Rev. S. C. Davis, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist church of Duluth, the morning session of the State Sunday School convention, at the Pilgrim Congregational church, was devoted to reports from various officers and short talks from various delegates.

President Jeff H. Irish, of Detroit, Minn., talked of the state organization and its possibilities. He emphasized the difference between the American Sunday School union and the State Sunday School association. Many people he said could not disabuse their minds that the two are entirely separate organizations, neither can they get out of mind the idea that the state association is a union.

He explained that the state association takes up the work where the American Sunday School union leaves off, it takes the schools of the various denominations and brings them together for more efficient work. Mr. Irish claimed that this method enables the schools to better perform the work that has been intrusted to them.

"There are no limitations to the possibilities of our work," said President Irish. It will be just what we make it. We look back over the record of what has been accomplished and form some idea of what will be accomplished in the future.

"In Duluth and Minneapolis they have splendid Sunday school organizations and they should have everything possible to make their work effective in the highest degree. It is through holding these conventions, institutes and meetings that we try to fit the Sunday school teachers to do the work in their respective schools. We study to teach God's word. We pave the way for the bringing of the little ones from the homes to the Sunday schools, and to place the Bible in the hands of the people. We aim to bring our Sunday school pupils to a knowledge of their Savior and to bring about a feeling of perfect harmony among the teachers in our schools."

President Irish touched on the excellent work done by the system of house to house visitation and recommended that more of the Sunday schools try the plan.

Field Worker John Orchard of Fargo, was unable to be present, so his report was read by Mrs. Hobart, secretary and primary superintendent. Mr. Orchard works six and a half months of the year for the Minnesota association and the other five and a half months for the North Dakota association.

Mr. Orchard's report was interesting, stating in the opening that it would be an impossibility for him to sum up fully the work of the organization which has touched nearly every Protestant home in Minnesota.

He explained that the time of the field worker is divided between Minnesota and North Dakota. August, September and October, February, March and April and half of January belong to Minnesota.

The summer schools were begun in August. While they were not as well attended as might have been, great interest was manifested. These were held as follows: Nine counties at Minnetonka, at the Baptist summer assembly, eight counties at Melissa, twelve counties at Fairmount, and twelve counties at Bemidji.

Mr. Orchard then discussed in detail the work and interest in different counties of the state. He left reports for such counties as not covered by him to the other field workers. As a resume of his work of the past year he gave the following:

County conventions attended, 60; district conventions conducted, 8; institutes held, 27; new counties organized, 10; counties reorganized, 3; counties coming back into line, 2; local conferences attended, 7; children's meetings conducted, 8; individual schools visited, 29 addresses delivered (evening), 130; sermons preached, 17; day sessions, number of topics, 182; round tables conducted, 89; special literature prepared, pieces, 22,000, circulars sent out, 4600; letters written, 757; post cards mailed, 750; miles traveled, nearly 21,000.

Hotel, car fares, stage, etc, cost	$319 36
Offerings received at conventions	108 42
Actual cost to state	210 94

* * *

Mrs. Hobart's report was largely supplemental of that of Mr. Orchard, with whom she worked throughout the various parts of the state. On Mrs. Hobart falls a greater part of the office work, and she urged on the convention the necessity of making some provision for having somebody to stay at the office all the time and look after the correspondence and visitors.

Mrs. Hobart's summary of her work, not touched on by the field worker's report, was as follows:

Letters written	5,480
Cards and leaflets sent out	20,000
County conventions attended	35
Addresses delivered	120
Lessons to teachers	57
Round tables conducted	45
Conferences attended	20
Primary lessons outlined	49
Primary unions attended	5
Counties visited	27

Mrs. Hobart explained that her report covered a period of about fifteen months.

A. E. Cadwell, of Minneapolis, was appointed recording secretary. To facilitate the work of the convention, a special program committee, comprised of Mrs. Hobart, C. J. Hunt and Dr. Leo Krafts, was appointed by the president to see that provision is made in case of failure on the part of speakers to appear.

The treasurer's report, presetned by H. B. Avery, of Minneapolis, showed the total receipts of the association for the year to be $2519.24, while the expenditures have ben $2403.67, leaving a balance in the treasury of $115.57. He distributed printed lists showing the contributions made by counties during the past year.

The report of E. J. Krafft, acting chairman of the finance committee, went more into the detail of the financial affairs of the association. He explained where, owing to the immense work the association has had, it has been impossible to avoid getting it in debt, and recommended that when opportunity is given during the present convention, the delegates be liberal in contributions and pledges, in order to provide funds for the work of the coming year.

Words of greeting to the visiting delegates were given by Mrs. Waterman, on behalf of the state W. C. T. U., and Mrs. Thompson, of the state Audobon society.

In the absence of other features, which had been arranged for the morning program, Rev. J. Percival Huggett, of Iowa, gave an eloquent and interesting address on the topic "The Unity of Personality."

The idea he had in mind, Mr. Huggett said, was very simple, and that was the same Tommy Jones who yesterday played ball, today sits in the Sunday school class and tomorrow goes fishing, has the same personality all the time. He claimed that as Tommy Jones goes through life he gathers from this and that one a little of those things that go to make up his personality.

"All the instruction in our common schools and our Sunday schools," said Mr. Huggett, "must find its place among the facts and experiences in the consciousness of the child.

"We shall recognize the fact that we have to deal with what the boy or girl already is, and we must either modify or add to it as the occasion demands.

"We are building every day for eternity a temple that we may not see. Believing as much as I do in conversion, this is also my belief, that every experience of evil leaves its stain, while every experience of good leaves its blessing. We must teach our pupils they cannot afford to deal with the evil."

* * *

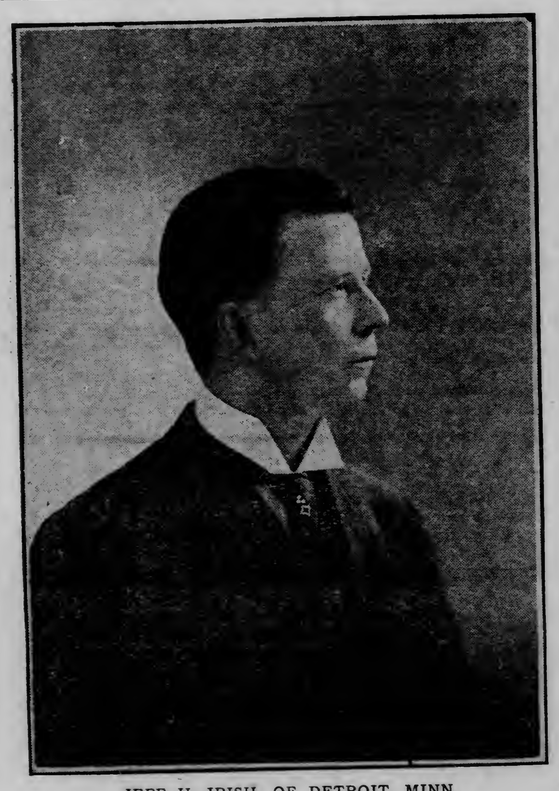

S. S. Williamson, chairman of the entertainment committee, told the visiting deegates where the principal points of interest of the city are located, and how to reach them.

In the absence of E. W. Van Meter, a civil engineer, who was to show the teachers and superintendents how to use a blackboard, Mrs. Hobart was assigned the subject and she gave a very interesting and instructive twenty minutes illustrated talk on the subject.

Mrs. Hobart urged that the blackboard work be made very simple, the more simple the better. She said that it was absurd to think of doing artistic work with the chalk, because from the very nature of things, the white or colored chalk and the black background, the artistic idea is out of the question. She told the teachers that if it was the artistic they were after they could easily purchase copies of the paintings of the old or the new masters for only a few cents.

Mrs. Hobart then gave a practical demonstration of her method of teaching the infant classes by means of the blackboard. The primary object, she claimed, was simply to get and to hold the attention of the child.

After benediction by Rev. S. C. Davis, the convention adjourned until afternoon.

Bishop Morrison Reports Pleasing Condition In Duluth District.

Thirty Clergy and Thirty Laymen Present—The Program.

Prior to the calling to order, by Bishop James D. Morrison, at 10 o'clock this morning, of the ninth convocation of the Episcopal churches in the Duluth district, there was a celebration of the holy communion in Bishop's chapel, at Twentieth avenue east and Superior street, and the morning prayer and brief divine service were held in St. Paul's church, Lake avenue and Second street.

At the morning session, Bishop Morrison announced the appointment of standing committees for the ensuing year, and reviewed the work of the church in this district during the past year. Dr. J. E. Bowers was elected secretary for the year. Aboutt hirty members of the clergy and an equal number of lay delegates were present, coming from the various towns in the Duluth district, which includes the territory in the state north of the south line of Stearns county.

The bishop's address showed the churches in this district to be in a highly satisfactory condition. The speaker said there were now more workers in the field than ever before, and the confirmation classes in the district had been larger and more numerous during the past twelve months than during any like period in the history of church work in Minnesota.

He stated that, owing to the labor conditions, church work was a little quiet on the range at present, but that on the whole everything was moving along nicely in the range towns. He spoke in particular of the energetic and valuable work of the Women's Guild in Virginia, very highly praising the efforts of the guild members.

Bishop Morrison told of the selection of lots for a church building in Eveleth, and said that he hoped the building would be erected this year. Work in all the parishes was briefly reviewed, and was shown to have made very material progress since the last convocation.

By treasurer W. S. Bishop's report the district was shown to be better off financially than for some time past. There is a balance of $3408.65 in the First National bank, and the loan account amounts to $1184.73.

The convocation adjourned at 1 o'clock, to meet again at 2:30 this afternoon. After adjournment luncheon was served by the Ladies' Guild in the basement of the church building. This afternoon officers for the ensuing year will be chosen, also a lay delegate to attend the general biennial convention which meets at Boston in October.

At 8 o'clock this evening missionary meetings will be held in the Church of the Holy Apostles, St. Peter's church, St. Luke's church, St. Paul's church and St. John's church. Rev. W. J. Moody, of Brainerd and Rev. A. R. Mitchell, of Hallock, will be the speakers at St. Paul's church and Rev. H. F. Parshall, of St. Cloud, Rev. E. Spencer Murphy, Wadena, and Rev. George W. Barnes, Alexandria, will be the speakers at the church of the Holy Apostles. At St. Luke's church Venerable Archdeacon Appleby will have charge of the meeting, and Rev. Chas. Smith, the Indian priest, will speak on "Work Among the Indians." Other speakers will be Rev. Ernest Smith, of Aitkin, and Rev. W. E. Morgan, of Virginia.

Tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock holy communion will be celebrated at the Bishop's chapel. At 10 a. m., will occur the consecration of St. Luke's church and corporate communion of the members of the Women's auxiliary. The business meeting of the women's auxiliary missionary society will be held at 2 o'clock in the afternoon at Bishop's chapel. There will be a reception to the clergy, delegates and the churchmen of Duluth at the Episcopal residence at 8 o'clock in the evening.

The clergymen responding to roll call at this morning's session were as follows: F. E. Alleyne, J. R. Alten, T. H. Appleby, G. W. Barnes, C. R. Baumbach, B. Brehan, F. C. Coolbaugh, F. Durant, F. M. Garland, H. M. Green, R. S. Hannah, H. Harrison, M. Hart, T. C. Hudson, E. C. Kah-O-Sed, L. Maypenny, A. R. Mitchell, W. J. Moody, R. J. Mooney, W. E. Morgan, J. C. Munson, E. S. Murphy, O. Nonbloch, H. F. Parshall, G. E. Renison, L. Rietz, T. Ryan, F. K. Smith, J. Wakazoo, H. S. Webster. Messrs. Kah-O-Sed, Maypenny and Wakazoo are Indian ministers, from the Chippewa reserves, and are accompanied by two lay delegates.

NO HURRY HERE

Not a Single Entry on Lands Opened to Settlement.

Does Not Mean That Lands Are Not Desirable.

Not a single entry had been made up to an early hour this afternoon on the lands in the Pigeon River, Bois Fort and Red Lake Indian reservations, which were thrown open to settlement at the Duluth land office at 9 o'clock this morning.

In all there were 49,517 acres in the Duluth district opened for entry. Much of this is good agricultural land, and the only reason that there was not a rush of entrymen is thought to be the fatc that the opening was not widely advertised, and that there were no locaters seeking to place colonies of people on it. There are also openings in the Crookston and Cass Lake districts today. In the Crookston district 128,045 acres are opened to entry, and 71,168 acres in the Cass Lake district. The biggest rush is on at Cass Lake, where people have been in line since Sunday evening.

Although there were no applicants for land in the Duluth district today, it is thought that all of the tracts of any value will be taken within the next few months. At an opening held at the Duluth land office last November there were no applicants for land the first day, but all the claims in the territory opened are now taken up.

Most of the applicants in that case moved to the land at the opening hour, and established residence before making entry. That is probably what has occurred in the present instance. Entrymen are allowed ninety days within which their applications can be filed at the land office after the opening day. According to general rule settlement upon the homestead established precedence over mere entry at the land office, and many adopt this course.

These lands are subject to the disposal of actual settlers only, under the provisions of the homestead law, except that there is a provision that proof of occupancy for five years is required before title can be perfected. Each settler is required to pay for the lands settled upon the sum of $1.25 for each acre, such payment to be made in five equal annual installments.

COMMISSION WILL DEMAND A REDUCTION OF COAL FREIGHTS

New York, June 15.—As a result of the recent investigation by the interstate commerce commission there is reason to believe, says the Herald, that a demand will be made for a reduction of freight rates on anthracite coal.

Should this course be adopted it is not believed that any recommendation will be made by the commission to the federal government for action against the coal roads on the ground that they had combined to restrain trade and came within the Sherman anti-trust law.

The interstate commerce commission in making a demand for the reduction of existing rates would act within its powers, but the railroads, if they chose, could refuse to make the reduction and carry the case into the courts.

A reduction of rates would be of great benefit to the individual operators in the Pennsylvania anthracite field. It has been their contention for years that they were unable to mine coal at a profit on account of the high freight. The majority of the individual operators who are still in the field now sell their coal at the mines to the greater companies, receiving a proportion of the selling price of the coal at tide water.

CRITICISE POLICY

State Auditor Iverson Is the Subject of Some Comment.

Failure to Sell State Farm Lands Hurts This Section.

Since State Auditor Samuel G. Iverson made his announcement, a few days ago, that there would be no sale of state farm lands this year, there has been considerable discussion of his policy in this section, and it has resolved itself into a decidedly adverse criticism of the state auditor's judgment.

Coming at a time when there is a strong movement from the cities to the farms, and from older and more crowded farming communities to the newer fields of the Northwest, the critics of Mr. Iverson claim that he has established a policy that is a drag on the advancement of the state, and especially of this section of the commonwealth.

The line of reasoning pursued by these critics is something like this:

The state owns a large proportion of the vacant lands in this section, either because the surveyors have called them swamp lands or because they happen to be in sections 16 or 36, which belong to the schools. If the state continues to hold back its land, it is assuming the position of the absentee property-owner who refuses to improve his property, or permit it to be improved, while he holds on for higher values, this retarding the development of the community in which his holdings are located.

Attention has been attracted of late to the fertile agricultural lands of this and adjoining counties, and many settlers have gone in and more are constantly going in. Yet the independent owner of farm lands is handicapped by the fact that the state owns lands all around and about his property, and as the state is refusing to sell it, is impossible to bring this large area into the column of advancement and settlement.

There are many cases where there are vacant areas that are owned by private individuals or corporations that are willing to sell, but the surrounding area is owned by the state. The state having refused to sell, the buyer from private ownership is alone. The lands around him hold no neighbors to help pay taxes, build roads and educate the children. The state, the township and the county get no taxes from these lands, and the scattering settlers who buy from private owners have to bear burdens that would be shared among many if the state pushed the sale of its lands.

Those who are doing the talking figure that the state might better afford to sell its lands at the lowest legal price, abandoning the hope of higher prices in the dim future, in order to settle its territory and bring its property into the tax-paying and improving class. There is no possible way in which a settler on land surrounded by state lands can get roads over which to haul his supplies in and products out. He cannot build a school house for his own children, and he cannot afford to pay a teacher alone. If the state would push its sales, he would have neighbors to share these expenses and their resultant benefits.

This is the way the critics are figuring and the talk along that line started when Auditor Iverson's announcement was made is growing rapidly.

Meanwhile the Canadian Northwest is getting many settlers that belong to Northern Minnesota.

Everybody is going to Burrows', the wreckage of prices is complete and people are buying for present and future needs.

EFFECTIVE SPEECH

Delivered at Convention of the Georgia Industrial Association.

Daniel Davenport Discusses Protection Against Extreme Labor Laws.

Washington, June 15.—As the apostle of individual feedom for employer and employe, Daniel Davenport, of Bridgeport, Conn., addressed the annual convention of the Georgia Industrial association at Warm Springs, Ga., last week. The address was most timely. Alarmed at the labor troubles in New England, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and California, the Southern manufacturers are on the qui vive and this alarm was heightened by the struggle now in progress in Colorado. The Georgia association was one of the first in the South to recognize the depressing effect of restrictive labor legislation upon cotton manufacturing in New England and fearing that similar laws in the South would be followed by even more disastrous consequences, they invited Mr. Davenport, the well-known executive agent of the Anti-Boycott association, to deliver the annual address on the subject: "Shall the South Protect Herself Against Extreme Labor Legislation?" Mr. Davenport was selected, as being probably the most prominent speaker of New England on such subjects from the standpoint of the employer. On his way to Warm Springs Mr. Davenport fell in with C. G. Bancroft, of Boston, the Massachusetts legislative agent of the famous Arkwright club, and the two journeyed together to tell the Georgia mill owners of the difficulties under which the New England manufacturers labored and to warn them of the perils which would shortly confront them. That Mr. Davenport's eloquent and scholarly address was every effective is shown by the fact that as its conclusion the association passed a resolution endorsing the anti-boycott law recently enacted by the Alabama legislature, and as the Georgia legislature will meet in a few days it is expected an attempt will be made to have a similar law enacted by it. A legislative committee was appointed to assist the executive committee on matters of legislation in Georgia and at Washington. The executive committee was also directed to invite every manufacturer in the state to became a member of the association, membership in which has hitherto been confined to cotton mills.

In opening his address Mr. Davenport briefly reviewed the historital bond ties between the people of New England and the South from the time a colony left Dorchester to settel in Georgia to the present day. "I am told," he said, "that a larger portion of the people of some of your counties can trace their ancestry to New England sires than a similar number selected at random on the Boston Common." In delicately complimentary terms he expressed his amazement on this, his first trip through the South, at the evidences of activity and prosperity on every hand, and in glowing language paid a tribute to the immense and comparatively undeveloped natural resources of the South, sharply contrasting the situation of the Southern farmer and manufactruer with that of his Northern competitor.

"You are surrounded by your raw materials," he said; "your cotton in your fields, your iron and coal in your mines; you are blessed with a fertile soil, peculiarly adapted to the production of your principal and 'kingly' crop, for which the demand ever increases more rapidly than the supply. But above all you have a magnificent people who have demonstrated their stalwart patriotism and martial valor on a thousand bloody battlefields; who have evinced their splendid moral courage by regenerating and re-upbuilding their country. No other section of our broad and common land has so suffered or has been so magnificently rejuvenated. The purest Anglo-Saxon blood in the world courses through the veins of your people, and I say that the character, the stamina of the Southern people is such that all these magnificent natural advantages and all these great forces of nature at your hand will be supplemended and directed by the activity, the energy and courage, and the determination and public spirit of the finest race of men on earth. On the other hand, the New Englander wrests a living from a sterile soil in a rigorous climate. The manufacturer is far from his base of supplies and with a restricted market."

Continuing on this line Mr. Davenport warned his hearers that they had but one danger to fear—restricted legislation. It had laid its paralyzing hand upon the industries of New England which were now hampered and bound down until almost helpless. "I sometimes think as I look upon the unusual trend of events in this country," he said, "that the hour of irrevocable decline has struck New England; that the limit of manufacturing and commercial supremacy has about been reached and the falling scepter is to be seized by you gentlemen of the South." He recalled the fact that years ago Edward Atkinson, of Massachusetts, and David Wells, of Connecticut, had warned the New England legislatures of the injurious consequences of the enactments of laws similar to those which have been introduced into the Southern legislatures within recent years. Their warnings had not been heeded and he quoted the president of the New England Cotton Manufacturers' association in his address at the recent annual meeting of that association, as saying that the Massachusetts' laws must be changed or the New England cotton industry would be destroyed. The only other alternative was to secure a constitutional amendment enabling congress to apply similar laws to the other states so that labor conditions should be uniform throughout the country.

"Your famous 'war governor' is quoted as saying he would yet call the roll of his slaves on Bunker Hill," continued Mr. Davenport. "I say the roll of white slaves is called every day in the city of Boston within the shadow of that monument. A young man recently sought a marriage license in that city. He was given an application bearing a union-label. With his pen-knife he cut off the label and demanded his license. After considerable hesitation the clerk issued the license, but that too bore the union label. 'I don't want a license with that label,' said the applicant. 'I want a license printed by a free man.' 'You will take that or none,' was the response. 'If you want to get married in Boston you will be married under the union label or not at all.'

Mr. Davenport spoke of the industrial conditions prevailing in New England, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, and of the "bloody turmoil, the fierce rioting and lawless revolution in Colorado. Men of the Industrial South, guard well your portals!" he said. "In the North it is no longer how we can preserve the right of an individual to operate his business or to work, but how that right can be regained. The North, East and West, look to the South to take a determined stand against such legislation as that from which we are suffering; against the domination of unionism."

In closing Mr. Davenport lightly touched upon the political phases of the problem and appealed to his audience not only to resist the tendency toward such legislation before congress and the state legislatures, but to use every means to prevent the political parties from adopting platforms favoring such principles. "I ask you not only to press these matters not only before your legislatures," he said, "but to request your delegations to St. Louis to the convention of that great party of which I am an humble member, to oppose the introduction into its platform of declarations favorable to such legislation. Set your faces against any legislation of a socialistic or paternalistic character. You need our capital in the South and we will ask for an accounting. The manufacturer and capitalist of the North look to the South to see to it that the constitution is protected and the laws enforced in so far as they guarantee the liberty of employer and employe."

Mr. Bancroft followed with an address in which he detailed the struggles of the strictive legislation tending to render the Massachusetts manufactrers against restrictive legislation tending to render the operations of the mills in competition with the South an impossibility, and pleaded with the Georgia mill-owners to use every effort to prevent their interests from being so endangered. Mr. Bancroft paid Mr. Davnport a high compliment by saying that he was doing more to spread the seeds of good advice in such matters than had been done before in many years. After the convention adjourned Messrs. Davenport and Bancroft left on a trip through the South to further interest Southern manufacturers in this subject.

AGED WOMAN IS ARRESTED

Miss Martha Lunn, Prominent In Church Circles, In Jail.

Elgin, Ill., June 15.—Miss Martha Lunn, 60 years of age, and for many years prominent in Elgin church, social and women's club circles, was arrested here on the charge of forgery. She is in jail.

Elgin attorneys, it is stated, hold notes for collection, amounting to more than $12,000. Russell & Hazelhurst alone hold a batch of these notes, amounting to $6000. Most of these notes are signed with the names of B. E. Lunn and W. W. Teal. Mr. Teal declares his name has been forged in every instance.

It is alleged that Miss Lunn has borrowed money on these forged notes from many persons in Elgin and of persons in West Chicago, Wheaton, Dundee and other towns in the near vicinity.

It is asserted that many of her victims were widows who had collected life insurance upon the death of their husbands. They were approached by Miss Lunn with an opportunity to invest their money in securities paying a large rate of interest.

The discovery of Miss Lunn's extensive operations followed soon after the resignation of her sister, Miss Elizabeth Lunn, as treasurer of the Elgin Woman's club. Early in April it was discovered that Miss Elizabeth Lunn was a defaulter in club funds to the amount of $3540. The club took possession of a house and lot belonging to the Misses Lunn, and G. P. Lord, a wealthy citizen donated $1000 to the club and the matter was dropped.

When the financial crash followed discovery of the shortage in the club building fund, Miss Lunn abandoned her business. Creditors from all directions besieged her doors on the following day. Claims reaching over $2000 were filed by business concerns. Throughout the settlement of the difficulties with the woman's club many demands of creditors, Miss Lunn has maintained a confident and unchanged appearance, but upon reaching the cell she sobbed bitterly, and for the first time exhibited signs of sorrow and repentence for her acts.

The effect of Fargo's rowdyism of the day previous was strikingly apparent in the attendance at the baseball game yesterday. Instead of the large crowd that should have been on hand considering the character of the weather there was only a moderate sized one. The prformance of Werden and his men of the day before cost the teams fully $100 in gate receipts.

It was a subdued bunch of Indians that lined up at Baseball park yesterday afternoon. It is true that Umpire Hogan had to order Pitcher Lempke from the grounds for calling him some names that are not contained in the dictionary, but it was done promptly and quietly, and the game progressed without any serious interruption. "King" Perry himself, was still far from being gentle and lamblike, but he confined his kicking to a few mild protests against Umpire Hogan's decisions and refrained from delaying the game. It looks as if the famous "umpire-tamer" has been tamed himself, temporarily at least.

The game was a good one. That gentleman with the sunset hair, surnamed "Rusty" Owens, did the trick. It was another slaughter and once again Werden's band of howling dervishes played the passive part. The Fargo bunch never got very close to Rusty's curves except in the fifth inning when a double by Furlong and a home run by Mankie brought in two. But that was about all for the Indians. During the rest of the game the Terrible Perry and his bunch of kickers looked easier than the Maroons, and never another spike crossed the rosy rubber.

The White Sox got ideas about scoring in the second inning. Lempke, the sidewheeler who was whirling for the Indians, hit Quillan between the shoulders with one of his slants. Big Bill Zink sacrificed and Koukalik drew four bad ones. Owens patted the ball perfunctorily to Lempke and then Capt. Artie Ball brought the two runners home with a saucy single to left field.

In the fourth session Zink sent the pill to the green grass in left field. Koukalik died for Zink's sake, secrafficed, and Bill was safe at the second depot. Then the boy with the auburn hair hit the bulb a saucy swat and the bases were as populous as a second street boarding house. After Ball had sent a long fly to Furlong, Jack Corrigan appeared with a feverish grip on his swat-stick. It was a nice new ball, and a shame to spoil it, but away out past the heads of the herdsmen did it travel, and when the dust had cleared away Zink and Owens had pranced together down the line to the coveted gutta percha, while Corrigan perched himself on the second pillow. Then Newton Rammerrout Randall had to continue the slaughter with a single, scoring Corrigan. Just a trifle of three earned runs, that's all.

Quillan proved himself a born mimic in the fifth. Mankie, in a burst of enthusiasm, had actually lammed the ball over the left field fence with one man on the bases, and he was feeling pretty good about it as he ambled around the sacks. But in the last half of the same inning, after Lagger had singled, Quillan repeated the stunt in finished style, and he and Lager came sauntering down the last quarter arm in arm.

In the eighth inning Mr. Lempke became obstreperous. He intimated that one of Mr. Hogan's decisions concerning a ball was—well—decayed or defunct. Mr. Hogan mildly objected, and then Mr. Lempke, by his peculiar form of language, left Mr. Hogan to infer that he, Hogan, was no gentleman, or words to that effect. Mr. Lempke was placed under sealed orders to the hench, and when he continued handing out compliments, one of Duluth's "finest" escorted him to the entrance of the grounds.

Lynch replaced him, and just to show that they had no partiality in the matter, the White Sox lammed his fancy slants for a single and a double, scoring another run. The score:

LOSES IN TWELFTH.

Superior Drops a Raggedly Played Game.

After playing championship ball for the past week, both the Crookston and Superior teams had an off day yesterday, and each team made desperate efforts to hand the game to the other side by the rankest kind of errors. Superior finally proved to be the worse team and succeeded in presenting the game to the Woodpeckers by an error in the ninth which let in three runs and tied the score, and another in the twelfth which presented the visitors with two more.

Thomas and Burns were the opposing pitchers and both were hit freely. Superior took a lead in the second inning and increased it in the seventh. In the ninth, when they were four runs to the bad and a large part of the crowd had gone home thinking the game was over, the visitors took a sudden brace and tied the score, with the assistance of a couple of bad errors on the part of the home team.

In the tenth both teams scored one and in the eleventh both drew blanks. In the twelfth a base on balls and two bunts which were beaten out to first, filled the bases. The next ball was hit straight at Burns. He picked it up and attempted to toss it to Leach, but it fell short and two runs scored before it was recovered.

Henry and Miller, of the Crookston team were both put out of the game by Umpire Smith for kicking, but Miller was later allowed to return as the Crookston team did not have enough men to finish the contest. The score:

Grand Forks Refuses to Allow Peggers a Game.

Grand Forks, N. D., June 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The second game of the Grand Forks-Winnipeg series was played here yesterday. The Tigers were victorious by a score of 13 to 8, making the fifth straight from the Maroons.

O'Brien was on the slab for the Tigers for the first six innings. He did very well until the sixth inning. He weakened a little in the fifth and allowed the first hit, which was a three-bagger by Sullivan. Hanrahan fumbled the ball in the center garden and Sullivan crossed the plate, the first Maroon to do such a thing in thirteen innings. In the sixth inning the fireworks started. Benson, the first Maroon up, drew a base, and Dalquist was thrown out on the first corner. Wood took a hit and Annis fanned. With two men gone, Kelly, Spooner and Sullivan each took a hit. Howard drew a base and Clark lined out a three-bagger. Benson, who opened the inning, closed the inning and went out from short to first. The last score gotten by the visitors was in the eighth. Annis got a hit after two men were out and scored on an error by Sharnweber.

Dalquist opeend the game for the visitors, but he too was knocked out of the box, and Kelly whistled to Bamis. Bemis allowed three hits and a home run in the next two innings.

Hutchinson, the man from the land of sun and flowers, was called from the third bag and put in the box. Cole was put on first and Brown sent to third. Brown made a sensational stop in the seventh inning and saved a score.

The Maroons treated the fans to a double in the fifth inning. Dalquist sent the ball to Kelly after he had gotten it from the bat of O'Brien. Kelly doubled it down to Spooner.

Spooner was fined a couple of dollars for talking to the umpire after he had been given an invitation to stop. Morton will be on the slab for the Tigers in the game tomorrow. The score:

Off the Bat.

Two straight from the Indians.

* * *

Four out of five from Werden's bunch.

* * *

The White Sox have yet to lose a series.

* * *

King Perry kept within bounds yesterday.

* * *

President Laxdal will witness today's game.

* * *

Crookston has finally broken the hoodoo.

* * *

Koukalik played a pretty game at second yesterday. His catch of a hot liner in the third brought the fans to their feet.

* * *

Duluth and Grand Forks seem to be making a runaway race of it. The setback the Tigers received here did not hold them long.

* * *

Owens pitched his usual heady game yesterday. Rusty always works about three times as hard when there are men on bases, and relies on his field when there are none.

* * *

Cameron's Colts will be here tomorrow for three games. An umpire's life is not a happy one.

* * *

It's a dull day when there is not some special feature to a game of baseball in Superior.

* * *

The games with Superior should bring the fans out in force. Cameron's bunch has been playing fast aggressive ball, and will make a desperate effort to take a crimp in Duluth's penant aspirations.

* * *

The last game with Fargo is being played this afternoon, and Gehring or Noldin will be in the box for Duluth.

TRIUMPHS OF MODERN SURGERY.

Wonderful things are done for the human body by surgery. Organs are taken out and scraped and polished and put back, or they may be removed entirely; bones are spliced; pipes take the place of diseased sections of veins; antiseptic dressings are applied to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, which causes them to heal without maturation and in one-third the time required by the old treatment. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principle. It is an antiseptic and when applied to such injuries, causes them to heal very quickly. It so allays the pain and soreness. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money, not to mention the inconvenience and suffering which such injuries entail. For sale by all druggists.

HOPKINS IN CONTROL

Dominated Illinois Democratic Convention as He Saw Fit.

Stringer Nominated For Governor—Hearst to Get First Vote.

Springfield, Ill., June 15.—Governor—Lawrence B. Stringer of Lincoln.

Lieutenant governor—Thomas J. Ferns, of Jerseyville.

Secretary of state—Frank E. Dooling, of Sangamon county.

State treasurer—Charles B. Thomas, of McLeansboro.

Attorney-general—Albert Watson, of Jefferson county.

University trustees—Mrs. Anna G. Solomon, of Chicago; Theodore C. Loehr, of Carlinville; F. B. Merrill, of St. Clair county.

Delegates at large to St. Louis convention—John P. Hopkins, A. M. Lawrence, Ben T. Cable, Samuel Alschuler.

The above nominations were made at the Democratic convention yesterday. John P. Hopkins, of Chicago, will succeed himself as chairman of the state central committee.

William R. Hearst received from the Democratic state convention what the Hopkins faction, which completely dominated the proceedings, knew he wanted, and Mr. Hearst's campaign managers who aspired to control the Democratic party in this state, received what John P. Hopkins thought was coming to them.

The Illinois delegation was instructed to vote for Hearst at St. Louis as long as his name remained before the convention.

Mr. Hearst's campaign managers who attempted to ride into power by the aid of his name, received absolutely no consideration whatever from the convention. The Harrison party which came solely from Chicago, and was pledged to the support of Congressman James R. Williams, was routed completely.

Carter H. Harrison was unseated as a delegate, and took a train for home without going near the convention. Both his faction and the Hearst party were as nothing compared to the strength and skilful management of the convention exhibited by Hopkins.

At the same time it must be said that never before in Illinois has there been a bolder display of ruthless gavel rule, than that exhibited by John P. Quinn, of Peoria, who presided over the convention both as temporary and permanent chairman.

He paid absolutely no attention to men or motions when it did not jibe with the interests of the Hopkins plans for him to do so, and in one instance at least, he declared a motion carried before the Hearst and Harrison people had voted upon it.

The committee on resolutions finished its work early, but it was decided by the chairman to withhold the platform until he knew what action the Hearst people would take on the report of the committee on credentials.

There was a long wait of two hours before this body was prepared to report, and as J. J. Kane, of East St. Louis, who was to read the report, came upon the rostrum, a line of police officers marched in and suggestively formed a long line in front of the speaker. They were facing that officer and it was suggested to them that danger was expected from the opposite direction. So they turned and confronted the delegates. The report of the committee on credentials was brief and pithy. It simply said:

"We believe everything done by the state central committee in seating and unseating delegates was just and proper and we recommend that its work be endorsed." Then came Bedlam. The Harrison and Hearst people shrieked "roll call," jumped up and down in their chairs, yelled "robbery," "thieves" and a few other things less polite. They were so wrathful that they could not wait to listen to the reading of a minority report, which recommended action opposite to the report first read. When quiet was finally restored, the ayes and nays on the substitution of the minority for the majority report was called for, and it was lost. The adoption of the report was called for.

"All those in favor say aye," shouted Chairman Quinn. "Aye," came in a thunderous shout.

"Those opposed, no."

Bang went the gavel.

"The ayes have it," said the chairman, and then "no" yelled the Harrison and Hearst men.

There were more frantic shrieks of "roll call" and the chairman said:

"You can have a roll call on the report of the resolutions committee. We will give you anything you want—after a while." And that was all the comfort the Hearst people obtained from the proceedings until they were given a chance to vote on the qestion of endorsing their candidate in the St. Louis convention.

Pending the arrival of the committee on resolutions, a motion was carried directing the convention to proceed with the nomination of candidates for state offices.

"Before we proceed," said Chairman Quinn, "several of the candidates wish to address the convention."

William Prentiss, of Chicago, who was a candidate for governor, advanced to the front of the platform, his face white with wrath and his eyes blazing. He declared passionately that he desired nothing from the convention, it did not, in his opinion represent the Democracy of Illinois, and he wished for nothing at its hands.

"I decline to have my name submitted to this convention in any manner," he shouted, and walked off the platform, followed by the cheers of the Hearst delegation.

William C. Crolius, of Joliet, followed in a brief speech endorsing the stand taken by Mr. Prentiss, and also withdrew his name from the convention.

Then came another long wait, during which the wildest confusion prevailed on the floor, and several fist fights took place between the delegates. None of them amounted to more than incidental diversions from the routine.

Clayton E. Crafts, of Chicago, then came forward with the platform, which he read:

"We, the Democrats of Illinois—" "Who are Democrats?" "You're no Democrats," came from the Hearst people, and the hoots and jeers that greeted Mr. Crafts compelled him to suspend for a time.

He had a similar experience when he announced: "We believe in the rule of the majority." Pungent questions reeking with sarcasm were hurled at him in profusion and the hooters were again strongly in evidence.

The resolution providing for the endoresement of Mr. Hearst was not made a part of the report of the committee on resolutions, but was submitted to the committee as a separate matter. The original resolutions provided principally that the Illinois delegation should vote for Hearst, until it was compelled to vote for somebody else. A substitute offered by Clarence S. Darrow, instructing the delegates to vote for Hearst as long as his name was before the convention, was then adopted by a vote of 936 to 395.

Beautiful smart nobby hats

Actually less than cost of material.

2873 handsome street hats—

Worth up to $3.75, for 69c, 95c and $1.25.

Our millinery department has just concluded another of those great "scoops" which provide fashionable summer headwear for the women and girls of the Northwest almost without cost. Every year, in June, we make this purchase. Last year we could get only 1500 hats. This season we were more fortunate than ever before, in securing not only larger quantities and varieties, but the values are better than any lot of street or runabout hats the Big Glass Block store has ever offered the public.

These are all straw hats, smooth and rough, large and small, flare, turban and tricorn shapes, plain colors, fancy mixtures. Hats for walking, playing, picnicing, golfing, boating, camping, driving and every sort of summer runabout use. Every hat is a this season's style, made for this summer's wear, with dashes and touches of "style" and "go" that put them in the first class for beauty, while the selling prices in many instances will not cover the work of braiding the straw.

They are trimmed with chiffons, veilings, laces, dotted mulls, silks, ribbons, velvets, feathers, steel and gilt ornaments. A style for every face and every dress, all selling so cheaply you can afford to buy two or three for different occasions and yet not pay the price of one hat.

There are black hats, white hats, black and white mixtures, reds, blues, browns, greens, greys and mixtures of different colors, trimmed with good materials in snappy styles. Hats for elderly ladies, for matrons, for young ladies, for misses, for school girls and even for little girls are in the lot.

Every hat in the lot goes on sale tomorrow—Thursday—without reserve!

None will be laid aside before that time, but everybody will have the same chance as everyone else to come and pick out the hat or hats they want. The cheapest hat in the entire purchase is worth $1.25. Hundreds of them are worth $2.50 and hundreds more are worth $3.75.

Three lots—Take your pick!

For convenience in handling and to make it as easy as possible to make your selection, we divide the entire purchase into 3 lots only, each lot on tables by itself, with additional salespeople to wait on you.

69c

For ladies', misses' and children's street hats, actually made to sell at $1.25, $1.50 and $1.75 each. Your pick from lot 1 at 69c.

50c pure linen handkerchiefs for 15c

The first time ever in Duluth.

For the first time we have had the good fortune to secure the entire "factory seconds" of one of the big Belfast makers of ladies' fine linen handkerchiefs. These are all, every thread pure linen, and they are perfect goods in every way except some little irregularities in the hemstitching which it would take an expert to detect.

They are all the new, narrow hems, and are the same identical handkerchiefs that sell for 25c, 30c, 35c, 40c and 50c each.

We bought the entire lot, over 8000 handkerchiefs in all, paying one low price on all alike. We will not sort out the different qualities, but will place the entire purchase, all together, on sale Thursday morning, on our handkerchief counter, main floor, and let you take your pick of any handkerchiefs, without regard to value—at State Federation Votes Aid to Minneapolis Mill Workers.

Sweeping Resolution on Colorado Labor Troubles Is Adopted.

New Ulm, Min., June 15.—Yesterday the convention of the State Federation of Labor was given up to the consideration of resolutions entirely. There was little opposition to any of the resolutions that were allowed by the committee to get into the convention, and the work of the committee was regarded as fair. The head of the resolutions committee is Henry Perault, of Duluth, a member of the Cigarmakers' union. He is one of the most active workers in the convention, fearless in debate and evidently a staunch advocate of unionism. He won the applause of the house by a speech supporting the resolution to give the striking Minneapolis mill workers $750 from the treasury of the state federation, in which he deprecated the evident intention of some of the delegates to inject politics into the actions of the convention along that line. The appropriation resolution is perhaps the most important and far-reaching of all that were adopted. The aim is to show the owners that the federation is behind the strikers and will assist them to the limit of their resources.

The carrying of the resolution called out wild cheering, and it was some time before the president could restore order. Following this a resolution of even more spirit, that referring to the labor troubles in Colorado, was brought before the convention. It is a drastic and sweeping resolution condemning the action of the governor, branding him as a despot, a usurper of the rights of the American citizen, and appealing to the president of the United States as the commander-in-chief of the militia to compel an investigation of the acts of Gen. Bell and of Governor Peabody, claiming that it was all done in the interests of the employers, and that right and justice is denied American citizens where workmen of foreign citizenship were granted protection under an appeal to the representatives of their nation.

The resolution increasing the per capita tax carried without discussion and will be put to a referendum vote of affiliated unions.

An important resolution passed was that creating a sort of funding institution to be under the direction of the federation council. This institution is to be incorporated and stock sold to the amount of $200,000 among the members of the allied orders at $5 a share, no one person to hold more than five shares which are non-transferable and can only be sold by the board of directors. The purpose of this financial institution is to supply funds for members who, when locked out as the garment workers of Minneapolis were, want to start a plant of their own as the Minneaplois union has done. It is presumed that with this capital to draw from the incentive will not be great for industries to abuse their help. The passage of this resolution was marked with almost a much enthusiasm as that of the striking millers.

The proposition to bring before the legislature a bill creating a free employment bureau passed without a dissenting vote. The bill will involve the appropriation of several thousand dollars and the establishment in all larger cities of a bureau similar to labor bureaus of the city and that under the supervision of the labor commissioner. All delegates were instructed to see that they voted for no man for the legislature who was not pledged to the carrying out of this project.

INFIDELITY IS CHARGED

By Young Phipps In His Suit For a Divorce.

Denver, Colo., June 14.—A. H. McKee, cousin of Mrs. Genevieve Chandler Phipps, and a wealthy resident of New York city, and Dr. Thomas Gallagher, of Denver, physician for the Phipps family, are named as co-respondents in the Phipps divorce case.

Infidelity is the main charge embraced in the complaint by Laurence Cowles Phipps against his wife, Genevieve, for absolute divorce and the permanent custody of the two children.

The two gentlemen above named are accused of having illicit relations with Mrs. Phipps and the complaint goes thoroughly into detail. As a reason for kidnaping the children from the hotel in New York city, Mr. Phipps says they were at the hostelry with their mother at the times she was guilty of unfaithfulness and that he removed them surreptitiously for the simple reason that he believed an effort would be made on the part of their mother to keep them in such evil environments. He wished them protected from vice and took the means that he did to get them to Denver and subject to the orders of the district court.

A divorce complaint of such length has seldom been filed here. It recites practically every deed of the wife which the husband deems sufficient to sustain his demand for a divorce. McKee, Mrs. Phipps' cousin, is said to have been almost constantly with her at the hotel in New York city and that her acts of indiscretion were many.

Dr. Galagher was formerly the family physician for the Phippses. He is prominent in society and was well acquainted with Mrs. Phipps prior to her marriage.

INNOCENT AND NOW FREE

Though Sentenced to Die and Then Given Life Sentence.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 14.—William Kennedy, once sentenced to hang and then sentenced to serve life imprisonment for a murder of which he was innocent, walked from Governor Durbin's office a free man. He waited thirty years for justice.

"I never asked for mercy; I merely wanted justice," he said.

Kennedy was sentenced in 1874, in Shelbyville, for a term of eight years in the Southern Indiana prison for assault with intent to kill. With Alfred Applegate, Newton Port and William Stanley he attempted to escape. George Chamberlain, guard, and Port were killed. On the first trial Stanley turned state's evidence and was released. Kennedy and Applegate were sentenced to die. In a new trial the penalty was life imprisonment. The supreme court ordered another hearing, but the result was the same.

Kennedy served seventeen years and was paroled ten years ago by the late Governor Matthews, who promised a pardon, but who died before it was granted. Governor Durbin made good Governor Matthew's promise on learning that Kennedy has lived a good citizen. He had been cleared of the crime, however, by Applegate, who recently made a deathbed confession.

MPROVEMENT IS FOR SNELLING

New Offices to Cost $35,800 Are to Be Built.

St. Paul, June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Officers attached to the regiment at Fort Snelling received good news from Washington today when it was announced that the secretary of war had approved the recommendations of Quartermaster Gen. Humphrey for new offices here to cost $35,800.

For some time past accommodations for officers at the fort have been inadequate to supply the demand and the hardship has fallen particularly upon the junior officers, many of whom have been compelled to move several times in order to make room for their seniors.

The quartermaster general's recommendation for improvements at Fort Snelling was submitted to the secretary, together with other recommendations involving a total expenditure of $829,600, all of which have received the departmental "O. K."

BANK FAILS TO OPEN.

Cambridge, O., June 15.—The Commercial National bank of this place failed to open its doors yesterday. There was considerable excitement when the fact became known. No statement of the bank's condition was obtainable. The bank had $25,000 city and $12,000 school funds on deposit. A branch of the Commercial, the People's Savings bank at Byesville, also closed its doors later in the day. Cashier Paterson of the Cambridge bank, is said to be in Cincinnati.

MINERS' SIDE

Western Federation Issues Statement Concerning Cripple Creek Strikes.

Says Outrages Committed By Hirelings of Citizens Alliance.

Denver, June 15.—Acting under instructions given by the twelfth annual convention of the Western Federation of Miners, recently held in this city, the executive board of that organization has issued a statement regarding the strikes in Colorado and the recent disturbances in the Cripple Creek district.

"The Western Federation of Miners," the statement begins, "has always courted and invited the utmost publicity in all its acts and all the acts of its members in matters affecting all its dealings."

It is declared that "notwithstanding persistent report to the contrary," every local union voted upon the proposition before any strike was called. The recent convention sent a committee to Cripple Creek to investigate the situation. This committee, it is declared, found the representatives of mines ready and willing to listen to a proposition of settlement.

"Before any further conference could be held," it is asserted, "The Citizen's alliance interfered in such manner as to frustrate further efforts in the direction of settlement, the interference being no doubt influenced by the bitter hatred of the operators against the four co-operative stores operated and maintained in the district by the federation."

The statement continues:

"We are fully convinced from information by trustworthy persons that the original explosion and subsequent outrages perpetrated are not only the work of the Citizen's alliance, but are thoroughly of the opinion that the whole matter was planned in advance. Perhaps no single occurrence has so much bearing on this conclusion as the forcible resignation of various regularly elected officials in the district.

"What 'public necessity' justified the mob to compel the resignation of these officers we will leave the reader to judge for himself. To set aside the expressed will of the people, to depose officers named by the majority, to conduct public affairs, is of itself a crime against citizenship that we cannot pass without severe criticism. Beside this all other crimes are puny, or parlor jokes or comic opera."

After referring to the imprisonment and deportation of union miners and the refusal of the Citizens' alliance to permit any merchants to supply provisions to the families of such men, the statement continues:

"The very fact that union men are deported by the military is of itself sufficient to show that no evidence has been obtained against these men, for, if evidence of crimes was at hand, does any reasonable man or woman suppose that the military commandant or the sheriff would be simple enough to deport to other parts the guilty persons? No, indeed. What evidence there is, acquits the miners, but, apparently, fastens the crime upon the heads of hired assassins and thugs in the pay of the Citizens' alliance.

"The aparent success of this line of action at Telluride has evidently prompted the recent acts of violence in the Cripple Creek district. The lawless mob at all times had access to the state guns and ammunition. When the mob had committed outrages without number, the power of the great state of Colorado steps in, takes up affairs, where the mob left off, deports union men, abuses others and brazenly heralds to the world the palpable lie that the Miners' unions are criminal organizations and must be wiped out. At no time during all this struggle has the military power of civil power been used to protect our members in their rights of citizenship.

"Even at the present time no determined effort is being made by the authorities to discover the real perpetrators of the Independence explosion. Nothing is attempted to be done, except to fasten this unholy crime by imputation and innuendo upon the heads of our innocent membership.

"As was plainly shown some months ago in a trial where the Western Federation of Miners was accused of wrecking a train, the federation was innocent, so it is clear that none of the present outrages was committed by our members. As was plainly shown that the crimes and outrages were commited by hired detectives and thugs for the purpose of bringing discredit upon union men, so it will be shown that the present outrages, even the ruthless slaughter of the unfortunate victims of the explosion that killed sixteen men at the Independence depot on the morning of June 6, was the work of these same hirelings, who simply enacted the first part of the plot that was to furnish the excuse for all subsequent outrages. We denounce the verdict of the coroner's jury, which holds the federation responsible for the death of these men, as unjust and ridiculous and we assert that when the truth is known (if it is ever divulged over the combined opposition of all county and state officers), it wil be found to be as stated above., the work of detectives and thugs hired on purpose to commit a deed that might be laid at our door, and offer the excuse for the reign of terror that followed."

The statement concludes with an appeal for funds to sustain the deported miners and their families.

That is dyspepsia.

It makes life miserable.

Its sufferers eat not because they want to, but simply because they must.

They know they are irritable and fretful; but they cannot be otherwise.

They complain of a bad taste in the mouth, a tenderness at the pit of the stomach, an uneasy feeling of puffy fulness, headache, heartburn and what not.

A CLEVELAND DELEGATION.

The Illinois Democratic state convention resulted in a great victory for John P. Hopkins, the representative of the Cleveland Democracy. By an alliance with William R. Hearst, he obtained absolute control of the convention and ran things to suit himself, with the result that the politicians who worked to get a Hearst delegation were left out in the cold and Hopkins and other staunch supporters of ex-President Cleveland, who believe that Grover is the strongest man who can be placed at the head of the Democratic ticket, were selected as delegates-at-large to the St. Louis convention. What the Hearst supporters in Illinois and other states, who have not lost any opportunity to denounce the ex-president, will think of this deal by the yellow journal publisher, can readily be conjectured. It certainly is a bitter pill that they are called upon to swallow.

And Hearst himself got the short end of the combination. Resolutions indorsing his candidacy were passed, of course, but the sympathies of Hopkins and his associates on the delegation are well known and it will not take them long to decide that instructions lose their effect when the candidate has no show of nomination. They will give Hearst a complimentary vote on one or two ballots and then they will probably be found trying to stampede the convention for Grover Cleveland.

The result in Illinois was clearly forecasted in a special dispatch from Chicago recently published in The Herald. It was then stated that Hopkins and Hearst had made a combine to defeat Carter Harrison in his attempt to control the state convention and that one of the conditions was that Hopkins should name a Cleveland delegation to St. Louis. The prediction has been verified.

NEGRO EDUCATION.

It is a matter of general satisfaction that not all the leading men of Mississippi, where Governor Vardaman was elected to office because of his anti-negro views, are so bound up by race hatred that they are incapable of striving to do justice to the negro.

At the session of the education conference in Montgomery, Ala., a few weeks ago, Bishop Charles B. Galloway of the Methodist Episcopal church south, for Mississippi, made one of the most significant addresses, insisting in a conservative, but forcible, way on the necessity of adequate educational opportunities for both races, although not in common. He holds, with the best and fairest minds of all races, that ignorance is not a cure for any evil.

He said there must be agreement upon certain things before definite advancement of educational work could be hoped for. One was that there must be separate schools and that the social relations of the two races must be distinct. As to the manner of living together in the community, he holds the Southern view; but he does not hold that it is either prudent or Christian to withhold from the inferior race the opportunity of advancement in civilization, and he insisted upon the duty of providing the negroes with means of education as a necessary condition of the prosperity of the South. Since the two races must live and work together as citizens and as component parts of the state, he maintained that the public welfare demanded that neither race should be degraded in its capacity by enforced ignorance and moral neglect.

Even this moderate Southern view so incensed Governor Vardaman that in discussing the matter with another bishop of the same church, he declared that Bishop Galloway "was going about with a belly full of hot air and yellow-legged chickens, pandering to the Massachusetts negro lovers." According to the dispatch some of the other things he said would not bear printing.

It is certainly a deplorable condition of affairs when a man of such caliber can be elected as chief executive of a state in the American Union. It is the rantings of such negro-haters as this that create a race question in this country. Even Bishop Galloway's separate school plan has a serious defect. The establishment of separate public schools at once raises an insurmountable barrier of prejudice between the two races that can never be overcome. The white child at once reaches the natural conclusion that he is provided with a separate school because he is considered the superior of the colored child simply because he is white. The negro child concludes that he is given a separate school and considered the inferior of all white children simply because he is colored. The result is that this prejudice is never obliterated from the minds of either. And race hatred results.

The plain truth is that all institutions supported by public funds as well as the ballot box should be open and free to all citizens, no matter of what race, creed, rank or color. Only in that way can political and industrial equality be maintained and only in that way can race prejudice and race hatred be obliterated. Neither does that plan establish social equality. Associating together in a public school does not place one white child on a social equality with all the other white children attending that school. Far from it. There is no such thing as forcing social equality. That is purely a matter of individual choice and preference. A man may consider himself the social equal of anybody, yet that does not guarantee him admittance to every social circle he might wish to enter.

The maintenance of separate schools is no great hardship as long as there is no discrimination in the matter of efficiency, but it is undemocratic and a violation of the spirit of political equality that should prevail in a government of, for and by the people. That is the seed that is bound to produce the noxious weeds of dissension and propagate race hatred.

In stating that there must be agreement for separate schools, Bishop Galloway made an error, but in the remainder of his address he was right, and a great deal more sensible and just than the Vardamans, Tillmans and their ilk, who would keep the negro race in absolute ignorance so that its members might be forever bound in practical slavery.

BETTER THAN ARMOR.

Who can deny at least a secret admiration of of the man or woman with a certain nobleness of demeanor and a reserved distinction and elegance of manner? It is simply a state of mind brought about by education, environment, self-study and repression of undesirable tendencies, and yet it fortifies the possessor against attack from without more completely than would a coat of armor.

This desirable manner comes to those of mature age as a result of a life of unselfishness and goodness—a life devoted in the first place to the welfare and happiness of parents, brothers and sisters and later to the promotion of happiness among associates and all mankind.

Duluth contains many people who possess this charm, but none more thoroughly than a former minister of the Gospel now gathered to his fathers, who devoted his life to sympathetic and practical ministrations to the poor, the needy and the sorrowing. As a result he lived a charmed life. No man was so low as to do him violence or offer him insult. His Christ-like conduct and courtly manner inspired only respect, love and good will from rich or poor, even from those who had been overcome with criminal tendencies. His life did much to create and sustain among the people of Duluth a belief in religion and its power for good.

The man whose person is thus hedged about is rarely subject to attack from the quarrelsome, the boisterous or the profane. The ears of the man who swears not are rarely greeted with profanity addressed at him; the man who uses no vulgar language is rarely offended by vulgarity; he whose person and life are pure is seldom the target of impurity.

This distinction of manner and courtly grace, which all mankind go greatly admires and respects, can only be acquired as a result of a life of unselfish devotion to the welfare of humanity and by persistently refraining from infringing upon the rights of others. It is nature's reward to the mind and nature's protection to the body for a life well and properly lived.

FIGURES FOR UNCLE JOE.

In the Nashville Banner of June 11, is published the annual report of the state mine inspector of Tennessee. The Herald compiles from the report the following table showing the value of the different products, the amount expended for labor in their production and the balance going to the operators:

	Tons.	Value.	Labor Cost.	Balance.
Coal	4,810,758	$6,173,724	$4,185,907	$1,987,817
Iron	724,294	878,909	511,248	367,661
Barytes	14,185	49,618	17,475	32,143
Copper	319,873	719,714	496,485	223,229
Fluor spar	1,000	11,250	1,500	10,750
Lead	800	5,760	2,000	3,760
Zinc blende	204	6,120	4,800	1,320
Marble	.....	438,450	108,252	330,198
Phosphate	445,510	1,434,999	625,604	809,056

The report says that "altogether there were 15,819 men engaged in the industry, who received $6,154,067. The total value of the products was $11,411,497." This leaves a balance of $5,257,430 for the mine owners. That shows an average wage for the year of $395.22 to each workingman, or in round numbers, $1.32 per man per working day. While these miners were drawing this munificent wage, the mine owners were dividing up almost as much as all these men earned to pay interest on capital invested and other expenses. If the Hon. Joe Cannon can figure out how these miners buy furniture and carpets and subsist on something better than sow belly and corn bread as a result of these Grand Republican times he is welcome to the task. Figures don't lie, unless manipulated. Sometimes politicians do.

The theory that competent mine inspection is an unnecessary expense and of no practical benefit to the miner is also exploded by this report, which bears this testimony: "It is gratifying to state that the fatal accidents in the coal mines of Tennessee during the year 1903 number only 26. This is a reduction of 200, or 88½ per cent, as compared with the year 1902, in which 200 men were killed by the explosions of the Nelson and Fraterville mines. This is due to the commendable action of the last legislature in the passage of the new mining laws, giving the miner theoretical protection from all danger, except the consequences of his own willful disobedience, and giving this department two inspectors, clothed with the power to enforce such rules and regulations as, in their judgment, are essential for the protection of life and property, employer and employe, and providing for more frequent inspections, at stated intervals, of all coal mines in the state. There have been quite a number of new mines opened up in the state during the year, necessarily employing a large number of new and inexperienced men; and only two accidents have occurred in them. While this is true in Tennessee, the statistics for the United States show a gradual increase in the number of persons killed to every thousand employed—from 2.53 in 1893 to 3.52 in 1902."

Proper government inspection of mines is only objected to by those grasping operators who desire to add to their own gain at the expense of human life. There is greater need for mine inspection than for the inspection of factories. The experience of Tennessee as well as that of every other state where mining is carried on leads to that conclusion.

A LESSON FOR PARENTS.

The streets of a city ought to be as safe for a woman to traverse at night as in broad daylight. But they are not. Neither is it likely that they ever will be. Much of the evil of this world is accomplished under cover of darkness.

Recent unspeakable outrages upon women and girls in Minneapolis bear testimony to this fact. All were accomplished long after nightfall. Bad as these crimes were they can never bring the misery and shame to their victims as will some consequences that young women bring upon themselves as the result of their own folly and the neglect of parents. And these consequences usually fall as the result of late hours and lack of restraint.

Liberty and independence for womenkind are all right in their place, but what can be thought of home influences when school girls can be lured to follow strange men after night? Why are young girls out on city streets alone after 10 o'clock at night? Vigilant as the authorities may be, they cannot protect all who expose themselves needlessly. The vultures of society look upon the woman who perambulates the streets without escort late at night as their legitimate prey. If women desire to be respected they must respect themselves, and those too young to know the dangers by which they are beset should be taught.

The lesson is one particularly for parents. They cannot be too careful. They should know where their young daughters are and what they are doing after nightfall, and in the daytime, too, for that matter. It is not alone the bestial criminal they must guard against, but the proneness to human nature to err. It is the duty of the law and the courts to punish crime, but after the crime is committed is often too late to save the victims from a life of shame and dishonor.

THE FIELD SURVEY

A chain is only as strong as its weakest link. The strength of a nation's prosperity should be measured by the standard of living that the lowliest members of the community are permitted to enjoy. In the world's history every nation that has succumbed went to pieces as a direct result of degradation and poverty of the masses, while there was wealth untold for the few.

The Detroit News says it is folly for Cuba to load herself with a debt of $35,000,000. If it is folly to borrow that amount what will fitly describe the man who will lend it. It is probable that the money lenders will see to it that Cuba does not borrow more than she is able to pay.

Since proclaiming against vacations, Russell Sage will not be very popular with the preachers from this time forward.

The coroner's jury at Victor, Colo., found that the explosion at Independence, in which fifteen non-union miners were killed, was a result of a conspiracy entered into by certain members of the Western Federation of Miners. The verdict of this jury would bear more weight if it were definitely known that its membership was composed of men whose verdict could be relied upon as a truthful one. But if the jury was picked from members of the Citizens' alliance it will require more than their say-so to convince the public that they returned a true verdict. It would be reasonable to conclude that the union members were guilty of the crime were it not for the fact that the Mine Owners' association and the Citizens' alliance have proved by their acts that they are more lawless than the miners. The guilt of those who committed the crime will only be established when they are convicted by a fair and impartial jury. Where can such a jury be found in the district now under military rule?

The pardoning power ought only to be exercised where it can be shown by conclusive evidence that error has been made by the courts. It is too often used to further the political or other fortunes of those invested with the pardoning power.

IF YOU DO NOT KNOW, YOU OUGHT TO KNOW:

That five years ago from 23,000,000 acres of land, we produced 11,250,000 bales of cotton. Last year our acreage was nearly 25 per cent larger, but our crop was 1,000,000 bales less and owing to lack of labor and other reasons there is small chance for any great increase in the bulk of our yearly products. The demand for cotton stuffs is expanding tremendously and new fields will certainly have to be opened. The Soudan, the Valley of the Middle Nile and the other semi-tropical possessions of European countries, where cheap labor is procurable, can be turned to splendid advantage.

That our imports from Cuba during the first quarter of the present year amounted to $23,217,150, and our exports to that country, $6,500,000. Our reciprocity treaty has had a splendid stimulating effect upon our trade with the island, our imports having increased just 100 per cent in less than a year.

That, of course, it is difficult to give a present valuation as a basis of comparison for ancient moneys, but while we think that Rockefeller's wealth of something like $1,000,000,000 is enormous, it is well not to forget that in Jerusalem during Roman times there were three Jews who between them were able to face an expenditure of $100,000,000 a year for 21 years. One of them gave his daughter a dowry of $425,000,000; Joseph's Pharaoh accumulated something like $5,000,000,000, and Solomon put up about $250,000,000 for his Temple, while Herod's cost even more. There have been high flyers in all ages.

That it is reported that some 75,000 railway employes, engaged chiefly in extension and building work, will be discharged within the next month or so. Railroad business has fallen off considerably. The net earnings of the roads have decreased since Jan. 1 something like $16,000,000.

That it is authoritatively shown that the fire loss at Toronto was $8,564,000. One hundred brick buildings were totally destroyed in an area something like twenty acres in extent.

That the total number of railroad collisions during the last year was 1832, and derailments 1179, of which 287 collisions and 119 derailments affected passenger trains. The damage to cars, engines and roadways by these accidents amounted to $2,527,000. During the quarter ending December, 1903, there were 147 people killed and 1148 injured in railroad accidents, a particularly high rate, the killed being over 100 per cent more than any other quarter for several years past.

HOTEL GOSSIP

F. L. Berry, of St. Paul, who is at the St. Louis, where he registered from St. Paul several days ago, represents the well known scale manufacturing firm of Fairbanks, Morse & Co., and it appears coincidental with his occupation that Mr. Berry should be a man of unusually large girth and height.

Owing to his unusual stature and weight Mr. Berry has had numerous comments passed in his hearing, evidently intended to be at his expense, but as he appears to enjoy them as much as the other fellows, they can hardly be termed as at his expense. He has been referred to as an unusually large berry, and it has been said of him that he is a man of unusual weight in the scale business.

Not long since in riding between St. Paul and Minneapolis on a street car Mr. Berry had a fine opportunity to give one of his commentators a pat rejoinder and did not overlook the opportunity. This particular individual was of unusual smallness and had the manner of self-importance that sometimes seems so out of proportion when noticed in small people.

When he came into the car he found a space next to Mr. Berry unoccupied and seated himself there. After eyeing Mr. Berry pretty well as they rode for a block or so he had a thought that he could not resist giving expression to.

"Guess if they charged by weight on these cars you would have to pay a good deal more than the rest of us, wouldn't you?" he asked.

"Maybe so," replied Mr. Berry, as he sized up his interrogator. "But it would be disadvantageous for you, in such a case. The company would not stop a car to take you on. It would not be worth while."

The small man seemed to have no inclination for further conversation and soon left the car.

With the Sabbath school convention and the music teachers' meeting, as well as settlers coming in to enter registration at the land office, the hotels are doing an unusually large business this week. William McKay says he must have turned away at least twenty-five people last night at his hostelry, and the Spalding had a much bigger run this morning than usual, with forty or fifty people in before 10 o'clock. The St. Louis, too, was getting a fair share of the arrivals.

There was trouble of an unusual sort at a telephone in one of the big hotels the other evening. A woman who was stopping in the house went to the clerk and told him she would like to use the phone, whereupon he politely told her where to find it. She went to the booth and entered it.

But she did not remain therein. She came out almost immediately, much changed in appearance and very angry. She approached the clerk with much indignation and demanded to know why more attention was not paid to the requirements of decency, that anybody should be allowed to play practical jokes on the guests.

"Just look at my face," said she. "See the dirt on it. It's cigar ashes that came from the telephone when I went in to use it. It was all right when I first went in and was waiting for central, but as soon as she said 'Hello' and I started to tell her what I wanted, a puff of cigar ashes came out of the mouthpiece and all over my face. It's very fortunate I did not get them in my eyes, or I certainly should have sued the hotel for damages."

The clerk apologized the best he could, and the unmollified woman departed to her room to wash her face. The clerk explained afterward that he supposed some man who had been holding a cigar in his mouth when he went in to use the telephone had jostled it in the mouthpiece, cutting off the ashes. As soon as the woman spoke into the telephone it blew the ashes out into her face. At least the clerk says that if the woman did not disturb the ashes by speaking into the mouthpiece, the hello girl at the central office must have been eating onions.

His friends think that it is a pretty pretty good joke on Clinton Brooke, the commission broker, that he has been recently crediting the ownership of one of the most prominent touring cars in Duluth to a well known club. He had heard some boy say that the Duluth Golf club now owned an automobile, and as he went to his home in Lester Park on the street cars he saw frequently what appeared to be evidence of the truth of the report.

For several times he saw a big blue automobile marked "D. G. C." which he thought meant the Duluth Golf club. He did not think of the club being properly styled the North-Land Golf club.

Whistlin'.

When you're feelin' sad and lonely,
And you haven't got a yearn
For the city ways and people,
Which they never give a dern
Fer you and yours, it's comfort
To hear the sweet and low
And hesitatin' whistle
Of a tune you used to know—

Like "Home, Sweet Home," for instance;
And you look up to the skies
And wonder if it's rainin',
'Cause you're damp around the eyes.
It ain't wuth shucks fer music,
The whistler don't know Art;
But just the same the whistlin'
Gits in close to your heart.

Somewhere the whestler's whistlin'
In the racket and the roar—
You can only catch a little
But you want to hear some more;
And you find it as it wanders
From the busy, noisy street,
Like an old friend from the country
That you're mighty glad to meet.

Er mebbe "Old Dan Tucker"
Is the tune the whistler blows,
And your heels they git to knockin'
And your lonesome feelin' goes
And sets down 'way back yonder
To the time you used to dance,
And then went home with Mary
At daylight, in a trance.

Of course it ain't the music
That they furnish from a stand
By orkestry musicians—
But you'll bet it beats the band.

Lesson to Union Men.

Detroit News: Responsibility for the acts of a few dangerous criminals, who appeared to be acting as partisans of the miners, was charged up to the miners' union. This is almost invariably the case, and experience should teach these unions that their most dangerous enemies are the lawless and irresponsible ones who are within their organization.

WHAT SOME WOMEN NEED.

Chicago Inter Ocean: According to a dispatch from Berlin, women assembled there from all over the world have formed an international suffrage league and adopted a platform containing at least one very curious plank.

This is a declaration that woman, not having the suffrage, owes obedience neither to her husband nor to the state, and that every government taxing women without the suffrage exercises tyranny irreconcilable with justice.

The point of obedience to a husband need not be discussed in the United States. It is without interest here, for the reason that the practice of the typical American husband, regardless of theory, is to do his level best to get his wife everything she wants. If anything like a majority, if even a large minority, of American wives wanted the suffrage, their husbands would get it for them just as soon as the necessary legal formalities could be complied with.

But the position that women owe to obedience to the state because they have no direct voice in its government is curious and interesting as showing to what absurdities the 'social contract" theory may be carried.

The "social contract" theory is pretty well exploded now. All serious students know that there never was a time when "independent" families got together and agreed to form a state and submit themselves to its laws. And even in its best days that theory never went below the family to the individuals to find the constituents of its state.

That is what these women have tried to do. They declare that the state is merely a compact between individuals, and that those individuals who are unequal in privileges in the state owe no obedience to it. They refuse to obey the state because they have not the privilege of suffrage. In effect they declare themselves outlaws, and differ from anarchists only in that they do not openly seek the destruction of the state.

However, it is unnecessary to discuss the vagaries of Miss Susan B. Anthony, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, Dr. Anita Augspurg, and their associates seriously. What some of them need is husbands, and what all of them need is not the suffrage, but just a little historical knowledge, and, above all, a sense of humor.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Girls should remember that an ugly husband makes a faithful one.

When a girl has wavy, crinkly hair it is a sign a lot of other girls hate her.

A girl can nearly always improve her complexion by kissing a man against her will.

If a man acts as if he were deeply interested in a woman's wit she will take all the rest for granted.

Without half trying a widow can make a man believe little children will teach her more worldliness than she knows.

Forgiveness.

Now bury with the dead years conflicts dead,
And with fresh days let all begin anew.
Why linger amid shrivelled leaf-drifts tread,
When buds are swelling, flower-sheaths peeping through?
Seen through the vista of the vanished years,
How trivial seem the struggle and the crown,
How vain past feuds, when reconciling tears,
Course down the channel worn by vanished frown.
How few mean half the bitterness they speak!
Words more than feelings keep us still apart,
And, in the heat of passion and of pique,
The tongue is far more cruel than the heart.
Since love along makes it worth while to live,
Let all be now forgiven and forgive.
—ALFRED AUSTIN.

Hold Thou My Hands.

Hold Thou my hands!
In grief and joy, in hope and fear,
Lord, let me feel that Thou are near,
Hold, Thou my hands!

If e'er by doubts
Of Thy good fatherhood depressed,
I cannot find in Thee my rest,
Hold Thou my hands!

Hold Thou my hands!
These passionate hands too quick to smite,
These hands so eager for delight—
Hold Thou my hands!

And when at length,
With darkened eyes and fingers cold,
I seek some last loved hand to hold,
Hold Thou my hands!
—WILLIAM CANTON.

True Test of Love.

Boston Transcript: From Chicago comes the dictum that "If a man loves his wife he will eat her cooking." A thoroughly mediaeval test of affection, that. The old idea was of devotion to the death. The modern point of view is that it is a proof of a man's love for his wife to keep himself in good fettle to win for her sufficient of this world's substance so that she can patronize the baker.

A CLEVELAND DELEGATION.

The Illinois Democratic state convention resulted in a great victory for John P. Hopkins, the representative of the Cleveland Democracy. By an alliance with William R. Hearst, he obtained absolute control of the convention and ran things to suit himself, with the result that the politicians who worked to get a Hearst delegation were left out in the cold and Hopkins and other staunch supporters of ex-President Cleveland, who believe that Grover is the strongest man who can be placed at the head of the Democratic ticket, were selected as delegates-at-large to the St. Louis convention. What the Hearst supporters in Illinois and other states, who have not lost any opportunity to denounce the ex-president, will think of this deal by the yellow journal publisher, can readily be conjectured. It certainly is a bitter pill that they are called upon to swallow.

And Hearst himself got the short end of the combination. Resolutions indorsing his candidacy were passed, of course, but the sympathies of Hopkins and his associates on the delegation are well known and it will not take them long to decide that instructions lose their effect when the candidate has no show of nomination. They will give Hearst a complimentary vote on one or two ballots and then they will probably be found trying to stampede the convention for Grover Cleveland.

The result in Illinois was clearly forecasted in a special dispatch from Chicago recently published in The Herald. It was then stated that Hopkins and Hearst had made a combine to defeat Carter Harrison in his attempt to control the state convention and that one of the conditions was that Hopkins should name a Cleveland delegation to St. Louis. The prediction has been verified.

NEGRO EDUCATION.

It is a matter of general satisfaction that not all the leading men of Mississippi, where Governor Vardaman was elected to office because of his anti-negro views, are so bound up by race hatred that they are incapable of striving to do justice to the negro.

At the session of the education conference in Montgomery, Ala., a few weeks ago, Bishop Charles B. Galloway of the Methodist Episcopal church south, for Mississippi, made one of the most significant addresses, insisting in a conservative, but forcible, way on the necessity of adequate educational opportunities for both races, although not in common. He holds, with the best and fairest minds of all races, that ignorance is not a cure for any evil.

He said there must be agreement upon certain things before definite advancement of educational work could be hoped for. One was that there must be separate schools and that the social relations of the two races must be distinct. As to the manner of living together in the community, he holds the Southern view; but he does not hold that it is either prudent or Christian to withhold from the inferior race the opportunity of advancement in civilization, and he insisted upon the duty of providing the negroes with means of education as a necessary condition of the prosperity of the South. Since the two races must live and work together as citizens and as component parts of the state, he maintained that the public welfare demanded that neither race should be degraded in its capacity by enforced ignorance and moral neglect.

Even this moderate Southern view so incensed Governor Vardaman that in discussing the matter with another bishop of the same church, he declared that Bishop Galloway "was going about with a belly full of hot air and yellow-legged chickens, pandering to the Massachusetts negro lovers." According to the dispatch some of the other things he said would not bear printing.

It is certainly a deplorable condition of affairs when a man of such caliber can be elected as chief executive of a state in the American Union. It is the rantings of such negro-haters as this that create a race question in this country. Even Bishop Galloway's separate school plan has a serious defect. The establishment of separate public schools at once raises an insurmountable barrier of prejudice between the two races that can never be overcome. The white child at once reaches the natural conclusion that he is provided with a separate school because he is considered the superior of the colored child simply because he is white. The negro child concludes that he is given a separate school and considered the inferior of all white children simply because he is colored. The result is that this prejudice is never obliterated from the minds of either. And race hatred results.

The plain truth is that all institutions supported by public funds as well as the ballot box should be open and free to all citizens, no matter of what race, creed, rank or color. Only in that way can political and industrial equality be maintained and only in that way can race prejudice and race hatred be obliterated. Neither does that plan establish social equality. Associating together in a public school does not place one white child on a social equality with all the other white children attending that school. Far from it. There is no such thing as forcing social equality. That is purely a matter of individual choice and preference. A man may consider himself the social equal of anybody, yet that does not guarantee him admittance to every social circle he might wish to enter.

The maintenance of separate schools is no great hardship as long as there is no discrimination in the matter of efficiency, but it is undemocratic and a violation of the spirit of political equality that should prevail in a government of, for and by the people. That is the seed that is bound to produce the noxious weeds of dissension and propagate race hatred.

In stating that there must be agreement for separate schools, Bishop Galloway made an error, but in the remainder of his address he was right, and a great deal more sensible and just than the Vardamans, Tillmans and their ilk, who would keep the negro race in absolute ignorance so that its members might be forever bound in practical slavery.

BETTER THAN ARMOR.

Who can deny at least a secret admiration of of the man or woman with a certain nobleness of demeanor and a reserved distinction and elegance of manner? It is simply a state of mind brought about by education, environment, self-study and repression of undesirable tendencies, and yet it fortifies the possessor against attack from without more completely than would a coat of armor.

This desirable manner comes to those of mature age as a result of a life of unselfishness and goodness—a life devoted in the first place to the welfare and happiness of parents, brothers and sisters and later to the promotion of happiness among associates and all mankind.

Duluth contains many people who possess this charm, but none more thoroughly than a former minister of the Gospel now gathered to his fathers, who devoted his life to sympathetic and practical ministrations to the poor, the needy and the sorrowing. As a result he lived a charmed life. No man was so low as to do him violence or offer him insult. His Christ-like conduct and courtly manner inspired only respect, love and good will from rich or poor, even from those who had been overcome with criminal tendencies. His life did much to create and sustain among the people of Duluth a belief in religion and its power for good.

The man whose person is thus hedged about is rarely subject to attack from the quarrelsome, the boisterous or the profane. The ears of the man who swears not are rarely greeted with profanity addressed at him; the man who uses no vulgar language is rarely offended by vulgarity; he whose person and life are pure is seldom the target of impurity.

This distinction of manner and courtly grace, which all mankind go greatly admires and respects, can only be acquired as a result of a life of unselfish devotion to the welfare of humanity and by persistently refraining from infringing upon the rights of others. It is nature's reward to the mind and nature's protection to the body for a life well and properly lived.

FIGURES FOR UNCLE JOE.

In the Nashville Banner of June 11, is published the annual report of the state mine inspector of Tennessee. The Herald compiles from the report the following table showing the value of the different products, the amount expended for labor in their production and the balance going to the operators:

	Tons.	Value.	Labor Cost.	Balance.
Coal..	4,810,758	$6,173,724	$4,185,907	$1,987,817
Iron	724,294	878,909	511,248	367,661
Barytes..	14,185	49,618	17,475	32,143
Copper ..	319,873	719,714	496,485	223,229
Fluor spar	1,000	11,250	1,500	10,750
Lead	800	5,700	2,000	3,700
Zinc blende	204	6,120	4,800	1,320
Marble	.....	428,450	198,252	230,198
Phosphate	445,510	1,434,999	625,694	809,056

The report says that "altogether there were 15,819 men engaged in the industry, who received $6,154,067. The total value of the products was $11,411,497." This leaves a balance of $5,257,430 for the mine owners. That shows an average wage for the year of $395.22 to each workingman, or in round numbers, $1.32 per man per working day. While these miners were drawing this munificent wage, the mine owners were dividing up almost as much as all these men earned to pay interest on capital invested and other expenses. If the Hon. Joe Cannon can figure out how these miners buy furniture and carpets and subsist on something better than sow belly and corn bread as a result of these Grand Republican times he is welcome to the task. Figures don't lie, unless manipulated. Sometimes politicians do.

The theory that competent mine inspection is an unnecessary expense and of no practical benefit to the miner is also exploded by this report, which bears this testimony: "It is gratifying to state that the fatal accidents in the coal mines of Tennessee during the year 1903 number only 26. This is a reduction of 200, or 88½ per cent, as compared with the year 1902, in which 200 men were killed by the explosions of the Nelson and Fraterville mines. This is due to the commendable action of the last legislature in the passage of the new mining laws, giving the miner theoretical protection from all danger, except the consequences of his own willful disobedience, and giving this department two inspectors, clothed with the power to enforce such rules and regulations as, in their judgment, are essential for the protection of life and property, employer and employe, and providing for more frequent inspections, at stated intervals, of all coal mines in the state. There have been quite a number of new mines opened up in the state during the year, necessarily employing a large number of new and inexperienced men; and only two accidents have occurred in them. While this is true in Tennessee, the statistics for the United States show a gradual increase in the number of persons killed to every thousand employed—from 2.53 in 1893 to 3.52 in 1902."

Proper government inspection of mines is only objected to by those grasping operators who desire to add to their own gain at the expense of human life. There is greater need for mine inspection than for the inspection of factories. The experience of Tennessee as well as that of every other state where mining is carried on leads to that conclusion.

A LESSON FOR PARENTS.

The streets of a city ought to be as safe for a woman to traverse at night as in broad daylight. But they are not. Neither is it likely that they ever will be. Much of the evil of this world is accomplished under cover of darkness.

Recent unspeakable outrages upon women and girls in Minneapolis bear testimony to this fact. All were accomplished long after nightfall. Bad as these crimes were they can never bring the misery and shame to their victims as will some consequences that young women bring upon themselves as the result of their own folly and the neglect of parents. And these consequences usually fall as the result of late hours and lack of restraint.

Liberty and independence for womenkind are all right in their place, but what can be thought of home influences when school girls can be lured to follow strange men after night? Why are young girls out on city streets alone after 10 o'clock at night? Vigilant as the authorities may be, they cannot protect all who expose themselves needlessly. The vultures of society look upon the woman who perambulates the streets without escort late at night as their legitimate prey. If women desire to be respected they must respect themselves, and those too young to know the dangers by which they are beset should be taught.

The lesson is one particularly for parents. They cannot be too careful. They should know where their young daughters are and what they are doing after nightfall, and in the daytime, too, for that matter. It is not alone the bestial criminal they must guard against, but the proneness to human nature to err. It is the duty of the law and the courts to punish crime, but after the crime is committed is often too late to save the victims from a life of shame and dishonor.

THE FIELD SURVEY

A chain is only as strong as its weakest link. The strength of a nation's prosperity should be measured by the standard of living that the lowliest members of the community are permitted to enjoy. In the world's history every nation that has succumbed went to pieces as a direct result of degradation and poverty of the masses, while there was wealth untold for the few.

The Detroit News says it is folly for Cuba to load herself with a debt of $35,000,000. If it is folly to borrow that amount what will fitly describe the man who will lend it. It is probable that the money lenders will see to it that Cuba does not borrow more than she is able to pay.

Since proclaiming against vacations, Russell Sage will not be very popular with the preachers from this time forward.

The coroner's jury at Victor, Colo., found that the explosion at Independence, in which fifteen non-union miners were killed, was a result of a conspiracy entered into by certain members of the Western Federation of Miners. The verdict of this jury would bear more weight if it were definitely known that its membership was composed of men whose verdict could be relied upon as a truthful one. But if the jury was picked from members of the Citizens' alliance it will require more than their say-so to convince the public that they returned a true verdict. It would be reasonable to conclude that the union members were guilty of the crime were it not for the fact that the Mine Owners' association and the Citizens' alliance have proved by their acts that they are more lawless than the miners. The guilt of those who committed the crime will only be established when they are convicted by a fair and impartial jury. Where can such a jury be found in the district now under military rule?

The pardoning power ought only to be exercised where it can be shown by conclusive evidence that error has been made by the courts. It is too often used to further the political or other fortunes of those invested with the pardoning power.

IF YOU DO NOT KNOW, YOU OUGHT TO KNOW:

That five years ago from 23,000,000 acres of land, we produced 11,250,000 bales of cotton. Last year our acreage was nearly 25 per cent larger, but our crop was 1,000,000 bales less and owing to lack of labor and other reasons there is small chance for any great increase in the bulk of our yearly products. The demand for cotton stuffs is expanding tremendously and new fields will certainly have to be opened. The Soudan, the Valley of the Middle Nile and the other semi-tropical possessions of European countries, where cheap labor is procurable, can be turned to splendid advantage.

That our imports from Cuba during the first quarter of the present year amounted to $23,217,150, and our exports to that country, $6,500,000. Our reciprocity treaty has had a splendid stimulating effect upon our trade with the island, our imports having increased just 100 per cent in less than a year.

That, of course, it is difficult to give a present valuation as a basis of comparison for ancient moneys, but while we think that Rockefeller's wealth of something like $1,000,000,000 is enormous, it is well not to forget that in Jerusalem during Roman times there were three Jews who between them were able to face an expenditure of $100,000,000 a year for 21 years. One of them gave his daughter a dowry of $425,000,000; Joseph's Pharaoh accumulated something like $5,000,000,000, and Solomon put up about $250,000,000 for his Temple, while Herod's cost even more. There have been high flyers in all ages.

That it is reported that some 75,000 railway employes, engaged chiefly in extension and building work, will be discharged within the next month or so. Railroad business has fallen off considerably. The net earnings of the roads have decreased since Jan. 1 something like $16,000,000.

That it is authoritatively shown that the fire loss at Toronto was $8,564,000. One hundred brick buildings were totally destroyed in an area something like twenty acres in extent.

That the total number of railroad collisions during the last year was 1832, and derailments 1179, of which 287 collisions and 119 derailments affected passenger trains. The damage to cars, engines and roadways by these accidents amounted to $2,527,000. During the quarter ending December, 1903, there were 147 people killed and 1148 injured in railroad accidents, a particularly high rate, the killed being over 100 per cent more than any other quarter for several years past.

HOTEL GOSSIP

F. L. Berry, of St. Paul, who is at the St. Louis, where he registered from St. Paul several days ago, represents the well known scale manufacturing firm of Fairbanks, Morse & Co., and it appears coincidental with his occupation that Mr. Berry should be a man of unusually large girth and height.

Owing to his unusual stature and weight Mr. Berry has had numerous comments passed in his hearing, evidently intended to be at his expense, but as he appears to enjoy them as much as the other fellows, they can hardly be termed as at his expense. He has been referred to as an unusually large berry, and it has been said of him that he is a man of unusual weight in the scale business.

Not long since in riding between St. Paul and Minneapolis on a street car Mr. Berry had a fine opportunity to give one of his commentators a pat rejoinder and did not overlook the opportunity. This particular individual was of unusual smallness and had the manner of self-importance that sometimes seems so out of proportion when noticed in small people.

When he came into the car he found a space next to Mr. Berry unoccupied and seated himself there. After eyeing Mr. Berry pretty well as they rode for a block or so he had a thought that he could not resist giving expression to.

"Guess if they charged by weight on these cars you would have to pay a good deal more than the rest of us, wouldn't you?" he asked.

"Maybe so," replied Mr. Berry, as he sized up his interrogator. "But it would be disadvantageous for you, in such a case. The company would not stop a car to take you on. It would not be worth while."

The small man seemed to have no inclination for further conversation and soon left the car.

With the Sabbath school convention and the music teachers' meeting, as well as settlers coming in to enter registration at the land office, the hotels are doing an unusually large business this week. William McKay says he must have turned away at least twenty-five people last night at his hostelry, and the Spalding had a much bigger run this morning than usual, with forty or fifty people in before 10 o'clock. The St. Louis, too, was getting a fair share of the arrivals.

There was trouble of an unusual sort at a telephone in one of the big hotels the other evening. A woman who was stopping in the house went to the clerk and told him she would like to use the 'phone, whereupon he politely told her where to find it. She went to the booth and entered it.

But she did not remain therein. She came out almost immediately, much changed in appearance and very angry. She approached the clerk with much indignation and demanded to know why more attention was not paid to the requirements of decency, that anybody should be allowed to play practical jokes on the guests.

"Just look at my face," said she. "See the dirt on it. It's cigar ashes that came from the telephone when I went in to use it. It was all right when I first went in and was waiting for central, but as soon as she said 'Hello' and I started to tell her what I wanted, a puff of cigar ashes came out of the mouthpiece and all over my face. It's very fortunate I did not get them in my eyes, or I certainly should have sued the hotel for damages."

The clerk apologized the best he could, and the unmollified woman departed to her room to wash her face. The clerk explained afterward that he supposed some man who had been holding a cigar in his mouth when he went in to use the telephone had jostled it in the mouthpiece, cutting off the ashes. As soon as the woman spoke into the telephone it blew the ashes out into her face. At least the clerk says that if the woman did not disturb the ashes by speaking into the mouthpiece, the hello girl at the central office must have been eating onions.

His friends think that it is a pretty pretty good joke on Clinton Brooke, the commission broker, that he has been recently crediting the ownership of one of the most prominent touring cars in Duluth to a well known club. He had heard some boy say that the Duluth Golf club now owned an automobile, and as he went to his home in Lester Park on the street cars he saw frequently what appeared to be evidence of the truth of the report.

For several times he saw a big blue automobile marked "D. G. C." which he thought meant the Duluth Golf club. He did not think of the club being properly styled the North-Land Golf club.

Hearst's Admirers.

Boston Transcript: It is becoming as plain as the St. Louis pike that if during the past decade or two we had annexed Terra del Fuego and Prince Patrick's Land, they, too, would be sending delegates to the Democratic convention pledged to yellow journalism. Everything in fact that is out of the way and inconsequential is declaring for Hearst.

Whistlin'.

When you're feelin' sad and lonely,
And you haven't got a yearn
For the city ways and people,
Which they never give a dern
Fer you and yours, it's comfort
To hear the sweet and low
And hesitatin' whistle
Of a tune you used to know—

Like "Home, Sweet Home," for instance;
And you look up to the skies
And wonder if it's rainin',
'Cause you're damp around the eyes.
It ain't wuth shucks fer music,
The whistler don't know Art;
But just the same the whistlin'
Gits in close to your heart.

Somewhere the whestler's whistlin'
In the racket and the roar—
You can only catch a little
But you want to hear some more;
And you find it as it wanders
From the busy, noisy street,
Like an old friend from the country
That you're mighty glad to meet.

Er mebbe "Old Dan Tucker"
Is the tune the whistler blows,
And your heels they git to knockin'
And your lonesome feelin' goes
And sets down 'way back yonder
To the time you used to dance,
And then went home with Mary
At daylight, in a trance.

Of course it ain't the music
That they furnish from a stand
By orkestry musicians—
But you'll bet it beats the band.

Lesson to Union Men.

Detroit News: Responsibility for the acts of a few dangerous criminals, who appeared to be acting as partisans of the miners, was charged up to the miners' union. This is almost invariably the case, and experience should teach these unions that their most dangerous enemies are the lawless and irresponsible ones who are within their organization.

WHAT SOME WOMEN NEED.

Chicago Inter Ocean: According to a dispatch from Berlin, women assembled there from all over the world have formed an international suffrage league and adopted a platform containing at least one very curious plank.

This is a declaration that woman, not having the suffrage, owes obedience neither to her husband nor to the state, and that every government taxing women without the suffrage exercises tyranny irreconcilable with justice.

The point of obedience to a husband need not be discussed in the United States. It is without interest here, for the reason that the practice of the typical American husband, regardless of theory, is to do his level best to get his wife everything she wants. If anything like a majority, if even a large minority, of American wives wanted the suffrage, their husbands would get it for them just as soon as the necessary legal formalities could be complied with.

But the position that women owe to obedience to the state because they have no direct voice in its government is curious and interesting as showing to what absurdities the 'social contract" theory may be carried.

The "social contract" theory is pretty well exploded now. All serious students know that there never was a time when "independent" families got together and agreed to form a state and submit themselves to its laws. And even in its best days that theory never went below the family to the individuals to find the constituents of its state.

That is what these women have tried to do. They declare that the state is merely a compact between individuals, and that those individuals who are unequal in privileges in the state owe no obedience to it. They refuse to obey the state because they have not the privilege of suffrage. In effect they declare themselves outlaws, and differ from anarchists only in that they do not openly seek the destruction of the state.

However, it is unnecessary to discuss the vagaries of Miss Susan B. Anthony, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, Dr. Anita Augspurg, and their associates seriously. What some of them need is husbands, and what all of them need is not the suffrage, but just a little historical knowledge, and, above all, a sense of humor.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Girls should remember that an ugly husband makes a faithful one.

When a girl has wavy, crinkly hair it is a sign a lot of other girls hate her.

A girl can nearly always improve her complexion by kissing a man against her will.

If a man acts as if he were deeply interested in a woman's wit she will take all the rest for granted.

Without half trying a widow can make a man believe little children will teach her more worldliness than she knows.

Forgiveness.

Now bury with the dead years conflicts dead,
And with fresh days let all begin anew.
Why linger amid shrivelled leaf-drifts tread,
When buds are swelling, flower-sheaths peeping through?
Seen through the vista of the vanished years,
How trivial seem the struggle and the tears,
Course down the channel worn by vanished frown,
How few mean half the bitterness they speak!
Words more than feelings keep us still apart,
And, in the heat of passion and of pique,
The tongue is far more cruel than the heart,
Since love along makes it worth while to live,
Let all be now forgiven and forgive.
—ALFRED AUSTIN.

Hold Thou My Hands.

Hold Thou my hands!
In grief and joy, in hope and fear,
Lord, let me feel that Thou are near,
Hold, Thou my hands!

If e'er by doubts
Of Thy good fatherhood depressed,
I cannot find in Thee my rest,
Hold Thou my hands!

Hold Thou my hands!
These passionate hands too quick to smite,
These hands so eager for delight—
Hold Thou my hands!

And when at length,
With darkened eyes and fingers cold,
I seek some last loved hand to hold,
Hold Thou my hands!
—WILLIAM CANTON.

True Test of Love.

Boston Transcript: From Chicago comes the dictum that "If a man loves his wife he will eat her cooking." A thoroughly mediaeval test of affection, that. The old idea was of devotion to the death. The modern point of view is that it is a proof of a man's love for his wife to keep himself in good fettle to win for her sufficient of this world's substance so that she can patronize the baker.

TO GENEVA CONVENTION

Paul Gilbert of Duluth Y. M. C. A. to Attend Student Gathering.

Paul J. Gilbert, representing the Duluth Y. M. C. A., leaves tomorrow for Lake Geneva, Wis., to attend the fifteenth annual conference of the Student Young Men's Christian associations, to be held from Friday night, June 17, to Sunday night, June 26, under the direction of the student department of the international committee, with the co-operation of the secretarial institute and training school, at whose summer camp the gathering is held.

Although primarily a conference of the student associations of the various colleges and universities, the meeting is also attended by representatives of all other associations, like the one in Duluth, such delegates getting pointers on association work and bringing them back to be adopted in the work of their respective associations.

"This conference has had a deep influence on the personal lives of hundreds of college men," says the prospectus. "It has given them clearer views as to their relations to God and their fellows. It has helped many to form life purposes. It has added new meaning and dignity to college life. It has led to friendships that have been lasting. It has been the most potent factor in the promotion of organized Christian work among the students."

The main features of the conference are such as are calculated to best accomplish these results, and include addresses by prominent educators. After the discussions and addresses of the day are over the various delegations will meet informally by themselves and apply the lessons of the day to the needs of their individual institutions, or to their personal lives. Personal interviews with speakers, teachers, leaders and other delegates will, it is expected, constitute one of the most valuable features of the conference. Each afternoon will be given over to recreation, under the direction of a committee of prominent athletes.

It is likely that Phil Bevis, secretary of the local association, with possibly other members of the Duluth Y. M. C. A. will be present at Lake Geneva during a part of the conference.

The first party of local Y. M. C. A. members and their friends to leave for the St. Louis exposition on a special car, under the direction of the association, will start from Duluth July 5, arriving in the World's fair city the first day of the Democratic national convention. A number of prominent local Democrats will go to St. Louis on the association car.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION OPENS

Combined With Opening Service In Flag Day Observance.

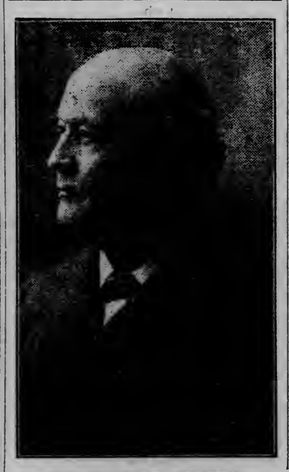

Dr. Robert Forbes Delivers Address Eloquent and Patriotic.

The opening session of the forty-sixth annual convention of the Minnesota Sunday School association at the First Methodist church, last evening was largely attended, there being about 200 of the out of town delegates present. Owing to the distance that they will come, not all of the delegations were here last night, a large number being expected today.

The service was in the line of a patriotic entertainment for the observance of Flag day and scattered through the audience were a large number of the local G. A. R. posts. It was opened with a number of musical selections by the church choir, under the direction of Prof. A. F. M. Custance.

The scripture lesson, relating to the miracle of the draught of fishes, was read by Rev. R. J. Mooney, of St. Luke's Episcopal church.

Rev. J. S. Montgomery, of Minneapolis, who was to have made the address of the evening on "The Sunday School and Christian Citizenship," was unable to reach Duluth and to Dr. Forbes fell the duty of filling out the evening service.

DR. ROBERT FORBES.

Dr. Forbes had been asked to talk about Flag day, so he combined with his own subject that of Rev. Mr. Montgomery's and gave an interesting talk along the line of patriotism.

Previous to Dr. Forbes' talk, Dr. S. P. Long, pastor of the First Methodist church, in the behalf of the local Sunday school association welcomed the visiting delegates to the Duluth churches and homes. He emphasized the fine climate and water supply of the Zenith City and called attention to the fact that Duluth has started the convention off with good weather.

Dr. Forbes spoke, in part, as follows:

"I have not looked up closely the history of Flag day. I will leave you to do that in your encyclopedias and histories. I know it is reported that the first American flag was made by Betsey Ross. I was in her old home; in Philadelphia, the other day. We honor her name and I am glad that the people of Philadelphia have preserved her home.

"The Sunday school is closely related with all that is good in our civilization. Christian citizenship is something in which we are all interested. There will come a time when the thunders of the cannon will have ceased, when the battle flags will be furled and the parliament of men will be the federation of the world. The day will come, in fact it is practically here, when the ocean's width shall be as nothing; when the mountain's heights shall no longer be an obstacle. The day is nearly here when we shall begin to realize the brotherhood of man. When it comes national distinction will disappear and we will have a theocracy.

"It is God's plan. The nations that have fallen into the tomb have worked out part of that plan. The nations of today are not accidents. While national distinction exists the love of country will be a virtue and Christian citizenship will be a problem.

"Christian citizenship is found everywhere whether in our own country, or the wilds of South America or Africa. If there is any country worth loving it is our own. This nation began where all the others left off. Nowhere else in the world did God use so much conscience, character and culture, as when he laid the foundations of this great nation. Our forefathers knew their rights and the men who framed our constitution framed one that nothing else will shake. The history of the United States of America reveals the hand of Providence just as much as does the history of Israel. I believe that God speaks to men today as in olden times and the men who wrote the constitution, they too, were the prophets of God.

"Our children at home and in the schools should be taught to realize the privilege of being a citizen of this great republic. They should be taught that treason to their country is treason toward their God. I believe that the best text book on patriotism is the old Bible.

"We charge our Roman Catholic brethern with keeping the Bible from the common people, but we do not realize that we Protestants are negligent in the matter of placing the Bible before the people we wish to reach. We send our children to school and place in their hands the geometry and other books of science, but not the Bible.

"We spend money for new church carpets and steeples but forget to put the Bible in the pews. Let us do without the carpets and steeples, if need be, and have the Bibles. The faithful use of the Bible will develop a great intelligence relative to these vital matters in which we are engaged as a nation and a people.

"There are an immense number of men and women in our Sunday schools who as teachers perform gatuiously a service that would cost us millions of dollars if we had to pay for it. Think of all the young people that are brought under these influences and who will be important factors in the future of this great civilization.

"I always feel when I organize a new Sunday school that it is the beginning of a church that I have set in motion influences that will go on and on and widen in scope through the centuries. I believe that all honor is due the Sunday school teachers for their work. The progress of science is vitally related to the work done in the Sunday schools.

"It was not the bushmen of Africa that discovered electricity. It was discovered in a Christian nation. There are other secrets yet hidden in the breast of nature. They will not be discovered by rude and barbarous nations, but by a people who have a moral development, so that God can trust them.

"Weighty responsibilities rest on us as a people. God did not lay the foundations of this nation for nothing. On that great foundation the Pilgrim fathers built the superstructure and on the superstructure have been working since, alongside of each other, the ministers, the soldiers and all other classes of people.

"There came a time when our forefathers had to declare and fight for their liberty. The soldier had his place in carving out our civilization. As time rolled on, once again the soldier was called out, this time to suppress a rebellion, and he responded to preserve the Union. The men who went to war carrying their country's flag carried a consecrated flag. The best way to have peace is to be prepared for war.

"It is well that the men who have been in battle have come here to mingle with the teachers of the Sunday schools. It is well that the banners of our Sunday schools and the flag of our country shall float together. Ours is the flag of which the soldier speaks, the flag that floats across the continent from ocean to ocean, and from the British possessions to the Gulf of Mexico. It has been carried to Hawaii, to Porto Rico and far off Luzon. I do not know where it will be carried next, but wherever it goes, there goes with it our great civilization, the civilization of Jesus Christ.

"You are followers of a leader who never lost a battle. Our great generals and leaders are dead and gone, but our greatest leader, He who leads the Sunday school hosts and the churches, died too, one Friday afternoon. In three days He came out of the grave and said, 'I am He that liveth and shall live forevermore.' You are followers of a leader who has shown the world that death does not hurt a man.

"Let us impress in the minds of the young these great truths. Let them go out in the world believing in the Bible, in the old book which our mothers taught us to believe, and they shall say this is our flag. It is worthy of all honor. Their prayer shall be 'This is the flag of our country and long shall it wave o'er the land of the free and the homes of the brave.'"

At the conclusion of Dr. Forbes' remarks the delegates were given souvenir badges which will not only distinguish them from the home delegations, but will serve as their tickets for a boat ride Friday evening, about the harbor and on the lake.

Dr. Cleland dismissed the meeting with benediction.

COLLINS IS SURE

That He Will Carry Hennepin County Against Dunn.

Appears Not to Be So Confident of Ramsey County.

St. Paul, June 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge Loren W. Collins, of St. Cloud, and James A. Martin, his campaign manager, yesterday afternoon had a conference with Governor S. R. Van Sant in the governor's private office at the capitol. Both the governor and the St. Cloud judge said after the conference that it had no political significance.

The judge said regarding his campaign in the state:

"Things seem to be coming my way. I think that sentiment in favor of my nomination is growing throughout the state and I am confident of victory.

"I believe that I will carry Hennepin county, and I don't care how many Democartic orators Mr. Dunn's managers put on the stump. I understand that they have a new Democratic orator tonight. I am satisfied that a majority of the Republican voters favor my nomination and that I will win out in the end."

The judge appeared not to be so confident of Ramsey county. He said he had not made any fight in Ramsey and mentioned the fact that Hill influence is strong there.

"No, my supporters have not put up a fight in Ramsey. I appreciate the fact that Hill influence is pretty strong in this county."

On being informed that the Dunn men claim a majority of both the First and Second congressional districts, Judge Collins said:

"Well, the convention will tell whether or not the Dunnn men have these districts cinched."

When the interview of Elmer H. Dearth, insurance commssioner, appearing in last night's Dispatch to the effect that Mr. Dearth could no longer consistenly support Dunn on account of the Princeton candidate's opposition to Governor Van Sant, was called to Judge Collins' attention he said:

"Well, that doesn't look bad for me, does it?"

"No, my talk with Governor Van Sant had no particular import," continued the St. Cloud judge. "I just called in to see him along with several Grand Army men. There was no politics in it."

The judge then darted out of the door of the capitol, accompanied by his son, and boarded a car for Minneapolis.

* * *

Job Lloyd, of Le Sueur Center, former candidate for railroad and warehouse commissioner, who was in St. Paul yesterday, expressed the opinion that R. C. Dunn will get the Third district practically solid.

"I do not pretend to carry Le Sueur county in my vest pocket," said Mr. Lloyd, "but I believe that a majority of the Republican voters are for the Princeton candidate. I think that Dunn sentiment prevails throughout the Third district."

* * *

P. J. Kerwin, of Waterville, former candidate for the appointment of second assitsant attorney general, a position to which P. A. Ewert, of Pipestone, was appointed, sizes up the political situation in Le Sueur county and the southern part of the state as follows:

"I think that R. C. Dunn is way in the lead in Le Sueur. He will get practically a solid delegation from Waseca county, and I believe that he will make an excellent showing in the First and Second congressional districts."

* * *

The gubernatorial fight in Hennepin county goes merrily on. Judge Collins says he has the county, and that it will be impossible for Dunn to get it away from him. The Dunn men say they are in the lead, and that if they hold their own from now until the state convention, two weeks hence, they will have the 113 delegates.

To the disinterested observer the situation is this: Judge Collins has the Hennepin county organization, consisting of George Matchan, Robert Jamison and such men as Frank Nye, Charles A. Smith, Senator George P. Wilson and United States Marshal Grimshaw. He is also particularly strong with the business men, whose taxes Mr. Dunn raised when he was ex-officio member of the state board of equalization. Moreover, Minneapolis is looked upon a good deal as Judge Collins' residence; he has lived there for many years, and he has an excellent reputation in the community. A considerable portion of the voters of the city favor Judge Collins because he is one of their number.

Dunn, on the other hand, is strong with the workingmen and middle classes. They admire his hale and outspoken ways. They say that a man of Mr. Dunn's temperament could not be dishonest if he tried. They look upon him as the friend of the poor man. Dunn, moreover, has a pretty effective organization, at the head of which are such men as James A. Peterson, Representative W. A. Nolan, of Grand Meadow, and Senator E. E. Smith.

King Carlos attended and won the tennis match, shot pigeons and did remarkable shooting with a pistol. Four men from the flagship Kearsarge and the Alabama had boxing contests at the king's request.

King Carlos, who takes great interest in athletics, remained on the grounds from 1:30 until 7 p. m. The combined bands of the fleet furnished the music. There was a large attendance, including Rear Admiral Barker, United States Minister Bryan and other diplomats.

WOMAN IMPOSES ON CHARITABLE PERSONS.

New York, June 15.—Ada Morgan, who claims Keokuk, Iowa, as her home, has been arrested here on the charge of imposing upon charitable persons with a tale of desertion and starvation. Graduating Exercises of Pupils Who Finish the Eighth.

East End Schools First Evening, West End the Second.

The graduating exercises of the Eighth grade of the city schools will this year be held on two evenings. The number of pupils completing the course in the grades and graduating to the high school is becoming larger each year and to have the exercises on a single evening has made an affair that has become too unwieldy.

MORE MEN DEPORTED

Thirty-Six Are Driven Out of Colorado By Militia.

Victor, Colo., June 15.—Thirty-six men were deported yesterday afternoon by the military. The men are residents of different sections of the district, but mainly lived in Cripple Creek and Victor. There was a crowd at the Florence & Cripple Creek railway station when the men were loaded on a train, but little excitement of any kind was manifested. The destination of the men was given out unofficially as New Mexico. The report was current, however, that they would be taken through the territory to the old Mexico line and made to pass over onto Mexican soil. A strong guard of military will accompany the men until they are finally released. The men sent out yesterday are nearly all union or sympathizers. Quite a number of them are married. Food was taken on the train for the prisoners.

Preparations are under way here looking to the eventual abrogation of martial law, which it is expected will occur in one week. A large number of deputy sheriffs will be commissioned to take charge of the district under Sheriff Bell's direction when martial law is called off. A list of men to act in that capacity is being prepared. Other deportations will be made, but just when the next train will be ready to be sent out is not stated at military headquarters. It is very quiet here and has been all day. The only event of importance was the deportation.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

Farmer Near St. Cloud Commits Murder and Suicide.

St. Cloud, Minn., June 15.—After stabbing his wife to death, and setting fire to his fine farm house, Frederick Nelson, a wealthy farmer, 70 years of age, started a fire in his well stocked machine house, and then going into the barn, tied a rope to a beam placed the nose about his neck and stabbing himself in the breast, lurched forward into eternity. His neck was broken and death was almost instantaneous.

Nelson lived on a farm in Santiago township and was the wealthiest man in this vicinity. There was no witness to the tragedy and the causes leading up to it are not known. Neighbors who were attracted to the scene by the smoke from the burning buildings arrived too late to save the dwelling and Mrs. Nelson's remains were burned to a crisp. The dead body of the aged farmer was found hanging in the barn, a great wound in his breast, and the bloody knife with which he had committed the double crime, lying at his feet.

RAMPOLLA RETURNS

To Papal Favor and Is Frequent Visitor to Pope.

Italian Bishops to Be Reduced—Church Diplomatic Changes.

Rome, June 15.—More deference is now being paid to Cardinal Rampolla. It is a consequence of the breaking of diplomatic relations with France, and Frauce's recall of the ambassador from the vatican. For fifteen years the cardinal was secretary of state, and would have succeeded his chief, the late pope, had not Austria projected its veto. At the accession of Pius X he is said to have felt that his position was a delicate one. Whatever his own views, he must not seem to interfere with whatever policy the new pope felt warranted in adopting.

Cardinal Rampolla therefore went into voluntary exile, and rarely went into the vatican or approached the pope, beyond paying his respects. He has lived, however, quite near to the vatican palace, his apartments being those in the rear of St. Peter's always reserved for the exclusive use of the archpriest of the basilica. In spite of his discretion, some enemies, who still remained about the vatican, tried to make it appear that the cardinal's retirement was a forced one, imposed by Pius X as a sign that he disapproved of the policy pursued by the preceding secretary. Some enemies even went so far as to declare that Rampolla would succeed Cardinal Celesia as archbishop of Palermo, thereby sending Rampella to his native Sicily. It is understood that this suggestion was made to the pope but he disregarded it.

At last Rampolla's patience came to an end, and a few days ago he presented himself in the vatican and asked Pius X officially to deny rumors in circulation. The pope complied, and publicly addressed friendly reproaches to the cardinal for his voluntary retirement. The words of Pius X., spoken in the presence of several prelates, have placed Rampolla again on a pedestal. He is now a frequent visitor to the papal apartments, and is almost daily consulted. Extreme delicacy, however, made him request that at all conferences Cardinal Merry del Val should be present.

Criticism is beginning to be heard of Mgr. Lorenzelli, the nuncio at Paris. His friends say he comes in merely for blame because somebody must be blamed for things that have gone wrong. His enemies declare him never to have been cut out for a diplomat. He was professor of themistic philosophy and theology at Rome when chosen by Leo XIII. for special honors. These honors ended by his being sent to Paris. He is blamed for failing to notify the vatican when the first symptoms of opposition were apparent among French officials. The anti-clerical feeling in senate and chamber were not detected early, the papal nuncio being busy with his books, it is said.

The impression prevails here that Pius X. will soon cause many changes to be made in the diplomatic staff, and that not only Lorenzeli, but several others cahrged with having little adaptation for diplomacy will be placed on the shelf. At a recent interview between Mgr. Lorenzelli, the nunico, and M. Delcasse, the foreign minister, disaster resulted to the vatican interests. The nunico asked a whole lot of questions in order to explore the government's mind, and not once, it is said, received a direct or a satisfactory answer. Finally, when the nunico departed, the minister said: "Adieu, monsigneur," as if it were a last good-bye.

Criticism has also been directed against Cardinal Merry del Val. Not knowing fully the situation, the cardinal secretary of state handed his resignation to the pope. Not only did Pius X. decline to accept it, but he gave voice to many words of praise for his young and faithful assistant, saying that all his acts of the vatican thus far had been his own, and that he alone is responsible.

Archbishop Falconio, apostolic delegate to the United States, is expected here tonight. He will be received by the pope on Monday next and will discuss with him al matters under discussion affecting the church in America. The rector of the American college in Rome, Mgr. Kennedy, who went to meet Falconio at Naples, offered him the American college's hospitality, but Falconio declined with thanks saying he wished to be the guest of the Franciscan order, to which he belongs, in the convent of St. Antonio, in Via Merulana, where he will be near to his superiors and to his general.

Mgr. Scalabrini, bishop of Placenza, and Mgr. Bonomelli, bishop of Cremona, have at the pope's suggestion turned over the whole work of the protection of Italian immigrants to the United States to the United Catholic societies of Italy, whose president is Count Grosoli. Until now these two bishops have taken the lead in this work of protection. The change has created surprise, since the protective work has been the life motive of the two prelates. It is said the transfer came at the suggestion of Cardinal Ferruri, archbishop of Milan, who thought that lay influences could do much more for the immigrants than could the heads of two rural dioceses.

It has been decided at the Vatican to suspend for the present all negotiations with the French government regarding the appointment of new bishops to the vacant sees of Bayonne, Saint-Jean-de-Maurienne, Ajaccio, Vannes, Nevers and Versailles. In their places the vicars capitular, who are at present in charge of administration in these several jurisdictions have been given enlarged powers and their nearest bishops have been authorized to perform all strictly episcopal acts until further directed.

The Italian government has under consideration a plan to reduce greatly the number of Roman Catholic bishops in Italy. The present number is 264, and it is contemplated to cut it down to sixty-nine. This would give one bishop for each Italian province. This would mean new limits for the dioceses, but it would also mean an immense saving to the government, which pays each bishop an annual stipend of $1000. It is pointed out that France, with a population of 40,000,000, has only eighty-nine bishops and it is declared that the number in Italy is greatly in excess of the real need. The government expects the Vatican will eevntually accede to the reduction, but it is difficult to suppose that such reduction can be brought about unless there be a compensating advantage to the church.

It is considered likely that were the number of bishops reduced, the number of parishes and priests would also come in for reduction a little later on. The former number 29,000 and the latter 30,000 five. These priests receive a salary from the government, although in most instances the grant would be considered small. That things are changing under a new pope is shown by the fact that two members of the Italian parliament, the Messrs. Galli and Santini, were recently received in private audience by the pope. This fact shows the liberal tendencies obtaining in the Vatican, since under Leo XIII, no Italian M. P. was ever admitted within the limits of the palace. It is said Pius X spoke to these members of his admiration for Queen Margaret, but declined to give an answer to a leading question that had bearing upon the situation in France.

TABOO ON HYPNOTISTS

Who Are Thriving In Illinois High School.

Aurora, Ill., June 14.—Alarmed at the rapidly increasing numbers of amateur hypnotists among the boys attending the public schools of Aurora, Prof. Barriwell, superintendent of the East Aurora high school, has issued an order forbidding the youths to further practice their hypnotic spells. The ban will be strictly enforced under penalty of expulsion.

The hypnotic craze is of recent origin but has spread with amazing rapidity. The disappearance of a prominent club woman, simultaneously with the departure of a Chicagoan, gave rise to the report that the two had eloped and the woman was the victim of hypnotism. This report added to the prevailing craze and Prof. Barriwell was forced to act.

In the schools books of instruction on hypnotism were taking the place of school books and scuffles were neglected. Roy Raut was recognized as "high priest" of the hypnotist band. Raut hired a hall last night and entertained a big crowd of boys and girls and a number of older persons, who were astonished at his power.

TOYS WITH COAST

Sea Changing the Boundaries of Louisiana and Mississippi.

Appear and Disappear With Startling and Perplexing Rapidity.

New Orleans, June 15.—The testimony being taken for the United States supreme court in the case of the Louisiana-Mississippi boundary has proved as sensational as it was expected to be in the matter of the marvelous changes that have taken place in the topography of the country in recent years.

The question at issue is the coast line of Louisiana in 1812, because this fixes the water boundary of the state and determines whether the oyster reefs off the coast, valued at $10,000,000, belong to Louisana or Mississippi. The old maps declare in favor of Louisiana. The contention of Mississippi is that these maps are incorrect, and that the country in dispute has always been the mixture of marsh, mud and water it is today. As the country was uninhabited and deemed valueless, the cartographers did not think it worth while to make a survey of the march and give petty details in which no one was interested. Therefore, they made the entire section in dispute dry land in their maps.

Much testimony was heard from fishermen, yatchsment and others who had visited the country at different times in twenty-five years. They told of marvelous changes, some in a single night, of islands that had appeared and disappeared; land that was a point one day and a bayou the following day. One witness, a leading merchant of this city, who cruised through this section in 1897, visited it again this year. Although there had been no storm during this period, he had found the face of the country so changed as to be scarcely recognizable. Round island, which he visited on his trip, had disappeared, although still shown on all maps. There is a lighthouse still shown, but this has not been in existence for years, the island washing away piece by piece.

Martin island had also disappeared. These are only a few of the many dead islands. So confused was the testimony on the point of islands that there was much debate among counsel as to what an island was, for there seemed some disposition to contend that in case a little mud showed itself above water at low tide, the island, while moribund, could not be regarded as extinct.

But the greatest changes were in the bayou. A sudden storm would change everything in a night. A fisherman, who was out in the desolate country during the storm of October, 1893, which did much harm on the western coast of Louisiana, reports that where he camped at Three-Mile bayou he found next morning a bay twelve feet deep. Barely a year afterward, in November, 1894, another storm doubled the width and depth of the bayou.

All the witnesses testified that Creole pass, now one of the largest in that section, 600 feet wide, did not exist twenty-five years ago. It was born in some great storm and since then it had grown in "jumps"—not widening gradually, but at each storm. What was true of Creole pass and Three-Mile bayou was equally true of the other bayous of that section. Bayou Louter, Nine-Mile bayou, Petite pass, Little pass, which has grown larger than Grande pass, Blind pass and Treasure bay. New lagoons, passes and bayous were constantly being born. They start usually as shallow lagoons and washed away by the waves and tides, then graduate into a bay and finally into a bayou.

On the other hand, points, like the islands, were being gradually washed away. Point Chicot, it was testified, had almost completely disappeared. Where it extended ten years ago was marked by a few trunks of trees rising above the water.

The disapearance of the forests which formerly grew through the coast or prairie region is one of the most feature of the coastal change and largely accounts for it. The trees formerly gave the land some stability and protected these guardians and then destroyed the land. Far out in the Gulf of Mexico stumps of the dead trees can be found, and any excavations made in the bayous and bays bring to light thousands of stumps, which show that the land must have been densely wooded. It is treeless now, denuded by the storms.

The Chandeleurs, orginally wooded, are now bare of everything but a few bushes. Many witnesses testified that they remember an abundance of trees in this section. All are gone. The cypress at Point Chicot were the last to resist the ocean. They are now well out to sea, rising like specters above the ocean. What is true of Point Chicot is true of Point Comfort and all other points—they are being rapidly ground down.

The witnesses reported that on every visit they made to the St. Bernard country they found it different. They could only tell of the changes made in the last twenty-five years, for no witness could be found who had visited that section previous to 1870.

The popular doctrine that the Mississippi is building itself out into the gulf with the immense mass of mud it carries down from all parts of the valley is well substantiated, but nature has a counteracting agency in the gulf, which at irregular intervals washes away and destroys the land built up by the father of waters.

CONDITION OF CROPS

Shown By the Weather Bureau's Weekly Summary.

Washington, June 15.—The weather bureau's weekly summary of crop conditions is as follows:

In the central and western gulf states favorable temperatures prevailed during the week ending June 13, but elsewhere east of the Rocky mountains and on the north Pacific coast complaints of insufficient heat are quite general, while hot, northerly winds have caused further injury to nearly all crops in California.

There has been too much rain in portions of Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas and North Dakota and also over the northern portions of the Middle Atlantic states and New England, while lack of moisture is beginning to be felt in the Ohio valley and portions of the upper Mississippi valley and upper lake region. In these last named districts however the conditions were very favorable for farm work. Frosts on the eleventh in the middle and northern plateau districts and in the eastern portions of Oregon and Washington proved injurious. Throughout the central valleys and Middle Atlantic states corn has made slow growth, and in Kansas and Nebraska much of the crop is still weedy, although it is in an improved state of cultivation. In Iowa, Missouri and Illinois and Indiana fields are generally clean but in the middle Atlantic states, rains have interfered with cultivation. In Texas a good yield of corn is now assured and the crop is promising elsewhere in the southern states. As a whole, winter wheat continues to advance favorably, a general improvement being indicated in the Ohio valley and Middle Atlantic states. Some injury is reported however by fly from Indiana and from overflows in Kansas, and harvest has been interrupted by rains in northern Texas and Oklahoma. Nearly all reports respecting oats indicate that the outlook for this crop is very promising. Oats are now heading as far north as Kansas, Missouri and Tennessee.

Compare Our Methods

You will realize then why Schlitz beer is pure.

You wash a cooking utensil once. We wash a bottle four times, by machinery, before we fill it.

You use city water. We bore down 1400 feet to rock for ours.

You prepare food in the air of the room. We cool Schlitz beer in plate-glass rooms and filter all the air that touches it.

Then we filter the beer by machinery—filter it through white wood pulp.

Yet your methods are cleanly. Ours are cleanliness carried to extremes.

Then—for fear of a touch of impurity—we sterilize every bottle after it is sealed. We double the necessary cost of our brewing to give you a healthful beverage pure.

Do you wonder that we sell over a million barrels annually?

THE SUMMER Y. M. C. A. CAMPS

Two Will Open In the Central West Next Friday.

New York, June 15.—Next Friday two of the great Association summer camps for students open in the Central West, one at Lake Genevaa, the other on Lake Erie. A third is now in progress at Waynesville, N. C., for the men of Southern colleges. Immediately after these in the Northfield camp for Eastern college men. Fully 2,000 men from 450 colleges will spend ten days at these camp conferences. The Western Slope men meet earlier in California and Oregon. The mornings and evenings are devoted to addresses and Bible classes, and the afternoons to athletics. Some of the principle speakers are: Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D. D., Hon. H. B. F. McFarland, President Francis L. Patton, Rev. Charles Cuthbert Hall, D. D., Bishop McDowell, Rev. Howard Agnew Johnston, D. D., Dr. Charles J. Little, Dr. E. I. Bosworth, Chancellor Frank Strong, Prof. O. E. Brown, Prof. W. M. Forrest, Dr. A. L. Phillips, Dr. J. A. B. Scherer, John R. Mott, F. S. Brockman of China, Sherwood Eddy of India, W. R. Hotchkiss of Central Africa, Prof. R. A. Falconer, Rev. Anson Pheips Stokes, Jr., S. H. Hadley, Harry Monroe. Such meetings have been held for eighteen years and have contiually grown in attendance and popularity. Members of college Associations who are engaged as officers and leaders are the chief delegates. These meetings are the important gatherings, at which great numbers of men have volunteered for Christian work in foreign lands and for the Christian ministry. This year special emphasis will be given to home missions.

Another type of camp the Association is conducting is summer vacation camps for boys and young men, at which the religious service is more an incident. Bible classes, however, are conducted in the morning and are the most popular features of the day. At nearly 200 of these camps at least 6,000 men and boys will be entertained. The Canadian Associations have gained possession of lakes and built log-cabins. Albany has an island in Lake Champlain; Cleveland rents a farm of ten acres with a pond in it. Members in California and Colorado go on broncos and burros. In California the boys camp without tents, as there is no rain there in the dry season. In the Middle West boys travel down the big rivers in house boats, while Racine members have a moving camp. Parties in Ohio go on gypsy trips in big farm wagons. Nebraska boys have "hiking" trips, carry their blankets, play ball, swim and sleep in barns. Some Worcester, Mass., members spend their vacation in canoes. At the New York camp at Westport, which opens July 7, and will continue for two months, an average of 150 boys will be under canvas. Here astronomy, photography and forestry will be taught in a popular way. At the New Jersey boys' camp an "old suit" will go along and teach the boys all sorts of nautical things. In the northern New York camp, on Lake Erie, an expert in Indian lore, botany, geology, ornithology and zoology will head the expedition. Members of the Pennsylvania Associations will spend their vacations in the woods and incidentally entertain and preach at the lumber camps. The Pennsylvania Conference meets at Eagles Mere for ten days in July. Massachusetts Associations own a farm in the Berkshires and an island on the coast of Maine, where their boys rendezvous. The Boston Association has an island on Lake Winnepesaugee. Philadelphia has a farm of 400 acres which will be the popular headquarters on all holidays for its members. This is only twenty-two miles from the city. New York Associations have secured a location at Oscawanna, where the camp will open in July and continue for two months. Brooklyn boys camp at Lake Waccabuc. Hotels are conducted by the Association at Lake Geneva, Wis., and at Silver Bay, Lake George, N. Y., and from 700 to 1,000 men are entertained at each during the summer. Texas Associations camps at Lampasas. Ontario has a summer camp conference and the Maritime boys meet in three camps in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

WILL MAKE IT A TEST CASE

Kansas Backs Militiaman Who Is Threatened By Union.

Topeka, June 15.—The state of Kansas is about to have a brush with union labor. Some time ago the Painters' and Paperhangers' union of Atchison served notice on one of its members that he would have to withdraw from the state militia or be expelled from the union. He had to depend upon his trade for a living, so he offered his resignation as a private in the Atchison militia company, giving his reason for doing so. The captain took the matter up with Adjt. Gen. Kelsey. The latter consulted the attorney general, and it was decided not to accept the resignation. Now the union threatens to expel the militiaman, and, if it does, the state will back the militiaman in a suit against the union for damages.

The revised constitution of the Painters' union provides that no militiaman shall belong to the union. It also provides that no policeman or other officer in the employ of a corporation shall belong. When Gen. Kelsey gave out a statement of the trouble he was having with the unions, State Labor Commissioner Lee Johnson came out in an interview denying that labor unions prohibited their members from joining the militia. This put it up to Kelsey to prove. He got hold of the printed constitution of the Painters' union, which showed that militiamen were barred from the union. He also produced the resignation of the Atchison member and other documents to prove his case. Johnson then apologized to him. "I believe that it is treason for a union to bar militiamen," said Gen. Kelsey, "and if the unions insist on enforcing that provision of their constitution, the state should take a hand and bring them to time with a short jerk. It puts the union ahead of the government. A member of the union is prohibited from belonging to the military branch. He is prohibited from taking up arms in defense of his state. If that isn't treason, what is it? I rejected the resignation of the Atchison member simply to bring the matter to a focus. I want to see whether the union is greater than the state; also to see if a union can deprive a man of the rights guaranteed him by the state and federal constitutions."

HERO OF KANSAS FLOOD.

Topeka, June 15.—"One of the heroes of the late flood," says the Ottawa Independent, "is David Flaherty, a young farmer, who, with a watering trough for a boat and a board for a paddle, in spite of the awkwardness of his equipment, was successful in saving many lives and in rescuing many people from a perilous position.

"Mr. Flaherty lives on Mud creek, near the Wycoff school, on the farm known as the old Williams place. The water was not in his house, but completely surrounded it. On the Monday morning of the flood he woke up, and a glance out of the window revealed the frightful condition of things. Dressing hurriedly, he stepped out on the porch of his house. As he did so, he heard a cry for help. He waded out to the barn, where his horses were kept, mounted one of them and started in the direction from which the cry came. He had gone but a short distance when he was in water so deep that he realized the utter futility of doing anything without a boat. The water grew deeper with every step of his progress, so he offered his resignation as a private in the Atchison militia company, giving his reason for doing so. The captain took the matter up with Adjt. Gen. Kelsey. The latter consulted the attorney general, and it was decided not to accept the resignation. Now the union threatens to expel the militiaman, and, if it does, the state will back the militiaman in a suit against the union for damages.

"Bethinking himself of an old water trough, the exigencies of the moment revealed the possibilities of it as a navigator on the deep sea, and quickly launching it in the water, with a board for a paddle, he launched forth on an almost continuous voyage, covering two days and a night. Clumsy as was his rigging, he managed to do the work of a brave man with his appropriated and somewhat dangerous craft."

CENTURIES OLD

The disease which has orought more suffering, degradation and disgrace upon the human race is the same to-day that it was centuries ago. It is called Contagious Blood Poison, "The Bad Disease," and is given other names, but among all nations is regarded as the blackest and vilest of all human diseases. It goes from bad to worse; the little sores that first appear are soon followed by others; the glands of the groins swell and inflame, a red eruption breaks out on the body, the mouth and throat become ulcerated, the hair and eye-brows drop out, and ugly yellow blotches make their appearance, and if the disease is not checked at this stage, every bone, muscle, tissue and nerve in the body becomes infected with the poison, and from the roots of the hair to the soles of the feet there is not a sound spot anywhere. To cure this awful contagion the blood must first be purified, and nothing will do this so quickly and surely as S. S. S., which has been known for years as an antidote for the poisonous virus of Contagious Blood Poison. Mercury and potash may check it for a time, but it comes back in a still more aggravated form. S. S. S. is guaranteed purely vegetable, and $1,000 is offered for proof that it contains a mineral ingredient. Write for our home-treatment book, and learn all about Contagious Blood Poison and how to treat it. No charge for medical advice.

I was afflicted with blood poison, and the best doctors did me no good, though I took their treatment faithfully. In fact, I seemed to grow worse all the while. I was disheartened, for it seemed that I would never be cured. At the advice of a friend I then took S. S. S., and began to improve. I continued the medicine, and it cured me completely, building up my health and increasing my appetite. Although this was ten years ago, I have never had a sign of the disease to rsturn.

CRIMINALS ARE NOT DEPORTED

Cripple Creek, Col., June 15.—Since the deportation last night of thirty-six union miners there remain in the city and county jails and the military guard houses in this city and Victor about seventy-five prisoners against whom no charges have yet been filed. Many of these men, it is said, will be charged with murder, rioting and inciting to riot and some are held as witnesses.

The district court is now in session, with Judge W. R. Seeds on the bench, but the criminal cases cannot come up until the next term, in September, unless a special venire is decided on.

Judge H. McGarry, a member of the committee, which investigates the records of prisoners and determines, subject to General Bell's approval, what shall be done with them, explained the reasons for deportation as follows:

"We are not deporting any criminals nor yet any who might make good witnesses. The only difference between those deported and those remaining is in their expressed sympathies.

"Those who are on the wrong side of the federation question have to go, otherwise they are just as good men as many who are permitted to remain in their homes."

BANDIT INCREASES HIS DEMANDS

Washington, June 15.—A serious hitch has occurred in the negotiations for the release of Perdicaris and Varley, the American and Englishman captured in Tangier by the bandit Raisuli. The details, as comunicated to the state department by Consul General Gummere, indicate that Raisuli has vastly enlarged his original demands. He now insists upon absolute control of no less than four Moorish provinces and besides demands that no less than three nations, including the United States, guarantee the absolute performance of the sultan's promise. The demands are regarded as absolutely impossible of compliance here, notwithstanding what effect the refusal may have on the fate of the captives.

FILINGS MADE

On Reservation Land at the Cass Lake Land Office.

One Woman From Virginia and One From Eveleth Filed.

Cass Lake, Minn., June 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—One hundred and ten weary seekers for land were lined up before the United States land office here this morning waiting for the doors of the office to open that they might file on Uncle Sam's domain, located within the confines of the Chippewa reservation. Among the number were four women, who withstood the vigils of a long wait during the night. The first man to file was Daniel Caldwell, who was the first in the line, on lot 7, west ½, sw¼, se¼, sw¼ of section 16, township 48, range 28, being 160 acres, located sixteen miles southeast of the village of Northome.

It is expected that the entire number of filings will be disposed early in the afternoon, as every arrangement has been made to handle the work expeditiously. It was expected that Governor Richards, commissioner of the general land office, would be here, but he did not come.

The land office was opened at 9 o'clock and the filing of Caldwell was made and accepted in exactly one minute. The next in line was handled rapidly and at the end of the first half hour twenty three filings had been made. An amusing incident was the breaking into the line of Mary Hamelinen, a Finn woman, who got between two of the men in the line and succeeded in filing despite the fact that she had no number.

It is said that there are a large number of squatters who went on to much of the land promptly at 9 o'clock and will contest conflicting entries made at the land office. Four women who are making entries are Louise Maen, of Fosston, Ingeborg Ose, of Big Wolf Lake, Bertha Johnson, of Virginia, and Mary Hamelinen, of Eveleth. The land which is most in demand is in township 148, ranges 26 and 27.

Practically all of the filing was completed at noon, when 120 applicants had presented themselves to the register and receiver, of which number eighty-two filings were accepted. The work of the local officials was very rapid, and there were not very many conflicting filings.

PUNCTURED BY BULLETS

Murderous Shooting Near Windom Result of Family Feud.

Dundee, Minn., June 15.—Ernest Cords, who was shot five times by Henry Trautfether, Jr., a few days ago, near Windom, is not dead and his physician says he is making progress toward recovery. A statement of what are alleged to be the facts in the case has been issued by a committee, and is in substance as follows:

Cords received five 32-caliber bullets in his body. Two lodged in the back of the neck, one in the shoulder blade, one just below the shoulder blade and one in the forearm.

Immediately after the shooting Chris Cards did not chase Trautfether, as reported. He did, however, start to a neighbor's house for assistance. On the way he saw Trautfether, who asked him whether Ernest Cords was dead. Chris, believing his brother was surely dead by that time, replied that he was. Trautfether then drove on. Chris, after sending for help, returned to the house, to find his brother had been able to go upstairs. Trautfether, in the meantime, had driven to a field in which some neighbors were working, alighted from his buggy, called to the men, and then, taking a pistol from his pocket, shot himself dead.

An old feud, continues the statement, was the cause of the tragedy. About a year ago Trautfether had Ernest Cords arrested on a charge of assault upon Trautfether's wife. Cords was committed to jail and later was sent to the insane asylum at St. Peter. Cords was sent back to Windom to jail again, the asylum authorities declaring that he was not insane. When he came to trial again he was declared not guilty, Trautfether not appearing against him. According to Ernest's brother, Ernest recently brought suit against Trautfether for false imprisonment. This is said to have enraged Trautfether. He went to the Cords' home and called Ernest out. Chris Cords saw what Trautfether was up to and called Ernest to return to the house. Ernest turned and started back, when Trautfether pulled his revolver and began firing.

PIANO MUSIC

As a Cure For Some Bald Heads.

New York, June 15.—"Generally speaking, piano music is good for the hair and the music of wind instruments is bad," said Mrs. Amelia Weed Holbrook, an advocate of the theory that disease can be cured by music.

"No one should undertake the musical cure for baldness rashly," she added, "for the very tune that will promote growth on one head will cause the hair to fall out on another. In Munich there is a hospital where music is used exclusively, and many cures of disease have been effected."

SURGEONS IN SESSION.

St. Louis, June 15.—The feature of today's session of the annual convention of the American Surgical association was a paper by Dr. Samuel Posezi, professor of surgery in the university of Paris. The program also included addresses by Doctors Maurice H. Richardson, Boston; M. Q. Harris, Chicago; James Bell, Montreal; T. W. Brophy, Chicago; F. B. Harrington, Boston and A. T. Cabot, Boston.

FIVE HUNDRED WOMEN AND CHILDREN PERISH

From all that can be gathered, no alarm was sounded when the fire was discovered, but the crew tried to extinguish the flames without alarming the passengers. Those in the after portion of the boat did not know it was on fire until the flames had swept back on them. Then there was nothing to do but jump overboard or be burned to death.

Persons on the shore say that there were scores huddled in an apparently safe position on the hurricane deck, with the breeze blowing the flames and smoke away from them, when suddenly the deck fell in.

After the cloud of smoke had drifted away the observers looked back to where the crowd had been standing. The space was vacant.

Many of the children picked up by small boats, were lashed to campstools and other light boat furnishings, showing that some adult had tried to make the little ones safe. These precautions proved inadequate in the terrific current and in the whirpools.

Very few of the children picked up had on life preservers. Children cannot get at the life preservers, on excursion boats on this river. They are lashed to the ceilings over the decks and can only be reached by a tall person.

Paul Lebenow, one of the passengers who was on board says a ferry boat passed near the burning steamer, but offered no assistance. Two policemen who had been assigned to accompany the excursion jumped overboard and reached the shore in safety. One of them was slightly burned.

Captain William H. Van Schaick, captain of the Slocum, who is at the Alexander avenue police station, said:

"The Slocum left the foot of East Twenty-third street at half past nine o'clock this morning. There had been collected from those on board 982 tickets. The boat passed slowly up the river, through Hell Gate and over toward Sunken Meadows, where the Cawana was burned in 1878. When close to the Meadows an alarm of fire was given. At that time I was in the pilot house. I jumped down to the deck and gave immediate orders for fighting the fire. The fire drill was sounded and the crew of the boat, numbering twenty-three men, worked like nailers to get water on to the part of the boat that was burning."

Continuing, Capt. Van Schaick said:

"The fire was under the forward boilers of the port side, as I made it out in the excitement. My men were exerting their efforts towards keeping the passengers from jumping overboard.

"The fire was gaining every instant, and the cries of people burning to death could be heard above every other discord and sound.

"I got the boat under way for North Brother island, which was the safest place to attempt to land. The boat was driven on under full speed, and pulled up sideways to the shore of the island. Many had jumped prior to this. Many were jumping every instant. My Many were jumping every instant. My pilots, Edward Van Wart and Edward M. Weaver, were doing everything to get fairly toward the shore, and Engineer B. F. Conklin stuck in the hold. Mate Edward Flannigan had charge of the fire brigade, but when the fire spread over all, we had to get off the boat. My hat was burning when I jumped, and I was pulled out of the water and hauled upon shore under a tree before I remembered what had happened."

No identification was possible as the first bodies were recovered, as they were picked up at so many different places, many being found along the shore and on the islands in the East river. They were brought together in most convenient places, all being carefully numbered and everything possible for later identification being done. The tugs and other boats which rescued many from the burning steamer and from the water, landed them at the nearest points and returned to the scene of the disaster in the hope of rescuing others. This made it almost impossible to learn who had been rescued and added to the fears of those waiting to learn of the fate of friends or relatives.

Seventeen bodies, eleven unidentified women and six unidentified children, all under 5 years of age, were taken to the Alexander avenue station within less than an hour after the fire had first broken out.

The docks at One Hundred and Thirty-second and One Hundred and Thirty-eighth streets are said to be piled high with bodies of the dead.

One man who was saved and taken off at One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street, crazed with grief, wailed that he had lost his wife and six small children. When a policeman tried to learn his name he rushed away, seemingly insane. It is reported that ten bodies are at Oak Point. When the news of the disaster became known there was a rush of telephonic and personal inquiries at the homes of the pastor of the church. George Haas, son of the pastor, was the only member of the family at home, and it fell to him to inform all those who inquired that the reports were true.

As the news spread in the parish crowds flocked around the church and the parsonage, and the scene was a pitiful one.

The two policemen on the boat were William Van Tassel and George Kilt, both of the Harbor squad, who had been detailed to the excursion. Van Tassel was on the main deck while Kilt was on duty on the upper deck forward.

Van Tassel was one of the first to reach the mainland from North Brother island. He said that he heard what he believed to be an explosion, everybody screamed and some men assisted women to put on life preservers while others appeared to be excited and were unable to do anything.

"I got on one side of the boat," he said, "and tried to quiet people, in which I succeeded to an extent. A few minutes later the upper deck gave way and I was carried down with others into the water. I managed to swim to a dock on North Brother island."

Patrolman Kilt had a similar experience. He said he tried to quiet the passengers on his deck, but could not and when the decks gave way he fell into the water with them, swimming to the dock where he and Van Tassel pulled a number of passengers from the water.

Rev. George F. Haas, the pastor of the church, was saved, but his wife, Gertrude, and his daughter, Anna, are among the dead.

Mr. Haas told this story of the disaster:

"The fire started in the kitchen in the forward part, when we were off One Hundred and Thirty-fourth street. I understand that some fat that boiled over started the blaze. At that time most of the women and children were jammed in the rear end of the boat where the band was playing.

"Why the captain did not point the boat for the Meadows I do not understand. He kept on and the fresh wind from the sound drove the fire back through the decks.

"In three minutes from the time the fire started, all the decks were ablaze. Such scenes as followed I don't think ever were witnesed before. I was in the rear of the boat with my wife and daughter. Women were shrieking and clasping their children in their arms. Some mothers had as many as three or four with them.

"When the fire shot up to the top deck and drove the crowd back, the panic was terrible to witness. The women and children clung to the railings and stanchions, but could not keep their holds. I, with my wife and daughter, was swept along with the rest.

"I believe that the first that fell into the water were crushed overboard. When they went there seemed to be a genral inclination to jump. The women and children went over the railings like flies.

"In the great crush many women fainted and fell to the deck to be trampled upon. Little children were knocked down. I got my wife and daughter out on the rail and then we went overboard. I was in such an excited state that I don't remember whether we were pushed over or jumped.

"When I struck the water I sank, and when I rose there were scores about me fighting to keep afloat. One by one I saw them sink around me. But I was powerless to do anything.

"With a great effort I managed to keep afloat, but my strength was about gone when a man on one of the tugs picked me up."

There are forty bodies on North Brother island, eighteen on the fire boat Zopher Mills, and eleven on Riker's island. The board of health has sent 100 doctors, and 500 policemen are on the scene.

At the office of the United States steamboat inspection bureau it was said the Gen. Slocum was inspected on May 5 and was reported to be in a thoroughly good condition and ready for the excursion season. Aboard the steamer was all the lifesaving apparatus required by law of steamers of her capacity.

SHELLS FROM GUNBOATS

Proved Very Disastrous at Battle of Kin Chou.

Che Foo, June 15.—A Russian merchant who was at Kin Chou at the time of the recent battle there and who accompanied the Russian army on its retreat to Port Arthur, has arrived here in a junk. He says that the Russians had no permanent fortifications at Kin Chou, but simply trenches. The country around had been mined, forcing the Japanese to take to the water. When they did so the Russian gunboat Bobr was taken to head of Talien Wan bay, from whence she threw shells across the narrow neck of land, killing hundreds of Japanese. The Russians likewise suffered more from the fire of the Japanese gunboats than from the artillery and infantry fire. The people of Port Arthur, the Russian merchant says, are confident and ready for the final test of strength by the opposing armies. The town is quiet. All the soldiers have gone to the front. Thus far there have only been skirmishes between Dalny and Port Arthur. The Russian merchant states that as far as he could see and learn, all the crippled Russian war vessels at Port Arthur, with the exception of the battleship Pobedia, had been repaired. Whether the repairs were permanent he was unable to say.

PERSISTENT RUMORS

Of Severe Fighting South of Kai Chou.

Newchwang, June 15.—There are persistent rumors here of severe fighting south of Kai Chou, which it is impossible to confirm. Of three trustworthy messengers sent out on the night of June 12, two returned having been unable to pass the Russian lines at Kai Chou, and the other is expected to arrive early today. The two who have returned learned nothing except that the Russians are becoming more strict about allowing natives to pass through their lines.

Twenty hospital carts, passed here this morning traveling southward.

The trains are only running six miles south of Kai Chou.

A report upon the very highest authority direct from Mukden says there are over 20,000 Russian troops there, with 40,000 additional men encamped at Liao Yang.

It is believed here that the Russians are moving a force of 65,000 men south only to make it appear as though they were attempting to relieve Port Arthur, and that upon the first encounter with the enemy it will be withdrawn north again.

A private telegram received here by a German resident late this afternoon, from Che Foo said that the Japanese had suffered a severe defeat at Port Arthur and the Russians in town are celebrating the news tonight.

The Russian troops are now constructing a deep moat surrounding Liao Yang upon all sides, three miles from the town and are mounting artillery upon the adjacent hills.

Ships arriving from Shanghai and Che Foo report passing a Japanese cruiser five miles out from Kai Chou.

WANTS NO COUNT.

Girl at Cigar Stand Rejects Marriage Offer.

Chicago, June 15.—One Chicago young woman last night rejected a proposal of marriage from a titled foreigner. Miss Alice Walsh, who sells cigars and gum at the stand in the main corridor of the Auditorium hotel, had the experience.

Among the guests at the Auditorium the last few days was Comte H. Prevost de Bribieres, a member of the geographical society of Paris. He came to Chicago from St. Louis, where he spent two weeks visiting the exposition.

During nearly an hour the count paced back and forth through the lobby of the Auditorium near the cigar stand, casting admiring glances at the young woman stationed behind it. At length he aproached the counter, and, extending his hand to Miss Walsh, he said in a tremulous voice: "I like you so much. I want you to come with me to Paris. I marry you now and you will be my countess, eh?"

"I would rather be what I am, a poor, hard-working girl," replied Miss Walsh.

Several guests of the house, silent witnesses to the incident, gathered near the stand, and a traveling companion of the count dragged him away to a secluded part of the corridor.

Miss Walsh says she wants no titles. She is willing to wait until some good-looking American comes her way.

A NEW PRINCIPLE IN MEDICAL SCIENCE.

For years it has been the practice of medical men to treat patients suffering from piles by local, external applications. These treatments give but temporary relief, but have never affected a positive cure.

After months of research and study, accompanied by actual experience with various patients, Dr. C. A. Perrin arrived at a positive conclusion as to the exact action of the various parts of the bowel system, under different conditions, and when subjected to various prescriptions.

He finally prepared that wonderful internal remedy known as DR. PERRIN'S PILE SPECIFIC, which is put up in bottles, retailing at all reliable drug stores for $1.00 each. This infernal remedy has been on the market for the past ten years, and in all of that time there has been but three cases where a positive cure has not been effected.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific is sold under a positive guarantee by the druggist making the sale, to refund the full purchase price, providing the remedy fails to cure. This is the absolute proof of its merit. Any man or woman who suffers from blind, bleeding, itching or internal piles can try this internal remedy with the absolute certainty that it will cost nothing unless it cures. Here is what one sufferer says of this wonderful remedy:

Dr. C. A. Perrin, Helena, Mont.—I wish to thank you for the cure your wonderful medicine has done for me. I had the piles some five years, and under the advice of a doctor had them removed by the knife and felt free for awhile, but they returned and I at once got a bottle of your Perrin's Pile Specific and one bottle has entirely cured me, and I am as good as I ever was.

Yours truly,
JACK SULLIVAN,
October 16, 1902. Chicago.

Better get a bottle of your druggist today and get relief from present and future suffering.

TAKE MANY LANDS

Iowa People Taking Large Amount In Duluth District.

Have Taken 15,000 Acres In Six or Eight Months.

Fully 15,00 acres of agricultural lands in the Duluth district have been taken up as homesteads and stone and timber claims by Iowa people within the last six or eight months. More people from Iowa, perhaps, have filed on claims in this district than from any other state, except Minnesota, and it is doubtful if the number from this state is as large as from Iowa. There have also been a good many filings in Minnesota from residents of the Dakotas. The unusual number of land lookers from outside points have been attracted to Northern Minnesota by the opening of new townships during the past winter and fall.

In spite of the heavy demands for lands in Northern Minnesota there are a good many acres which yet remain untaken. Officials of the state forestry board are about to make selection of the 20,000 acres set apart by the last United States congress for an experimental forest reserve for Minnesota.

The lands to be selected are in the northern part of the state, preferably St. Louis county, and will be taken from the public domain. The chances are that they will be selected in the Duluth district. It appears to have become the custom for such reserves in Minnesota to be taken from the Duluth district, both by the government and state.

There are many thousands of acres of land in Northern Minnesota which have not been taken either under the homestead law or under the stone and timber acts, and many of these are eligible to be selected by the Minnesota board, but the state board hopes to be able to get a tract of available lands in one body rather than in scattered areas.

Gen. C. C. Andrews and Prof. S. B. Green, of the state experimental farm, comprising a majority of the executive committee of the state forestry board, will visit Northern Minnesota, accompanied by a practical surveyor, to make the selections. The lands granted by congress are classed as second or third rate vacant lands, and the grading of the lands is determined by the surveyor's field notes.

WAS WITH CUSTER

Bugler Who Survived the Little Big Horn Massacre.

His Graphic Story of the Last Stand By Custer.

Baltimore, Md., June 15.—John D. Martin, the bugler with Custer's command who escaped death in the massacre of the Little Big Horn by being sent back for reinforcements, has been put on the army retired list and is spending the last days of his life in selling refreshments to his former comrades at a little stand just outside the main entrance to Fort McHenry, this city.

He served thirty years in the army and for the last fifteen was the chief musician at Fort McHenry. As a valued relic, his last bugle—not the one he used in Custer's command, for that, he says, is in the Smithsonian institution—hangs by its red cord upon the wall of his lunch room.

John D. Martin, or Giovanni Martini, as he was known in Rome, the city of his birth, owed his escape on that summer day, June 25, 1876, when Custer's command was cut to pieces, to the fact that he had been sent with a dispatch to a point three miles away. He returned with the troopers just in time to witness the close of the massacre.

At 14 he was a drummer with Garibaldi's patriots. When he came to this country, at the age of 23, he enlisted again. He was assigned to Custer's command, and when Custer crept upon the peaceful-looking Sioux village on that day in June, he selected Martin to carry dispatches to Maj. Marcus A. Reno and Capt. F. W. Benteen, commanding the two other divisions of the troop. The dispatches ordered them to join Custer at once. This is Martin's story of that day:

"We came upon the banks of the Little Big Horn at 11:30 o'clock in the morning and across the waters we saw a village of several hundred tepees. Custer called a halt.

"'Men,' he said, pointing to the village, the streets of which were deserted save for an occasional stray cur, half naked child or bent old woman, 'we have come upon the Sioux village while the warriors are away hunting buffaloes. We will go down there, take possession of the camp, and fall upon the men when they return tired with hunting.'

"The men all waved their caps and gave three cheers. Custer had a consultation with his officers. Then calling me, he borrowed paper and pencil from Adjt. Cook and wrote this message: 'Join me at once, bringing the pack trains.' He told me to find Reno and Benteen and deliver the paper to them.

"It was a hard ride of three miles, and my horse was wounded in the hip by a bullet from an Indian in ambush, but I pushed on until I reached Capt. Benteen. Soon after I got to him, Maj. Reno came dashing up, calling to the captain that he had been ambushed and had left fifteen men and two officers dead upon the field, besides a number of wounded. When we reached the scene of this engagement the Indians had fled.

"The two divisions joined and pressed on to Custer. We arrived at about 12 o'clock upon a bluff at the head of a narrow ravine down which Custer had gone to see the river bank simply swarming with the naked painted forms of Sitting Bull's braves. The end was just in our view, and I remember well how close the forces were to each other.

"The Indians had by that time entirely surrounded Custer's men and closed in upon them, fighting hand to hand. I remember the hideous appearance of the braves in their war paint, with the skins of wolves and antelopes in their hands, which they shook in the faces of our troopers' horses, rendering them unmanageable.

"You have often seen the paintings of Custer's last fight. Well, they are not exaggerated in their detail, and with the terrible din the Indians kept up, you can well imagine that it was an awful scene.

"I do not remember seeing Custer in the melee, for he was in the center of his division, which was formed in a square. We also had little time to think, as the enemy pressed upon us immediately. Retreating to higher ground, we formed a square, in the center of which the supplies were placed. There we waited for the attack. It came, and we got enough of it. For two days and two nights we fought, losing men every hour and constantly seeing in our imagination the time drawing near when we would be burned at the stake or feel that gripping in our hair.

"From 2 o'clock on June 25 until early morning of June 27 we remained. Then, when the dawn was just streaking the sky, we heard a great whirling in our rear. At first we thought that the numbers of our beslegers were to be increased, and it did not cheer us very much, you can be sure; but it turned out to be our reinforcements galloping nearer every minute, and, I'll tell you, it was the sweetest music we ever heard. Gen. Gibbons and Gen. Terry were with our troops and we were saved.

"We found Custer lying partly covered by two horses, just as if the men had tried to form a breastwork with the animals. There were two bullet holes in his body, but it was not mutilated. The Indians refrained from doing this out of respect for his fighting qualities, but the other men were fearfully mutilated—hacked to pieces with knives—a ghastly scene."

Martin was in several brushes, both before and after this. Through his thirty years' service and seven enlistments he was never wounded, and today is the same compact little Roman that he was when he enlisted in the Hudson street enlisting office in New York in 1874.

After his first enlistment expired he came East and joined the Third artillery at Fort Schuyler. While there he married Miss Julia Higgins, and they have eight children.

WEST DULUTH

Deputy Game Warden John Green has just returned from a trip along the St. Louis river, above Fond du Lac, where he went to investigate the reports that fish were being dynamited. Mr. Green said that he found no evidences of dynamite having been exploded in the river within the last three weeks, and is of the opinion that the law breakers have abandoned their operations in this section. A number of set lines were found by the warden and his deputies, however. The lines were destroyed.

It is thought that several hundred pounds of pike have been taken from the upper St. Louis this season by the dynamiters, in spite of the efforts made by the game wardens to capture them. At one time the miscreants came very nearly being caught. The wardens were camping near the spot one night when charges were set off in the river. The miscreants narrowly escaped capture, assisted by the darkness.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Six Coroners' Inquests In Menominee Since May First.

Menominee—There have been six inquests in Menominee since the first of May, involving three suicides, two sudden deaths and one murder—the worst record for a similar period in the history of the city. The record is: Gust Holdberg, sudden death, heart failure; L. M. Kelly, sudden death, heart failure; Mrs. Minnie Ranier, suicide by hanging. Coroner Henry Nason has investigated the records of the past three years and he finds that this establishes a new record for coroners' work during any period of forty days.

Fred Zieman, the Wisconsin man who killed his wife at Menominee and then attempted suicide, has been taken to the county jail and will shortly be arraigned in the municipal court to answer to the charge of wilful and malicious murder. His condition has improved steadily and he seemed satisfied to leave the hospital where he had been bed-fast for several weeks. Zieman was placed in one of the cells in the upper tier, and he will be closely guarded. The trial of Zieman will probably not be held until the August term of circuit court. He has not consulted legal counsel, but it is understood the plea of insanity will be entered. Zieman has received several letters from his brother and relatives at Neenah, but none of them have manifested enough interest in him to pay him a visit.

Limestone—There was a Finnish wedding out in Limestone township, Alger county, a few days ago. The bridegroom didn't "set up" a keg of beer or anything else to satisfy the cravings of his "friends," and a charivari was the result. The crowd came three nights in succession and made the nights as horrible as possible for the newly married couple. The bridegroom took it philosophically the first two nights, but the third he brought his revolver into play. One shot was all that was required to send the crowd about its business. One of the party was struck by a bullet, but was not seriously injured. He went to Munising to swear out a warrant for the arrest of the bridegroom, but Prosecutor Freeman vetoed the proceedings. The name of the bridegroom is Ereland Mattson. The bride was Miss Amanda Usuatila.

Escanaba—Amid the applause of an assemblage of 350 people which crowded into the rear of the city council chamber, the Escanaba council took action which insured the retention of Chief James Tolan as head of the Escanaba fire department. Mayor Valentine's appointment of Herman Kamrath as chief of the fire department was voted down by a vote of 8 to 5, one alderman being absent.

Miss Julia N. Rocheford, for nearly three years assistant principal of the Escanaba high school, has been appointed principal of that branch of the Escanaba school system for the next year, succeeding the late Anna M. Chandler. At a special meeting of the board of education Miss Rocheford was the choice of all the members. Numerous applications for the position were received.

Sisseton People Shocked By Suicide of Young Banker.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sisseton—The body of Charles Elson, assistant in the First National bank of this city, and son of Carl Elson, a prominent business man, was found in a lane three miles from this city, with a bullet hole through his head. He left the bank about 8 o'clock Saturday evening, taking with him a revolver, and was not seen until his body was found by two girls. It is thought he became despondent and ended his life. He was a sober and industrious young man.

Watertown—Col. R. W. Stewart, of the Second regiment, S. D. N. G., was in Watertown, and inspected the new encampment buildings which have been erected under the direction of the adjutant general. He is highly pleased with the arrangement of the ground.

Eugene Payette and George Gibbs were convicted of stealing a suit of clothes. They pleaded guilty and Gibbs is serving thirty days as a penalty. Payette was let off with twelve days.

Wessington Springs—Alex Kennedy, Miss Cora Horsley and Miss Anna Kallis are the teachers who have been elected for the ensuing year.

At the grand gold medal contest Walter Scarman, of Mitchell, won the honors.

The baccalaureate sermon was preached in the chapel of the Wessington Springs seminary by Rev. Mr. McGeary.

Claremont—One of the finest opera houses in this part of the state is being built here. A special artist from Minneapolis is painting the scenery. The stockholders expect to open the hall soon with a fine show and banquet.

Yankton—The Masonic grand lodge and the grand lodge of the Eastern Star will meet in Yankton this week. The delegates and visitors will number over 600. On Wednesday evening they will be given an entertainment and ball at the temple. The Yankton Dramatic club will present a one-act comedy, entitled, "Nance Oldfield." This will be followed by a short program and dancing.

THE MUSIC TEACHERS

Opening of State Association's Convention—Fine Artists Coming.

To morrow morning, at 10 o'clock, the annual meeting of the Minnesota State Music Teachers' association will open at the First Methodist church in this city. Delegates will be arriving in the city this evening and tomorrow morning. Miss Ednah F. Hall, of Minneapolis, secretary-treasurer of the association, arrived this morning.

The program will open tomorrow morning with the program of welcome conducted by Gordon Graham, of Winona, organist, assisted by Miss Ednah F. Hall, soprano. After the musical numbers Mayor Cullum will welcome the visitors and the business session will then open.

In the afternoon the concert by state talent will be given.

The coming of the music teachers to Duluth has served to create a stir in the art atmosphere of the city such as it has never felt before.

While all the meetings will be full of interest, the general public will be attracted largely to the two great evening events—the Sauret concert and the Henderson lecture.

Emile Sauret is one of the few great world violinists, a man of commanding presence, the intimate friend of emperors and king of his instrument.

His name alone on a program should fill the house, but when it is understood that two splendid artists are to assist him, Jessica De Wolf, one of the finest and best known sopranos of the Northwest, and Arthur Speed, the new English pianist, lately arrived in this country, the Methodist church, large as it is, will undoubtedly be taxed to its full capacity.

Mr. Henderson, the great critic of the New York Sun, who is to lecture Friday evening, writes that he has prepared an entirely new lecture for this meeting on "Modern Tendencies in Music."

That it will be replete with stimulating thought and pungent criticism is assured.

NEW PLAN FOR MISSION WORK

The English Lutheran Synod Is Held at Lindstrom.

Lindstrom, Minn., June 15.—The fourteenth annual convention of the English Evangelical Lutheran synod of the Northwest was held in Trinity English Evangelical Lutheran church in this place. Rev. Dr. G. H. Trabert, of Minneapolis, president, preached the synodical sermon.

The president's report showed marked progress in all departments. New work has been started at the following places: Mankato, Grand Marais, Stacy and Sunrise, all in Minnesota; also in Cedarburg, Wis. The fields at Ellsworth and River Falls, which have been in a doubtful state for a year, were placed upon the home mission board of the synod and work in these places will be developed to the utmost.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Rev. A. J. D. Haupt, St. Paul; secretary, Rev. C. L. Warstler, St. Paul; treasurer, C. A. Smith, Minneapolis. Two pastors were received into the synod, Rev. John Keehley, of Elmira, N. Y., now of North Minneapolis, and Rev. W. P. Christy, of Janesville, Wis., who was ordained at this meeting.

A plan for the unification of all home mission work was adopted. A board will be elected by the general council and will consist of four clergymen and three laymen, who will have supervision of the missions committed to their care by the district synods, and such other missions as are or may be established.

This board will also make an estimate of the funds needed for its work, and recommend to the general council the amounts to be apportioned to the synods.

Addresses were delivered by the following: Dr. R. F. Weidner, of Chicago, on "The Chicago English Lutheran Theological Seminary"; Dr. W. K. Frick, Milwaukee, on "Education"; Rev. J. J. Clemens, La Crosse, and Rev. F. S. Bristol, of St. Paul, on "Home Mission Work in the General Council and the Northwest." Dr. J. C. Kunzmann of Pennsylvania, on "The Importance of the Home Mission and Extension Work of the Church."

Rev. H. E. Isaacson of India, missionary there for ten years, presented the claims of the foreign field on Friday night in English and on Sunday afternoon in Swedish. Rev. G. F. Gehr, of Racine, Wis., preached the sermon Sunday morning. The Sunday school convention on Saturday was attended by many workers from the Twin Cities and from other sections of the synod's territory.

The convention adjourned yesterday.

RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR.

Father Cleary to Discuss Where Sympathy Should Lie.

A most interesting lecture will be that delivered by Rev. J. M. Cleary, of Minneapolis, this evening at the Armory on the subject "American Sympathy in the Russo-Japanese war." This is a topic of uppermost interest at this time and Father Cleary is a speaker of the finest of attainments and upon any subject is always heard with attention. From the title it is surmised that his sympathies lie with Russia and as American sympathy is largely with the Japanese it will be interesting to hear the claims of Russia to the sympathy of America presented.

In addition to the lecture there will be a concert by Muhlbauer's orchestra and songs by a quartet.

The entertainment will be for the benefit of St. James' Orphanage and is under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus.

4th—A saving of about three hours in time.
5th—You avoid the crowds at the Union depot and on the street cars.

IN WOMAN'S SPHERE

Social, Musical and Art Circles.

A wedding of much interest to many in Duluth took place at noon today in Philadelphia when Miss Clara Humason, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. G. H. Humason, formerly of this city and Philip P. Stermetz were married. Dr. Humason was pastor of the First Methodist church of this city for a number of years and Miss Humason was well know here. The wedding took place in St. Luke's Episcopal church and the service was read by Bishop Whittaker. Mr. and Mrs. Stermetz will spend a month in Maine and will return to Philadelphia where they will make their home. Rev. Stermetz will be Bishop Whittaker's asistant in St. Luke's church, which is the largest Episcopal church in the city.

HALF HOLIDAY.

Woman's Council Urges It Upon Ministers.

A committe from the Women's Council appeared before the ministers of the city at their meeting June 6, to ask their co-operation in bringing before the public the movement to give a Saturday half-holiday to the employes of the retail stores in Duluth during the months of July and August, and also to ask all housekeepers to order their supplies of provisions early in the day so that delivery men will not be kept busy in the evening as they often are at present. The ministers are heartily in favor of these ideas and decided to speak to their congregations on the subject next Sunday, June 19.

It is earnestly desired that the ministers who were not present at this meeting will do the same, so that it may be brought before every congregation in Duluth on that day. It is also hoped that every one interested in the matter will attend church next Sunday, so that he or she may be informed concerning the matter and help along the good work.

OLD FASHIONED WAYS

Cause Comment But There Are Worse Things.

How often in reading we run across some such phrase as this: "Old-fashioned ideas of morality," says the Seattle Times. Or we hear a person about to deliver an impromptu homily, say: "I may have old-fashioned notions about the sacredness of the marriage vow, but—." Or a mother say: "My children could have more money than I could when I was a girl, but I am going to bring them up in the old-fashioned way. My girls shall know how to cook and do housework, if necessary, and they will make good wives and mothers."

"Father has such old-fashioned notions," said a high-school boy. "He has made us all promise not to drink wine or to play cards until we are twenty-one. And he says it's the boys who have old-fashioned parents that become successful men." Would that there were more like him!

There are worse things than being old-fashioned, says Robert Webster Jones, in the May Housekeeper. Progress is all very well provided it progresses. Not unseldom, the noisy automobile that whirs past the jogging horse and buggy halts for repairs a mile or two farther on. And a balky auto can be neither coaxed with oats nor persuaded with a whip. The old-fashioned conveyance may be slower, but it's safer. But why should we feel it necessary to call out ideas of right living old-fashioned and to speak of them in a semi-apologetic manner? If old-fashioned, so much the better on that very acount. They have the backing and experience. They have been tried and tested by our parents and grandparents. One of the astutest political leaders of this country was accustomed daily to consult his aged mother on questions of personal policy, and attributed his success in great measure to her advice. Because he declined invitations to drink he was known as old-fashioned, and was content so to be known. We hear of "old-fashioned politeness," and "gentlemen of the old school" who is so rarely seen among us. Why should these virtues be called old-fashioned? Is it not a discreditable reflection upon us twentieth century people?

A few more old-fashioned people are needed in this know-it-all age and generation.

Odd Designs In China.

Brooklyn Eagle: One of the novelties in ceramic pieces is a china thimble, which makes an extremely dainty accessory in the work basket. The decoration for this china thimble is generally a wreath of forget-me-nots, or tiny roses. Another novelty in ceramics is a set of fishbone plates, the model being a small fish, depressed to form a shallow receptacle for the bones. The decoration for this is very effective, luster colors, suggesting the gold or silver fish, or the iridescent bluefish, being employed.

A tortoise is a quaint thing in china. When decorated to copy the shell of the tortoise it is used on the table for mayonnaise dressing, and placed on a spray of ferns, it forms an odd and pretty table decoration.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement of Miss Charlotte Leland and George Langston, of Atlanta, Ga., was announced a few days ago in Chicago. Miss Leland is the daughter of G. A. Leland, and is well known in this city, where they made their home for a number of years.

Guests Return.

The house party at which Miss Louise Hicks was hostess disbanded today after ten days of delightful entertaining. The guests were school friends from Stanley Hall, and a number of pretty affairs have been given in their honor. Miss Julia Masterman left for her home at Stillwater; Miss Maude Cooley went to Madella, Minn.; Miss Elizabeth Gilbert to Ashland, and Miss Bess Leauthold to Spring Valley, Minn. Miss June Carr and Miss Olive Colbraith, who nave also been guests, returned to their homes in the city.

Frey-Ward.

The wedding of Miss Gladys G. Frey and Ralph Ward took place last evening at the home of the bride, 4025 West Fifth street. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion, and at 8 o'clock the service was read by Rev. E. K. Copper, of the Oneota Methodist church. The attendants were Beth Frey and F. J. Goodmanson. An informal reception followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Ward left during the evening for Canada, where they will make their home for the next few months.

Events of Interest.

Tomorrow evening a reception will be given at the home of Bishop and Mrs. J. D. Morrison, of East Superior street, in honor of the clergymen of the Episcopal convocation being held in the city.

• • •

Mrs. W. H. Salter has cards out for an afternoon reception for Friday of this week, at her home, 1318 East Second street.

Miss Meining has returned from a visit to Winnipeg.

• • •

Tomorrow evening the Commercial club rooms will be the scene of a reception tendered the visiting members of the Minnesota State Music Teachers' association by the local musicians. THE EVENING STORY.

THE LIGHT ON THE HILL

By Anna Cosulich.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Margaret stepped out of the little station for a moment's breath of the cool, starlit night. She gazed curiously at the familiar surroundings. All the village was asleep. From the cabins along the mountain side, the lights had long been extinguished. All save one—on the adjoining hill. She smiled faintly. He was not like the other inhabitants of Coalton, at any rate.

After the day's work there was reading and studying for the young magistrate of the district. Idly she wondered which book held him at that moment, and, recalling what he had said to her one night, she smiled faintly and a bit wistfully.

"I am not good enough for you now, I know. But some day, when I am a successful lawyer in the city, I'll come back to ask you the same question—unless there's some one else—even now—"

"There is no one else," she had assured him. "Only, I—I cannot marry. I want my freedom—I want to work. I think a great deal of you, Howard, but I'm not in love with any one."

She had sent him away as gently as she knew how. The friendship she wished to retain he denied her. He avoided her, and, indeed Coalton saw but little of him. She heard he was working hard. Her respect for him increased, but so did her loneliness.

The faint twinkle of light on the hilltop was friendlier and more comforting to her than all the galaxy of shining stars in the purple Virginia night. Why could he not have remained a friend? With a little sigh she returned to her work. She made the door fast and sat at the instrument which ticked away at a great rate. It was midnight—an unconscionable hour for a girl to be at work. But Margaret was telegraph operator, station master and express agent at the tiny settlement. As such, her position was of the utmost importance. Each train found her faithfully at her post.

That night she was to deliver a fat money parcel to old Barker, the express-man on No. 23. No. 23 was an hour late. She must wait patiently.

The man on the hillside had entreated her to take no risks. In fact, in the old days, he had insisted on remaining with her during the late watches. Margaret had objected. She knew everyone in Coalton. What danger could there be? Besides, gossip might find apt material in the young magistrate's presence in the station at all hours. He had sulked a bit, but finally submitted.

Nevertheless, he put something in her table drawer which might mean defense.

"You know how to use it, don't you?"

"Of course," she had replied, laughingly. "But what foolishness! You are simply trying to frighten me, and I refuse to be frightened. There could be no danger."

"One can never tell," he merely said, a certain gravity in his tone.

That was when they were good friends.

Now—he would not care—she tore her thoughts away from him, and began telegraph communication to Tarville, ten miles away. The operator there was her cousin and a merry chap, who found Margaret great company by wire.

She was laughing softly at some quirp he was ticking to her, when a loud knock startled her. She arose and stood facing the door, her heart beating fearfully. A gruff voice outside bade her open. She made no answer, nor a single move.

Then there came a violent banging. The intruder burst open the door. He was a tall, heavy man, his face evil with insolence and determination.

Margaret shuddered. It was Dick Gray, the terror of the county, fearless and most feared. He came from the wilderness west of Coalton, safe in his mountain fastnesses as outlaw well can be.

He paid no heed to the white-faced girl, going straight to the little safe which contained the package for No. 23.

A quiver ran through her as her hand stole to the drawer beside her and swiftly found hiding in the folds of her dress.

She went forward and faced him bravely.

"Get out of here!" she commanded, in the sternest of voices.

He sneered. "Humph! Yes, just as soon as I'm trough with this."

She managed to slip between the safe and the robber.

"Look 'ere, gal, I'll hurt you, ef you don' look out," he muttered menacingly. He thrust her aside, but she resisted with all her might.

"I'll give you ten seconds to leave this place!" She was in deadly earnest. Meanwhile her fluttering heart prayed that the late train might make up time and that the light on the hill might avail her. She thought of escape, but there was the money.

With an oath he flung her to the other end of the room.

"Gol darn you, I want no interference," he drawled, trying the safe once more.

Margaret steadied herself in a last effort. The man on the little hillside had said: "One can never tell." Was this the time? She was the guardian of the safe this outlaw was rifling.

Thus in all her strength she cried out: "Get out this minute, or I'll shoot!"

A revolver was leveled at him. He rushed forward to disarm her, so sure of his strength was he. But he fell in a heap at her feet. She remembered four shots and a groan. She looked queerly at the weapon in her hand, then at the bleeding thing on the floor. With a scream she dashed out of the door into the darkness. A strange fear clutching at her heart and her brain in a terrible tumult, she ran on and on. The night suddenly seemed full of dangers. Would she never reach the little house on the hillside?

The sharp ascent drove her breathless to his door. She paused a moment. She could hear him pacing up and down the room. So he was not studying after all. She gave a low knock.

"Margaret!" he exclaimed, seeing her flushed face and disheveled hair.

She could not speak, but she managed to gasp out:

"I've come to give myself up. 1—Dick Gray—is shot—down at the depot. Your revolver—did it!"

He gazed at her wonderingly.

"You, you shot that terror?" he asked incredulously.

"I—I couldn't let him get away with that money—and you gave me the pistol, Howard, you remember?"

Howard was not listening to her foolish questioning.

"And now you've got to arrest me," she ended, passively. Her face was growing pale and her voice low.

He led her to an arm chair and put a glass of water to her lips. The breathlessness was all gone now, and dark shadows danced before her. He laid her head on his shoulder, patting her hands continuously.

"My train!" she suddenly exclaimed, lifting herself with an effort.

"Never mind, dear. I'm going for you, instead of with you, this time."

Then he called to his sister.

"Take care of her, Kate. Dick Gray's in Coalton. I won't be gone very long."

He left the house and walked quickly to Margaret's station. He arrived there in time to meet No. 23 with the precious parcel. The incoming train made a longer stop than usual. Coalton does not hold a dead Dick Gray often. The trainmen heard the news with eyes wide opened. And that little Miss Margaret, too! Who would have thought it?

So the girl's heroism flashed up and down the road. All the world knew it the following day. A mere slip of a girl had ended the career of a most dangerous character, for whose capture, dead or alive, a big reward had been offered long since.

Howard entered his little house on tiptoe. Kate met him smilingly, saying, "No, she's not asleep. She thinks she ought to go to jail or something, silly child. I had to laugh at her, Howard."

He went to Margaret and found her huddled in his big chair. He bent over it slowly, calling her name very softly.

She looked up, startled. "Oh, I'm afraid of you!" she cried.

Her nerves were strung to the utmost, that he saw readily. He knelt beside the chair and folded her in his arms.

"Afraid?" he queried gently.

She met his eyes wonderingly. Then the tension snapped. Her haggard little face was buried in his neck and she wept like a desolate child.

"My Margaret, my Margaret!" he repeated again and again, stroking her bright hair in infinite tenderness.

Something in his voice destroyed forever her want of girlish freedom. Here was her rest and mayhap her work.

All of which accounts for the presence of the stubby little old man now master at Coalton stop.

RUN ON BANK.

South Framingham Institution Paying All Depositors.

South Framingham, Mass., June 15.—When the doors of the Farmers' and Mechanics' Savings bank here were opened for business at 9 o'clock today fifty or sixty depositors were in line waiting to withdraw their funds. News of the run of the previous two days had apparently spread to Saxonville, Hopkinton and other neighboring places, as depositors from those localities appeared to be in the majority at the bank's doors.

The bank officials said they were ready to pay depositors with all interest due, as fast as books were presented. About 200 depositors had withdrawn about $46,000 up to this morning.

UNIVERSITY OF PENN.

Other honorary degrees were conferred as follows:

Doctor of laws—Henry Pickering Bowdith, professor of physciology in Harvard medical school: Dr. H. C. Wood, professor of therapeutics, Materia Medica and pharmacy, at the university of Pennsylvania; Jean A. Antoine Jules Jusserand, ambassador of France to the United States.

Doctor of sacred theology—Rev. R. H. Nelson, bishop of Albany.

Doctor of science—Russell Henry Chittenden, professor of chemistry at Yale university; George Dock, professor of theory and practice of medicine at the university of Michigan.

WILL BE NO TROUBLE.

No Interference With Guests on Derby Day.

Chicago, June 15.—Secretary James Howard of the Washington park race course today made the first authoritative statement of the attitude of park officials regarding attempts to interfere with the race meeting, which begins Saturday with the American derby as the feature event. Secretary Howard said:

"Emphatically there will be no trouble at Washington park derby day. There will be no disorder and no interference with guests. The same orderly high class conditions that have made Washington park meetings famous for years will prevail on the coming derby day and throughout the season. Undoubtedly, on account of the national convention here, the attendance will not only equal, but surpass previous records. As usual the arrangements for preventing the slightest sign of disturbance will be ample. The force for that purpose on derby day will consist of 352 Pinkerton men, with an addition of eighty police."

Secretary Howard says the indications today are that there will be fifteen starters in the derby, and that the track will be very fast if heavy rains do not prevail on derby day or the preceding day.

Attack On Russian Cruiser.

THE ENEMY TAKES THEM BY SURPRISE.

THE wily Japanese have shown considerable skill in enticing the Russians out from their secure harbors and then suddenly falling upon them in overpowering numbers. It is then "survive or perish"—"sink or swim" for the Russian cruiser, and the chances are against her getting back to her safe harbor again, at least without a weakened body. Strange as it may seem, this is an analogous case to what happens very often to the human body in the spring or fall of the year. We are very often enjoying the first signs of spring weather—watching nature take on new life—when unexpectedly we are surprised by the attack of fever, grippe, or cold. No one knows just why it is, but it is nevertheless true, that our bodies are in a weakened condition at this time of year, and the germs of disease are not thrown off by our blood as they are in ordinary times; therefore, they have a chance to thrive and grow. It is also probable that during the winter, when we have had little chance for sunlight, healthful exercise in outdoor air and few green vegetables for diet, that poisons have accumulated in the system—our blood in disorder—leaves our body weak to resist the attack of these little "beasts"—the microbes of disease.

Pluck and stamina are largely a question of good health. It only takes one knock-down blow to finish a man with a headache. It only takes a small setback to disconcert a nervous and shaky man. A bilious, headachy man goes into bankruptcy at the first embarrassment. A nervous man who does not sleep at night and gets up shaky in the morning gives up the battle of business at the first discouragement. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best of all health-makers and health-keepers. It makes pure, rich blood. It forces out all impurities and disease germs. It does not make any difference what the disease may be called, so long as it has its inception in improper or insufficient nourishment—this great medicine will cure it. It may be called dyspepsia, kidney disease, "liver complaint," skin or blood disease, or nervous prostration—all these have the same starting point. The "Golden Medical Discovery" reaches that point. It will cure these diseases absolutely. None of them can retain their hold on the system when the arteries are filled with rich, pure blood.

The man who suffers from bronchitis, weak lungs, spitting of blood or any disease of the air-passages which, if neglected leads up to consumption, may take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery with almost absolute assurance of recovery. It soothes and heals the delicate and sensitive tissues of the air-passages and lungs, checks the cough, facilitates expectoration, drives out all impurities and disease germs from the tainted blood and builds new and healthy tissues.

All serious sickness is attended with wasting of the body, and this with lack of appetite and assimilative power.

Consumption, for example, is a wasting disease. Its course is marked by emaciation. The common treatment of consumption is by food fats.

But this treatment fails to recognize the fact that all food must be digested; that you can't digest and assimilate any kind of food if the stomach is broken down and these oils being foods cannot be digested and assimilated by the weak stomach. The oils are fed in an attempt to bring the character of the food down to the level of a weak stomach. Dr. Pierce's theory is that you must bring the weak stomach up to the level of strong food. That is the only way in which the stomach can furnish the blood supply for the body, adequate in its quantity and in its vital elements to the needs of the whole body and all its parts.

This is the work perfectly performed by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It acts upon the weak stomach so that it regains strength.

"After doctoring for eight months for inflammation of the lungs, and after I had been virtually given up and believed there was no hope of recovery, I heard of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Sarah Garfield of No. 1129 South Linden Street, Indianapolis, Indiana, Treasurer Indianapolis Floral Society. "I used it and found it simply a wonderful remedy. The soreness was gradually relieved, my general health was greatly improved, and I felt I was on the fair road to recovery. My appetite increased and I began to take on flesh and stop coughing so hard, enabling me to get a good night's rest—a luxury I had not known for months. Within four months I was completely restored, strong, well, and happy to think I had my health once more. I appreciated it as I never had done before, and give all the credit to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery."

"A year ago I was troubled with dyspepsia; thought at the time that I had heart trouble and was expecting to die at almost any minute," writes Mrs. Lois Hooper, of Red Bluff, Mont. "I made up my mind I would write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, which I did, and received a prompt reply advising me to take his 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I took six bottles, and can truthfully say that I have neither heart trouble nor dyspepsia now. I would advise all who are suffering from either trouble to write to Dr. Pierce at once."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are the best for the bowels. Use them with the "Discovery."

We guarantee that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery does not contain alcohol, opium, or any harmful drug. It is a pure compound of medicinal plants scientifically combined. Persons making false statements concerning its ingredients will be prosecuted.

IS VAN SANT A CANDIDATE?

Interpretation Placed By Dunn on the Dearth Interview.

St. Paul, June 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—"I have read the interview of Insurance Commissioner Elmer H. Dearth, in which he states that owing to my attacks on Governor S. R. Van Sant he can no longer support me for the Republican nomination for governor," said Robert C. Dunn last night.

"I consider Mr. Dearth's interview an open declaration on the part of Governor Van Sant that he is a candidate for a third term.

"I take Mr. Dearth's interview to mean that Governor Van Sant has decided that Judge Collins has no show to secure the nomination and that it is best to throw the judge overboard and go after the governorship himself.

"Mr. Dearth states in his interview that the reason he can no longer support me is because I have attacked Governor Van Sant, to whom Mr. Dearth owes his appointment. I consider that this reason assigned is merely a subterfuge and that back of it all is Governor Van Sant's candidacy for a third term.

"The statement that I have attacked Governor Van Sant is false."

STARTLING EVIDENCE.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds to be unequaled. A recent expression from T. J. McFarland, Bentorville, Va., serves as example. He writes: "I had Bronchitis for three years and doctored all the time without being benefited. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and a few bottles wholly cured me." Equally effective in curing all Lung and Throat troubles. Consumption, Pneumonia and Grip. Guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free, regular sizes 50c. and $1.00.

AS A COAT

NEW GUN METAL LOCKET FOR CHATELAINE

ANOTHER VIEW OF SAME LOCKET

THE CAPE COAT SPREAD OUT.

HOW THE ARM IS SLIPPED THROUGH

WEARING THE SLEEVES INSIDE

BY MISS MANHATTAN.

New York, June —.

From Paris comes a novelty that could have been conceived by no other mind than that of a Frenchman or French woman. It is a veritable stroke of genius, comprising as it does the good points of a cape with all its bad features eliminated. The novelty is a happy combination of a cape and a coat so designed that it can be either one or the other at a moment's notice and without the slightest inconvenience to the wearer in making the change. The great disadvantage to a cape is its lack of covering for the arms. When a wrap of any weight is necessary the arms require covering quite as much as the rest of the figure and a cape, no matter how long and voluminous it may be, never protects the arms on a breezy day.

The new cape-coat which has just emerged from the dressmakers in Paris is made of soft black taffeta and lined with white. When laid out perfectly flat the shape of the garment seems almost oval, with a circular piece cut out of the center for the neck and a straight opening running from here to the circumference. This part is slashed off down the front and the outer edge of the oval is cut straight across at that point which is really the bottom of the front. A clever woman could copy the pattern from the photograph, which shows the entire outline of the cape, and the details of the trimming could easily be followed from the other illustrations. Even if you don't want to make it yourself the suggestions are excellent for the dressmaker to follow and she can make as many variations of the model as she chooses.

For the whole garment it requires about five yards of fine French taffeta and an equal number of white satin for the lining. Trimmings depend upon individual taste, for they may be elaborate or quite simple without spoiling the charm of the wrap.

The great feature of the cape-coat is the arrangement of the sleeves, whereby the arms can be thrust through vertical slits made in the sides of the cape for this purpose, or they may be held inside, in which case the cape will look very much like any other loose circular wrap. There is a collar that rises high at the back and curves down in front to meet the line of the cape. This part is overlaid with a black silk passementerie that continues on over the shoulders and across the back to simulate a yoke. This particular cape had a dark green louisine foundation for the yoke and collar, which made an effective background for the black trimming. Down the fronts and around the entire bottom of the cape were four rows of curious machine stitching executed so that on the under side only a fine black line showed, while the upper thread was of heavy green silk. By using a certain machine attachment this upper thread was made to run along like a rope stitch.

Ou lining the yoke and running either side of the two vertical slits was an application of inch-wide silk braid of a flat and plain design. Around the yoke it was put on in deep curves and the intersections were drawn into points, but elsewhere the trimming was quite flat. The lining, as I mentioned before, was plain white satin with a white and black passementerie extending down the inside of the fronts of the cape and around the inner part of the collar.

So far the garment is not unlike many others cut on about the same lines, but the novel part is found in the sleeves and the miraculous way in which they transform the simple little cape into a very smart coat. The sleeves are full ones of black taffeta put upon a lining of white which shows on the inner seam, where the black silk is left loose from the cuff to the shoulder. It is turned back with a hem and over the white satin is sewed a strip of passementerie to match that which runs down the inside of the fronts. The fulness of the rather bouffant sleeves is gathered into moderately deep cuffs, which are wide enough to hold three or four bands of black braid over green louisine and at the hand they are finished with a frill of creamy lace. The sleeves are fastened to the inside of the cape at the upper point of the slit which comes well over the shoulder. When the arms are not thrust through these openings a very smart appearance is given the wrap by having the cape turned back just a trifle to disclose the arms. The effect is not at all bad, for everything about the wrap is beautifully finished, so that it could be worn inside out if one chose to.

There is only one fastening to the front and this consists of a single hook and eye over which is closed a very thin fancy black silk frog. No other trimming is needed here.

The variations that could be played upon this model are innumerable. For seashore wear blue cloth lined with scarlet would be stunning, and for such use the additional sleeves, combined with the looseness of the wrap, would make it an ideal garment. No matter how the wind might blow or how cold the breezes might become, the arms would always be well protected with this charming cape-coat.

In all white, with more elaborate ornamentation, the design would be excellent for an evening wrap. It slips on so easily over any gown, and if the arms are bare this wrap supplies just the needed warmth. Already my mind pictures a striking scarlet cape-coat of silk or lightweight cloth lined with white and trimmed with just a touch of gilt and black soutache braid. On the box seat of a coach such a costume would certainly present a strikingly attractive picture.

The newest shade of pongee, which is called white, but really is an ivory tint, is to be worn for smart street costumes, and to alternate with the jacket part of the suit it would be an excellent plan to have one of these cape-coats. It could be lined with the same shade in a lighter weight silk and trimmed in some of the heavy macrame laces or corded ornaments. You can quickly comprehend the possibilities offered by this chic idea, and I should not be surprised in the least if the cape-coat became as important a part of the feminine wardrobe as the raincoat or the opera wrap. It is extra care qualities and, besides, is so very sensible and serviceable.

Now that suits of ordinary volle can be bought ready made, the fashionable woman elects to have her spring and summer costumes made of very novel weaves which come only in imported fabrics or else to have them of some of the very expensive silks. The pongee already mentioned is considered very smart. Tailor effects are best suited to it on account of its weight, for this particular weave of pongee is by no means thin.

To Restore Thin Eyebrows.

The nervous rush of modern society is held responsible by the beauty doctors for the thinning of the eyebrows and lashes among fashionable women. A physician should be first consulted, so that the general system can be retoned, but a good local application to the eyebrows and lashes must assist the doctor's science. A good wash may be made from one ounce of glycerine, two ounces of violet water and one dram of powdered quinine. Mix thoroughly and apply with a small line brush. Great care must be taken to prevent the tonic from getting into the eyes, as it would result in a painful inflammation.

Tricks of the Four-in-Hand.

The girl who prefers linen collars to stocks has found a novelty in a tie to go with this trim style of neckwear. It is a four-in-hand that has superseded the small butterfly bow, and from all appearances seems to have gone to the other extreme as to size. The new scarfs are very wide and long, and they tie in a knot that measures at least two and a half inches from upper to lower edge. It is very loose and soft, filling entirely the space between the ends of the turnover collar.

Materials used for these scarfs remind one of the gorgeous bandanna affairs that had a great vogue five or six years ago. Foulard silks, with large, gayly colored allover patterns, make the front of a shirtwaist striking, if nothing else. As for the style of knot into which they are tied, this is borrowed bodily from men's fashions. Men have recently made the large, loose four-in-hand fashionable, and in less time than it takes to write about it women calmly took possession of it because it suited them.

The Fox-Brown Girl.

Clad all in that beautiful new shade which, for want of a better rendition from the French, is styled "fox brown," a girl made something of a stir on Fifth avenue the first warm springlike day we had. From the crown of her head to the tip of her dainty walking pumps she was a symphony in this beautiful, but trying, shade of yellow brown. Her hat was a straw that exactly matched the glint of goldy brown of her hair and reflected the tone of her costume. A fluffy coq feather was its only trimming. Her coat and walking skirt were made of Chiffon taffeta and even the lingerie of the sleeves was veiled in fox brown chiffon frills. Beneath her walking skirt one got glimpses of pretty little feet encased in silken hose and soft brown leather pumps that showed considerable of the hosiery, as pumps do. The blouse she wore with this costume was white, and so were her gloves, but with this exception there wasn't the sign of any color but fox brown.

A Chatelaine Trinket.

To supersede the vanity case there has appeared another little novelty that has enough sentiment about it to give it the approval of both sexes, especially as it seems designed for the purpose of offering a secure place in which to carry a sweetheart's picture. These cases look like small cigarette holders. They are oblong and have a fitting at the top that resembles the stem of a watch. Gunmetal cases are trimmed with gold rings and stems, by which the case is opened, to show a divided interior, in which there is a small rectangular mirror, rimmed with gold, and on the opposite side an oval frame for a picture. It is an ingenious way to conceal the face of a dear one, and it gives such an excellent chance for a woman to take a hasty peep at her own reflection while ostensibly glancing at the picture on the other side.

The daintiest of these gunmetal cases are studded with very small turquoises. This bit of color relieves the somberness of the metal and makes them look a little less mannish.

Cycling Suits Severely Simple.

Although cycling has given way largely to the swift onward rush in one's auto-car, yet thousands of women cling to the cycle, and no other sport demands so imperatively a distinctive costume of its own. The new cycling suits are of the plainest designs. The shirtwaist has simply a double-strap finish, and is front-closing, with large pearl buttons that offer no possibility of coming undone during the exercise. A single pocket on the left front has a triangular flap which also buttons with a smaller button of the same material and design.

A patent leather belt should be worn with this costume, which looks well when reproduced in white pique or tan linen, although the later crushes easily and is much cooler. The skirt is sevengored, of round length, and is absolutely devoid of trimming of any kind. Patent leather half shoes, with a commonsense heel and a small roll brim sailor completes this cycling costume. A stiff turnover linen collar and a small bow, mannish tie may be worn.

Novelties for the Summer Home.

Summer homes are to be daintier and more artistic than ever this season, and for the woman who is contemplating the furnishing of cosy and airy quarters for the warm months there are the prettiest flowered fabrics that make one feel cool just to look at them, while the design suggest bowers of roses and flowering trellises. Walls, windows, beds, chairs and doors will be hung and covered with some such material. If the furniture is purchased new this year the chances are in favor of its being wicker, tinted some harmonious color that speaks for coolness and comfort.

The one great point about summer surroundings is to have them make you think the thermometer is 10 degrees or more lower than it actually registers. Of course, to do this one must understand all the tricks and the art of resting the eye and giving it something calm and soothing to look upon.

There is a yellow shade of wicker furniture that comes as near perfection in this line as anything imaginable. The great deep chairs, the tables, lounging seats, stools, desks, and even shelves and cabinets, are all made of this woven rattan to form substantial and comfortable pieces. There is a dull green set, too, that tempts the prospective purchaser, for it has such a sweet, cool look about it that the beholder can already see it installed in a large, airy summer room, or parts of it scattered over a spacious piazza.

With plenty of pillows covered with this flowered fabric that is cool to the eye and to the touch there is no reason why mortal may not be happy and comfortable on the hottest day of the summer.

Those who are not sticking to the flower motif for rooms have found many useful novelties in the Syrian shops down town. Long strips of linen embroidered in yellow, blue or white silk, can be purchased for the traditional song. The two-yard length is enough to hang at the sides of windows, and the pieces are not so wide as to obstruct the light or air. They succeed in giving a pretty finish to the wooden frame. On the polished round dining table a luncheon cloth and doylies worked in the same style carry out the color scheme of the room in a pretty way.

Hand-wove rag rugs have taken another lease of life, and will be one of the best purchases of the summer home furnisher. One of the shops on Forty-second street is making a specialty of such rugs woven in artistic patterns and colors. The prices they ask for them would make our grandmothers blush at modern audacity, for they would think it exorbitant to pay almost as much for a "rag rug" as for an Oriental square. A fair price they are certainly worth, and it must also be admitted that there is nothing equal to one of these rugs for a matting or plain wood floor.

The greens are beautiful, and the tans, combined with yellow, are attractive enough to tempt anyone to buy one just for the sake of starting the necessary fittings for a summer home.

That these rugs are not woven in quite the old-fashioned way is readily seen when they are examined. The strips are free from knots and piecings, and there are no hit-and-miss patterns so characteristic of the antique article. Occasionally, however, one of variegated design is put in the collection just for old times' sake, and some people prefer it to the modern interpretation.

Mesh Corsets.

New ideas in corsets drift into the market almost as regularly as changes in fashions occur. To be sure, the corset either originates a style of dress or is originated by it, and so one would expect to behold frequent alterations in lines and cut. The latest novelty which we are urged to try is a corset made of a strongly woven net without seams and opening at the back or not at all, according to the buyer's preference. They are extremely long even for corsets in this day of the straight-front and exaggerated length of hip, and the only stiffening is at the sides, where there is a bit of whalebone. Of course, the fronts and backs have steels, but these are so light and pliable as to scarcely count. The lower edge is finished with a binding of satin ribbon and at the top there is a crushed ribbon trimming made full across the bust to serve as a slight pad as well as a decoration. Garters are fastened to the front and to the deep hips, so that there is no chance for the stays to roll up.

Never since corsets have been worn has anything been designed which molds to the figure so perfectly as this one. It is made expressly for the woman of unusually good form and who likes to make the most of her slenderness and suppleness. For the stout woman such corsets are quite out of the question. She requires all the curve that can be secured by the aid of whalebone and steel.

When this corset opens in the back there are the customary laces, but when no visible way of getting into it is found, then it is slipped on over the head and adjusted by means of small lacings under each arm. They come in the most vivid colorings, bright rose pink, corn-flower blue and deep cream.

Lace & Chiffon Opera Cloaks.

No garment demands more careful consideration among all the requirements of a modish woman's wardrobe than the opera cloak, and yet none offers an equal opportunity for individual taste and a corresponding personal triumph. One which was worn at the last royal drawing-room consisted of horizontal insertions of white valenciennes lace and ecru batiste embroidered by hand, with minute clusters of tinted roses appliqued on guipure of a warm cream tint. Pale blue chiffon was artistically inserted so as to separate each row of dentelles. The pellerine was finished off at the bottom, as were the petals which form the two fronts, with a full ruching of a light blue chiffon.

The lining was as artistic and as striking as the exterior of the garment. White chiffon had been gathered and caught around the shoulders and waist seams into a luxurious fulness that gave a certain distinct air of richness to the interior. This lining added much to the effect of the cloak when thrown over the arm or the side of the box at the opera. This striking cloak was cut so as just to touch a trifle below the waist line behind and sloped gracefully to a point at the knee.

WHEAT IS HIGHER

Market Advances Though Trading Is Dull and Range Narrow.

Manitoba Wheat Owners Losing Their Faith In Price.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 15.—The wheat market was stronger today and moved within a narrow range. The Liverpool market was weak, closing ½@¾d lower, London the same, Paris and Antwerp unchanged.

Rains in the Southwest were so heavy as to cause fears of damage. Owners of Manitoba wheat were bearish and dumped a considerable line. Duluth exporters bought back wheat they sold some time ago, finding the price difference advantageous enough to warrant it.

The Duluth July closed ⅜c higher, Chicago ⅛-¼c higher, Minneapolis ⅜-¾c higher and New York ¼c higher.

Car receipts of wheat at Duluth were 31 against 40 last year, and at Minneapolis 98 against 213 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 129 against 253 last year. Chicago received 34 against 15 last year. Winnipeg received 118, holiday last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 255,076 bus, last year 311,347 bus. Shipments 246,978 bus, last year 234,300 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 57,000 bus.

Trading in wheat was very dull on the Duluth board. The July option opened unchanged at 89¼c, advanced to 89⅝c at 9:55, reacted to 89⅜c at 10:10, and then advanced to 89⅞c at 1 o'clock. It closed at that price, an advance of ⅜c from yesterday. September lost ⅛c and closed at 81¼c.

Cash offerings were fairly liberal and prices continue at ½c to 1c over July for No. 1 northern.

Flax was dull and July opened unchanged at $1.10½. After holding there for a time it fell off to $1.09¾, and closed there, a loss of ¾c. September also lost ¾c and October ½c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Decline In Liverpool Affected Wheat Market Here.

Chicago, June 15.—A decline of about a cent in the price of wheat in Liverpool had a weakening influence on the market here today, offsetting the effect of heavy rains in the Southwest. While sentiment was generally bearish offerings were not large and a fair demand from shorts held prices about steady. July opened ¼@¼c to ¼@⅜c lower at 84⅛@84⅝c, sold up to 85c, and reacted to 84⅞c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 163 cars against 137 cars last week and 268 cars a year ago.

During the latter part of the session in the wheat pit was quite firm, the principal influence being prospects of a heavy export business. After selling at 85¼c, July closed at 85c, a gain of ¼@¾.

Small receipts induced a good commission house demand for corn and in consequence the market ruled firm. Many of yesterday's short sellers bought today, influenced by heavy rains in portions of the corn belt. July opened a shade lower to a shade higher at 48⅝@48¾c and advanced to 48¾c. Local receipts were 279 cars, with 21 of contract grade.

The market held firm throughout the day, July closing with a gain of ¼@⅜c at 48⅝c.

Firmness of corn had a steadying effect on the oats market. Trading was mainly of a scalping nature. July opened ⅛c lower at 39½c and sold at 39⅝c. Local receipts were 114 cars.

Liberal receipts of hogs and lower prices at the yards caused some losses in provision prices at the start, but a good demand from shorts soon resulted in a full recovery. September pork opened 2½@5c lower at $12.55@12.57½ and advanced to $12.77½. Lard was down 2½c at $6.57½, selling up later to $6.92½@6.95. Ribs opened unchanged at $7.32½, rallied to $7.37½@7.40. GRAIN GOSSIP.

State crop reports:

North Dakota: The past week has been like the week before, a wet one. Heavy rains fell in almost every part of the state, and coming so soon after the heavy rain of the previous week, which had completely saturated the ground, have flooded most of the low land, especially in the valley of the Red river, where large tracts of land, mostly sown to wheat, are now covered with water. In the western part of the state the rains were of great benefit to crops of all kinds.

Early sown wheat is looking very well, where not damaged by excessive rains; most of it is stooling very well and making a strong root; late-sown wheat has germinated rapidly, owing to the moisture in the ground, and is coming up quite evenly. Early grain stands from four to eight inches high, and in most sections completely covers the ground. Some late flax, barley and millet are yet to sow, but as a rule seeding is completed, although some small pieces of land that are now too wet to get on will be planted to fodder crops later. Corn planting is practically finished; that planted early is up, but it is very backward and making but little growth on account of the heavy rains and cloudy, cool weather; that planted lately is coming up rapidly.

Minnesota: Rains fell in the Red River valley, for the most part on the night of the 8th or morning of the 9th; elsewhere in the state there was very little rain during the week. The temperatures were low for the season on the 6th and 7th, but later in the week they were higher, the highest reported being 85 degrees at New Ulm on the 10th. The conditions have been favorable for all the crops except corn, which needs warmer weather. Wheat, oats and barley are growing well, and they are stooling, though on some low lands there are a good many weeds. Flax is growing, and the later sown is coming up; small areas of flax and barley are still being sown on newly broken land. Rye is beginning to head; in most sections the crop is poor and thin, but timothy is generally abundant; wild hay promises a good crop; last year's seeding of clover looks well, and the later seedings of timothy promise better than old timothy seeds. Corn is still backward because of poor seed and unfavorable weather, and a good deal of replanting has had to be done; the earlier plantings are being cultivated.

* * *

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat opened rather soft on weak cables and rallied on short covering. The closing was a little steadier, mainly on the report of some export business. It is safe to assume that if there is any export business doing, it is on the basis of low-priced wheat in the Southwest for September or October shipment or in Manitoba wheat, which is much cheaper and of better quality than ours. The whole cash situation remains dull and the milling situation likewise. Weather in the Southwest is favorable, and reports from every section where harvesting is in progress or about ready to begin indicates probable large yields of good quality. Northwest advices are also favorable. There has been a notable increase in bearish feling of late, and the tendency is for hte market to get a little oversold, and the bears are still timid. This may continue to bring about rallies, but on present conditions we are still of the view that the gradual drift of prices will be lower.

Corn—It is the same scalping market. It indicates no decided movement for the time being either way. The temperatures are a little higher in the West and there is more or less bearish sentiment among a good class of traders, but there is also enough good buying to prevent any sustained decline. Receipts are liberal, but farmers' offerings are irregular, as heretofore.

Oats—As in corn, it seems to have no very decided tendency. The cash situation makes the July option in a fairly legitimate position and prevents much selling pressure. We are inclined to the view that with the cash situation as healthy as it is, the deferred futures may be bought on the soft spots for the time being.

* * *

W. H. Laidley & Co., Chicago: Wheat—Cables were lower and general feeling was bearish accordingly, but the market showed an undertone of resistance to pressure and rallied well from the dips, closing fractionally higher. Some engagements for export for fall shipment were reported indicating that the deferred futures are low enough to attract foreign buyers. The July is depressed by the idea that premiums existing will attract wheat here eardly, but many traders say with so late a crop this is problematic.

Corn—A firmer tone was observable in corn the buying of September against sales of July continued and a more confident feeling seemed to exist amongst bulls. The settlement of lake strike was a helping factor though not in any great degree.

Oats—A dull firm market yielding reluctantly at times to the weakening influences of dips in other grains, but remaining firm and closing strong. The sustaining factor is the feeling that grow the growing crop and the reserves aggregate less than a year ago and the strength in cash oats which are still at a material premium over July.

Revolving Fund In Condition to Allow Two More Improvements.

First Alley and East Fifth Street Will Get Preference.

It is probable that the board of public works will be able to advertise for bids for the improvement of First alley from Lake avenue to Fourth avenue west, and the improvement of East Fifth street from Woodland avenue to Twenty-third avenue east, without the necessity for levying a preliminary assessment.

Both of the improvements have been ordered by the council, but the board has postponed advertising for bids until the assessments for Seventeenth avenue east and Huron street fell in, in order that a report might be received from the city comptroller in regard to the condition of the permanent improvement revolving fund.

These preliminary assessments fell due Saturday, and the report of the city comptroller shows that the revolving fund now has a balance of $47,529.26. This is probably be sufficient to cover the cost of paving First alley and Fifth street, and a preliminary assessment will not be necessary.

The board will take the matter up at its regular meeting next Friday and doubtless advertise for bids for these two contracts. Bids will also be called for on the contracts on Huron street and Seventeenth avenue east, on which the advance assessments of 80 per cent have been paid. These four contracts are the four largest remaining to be let this year, and only a few minor ones will remain after they have been let.

A petition is being circulated for the improvement of Fifth avenue west from Superior street to First street, and the improvement of the avenue from Railroad street to Superior has already been ordered.

The other improvements already under way are making good progress. The paving of First avenue east with sandstone blocks has been completed, and the Tenth and Twelfth avenue sewers are about half completed. The East Superior street job was delayed by wet weather, but during the past week or ten days it has been pushed.

WORST OF ALL EXPERIENCES.

Can anything be worse than to feel that every minute will be your last? Such was the experience of Mrs. S. H. Newson, Decatur, Ala. "For three years," she writes, "I endured insufferable pain from indigestion, stomach and bowel trouble. Death seemed inevitable when doctors and all remedies failed. At length I was induced to try Electric Bitters and the result was miraculous. I improved at once and now I'm completely recovered." For Liver, Kidney, Stomach and Bowel troubles, Electric Bitters is the only medicine. Only 50c. It's guaranteed by all druggists.

STRENGTH EARLY

In the Stock Market Followed By Reactionary Tendency

Due to New Issue of Preferred By Southern Pacific.

New York, June 15.—Opening prices in the stock market today showed small gains over last night, and the higher prices in London this morning helped the advance. Missouri Pacific led with a gain of ⅞. Otherwise the gains were limited to small fractions. There were some very heavy blocks of Union Pacific and Southern Pacific transferred on the advance.

Heavy operations in a few stocks swayed the course of the general market, but the movement was narrow outside of the pivotal stocks. Profit-taking in Metropolitan Street Railway which cost it ¾ turned the market downward, but a later rise to 88¾ of Union Pacific carried it back to the opening level. Southern Pacific gained ⅞. Metropolitan Street Railway, however, remained heavy, as did Reading. General Electric sold ex dividend and ex rights at 152 to 153½ compared with 158½ last night. The rights brought 5⅛@5¼. Reading second preferred, Kansas & Texas preferred and Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis advanced 1@1¼, and Railway Investment fell 1.

The coalers were inclined to be heavy, and where the rise in Union Pacific paused, Reading receded ¾ under last night. Manhattan lost as much. A sharp reaction followed throughout the list. Southern Pacific dropped back to ½ under last night. Union Pacific reacted ⅞. Prices steadied at or slightly below last night's level. Rumors of a new capital issue by Southern Pacific and Union Pacific clutched ness were held accountable tar the activity in Union Pacific and Southern Pacific. Bonds were irregular.

The reported plan to issue preferred stock of the Southern Pacific led to enormous selling of that stock which dropped to 46. It had sold at 48⅝ in the forenoon and closed yesterday at 47⅝. Other stocks weakened materially in sympathy. St. Paul, Pennsylvania, Reading and Chesapeake & Ohio lost a point net, and reactions in a number of other stocks reached fully as much. Heavy buying of Northern Pacific rallied it to 46⅞ and the market generally rallied about a ½. At 1 o'clock the pressure against Southern Pacific was resumed and it dropped to below 46, carrying the general market down with it again.

Declines from last night's level reached ⅞ to 2⅝ in Metropolitan Street Railway, Erie second preferred and Wisconsin Central preferred. The market became very dull and the price movement somewhat confused. Southern Pacific sagged again and Union Pacific rose to near the best.

The actual number of sales reported. The "state of weather" is that prevailing at time of observation.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is closing a little irregular without much change from yesterday. It started out strong, but a flurry occurred in Southern Pacific which checked the advance and gave the market a little hesitating action. The report is that Southern Pacific will issue $45,000,000 of either preferred stock or bonds. So far the report is unofficial and indefinite. The effect was to break that stock sharply. In the absence of definite information we would be disposed to think the wise thing to do is to assume that whatever the proposed action is, it will prove to be in the iterest of the owners of the property. We see no change in general conditions. There is a lot of idle money which is expensive. There are a lot of cheap well-paying dividend stocks which are we think, gradually being absorbed. We think stocks should be bought.

* * *

T. A. McIntyre & Co. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The sensation of the day was the announcement of the Southern Pacific company that a meeting of directors held this morning the issue of $100,000,000 of 7 per cent preferred stock was authorized, of which $40,000,000 is to be issued immediately upon the ratification of the proposition which is to be passed upon by a stockholders' meeting to be held early next month. The whole market, which was strong throughout the forenoon at further fractional advances from yesterday, developed a general reactionary with heavy profit taking sales the feature.

* * *

W. H. Laidley & Co.: Market steady. If you have not taken profits on long stocks, it is best to do so and be ready to buy on any reaction, and they are bound to come, as this is not going to be a run away bull market. Prices worked off sharply about noon on the announcement of new stock issued by Southern Pacific we woud buy good stocks on any break like this and think they will show fair profits.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 15.—The cotton market opened weak at a decline of 20@21 points on the old and 9@12 points on the new crop months under selling for both accounts as a result of very disappointing cables and generally favorable weather and crop accounts. Offerings were checked, however, by the reports of floods in the Red River valley, which were said to have overflowed a large area in Arkansas and Louisiana, and the market, after selling down to a loss of about 14 to 26 points, steadied slightly, with prices at the end of the first hour hanging around the opening figures.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 30 points lower; middling uplands, 12.10; middling gulf, 12.35; sales, 45 bales. Cotton futures closed barely steady; June, 11.19; July, 11.29; August, 10.90; September, 10.03; October, 9.67; November, 9.55; December, 9.58; January, 9.61.

End of the Lake Strike Causes Great Satisfaction.

The Steamer Augustus B. Wolvin Attracts Much Interest Here.

Great satisfaction is freely expressed in Duluth over the calling off of the strike. Activity will soon be apparent in all lines. Line boats today were offering to take grain at 2 cents for shipment next week.

Owing to the word from Cleveland of the abandonment of the strike by the Masters' and Pilots' association, the Pittsburg Steamship company has ordered all the engine crews of the boats which have been lying in the harbor at Duluth and Superior to go on duty.

There about eighteen of these boats, which means immediate work for seventy or eighty men.

Cleveland, June 15.—After six weeks of tie-up on the great lakes that has directly involved only a couple of thousand men, but indirectly more than a hundred thousand, who have been idle because of its existence, a cessation was brought to the strike last night by the surrender of the masters who, with the pilots, have been holding out for a more uniform scale of wages this season than was offered by the Lake Carriers' association, whose boats were most affected by the difficulty between the vessel owners and their employes.

The strike was declared off last night by Paul Howell, district captain of the Masters' and Pilots' association, who gave out the following statement:

"The Masters' and Pilots' association have concluded that it would be good policy at this stage of the game owing to existing conditions over which we have no control to advise our captains to go to work and make the most of a bad situation. Our mates will meet at the earliest possible opportunity and make arrangements along the line of their own ideas and present them to the Lake Carriers' association for acceptance. In the meantime the mates will remain where they are until this arrangement is made and agreed upon by the two associations."

It is understood that the Lake Carriers' association will soon come to an agreement with the mates and that the full fleet of the Lake Carriers' association will be gotten under way within a very few days.

The Lake Carriers' is willing to pay last year's scale of wages, but this was not agreeable to the masters and pilots because of alleged great difference in the wages of men doing exactly similar work.

The strike has been one of the most costly in wages and time lost, and stagnation to business that has occurred in recent years.

President Livingstone, of the Lake Carriers' association, left on the boat for Detroit before the action of the masters became known, hence no statement was obtainable from him. Henry Coulby, general manager of the Pittsburg Steamship company, the largest single fleet of boats on the lakes, is in New York city. The only Lake Carriers' association official who made any statement was Harvey D. Goulder, counsel. Mr. Goulder said that the strike was broken whether the masters surrendered, declared it off or remained out.

BIG BOAT IS IN.

Steamer Augustus B. Wolvin Arrives in Port.

The new steel steamer Augustus B. Wolvin, the largest boat afloat on fresh water, arrived in the local harbor last night on her maiden trip. She was in command of Capt. Joseph Norcross, with a crew of twenty-five men, and had 10,300 tons of soft coal as a cargo.

The boat was about two hours later than expected, arriving at 11:15 p. m. In spite of this fact there were a number of people on the pier to see her come in. About 9 o'clock in the evening there were several hundred people on hand to get a first glimpse of the big steamer, but when she failed to show up between that time and 10 o'clock most of them went home. The trip up the lakes was an uneventful one.

George Barney, engineer of the "large and powerful" tug D. Stott Helm, of the Union Towing and Wrecking company, is today boasting of the honor conferred upon his tub in being the one selected to tow the Wolvin to Northwestern coal dock No. 1, Superior, where her cargo will be discharged.

CIVIL SUIT PENDING

Theodore Yowell Asks Recovery of Money Lost In Saloon.

Could Not Establish Criminal Case and Prosecute Civilly.

A civil suit to recover money of which he claims to have been robbed was commenced in the municipal court today by Theodore Yowell. Yowell claims that he came to Duluth from a lumber camp on the north shore about April 25, with $85 in his pocket, the result of his winter's savings.

He states that he entered the saloon owned by Maurice Harley, and known to the police as the "Bottling Works." Here he fell in with a crowd of loungers and took several drinks. He claims that he started to leave the place as he was commenced to feel the effects of the liquor he had consumed, and feared he would fall asleep in the saloon and be robbed of his money, as he had heard the place bore a bad reputation.

He claims that Harley followed him from the saloon and induced him to return, telling him that he would be all right there and he would watch him if he fell asleep. He consented to return and fell asleep in a chair. When he awoke he claims that the $85 was missing from his pocket. He ran out and summoned an officer. The matter was taken up by the police department at the time, but sufficient evidence could not be found to warrant the prosecution of Harley criminally, and the city attorney refused to issue a warrant for his arrest.

Harley claimed at the time that he did not attempt to induce Yowell to return, but that a man named Kearn, an old friend of Yowell's, had brought him back, and Yowell had paid him 15 cents to watch him while he slept.

When the authorities decided that there was not sufficient evidence to prosecute Harley criminally, Yowell brought a civil suit to recover the amount lost, and the case is being heard in the municipal court today before Judge Windom.

The defendant denies that he induced Yowell to return to the saloon, or offered to watch him while he slept to see that he was not robbed. Harley denies all knowledge of the robbery, and claims he was in no way responsible for it if it took place.

Porter J. Neff is representing Yowell, and Albert Baldwin and George Spangler the defendant.

PROBATE COURT AGAIN

Dandrea Children May Go to State Public School.

Louise Dandrea and Joseph Dandrea, the two children who have been actively and intimately in contact with public affairs for several weeks, through the probate court and other county offices, will be in probate court again next Monday.

Humane Agent Withrow has applied to Judge Middlecoff to have them sent to the state public school at Owatonna, for the good of the children, as he states it. He claims that the home they now occupy is not suitable, and he thinks that they will be better off under the care of the state at Owatonna.

Louise, who recently had a guardian appointed in order that legal consent might be had to her marriage, is about 15 years of age, and Joseph is two years younger.

What figure the prospective marriage will cut will not appear until the hearing in probate court next Monday. Mr. Withrow, when asked whether it might not make a difference, stated that he knew nothing about that, not having been honored with an invitation to the wedding.

Harley Marshall, aged 3, will also be the subject of a hearing in probate court Monday, Mr. Withrow deeming him also a proper charge for the public school at Owatonna. He is living with a foster-mother, who through illness has become unable to care for him, it is said.

DODGING THE BOATS.

Canal Ferry Is Kept Busy Again.

Complaint has begun again this year of the narrow escape the ferryboats are having from the vessels in and out of the government canal. The ferry that was coming across the canal last night just as a tug started out to meet the Augustus B. Wolvin is said to have been very nearly run into.

"She did not miss us two feet," said a man this morning who was on board last night. "I was standing in the stern of the ferry and pretty soon we saw a vessel coming toward us and making for the canal. It was not long until she came close enough to be made out, and she was coming very fast. I heard two bells on the tug and she swung to a sidewise gait, while we were ordered to go ahead full speed by the ferry captain. As it was, coming sidewise, with her engines reversed, the tug managed to escape us, but only about far enough so that a person could reach over and touch her. If she had been coming straight and at full speed, I feel certain she would have cut us in two or turned us over."

COMES UP AGAIN

Change In Maccabee Government to Be Discussed.

Proposal For State Camp Is Broached Once More.

Duluth members of the Knights of the Maccabees are particularly interested in the convention which it to be held in Minneapolis beginning tomorrow. The convention is the biennial state affair and is of especial interest in the northern part of the state, notably in this city, because an old fight on the method of governing the affairs of the order in the state is likely to be renewed.

Some time ago a vote was taken throughout the various lodges in the state on a proposition of organizing a state camp to govern the affairs of the order in Minnesota to be known as the great camp. This would have taken from the supreme camp, which is the national body, with its national offices at Port Huron, Mich., the administration of the affairs of Minnesota members.

The vote as taken led the officers to report that the proposition was defeated, which was considered a victory for Duluth and vicinity, as the members here did not want the proposition to carry. The contention of the local members is that a change in the method of administration such as propos d would be too costly for the state, as, according to their contention, the expenses would be increased by a substantial percentage owing to the augmented office room and more employes which would be necessary.

As the vote of three-fourths, necessary to carry the idea, was not quite polled at the time the proposition was up, the people interested have allowed it to become known that they will undertake to renew the fight tomorrow at Minneapolis, and Duluth and her neighboring fraters are expected to make a strong stand against it. The Duluth men contend that the membership does not justify a change in the administration at this time.

The state has now about 10,000 members and the statement is made that there should be more like 15,000 members in Minnesota to make a different form of government profitable to the order. It being admitted that 15,000 members could be better taken care of by a home organization than by the general body.

Some other propositions of vital interest to the state are to be up at Minneapolis, one of which is one to revise the rates now charged by the order. The Knights of the Maccabees is an insurance fraternity and is well known through the low rates of insurance it has charged its people.

It is said that in many cases these rates are not sufficient to justify permitting more memberships at the old prices, and it is along the line of an increase that the revision is proposed. It is probable that in case of revision the members now in will be permitted to stay at the old rates.

There are expected to be 300 or more members at the Minneapolis convention, each tent in the state having two delegates, and besides these there will be a large number of others who will go as visitors, including some tents which will go in a body, to perform certain degree work for the benefit of the convention. Altogether there are expected to be over 1000 Knights at the Flour City and the Maccabees there are preparing to give the visitors a big welcome.

One of the Duluth members will be honored especially with a place in the banquet program tomorrow night at the Nicollet house, Senator George R. Laybourn being on the list for a response to a toast.

Delegates who will go this afternoon and tonight are: Charles J. Hector, John P. Peterson, Duluth; S. M. Hanchett, Alex Stewart, West Duluth; George S. Raper, Two Harbors. There will be present at Minneapolis a number of the supreme officers from Port Huron.

Duluth tent, with its 600 members, is one of the largest in the state.

I. N. Chellew, formerly of this city, is chief state officer of the order, with headquarters at St. Paul.

Fat Colored Woman Broke Rope at Lynching.

Lbanon Junction, Ky., June 15.—Mrs. Maria Thompson, colored, who last night killed John Irwin, a wealthy white farmer, was taken from jail at 2 a. m. and hanged to a tree in the jail yard.

She weighs 225 pounds and the rope broke. As she ran away the mob fired a fusilade after her until she fell and was left for dead. FROM THE WEST

Excursion From Wahpeton and Intermediate Points Arrives Here.

Its second cheap excursion came in over the Northern Pacific this afternoon from Wahpeton and points eastward this afternoon. The excursion was run in two sections, the first section taking on passengers from Wahpeton and points between there and Fergus Falls. As it did not take on passengers from Fergus Falls or points this side, it had an easy time in getting here, and arrived five minutes ahead of the schedule time, which was to be 2:35 p. m.

The first section consisted of one baggage car and seven coaches, all well filled. The second train came in a little later. The first train brought about 400 and it was estimated that the second section bore about the same number of people.

A large crowd of people were on hand to see the incoming visitors, some to meet friends, some out of mere curiosity, some to see if, by chance, there might be somebody in it that they knew and the usual number of steamboat and amusement agents and runners for hotels.

Many interesting reunions were witnessed by the bystanders. The handshake was the customary form of salutation, although there were some greetings of a more affectionate variety, although most of the people, even the women, seemed to hesitate about performing any osculatory work in the presence of so many people.

But everybody seemed to be well pleased at the prompt arrival of the excursion and some who banked on it getting here on the dot or a little late, did not get to the depot in time to meet it. Many of he arrivals will visit friends, while a great number will go to the houses on the list of the Commercial club.

That organiaztion, at its headquarters in the Manhattan building, had cards and messengers for the use of the visitors in directing them to places of entertainment. The cards give the name and address for the place of entertainment, the number of people sent and the name of the messenger by whom th arrivals are accompanied. The headquarters in the Manhattan building were made a sort of geenral information bureau for the visitors.

Many of the excursionists take advantage of the cheap rate to come to Duluth to make purchases as well as for recreation, and their stay here means a good deal to the hotels, boarding houses, stores and various amusement entertprises. The special trains will return Friday afternoon.

IMMIGRATION ASSOCIATION

Would Perpetuate Work of Bringing In Immigrants.

St. Paul, Minn., June 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Minnesota Immigration association today adopted resolutions for the purpose of perpetuating the work of bringing to Minnesota immigrants in large numbers for settlement upon unoccupied state lands. The committee on permanent organization recommended that a central committee be constituted to look after all matters of legislation for the promotion of state immigration and that the presidents of the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth Commercial clubs be ex-officio members of the committee, and that they be requested to co-operate with the committee in every way.

The committee also suggested that this central committee ask the co-operation of all commercial bodies of the state to secure legislation and such appropriations of money necessary to inaugurate a broad immigration policy.

Resolutions were also adopted asking the legislature to create a bureau of immigration and maintain it out of the public funds. Five papers were read on topics relating to Minnesota state resources. The convention has adjourned.

LAST MEETING

Of Sub-Committee on Democratic National Convention.

St. Louis, June 15.—What will in all probability be the last meeting of the sub committee on arrangements of the National Democratic committee on arrangements of the National Democratic committee previous to the National Democratic convention, convened at the Jefferson hotel today. Those present were James K. Jones of Arkansas, J. O. Johnson of Kansas, James Guffey of Pennsylvania, Jas. M. Head of Tennessee, and W. J. Stone of Missouri. The members of the committee expressed satisfaction regarding the progress of arrangements for the convention to be held in the Coliseum on July 6. The $40,000 offered as a bonus when St. Louis designated the convention city, has been collected and is now in the hands of the national committee.

ARKANSAS DELEGATES FAVOR JUDGE PARKER.

Hot Springs, Ark., June 15.—After a night of caucusing and debate, delegates to the state Democratic convention met today. Delegates to St. Louis from the congressional districts were named. The principal contest is for delegates-at-large. The majority of delegates already named express themselves in favor of Judge Parker.

The Hearst followers, however, are working hard to prevent instructions, and may be successful.

WATTERSON SPEAKS

At Dedication Of Monument To Confederate Soldiers.

Nashville, Tenn., June 15.—At Centennial Park today the corner stone of a monument to the private soldiers of the Confederacy, the tribute of the Nashville veterans to the enlisted men, was laid with impressive ceremonies under the direction of the Masonic fraternity. State Grand Master James L. Sloan presided. The orator of the day was Hon. Henry Watterson, of Louisville, Ky., Mr. Watterson said in part:

We are here today to lay the foundation-stone of a monument to the Confederate dead. That monument, when it is completed, will forever mark, will keep forever watch and guard over the memory of brave men who died fighting against the national government. In the thoughts which crowd our minds, in the emotions which fill our hearts, in the words which we shall utter, we are to make no paltry admissions, no mean confessions, no dishonoring renunciations; but standing uncovered in the presence of Almighty God, proclaiming to the world the integrity of the dead, signalizing the cause for which they died, renewing our fidelity to the sacred compact of brotherhood and soldiership, we are to reconcile this act of pious homage with perfect loyalty to the Union, to the flag and to those of our countrymen who successfully fought against us.

FIVE HUNDRED AND FOUR BODIES HAVE BEEN TAKEN FROM RUINS OF STEAMER GENERAL SLOCUM AND THE RIVER, AND 450 PERSONS ARE REPORTED MISSING. IT IS PROBABLE THE TOTAL LOSS WILL REACH NEARLY 1000

THE RUSSIAN ARMY MEETS DISASTROUS DEFEAT AFTER THREE DAYS BATTLE AT VAFANGOW AND RETREAT IS BEING CUT OFF

IT IS NOW PROBABLE THAT NEARLY 1000 PERSONS LOST THEIR LIVES IN HORRIBLE CATASTROPHE ON STEAMER

Estimate Is Based on Opinion of Fire Department, Coroner and Police Who Are Investigating.

Disaster Will Rank as Most Appalling Calamity That Has Occurred on American Inland Waters.

Heart Rending Scenes Are Constantly Occurring Around Morgues Where Victims Are Laid.

New York, June 16.—The loss of life by the burning of the steamer General Slocum in the East river yesterday will approximate 1000. This estimate is based on the opinion of the chief of the fire department, on the coroner's office and of the police.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon 504 bodies had been recovered, of which 15 had been identified. There were reported missing 467 persons, and the hospitals had 117 injured.

The fact that twenty-four hours after the disaster there are still missing nearly 500 persons warrants the belief that the above estimate of the dead will be verified, for the authorities have used every source at their command to locate all who escaped.

Mayor McClellan announced this afternoon that he had decided to issue a proclamation asking for subscriptions for the burial of the dead and for such other immediate relief as could be given. He said he would ask ten men of prominence to serve on a committee to take charge of the fund.

At an informal meeting of Lutheran ministers, in the home of the Rev. Mr. Haas, this morning, an appeal to the ministers of all denominations to assist in the funeral services of the General Slocum victims was prepared.

GREATEST CALAMITY

Ever Occurred on Inland Waters of America.

New York, June 16.—When the dread tale of the Gen. Slocum disaster is fully told—when the last blackened body has been taken from the burned hull and the swift waters of Hell Gate give up their dead, the catastrophe will take its place as the most appalling that has ever occurred in the inland waters of America. Definite figures on the loss of life cannot yet be given. That more than 500 persons perished is a horrible certainty, but how much in excess of that number the total will run will only be known when the "missing" column is finished.

All during the night and through the early dawn of today, the sad work of exploring the Slocum's hull went on and from dock to morgue the procession of ambulances, each with its pitiful load, wound its way from the river front to the morgue at the foot of Twenty-sixth street, until at 10 o'clock 465 bodies lay on the slabs.

Most of these came from the wreck, but the night long patrol of the waters of East river added its ghastly quota. There are many bodies still in the hold of the burned vessel, according to the divers and wreckers, but the river is looked to to complete the list. How many, preferring death by drowning to the agony of death by fire, went over the rail never to rise again, during the mad race of the vessel for the beach will probably never be known, for the treacherous waters of Hell Gate do not willingly give up their victims.

Unlike the Iroquois theater and other great catastrophes of recent years, where the woe of the disaster reached throughout the land, the blow of the Slocum's mortality falls practically upon one little neighborhood of a great city. St. Mark's parish, which furnished nearly every victim, lies within ten crowded blocs of the middle East side, and therein today there is hardly a house that is not one of mourning. The membership of the little Lutheran church is practically German, or of German descent, and all of the comparatively well-to-do class.

The race of the burning steamer, from the moment the fire was discovered until her bows crashed on the shelving beach of North Brother island, lasted little more than ten minutes, yet that time sufficed for deeds of heroism, which make the one bright chapter in the heart-rending story. Brave men, devoted mothers, and even maidens and youths of tender years, each contributed their part to the roll of heroic acts.

There were rescues in the face of almost certain death, and useless but exalted self-sacrifice. The credit for the greatest saving of life is due to the hardy tug boatmen and other followers of the river, who braved the flames and held the noses of their boats against the fire-wrapped steamer until driven off by the awful heat, scorched and choking. Dead bodies of women were found with their burned arms clasped in close the pitiful forms of little children and babies were found, their tiny arms enfolding each other in the stiff embrace of death.

But there is a darker side hinted at along the river front where are told stories that seem to be the inevitable accompaniment of all great calamities. There has been no evidence of a character specific enough to fasten it upon individuals and permit of punishment, but survivors and eye witnesses say that some brutal acts of selfishness and cowardice on the part of the Slocum's crew were seen and that distress signals from the burning boat were disregarded by passing craft. One man avers that a big white yacht pased the Slocum when the bodies of women and children were going overboard and did not even slacken speed. According to this man the yacht flew the pennant of New York Yacht club, but not the owner's pennant which always signifies that he is aboard, and after passing the Slocum she steered over to the western shore and hove to, while on her bridge a man in uniform with binoculars to his eyes watched the vessel burn.

Even more horrible than this and similar acts of incredible callousness is the story of Miss Martha Weirk, who says that while she struggled in the water a boat drew alongside of her, and that men in her, after stripping her of her rings and other jewelery, pushed her back into the water. The body of the steward had been rifled when found, and of several hundred dollars he was supposed to have in his pockets, not a cent was found. There is open criticism of the failure of the Slocum's officers and crew to meet the emergency, and as yet no formal action has been taken by either the municipal or federal authorities. Capt. Van Schaick and the two pilots are under arrest, but are held only as witnesses.

That there was terrible failure to meet the responsibilities is undoubted. No effort, as far as can be learned, was made to launch the life rafts or boats, and no concerted attempt made toward equipping the helpless women and children with life preservers. But few of the bodies recovered from the river had on life preservers, and according to several statements, most of these supposed instruments of safety were practically worthless, either coming apart when an attempt was made to use them, or not possessing the buoyancy they are supposed to have.

There is very general criticism of the captain and pilots for their failure to turn the vessel ashore the moment they were informed that the fire had gained headway. Captain Van Schaick has made several statements, varying in detail, but none of them is considered satisfactory.

Pilot Van Wert, however, today said that he could not dock the vessel because all of her hawsers were burned. His statement follows:

"When I first discovered the presence of fire on the steamer, I decided to make for the first dock that I could find, but in a moment I was informed that all the ropes by which we usually tied up had been burned. I then decided to make for the first point of land where there was no rocks and beach the vessel, and this I did. The presence of rocks all along the shore made it impossible for me to beach the vessel any sooner than I did."

The scene at the bureau of information which has been established in St. Mark's Lutheran church today, was pathetic in the extreme. There is a constant stream of people and now and again, as some one is informed that the loved one for whom he or she is seeking is among the dead, a cry of grief is heard.

One young man called at the church today and was informed that his mother and four sisters for whom he was looking had not been found. He had been to the morgue and to all the hospitals and this was his last hope. Satisfied that his loved ones were dead, he fainted and it was some time before he could be resuscitated.

From midnight until long after sunrise today the work of arranging the hundreds of unidentified bodies which were being brought down from North Brother island all night progressed uninterruptedly. The sleepless eyes of stricken men and women on the dock at the foot of East Twenty-sixth street watched every move of the physicians. The scenes about the morgue and the docks, where the relief boats came in laden with their ghastly freight were heartrending and beyond any possibility of description. Men and women who had waited for hours swaying between fear and hope, gave way to bitter grief when at last the bodies of their loved ones were found among the piles of burned and mangled.

A heavy pall of sorrow hung today over the public school on Fifth street, near First avenue, which is in the center of the residence district most affected by the Slocum disaster. Of the 2000 pupils of the school nearly 300 did not appear today. Of this number 100 had obtained permission on Tuesday to be absent yesterday for the purpose of going on the excursion.

At noon, according to the best obtainable information about 450 persons are reported missing. The coroner's office and the chief of the fire department agree in the estimate, that the total loss of life will closely approximate 1060.

KNOWN DEAD, 504.

Number Missing Estimated as Exceeding Four Hundred.

New York, June 16.—After an all-night search, with the aid of professional divers at North Brother island, for victims of the ill-fated General Slocum, which was burned yesterday, 504 known dead had been recovered up to noon. Of this number 116 had been identified. The number of missing is estimated in the vicinity of 400.

During the day yesterday 203 persons were taken to hospitals. After treatment it was found, in many cases, that the injuries were not serious enough to prevent their going home, and they were allowed to depart. Some of those who remain in hospitals, however, are still in a critical condition.

All night long crowds of people visited the morgue with entreaties for a chance to try to make identifications.

The estimates of number of dead, given by officials, vary exceedingly. Dr. Darlington, the president of the board of health, who remained at North Brother island for a great portion of the night, gave as his estimate a total of 1200, with possibilities of 1250. Inspector Brooks, who had been at the scene since a few minutes after the accident, placed the number at nearly 1000.

A particularly sad incident during the night was the attempt at suicide of a grief-stricken mother at the morgue.

This woman, Mrs. Lena Rekanski, went there to try to find her little daughter, Wanda, who was missing, and found a body which she identified as that of her child. Wandering from the morgue, she walked down the string piece of the pier and attempted to throw herself into the river. She had been watched, however, and policemen seized her in time to save her life. She was taken to Bellevue hospital.

All through the night and today men in diving suits, others with grappling hooks in their hands, stood on the decks of tugs, which hovered about the sunken wreck of the General Slocum. Now and then a man in one of the weird-looking suits would slip over the side of a tug and sink to the bottom.

Then another diver would appear on the surface. Probably he had come to the top for rest and air, or perhaps he held the body of a woman or the body of a child in his rubber-coated arms. The chances were that he had come up with the dead.

As a diver would bring a body to the surface a grappling hook was placed under it and it was raised to the deck of a tug. Some of these bodies were beyond recognition. When several bodies were recovered another tug, from which divers were not working, would pull alongside and transfer the dead.

How many deadlie in that charred and sunken hull cannot ever be estimated until every nook and corner of the shell has been gone over by the divers.

At sunrise today two diveres came to the surface. In the arms of one were two little girls clasped in each others arms. Their hair was the same color and their dresses were alike, showing that they were sitsers. The other diver had in his arms the body of a young woman, which had been found with those of the little girls. In her dead hand was still clasped the dress of one of the children, and the divers thought she was their mother, and had gone to death with them.

WOMAN FOUND ALIVE

After Being Towed Ashore and Placed In Morgue.

New York, June 16.—Brought into the Alexander avenue police station, and tagged as one of the unidentified dead, Clara Hartman was revived while she was lying in the improvised morgue. A woman searching among the dead for a relative, noticed that the girl was breathing, and called an ambulance surgeon, who found that there were signs of life. After the surgeon had worked over her for half an hour, she Signatures For Trademark Utilized For Extensive Order.

New York, June 16.—In an affidavit accompanying an application for an order to require the plaintiffs to furnish a bill of particulars, John Adam Ebbig and Margaret Ebbig, his mother, who are being sued by the American Fine Arts company of Milwaukee for $188,458.94, for breach of contract, tells a story of alleged imposition and forgery. Judge Kelly in supreme court special term, granted the order. The alleged breach of contract concerns an order for lithographic calendars for a brewing company. John Ebbig says these orders were never placed and that the brewing company could not use in 600 years the number of calendars the amount sued for would buy.

Mr. Ebbig says an agent for the plaintiffs solicited orders from the brewing company for lithographic calendars, but that no contract of the kind was entered into. Later the plaintiff's agent, says Mr. Ebbig, said it would be well if the companies trade mark "Germania" were registered and got the elder Ebbig, according to the son, to sign a sample of each kind of stationery used at the brewery.

Mr. Ebbig in his affidavit says that orders for lithographic calendars were deftly written in above the signature, so that what had been regarded as applications for the registering of a trademark at a cost of $26 became in reality orders for many thousands of dollars worth of calendars.

HEARING OF CONTESTS.

Republican National Committee Begins With Alabama.

Chicago, June 16.—Beginning with the Alabama Fourth congresional district, the Republican national committee today prepared to begin hearing the contests which come before it for seats in the Republican national convention.

By a rule adopted by the committee, half an hour was given over to hearing of each contest. This rule, it was said, would probably be waived in the case of state contests like Louisiana, Delaware and Wisconsin.

Chairman Henry C. Payne was so far recovered today that he was able to leave his hotel to go to the Coliseum, where the meeting of the national committee was held.

CORBIN FOR PHILIPPINES.

Will Command That Division, Succeeding Wade.

Washington, June 16.—Maj. Gen. Henry C. Corbin has been ordered to command the division of the Philippines, succeeding Maj. Gen. J. F. Wade, the order to take effect in October. Gen. Corbin, at preesnt, commands the division of the Atlantic and department of the East, with headquarters at Governor's island, New York. He will have had about a year and a half of service in the Philippines when Lieut. Gen. Chaffee reaches the retiring age. It is xpected that Gen. Corbin will then succeed Gen. Chaffee as lieutenant general.

HORSE THIEF

Given Indeterminate Sentence In Reform School.

Crockston, Minn., June 16.—Judge Watts sentenced William Johnson, who was found guilty of robbery, to two years' imprisonment. Johnson last winter robbed Jorgeson, of East Grand Forks, of $50.

Claude Hopkins, who confessed to having stolen a team from Ole Bjoin, of this city, was given an indeterminate sentence in the state reform school.

C. H. Babcock, of the Great Northern railroad, has appointed F. M. Brown, of this city to the position of agent of the Great Northern lands and townsites. The position was formerly held by R. H. Purvis. There has already been several calls for land, and the fact that the Great Northern is building an extension and that the Soo line will run through much of the Great Northern lands makes it probable that this will be a busy year.

Raymond Brosseau died yesterday after suffering from heart trouble for several months. He was only 20 and had completed a course in pharmacy and was studying medicine at Chicago.

CHILLED TO DEATH

Fate of Minnesota Men Lost In Lake Shoal.

Clung to Boat For Many Hours In Icy Waters.

St. Paul, June 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—County Attorney Smith, of Jackson county, and Clark Bissell, of Lakefield, who were in St. Paul late yesterday, told a graphic story of the death of Postmaster John Crawford and John C. Knox, the latter a son of T. J. Knox, of the statute revision commission and formerly a member of the state railroad and warehouse commission, in Lake Shoal, west of Winnipeg, a few days ago.

Mr. Bissett states that the two men were practically frozen to death. Their boat capsized and they clung to it until the severe cold of the water paralyzed them and forced them to let go.

Crawford clung to the boat from 8:30 until 11:30 in the morning. Knox maintained his hold until after 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Both were excellent swimmers, but the boat was three miles from shore and when it capsized the waves were running fifteen feet high.

Mr. Knox, the father of the young man who lost his life, is now at the lake, seventy miles from Winnipeg, directing the efforts to recover the bodies. The lake is extremely deep and the work of recovery is very difficult.

BIGAMY CHARGED

Against A. J. Hedrix, a Bismarck Attorney.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 16.—A. J. Hedrix, an attorney of Bismarck, N. D., is charged with the crime of bigamy by Mrs. Hedrix No. 1, who says that he left her in this city in October, 1902, promising to send for her later, but afterwards deserted her and married another woman with whom he has been residing at Bismarck. Wife No. 1 only learned of the second marriage, she alleges, two or three weeks ago, the information coming through the Bismarck lodge of the Knights of Pythias, although she has been in regular correspondence with her husband. Hedrix is known in this city as both a lawyer and printer. He was graduated from Drake university in 1901 and practiced law for a time, returning to his trade of printing. He is understood to have stated that he thought his first wife had secured a divorce.

STANFORD NEWEL

May Succeed Clayton as Ambassador to Mexico.

Washington, June 16.—There is a chance that Stanford Newel, of St. Paul, present minister to The Hague, will succeed Powell Clayton as ambassador to Mexivo. Mr. Newell is among those now being considered for the prospective vacancy. When he was in Washington last winter he told the members of the Minnesota delegation of his desire for a change, in the event that Clayton resigned, as it was then reported he would. Minnesotans promised their support and it is understood that they have filed or will file recommendations with the president.

TOWN OF ROSES,

Religion and Rest Is Divided Against Itself.

Wheeling, W. Va., June 16.—West Alexander, the hilltop town of roses, religion and rest, just across the line in Pennsylvania, is rent over the question of city scales. Scales have been bought and never paid for; two of its seven councilmen have resigned; citizens do not speak as they pass by; bloody noses have marked the strife's pathway; there have been arrests and sentences; injunctions are in the air, and the fight is only warming up.

In March the council ordered the purchase of new scales, to be located alongside of private scales. A member happened to be absent from that meeting, and at the next meeting said the purchase was illegal, the meeting breaking up in a free-for-all fight. A new council was elected, and refused to pay for the scales which now grace the stable of one of the retired councilmen.

NEW POSTMASTERS.

Washington, June 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following Minnesota postmasters have been appointed: Opsted, Mille Lacs county, John Kalberg, vice Andrew Zehlin, resigned; Strand, Morrison county, Rena Schiller, vice Thomas Pederson, resigned.

Japanese Received Reinforcements and Crushed Russian Flank.

Gen. Stackelberg Forced to Retreat When Seemingly Victorious.

The Russian Fleet Sink Two Jap Transports With Over 1000 Men.

St. Petersburg, June 16, 6:10 p. m.—It is rumored throughout the city that Gen. Stackelberg has sustained a disastrous defeat at Vafangow and that his retreat is being cut off.

7:45 p. m.—The war office announces that Gen. Stackelberg was forced back before greatly superior numbers and retreated to Vantsialian, thirty miles north of Vafangow. The officials here deny that there was anything in the nature of a rout. The enemy had over four divisions in action.

A special dispatch from Liao Yang to the Official Messenger says the battle of Vafangow raged the whole of yesterday and the Japanese, receiving considerable reinforcements, crushed the Russian left flank and compelled the Russians to retire northward. No estimate of the losses is given and no mention is made of the loss of Russian guns.

Tokio, June 16.—In a fight which is reported to have taken place at Telissu on the railroad about eighty miles north of Port Arthur, the Russians lost 500 men killed, 300 taken prisoners and fourteen guns. The casualties on the Japanese side are estimated at 1000 men killed and wounded.

Newchwang, June 16.—Firing has been heard distinctly in the direction of Kai Chou since 10 o'clock last night. Two batteries of artillery rushed through town at midnight. The second division of General Kuroki's army was reported to be marching towards Kai Chou yesterday afternoon for the purpose of taking the enemy in the rear. It is positively known that the Russian forces in the vicinity of Kai Chou are divided. Half are at Kai Chou and the remainder at about twenty miles east of there. The entire force numbers 35,000 men including 2000 Cossacks.

There are rumors of fighting at Port Arthur with the Japanese almost in the city.

SUNK TWO TRANSPORTS.

Russians Send Jap Vessels and Men to Bottom.

Tokio, June 16.—It is reported that the transport Hitachi and Sado carried only 1400 men. If this is true the loss is probably less than 1000 lives.

The transports, however, had many horses and large quantities of supplies on board.

Tokio, June 16.—All doubt as to the sinking of the transports Hitachi and Sado by the Russians has been removed. Three hundred and ninety-seven survivors of the Hitachi arrived at Moji, and 153 survivors of the Sado have arrived at Kokura.

Details of the destruction of the two transports and the full extent of casuaities are not obtainable.

The transport Hino, which has returned to Moji reports that she encountered the Russian Vladivostok fleet at 11:20 a. m. yesterday, twenty miles west of the island of Shiro, of the Oki group. The transports Hitachi, 6111 tons, and Sado, 6191 tons, were seen two miles to the westward. The weather was foggy and the sea was calm. When the Hino sighted the Russian fleet she turned, ran and signalled a warning to the Kanazawa, and they both took refuge inside the island Chiyt. Both signalled danger to the Ibu, which also escaped. The Hino saw the Hitachi and Sado surrounded by Russian vessels, but their fate is unknown. The loss of life will probably be heavy.

BATTLE AT WA-FANG-TIEN.

Gen. Kuropatkin Reports a Severe Engagement.

St. Petersburg, June 16.—Emperor Nicholas has received the following dispatch dated June 15, from Gen. Kuropatkin:

"An engagement occurred June 14 at Wa-Fang-Tien (north of Port Arthur), with a Japanese force numbering at least two divisions. Our losses in killed include Col. Khoastonow, commanding the First regiment of Eastern Siberian rifles of your majesty, and Second Lieut. Dragostaff Nadochinsky, adjutant of the regiment. The wounded include Maj. Gen. Gerngross, who remained in the field, and Capt. Krintsky, of the general staff. Twenty officers, whose names at present are unknown, were also killed or wounded, besides 311 soldiers, of which the First regiment of Siberian rifles lost twelve officers and 290 men and the First brigade of artillery six officers and fifty men.

"The following night was quiet until 2 in the morning, when a fusilade began on our right flank, along the line of our outposts. The firing soon slackened. At 3:50 in the morning the Japanese artillery opened on our left flank. Shortly before this our cavalry discovered on our right flank the presence southward of Tafan Chou of a considerable force of the enemy. The Japanese infantry opened fire on our cavalry occupying the heights between Tafan Chou and Lin-Chou, on the edge of a wood. Towards 6:30 the enemy, consisting of a regiment of infantry with artillery, attacked from those woods. At the same time the cannonade on our left flank became heavier. At 6:30 Gen. Baron Stakelberg passed with part of his force to the attack, turning the right flank of the enemy towards Wa-Fang-Tien and Hun-Chou and directing the other part of his force against the enemy's front. Towards 10 in the morning the enemy sent a brigade of infantry, cavalry and a battery of artillery against our right flank through Hun-Chou, turning the right flank of our position.

"Gen. Stackelberg, at 10 in the evening, advanced his reserves to check this movement. According to information received the enemy, during the morning of June 15 brought up considerable reinforcements and as the main Japanese force consists of upwards of three divisions——"

The dispatch breaks off at this point.

RUSSIANS LOST HEAVILY

In Fu Chou Battle Which Is Unconfirmed.

London, June 16.—A dispatch to the Daily Express from Tokio, dated June 15, says: News has been received here, but has not yet been officially published of a great Japanese victory near Fu Chow, on the railway, seventy miles north of Port Arthur. The Russians, it is aded, were overwhelmed, lost a thousand men, left all their guns on the field and retreated in disorder.

The Daily Chronicle's correspondent at Tokio cables the same news, adding that Russians to the number of 7000 men are now in full flight toward Tshi Chalo and Kai Chou.

The account of the alleged great battle near Fu Chou, 70 miles north of Port Arthur, appears to be an exaggerated version of the operations at Vafangow, which is close to Fu Chou.

A Tokio correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, referring to this engagement, says the report is entirely without confirmation.

RESULTS AWAITED.

St. Petersburg Anxious to Hear News From Battle.

St. Petersburg, June 16.—The result of the battle at Vafangow (north of Port Arthur, which has now been in progress for three days, is awaited here with breathless interest. Excitement prevails in all circles. The losses on the Russian side, more than 300 on Tuesday, shows that the fighting has been of a desperate character, and Gen. Kuropatkin's report this morning proves that both armies are determined to force matters to a decisive issue.

The public has been considerably elated by the news of the success which thus far has attended the expedition of the Vladivostok squadron to the straits of Korea, and should Gen. Stackelberg win a victory over Gen. Nozu on land, it would make the deepest impression. Already there is much talk of his success, but the war office prudently advises caution against the acceptance of irresponsible reports in the absence of official news from either side. Kuropatkin's dispatch, given out this morning, brought the report up to 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, but stopped at the most critical point of the battle, when Stackelberg was meeting an attempt to turn his right wing by a similar move around Nozu's left flank. Stackelberg's reserves had already been brought up, and the Japanese had been heavily reinforced. This dispatch reached the emperor yesterday afternoon, but through a blunder in transmission, the war commission did not receive it until this morning. There was no intention to withhold its contents from the public. Nothing further has reached the war office up to this hour.

Exactly what portion of Stackelberg's Cossacks was engaged at Vafangow is not ascertained. It consists of the First, Second and Sixth East Siberian rifle divisions, the Zuri mounted brigade and the First East Siberian Sapper battalion.

Gen. Gengross, who was wounded, commands the First Siberian division of four regiments and a machine gun battalion.

Gen. Samsonoff commands the Usuri mounted brigade. The operations leading up to the battle of Vafangow date back to June 11, when two Japanese divisions, one commanded by Gen. Nozu advanced from the Pulantien-Pitsewo line, probably prompted by intelligence

GETS INTO GAME

County Attorney McClintock Has Filed for Renomination.

Local Politics Dulled by the Governorship Fight.

County Attorney John M. McClintock has put at rest all doubt as to his intentions upon the next term of the office of public prosecutor by filing for the Republican nomination.

He filed this morning, depositing the lawful fee and a declaration of his desire to receive the Republican nomination for county attorney.

There has been some doubt whether Mr. McClintock would run again, and this is the first time—publicly at least—that he has said anything definite on the proposition this summer.

While he is the only candidate that has filed for the nomination, he is not without opposition. John H. Norton, the well-known attorney, is a recognized candidate for the office of county attorney, and will file his declaration later.

• • •

There is no great alacrity on the part of candidates for local offices to get their filings in, and it is not likely that there will be much doing until after the Republican state convention at St. Paul, June 30. There are candidates, of course, for if nobody else wants the places the present incumbents are genealy willing to hold on, but those who attempt to do much work are finding that the local contest for control of the convention tha will send delegates to the Republican state convention is absorbing about all the attention there is available for political uses.

After this convention is over, and a state ticket placed in the field, there is likely to be a revival of interest in local affairs.

CRAWLS FOR MANY HOURS

Alex McMillan, Accidentally Shot, Drags Himself Through Woods.

Alex McMillan, of this city, son of Mrs. A. A. McMillan and brother of J. A. McMillan, of the Union Towing and Wrecking company, lies at Two Harbors with a gunshot wound, received while in the northern part of the county, that is likely to prove fatal.

Mr. McMillan, who is 25 years old, was formerly employed by M. S. Burrows, at the Glass Block store, and by W. M. Prindle & Campany. He has been living with his sister and mother during the past winter, on their claims near Skibo.

He intended to bring his mother and sister out to Skibo to take the Duluth & Iron Range train to Duluth and, with another man, last Saturday morning, he blazed a trail through to the station. His companion remained at Skibo, while he started to return alone, taking a shotgun with him.

As he did not show up at the claim in the next two days Mrs. McMillan and her daughter became alarmed and they searched for him all through the woods. They started for Skibo and were lost in the woods until Monday. When they learned that the son and brother had started back for the claim they made the return trip.

On the Saturday afternoon that he started to return to camp, Mr. McMillan stood on a log to get his bearings, he being then about two miles from the cabin. In some manner the gun became discharged and the charge entered the left thigh. Realizing that he was almost helpless and alone, and staunching as best he could the flow of blood, Mr. McMillan made a desperate fight for life. He was not able to stop the blood flow until Monday morning, when he started to crawl to the cabin, reaching it Tuesday morning, completely exhausted from loss of blood, and suffering from the wound and from hunger and thirst.

When his disappearance was reported at Skibo search was immediately instituted and two of the searchers reached the cabin about two hours after Mr. McMillan did. One went back to Skibo for help and the other remained to take care of him. With a stretcher in the hands of eight men, Mr. McMillan was brought out to Skibo, yesterday afternoon and taken to the hospital at Two Harbors.

J. A. McMillan and a sister, Mrs. R. J. Agen, of Superior, had already gone to Skibo on receipt of telegrams announcing that their brother was lost. W. P. McMillan, of Chicago, another brother, is on his way to Two Harbors, and Mrs. McMillan and her daughter remained at the hospital.

U. S. SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA

Recommends Pe-ru-na

For Dyspepsia and Stomach Trouble

Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.

Catarrh of the Stomach is Generally Called Dyspepsia — Something to Produce Artificial Digestion is Generally Taken.

Hence, Pepsin, Pancreatin and a Host of other Digestive Remedies Has Been Invented.

These Remedies Do Not Reach the Seat of the Difficulty, Which is Really Catarrh.

EX-U. S. Senator M. C. Butler from South Carolina, was senator from that state for two terms. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., from Washington, D. C., he says:

"I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine besides a good tonic."—M. C. Butler.

The only rational way to cure dyspepsia is to remove the catarrh. Peruna cures catarrh. Peruna does not produce artificial digestion. It cures catarrh and leaves the stomach to perform digestion in a natural way. This is vastly better and safer than resorting to artificial methods.

Peruna has cured more cases of dyspepsia than all other remedies combined, simply because it cures catarrh wherever located. If catarrh is located in the head, Peruna cures it. If catarrh has fastened itself in the throat or bronchial tubes, Peruna cures it. When catarrh becomes settled in the stomach, Peruna cures it, as well in this location as in any other.

Peruna is not simply a remedy for dyspepsia. Peruna is a catarrh remedy. Peruna cures dyspepsia because it is generally dependent upon catarrh.

If you cannot derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

A LIFER IS CLEARED

Montana Man Who Has Suffered For Another's Crime.

Has Grown Old and Lost His Mind In Prison.

Butte, Mont., June 16.—Thomas McTague and Frank Conley, wardens of the state penitentiary, express the opinion that the confession of William Miles at Kansas City of the murder of John Edwards, a Montana union brakeman, for which crime William Murphy is now doing a life sentence, is probably true. The wardens tell a story which may prove that an innocent, gray-haired man, now a helpless, hopeless lunatic within the walls at Deer Lodge, is the victim of the strangest circumstances that ever formed a web for a thrilling chapter of fiction.

Some time during the summer of 1884, on top of one of the cars of Cole's circus train, which had pulled into Garrison, was found the body of a brakeman with a bullet hole in his back. Not the slightest clue to the affair could be found—nothing but the unmistakable evidence of a brutal and cowardly murder. The body of the murdered brakeman was sent to Salt Lake City and for some time the affair was shrouded in mystery.

One day about a year later a man walked into the police station in Minneapolis and offered to be taken into custody as the murderer of the brakeman in Montana. He was locked up and the Montana authorities were informed of the affair, and in a few months the man was occupying a cell with a life sentence hanging over him. That man is William Murphy, alias Waltham, who has grown old and is fast losing his mind in the narrow limits of his cell at Deer Lodge.

Once, several years ago, he attempted to escape, but the guard planted a charge of buckshot in his leg and took him back. He is now 55, and is employed to carry water and do other chores around the prison.

When told that another man had confessed to the crime for which he is serving a life sentence, Murphy gave the reporter an empty stare, and finally broke into a violent fit of laughter. Convicts who know him best believe that Murphy fired a shot to scare the brakeman and that he had no intention of injuring him, but later believed he really killed him.

GIRL WINS CUP.

New York, July 16.—Miss Amelia Zimmerman, the champion rifle shot, has won a cup at the national schutzenfest at Hoboken, N. J., by making a score of 57 out of a possible 60 on the man target. Her father was runner up with 55. Miss Zimmerman had 121 male opponents.

TAMMANY IS NOT PLACATED

Fight Against Parker Will Go to the St. Louis Convention.

Washington, June 16.—The New York Tribune, which on Monday printed a story that a proposition had been submitted to Murphy and Hill looking to the cessation of the Tammany fight on Judge Parker, prints another story indicating that these negotiations have failed and that the fight will be carried to St. Louis. It says:

"Charles F. Murphy is confident that he has Hill and Belmont beaten at St Louis. A supreme court judge, a personal friend of Judge Parker and of Mr. Murphy, suggested to Mr. Murphy this week that it would be a good idea for Tammany to fall into line for Parker and make his nomination certain, at the same time getting a pledge from him that McCarren should be removed from the chairmanship of the state executive committee and not embarrass Tammany any more by arraying the Brooklyn machine against Murphy.

"The would-be peacemaker was informed that any overtures would have to come directly from Hill and McCarren and furthemrore, he was told that as Parker already was beaten, overtures at this time would be of little use.

"The Parker men are trying to prevent Tammany from carrying its opposition to Parker into the convention. They are afraid of the moving effect of one of W. Bourke Cockran's speeches if the fight is carried to the convention floor.

"Things are shaping so that it is almost certain that the convention will be highly exciting and turbulent. The Chicago convention in 1896 was somewhat on that order and when Bryan hit it at the psychological minute, the delegates were swept off their feet and the conservatives were overwhelmed. The Hill man do not want any such rough and tumble fight as that."

A HEART AND A FROG

May Be In Chief Bloody Face's Breast.

Columbus, Ohio, June 16.—Dr. Theo. F. Davidson, of this city, will go to St. Louis to determine whether or not Chief Bloody Face, of the Indian settlement at the fair, has two hearts or a heart and a frog within his anatomy.

Dr. Davidson has been asked to take his X-ray machine to the exposition to examine the Indian.

The physicians are wondering what causes the pulsations like the beating of two hearts. Some think a frog he swallowed some years ago is causing it.

MUSIC TEACHERS OF MINNESOTA MEET

Opening Session of Third Annual Convention Is Held.

Program of Welcome, Addresses By Mayor and President.

This morning the opening session of the third annual convention of the Minnesota State Music Teachers' association was held in the First Methodist church. There were about 100 in attendance at this opening session and for the programs that are to follow much larger audiences are expected.

The convention opened with a musical program of welcome by the visitors. The association has been most fortunate in securing the church for their meetings as the splendid organ gives such a fine opportunity for this music. The program was given this morning by Gordon Graham, organist of Winona, assisted by Miss Ednah F. Hall, of Minneapolis.

Mr. Graham played for his numbers, "Festal March," by Henry Smart; "Allegretto" from "Lobesang," by Rossini; "Cujus Animam," from "Stabat Mater," by Wagner, and "Grand Fantasia in E Minor," by Lemmens. The selections were beautiful numbers and were played with full, clear and beautiful tones, and at no time did the slightest blurring of sound intrude itself.

The pianissimo effects were particularly beautiful.

Miss Hall sang for the first number an aria from "Death of Jean d'Arc," by Bemberg. Her voice is a soprano of pure lyric quality and in the little group of songs, "Traume," by Wagner and Schubert, "Who is Sylvia?" and "Ungeduld," was heard to especial advantage. Particularly pleasing is her ease and smoothness of tone. Miss Irene Wood, of Minneapolis, was the accompanist.

* * *

Following the musical program Mayor M. B. Cullum was introduced by E. C. Murdock, president of the association, and the mayor welcomed the musicians to the city in a happy little speech. He said:

"One of the pleasant privileges of my office is that of welcoming the incoming guest. If upon this occasion it is more than usually pleasant, it is because of the character and mission of the visitors.

"I canont well imagine a community so lost to a proper appreciation of the grand and beautiful, that would not accord you a hearty welcome. So we willingly lower the drawbridge and surrender ourselves captive to the refining and ennobling influences of your art, which has, the poets tell us, power to soothe the savage breast, quiet the ravings of the mad, mellow the sorrow of the grief stricken, banish grim visaged care, lighten the labors of the toiler and incite brave men to deeds of valor, and with the mother's sacred lullaby, hush the fretful child to restful slumber. And when life's fitful race is run, a sad and solemn requiem ushers us into the presence of our Maker.

"Since God's first song bird sang its glad, sweet notes to an awakening world, the influence of music has been for the civilization and uplifting of mankind. From the tom-tom of the savage, through nature's untrained melodies, to the golden harps of the angel band, its influences have been for good.

"We are proud of our local artists, of their culture and accomplishments. We are more than pleased to greet their friends, and we hope sincerely that your meeting will be a successful and harmonious one, and that you will take away with you nothing but pleasant memories of your visit."

Following the mayor's welcome, the president's annual address was given by E. C. Murdock, of St. Paul. He said:

"This, the third anniversary of our organization, finds us far from our birthplace, and yet at home, for is not the whole state of Minnesota home?

"It is good to look about and see so many faces from the Twin Cities and from the South and West, that show by their presence here today the vital hold the association has upon many of its members. The journey to many has been a long one, but we trust that the good things of the coming sessions will more than repay them for their effort;

"It is good to get away from surroundings grown all too familiar and come up to this breezy corner of the state and visit with our friends, breathing their atmosphere bodily and musically, seeing the marvels that have been wrought here in so short a period of time, and getting in touch with nature in one of its larger aspects through your majestic lake.

"To him who is receptive this visit affords valuable opportunities, for one cannot come in contact with majesty in any form without imbibing some of its spirit, only to impart it, perhaps unconsciously, at some future time. Many of us have never seen the ocean or felt its overwhelming power, but a feeling much akin is born within us on first beholding the broad expanse of Lake Superior.

"And what a subject for music! One of the most successful and honored of American composers, one of whose best works will be rendered this afternoon, has written a most interesting set of tone-poems called "Sea Pictures." Let us hope this glorious lake and the many traditions surrounding its shores will inspire some Minnesota composer to like effort.

"We have this year followed out again the plan of giving our Minnesota composers opportunity to present their works. This is one of the most valued features of our meetings and one that needs to be fostered with the most solocitious care.

"This year we have not been in a financial position to offer aid to our members in presenting works of large proportions, but we hope for such a balance in the treasury at the end of this year that next year your officers may be able to extend a helping hand in the presentation of larger works, even to the extent of offering this aid in advance as an inducement to those who may have aspiration to compose some such work, and who may be deterred from making an effort by the feeling that single-handed they could never hope to procure its performance.

"Upon starting in the work last January your officers found our Duluth confreres not a whit behind those in the Twin Cities in their desire for the best that could be had in all lines of musical thought, and heartily ready to pay the bills, so that instead of having to make radical changes, we have followed out to a large extent lines already laid down. Upon one feature, however—the educational element—we have laid all possible stress, but with all our best effort we recognize that this department is yet in its infancy. Though it is the one most needed, offering as it does even greater possibilities of benefit to the profession than either of the other two elements—the development of the spirit of fraternal good fellowship and the inspiration derived from listening to good music—yet in the new feature of round table discussion that has been introduced this year this element has been the hardest to develop.

"This has been because it is in a measure a new field for us. We are accustomed to playing and singing in public and to teaching in private, but few of us have been trained to give expression, both comprehensive and exact, to our ideas of how this teaching or this playing should be done. This sense of helplessness in an untried exercise of our powers has made it difficult to secure as enthusiastic cooperation as we hope will be given next year to this element when the purpose of the round table is better understood. They were designed to give those bound together by a common interest in some instrument an opportunity to meet together with as little formality as possible, to exchange ideas on details of their work, everyone who wishes to do so contributing questions or answers drawn from their daily experience in musical work, that will help to make their own or others' work more successful in the future. All of us have some troubles to be cleared up, all of us have some light to give. For this these discussions were planned.

"We were told, upon taking hold of the work, that on account of leaving the locality where it was best known, this would be the crucial year for the association. Certain conditions have militated against us, namely, going away from cities that have so far furnished the bulk of the membership, the expense of the journey, the counter-attraction of the World's fair drawing the crowds southward, and the natural desire of many to go directly upon their vacation trips. But notwithstanding them all, instead of being discouraged we are very much encouraged—indeed, it could not be otherwise. And if the cordial welcome given us by the citizens of Duluth is an earnest of what we may expect in other localities, there can be no objection raised to our journeying from place to place annually. Indeed, we are bound to d so, for this association belongs to the state, its home is the state, its membership should reach to every musician in the state, and I hope it will travel all over the state before it setties again in one of the larger cities. The sooner this is recognized and the musicians from all quarters of the state feel that the association is theirs to foster and enjoy, the better it will flourish.

"Special effort has been made this year to interest the musicians in all the counties—of the eighty-six counties in the state correspondence has been carried on with about seventy, and of that number we have secured acceptances to serve as vice presidents from thirty-four, an increase which is hopeful but far from satisfying. But with active workers in half the counties of the state, another year must show great gains in interest and in membership, and we predict largely increased results in work of the association.

"This gain, however, can only be accomplished when the old membership ceases to fluctuate, and I trust to see growing steadily the one idea that can make us a stable, well-founded body—'once a member always a member.'

"We are not a perfect institution as yet by any means, but we are struggling toward an ideal and hope in time to attain it, provided the ideal does not grow larger in proportion as we reach out toward it. If only all would join our body, take our will for our deed, each helping that deed along by giving interest and encouragement, we may hope in time at least to approximate that ideal.

"I wish to express my heartiest appreciation of the work done by my associates in office and to thank them collectively and individually for their faithfulness and support.

"The board of officers would express their thanks to our Duluth members and their able executive committee whose enthusiasm, hearty co-operation and readiness in carrying out every suggestion has been unparalled in the history of the association, and has formed a valuable precedent for all future meetings.

"Also we thank the pastor and trustees of this church for consenting to allow us the use of this beautiful auditorium and again acknowledge our indebtedness to the Duluth Commercial club, who have been so ready to help pay the bills and lend a willing hand to make our stay here of the pleasantest.

"To all others who have contributed to the welfare of the association, either by taking part in the programs, round tables or in any other way, we wish to express our sincere thanks and hope that all future meetings may have as many pleasant circumstances attending their formation as this one has had.

"The Minnesota State Music Teachers' association is firmly rooted in the hearts of its members—its work is only just begun—as I retire from the office of president with which you have honored me, my wish is that it may live to strengthen the bond of good fellowship, inspire its members to larger effort, and spread broadcast over the state the love of the noblest and best in our art."

* * *

The report of the secretary-treasurer, Miss Edna F. Hall, of Minneapolis, showed that the interest of the work of the association is spreading and the officers by securing active vice presidents in the counties of the state are awakening interest among musicians and music lovers in the remotest corners of the state. There are at present 127 active members of the association and the financial condition is promising.

The report of the auditor, W. L. Gray, of Northfield, was read by C. G. Marshall.

Miss Elsie M. Shaw, of St. Paul, chairman of the public school music section, read an interesting paper on the value and methods of musical instruction in the public schools of the state.

Owing to the absence of Hamlin H. Hunt, of Minneapolis, the origin round table was postponed until tomorrow's session when it will be discussed in connection with the pianoforte discussion.

The following committees were appointed by the president:

Nominating committee, C. G. Titcomb, St. Paul, chairman; Carlyle Scott, Minneapolis; Ernest Lachmund, Duluth; Mrs. J. H. Burnham, of Moorhead, and Mrs. Hattie Smith Fuller, of Albert Lee.

Place of meeting committee: C. A. Marshall, of Minneapolis, chairman; D. T. Colville, St. Paul; F. G. Bradbury, Duluth; Mrs. N. M. Budd, Montevideo, and Mrs. Delia B. Holt, of Detroit.

The program for this afternoon was by state talent and promised to be a most interesting one. The following artists took part: Herbert Sprague, of St. Paul, John A. Jaegrr, of St. Paul; Mrs. Charles Blunt, of Albert Lea; Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Bradbury, Emily Ellis Woodward, Mrs. T. A. Whitworth, of Stillwater; Miss Blanche Strong, of Minneapolis, and Miss Eunalie Chenevert, of Minneapolis.

An informal round table with voice cultivation under discussion was held with papers by D. F. Colville, of St. Paul; William Patten, Minneapolis, and Charles A. Fisher, of St. Paul.

For the entertainment of the visitors a reception will be given this evening at the Commercial club. Dr. and Mrs. D. H. Day will present the little farce of which Dr. Day is the author entitled "The Music Lesson." The sketch is one that appeals to most everybody that sees it, but with an audience composed of musicians its success will be even greater than that with which it has been received at the other presentations.

Unnecessary Street Noises

The booming rumble of the surface cars, the jolting of the carts, the gongs, the bells, the hucksters' shouts—all these combine to make nervous people wild.

There is no apparent remedy for the noises; but there is a cure for nervous people—Beecham's Pills. This speedy, gentle laxative cures Fidgety, Trembling Sensations, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headaches, Fluttering of the Heart, Irritability, Depression of Spirits, General Debility and Poverty of the Blood, when these conditions are caused by constipation, and constipation is the frequent cause of most of the ills which flesh is heir to.

ENCAMPMENT AT LAKE CITY

First Battalion Spends Most of Day at Rifle Range.

Camp Lakeview, Lake City, Minn., June 16.—At 6 o'clock yesterday morning the first battalion of the Third regiment formed and marched to the rifle range, and most of the day was devoted to rifle practice.

Company G, Princeton, which should have arrived at 3 o'clock, did not reach here till nearly 6 on account of an accident to the train. The company brought forty-five men.

Orders were issued that guard would be mounted in khaki uniforms. Parade at night will be in dress uniforms. Colonel Van Duzee reviewed the parade and then drilled the regiment for a half hour.

Major F. E. Resche has arrived and is in command of his battalion, relieving Captain Little. Lieutenant Caswell, Company B, acted as adjutant of the first battalion at parade, in the temporary absence of Lieutenant Staples.

The ceremony of guard-mounting yesterday was held on the headquarters street in front of the colonel's quarters, instead of by the messhouses. The space is rather small but otherwise more convenient. Lieutenant Colonel C. E. Johnson is directing the instruction of the guard, as in previous years.

Captain Little, Company C, is officer of the day and Lieutenants Josten, Company C, and Tuthill, Company D, officers of the guard.

Lloyd Edgar Sigmund of Zumbrota has been appointed regimental commissary sergeant.

Promotions are announced in Company D as follows: Corporal Claude Leach, appointed sergeant, Privates Christ Nesseth, Selmar Nerhaugen and Carl Schliecher, corporals.

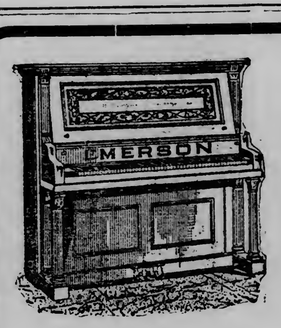

Company D only had two sergeants present for duty, so these promotions were necessary.

Governor's day will be Saturday and the usual large crowd is expected. Sunday several excursions are being planned from various points and indications point to a big crowd.

WILL HAVE BANQUET.

Royal Arcanum Spread at Commercial Club June 28.

On the evening of Tuesday, June 28, Duluth council No. 1483, Royal Arcanum, will hold a banquet at the Commercial club which will be one of the most extensive feasts ever given under the roof of that organization. There will be covers laid for 200 people and an elaborate menu will be gotten up for the event. Included in the evening program will be music, in addition to the customary toasts. The program is being arranged now and some features of unusual interest are promised. Several officers of the grand council are expected to be on hand from St. Paul. Just which ones of the officers of the grand council, who can accept the invitation extended to them is not known yet.

PIANO VALUE

The first thing you should say to yourself when buying a piano is, "I will buy one I know is good." It is not necessary to pay the highest price, but whatever price you do pay be sure the piano you are getting is the best in that grade. The people at the head of the lakes know that of us they can get the most value for their money. Pianos like the STEINWAY, KNABE, IVERS & POND, EMERSON, LUDWIG, and our other leading makes have placed our house on a higher plane than all others, as everyone knows these instruments as well as we do. Our policy of selling is simply to help you make your selection, and make the terms as reasonable as possible, as we know the piano will satisfy.

WILLIAMS-GALL.

Duluth Young People Wedded at Park Point Home.

Yesterday at noon a pretty home wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lane McGregor, of Park Point, when Mrs. McGregor's sister, Miss Mabel Grace Williams, and Thomas Alva Gall were married. The house was prettily decorated, and at noon Rev. T. H. Cleland, of the First Presbyterian church, read the service. A wedding breakfast was served following the ceremony, and in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Gall left for a wedding trip through the South. After their return they will be at home at Fourteenth avenue and Jefferson street.

KEEPERS-LE ROY.

Pretty Wedding Celebrrted at Rev. Milne's Residence.

Last evening the wedding of Miss Alice May Keepers, daughter of Mrs. H. L. Keepers, of Newark, N. J., and Fred R. Le Roy took place at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Alexander Milne, on East Third street. The wedding was a quiet affair, only the immediate friends of Mr. and Mrs. Le Roy being present. The rooms were prettily decorated in green and white, and the service was read at 8 o'clock by Mr. Milne. Two little maids, Mary McGonagle and Marjory Milne, entered first, marking off the path for the bride and groom, and little Miss Winnifred Bousfield, as flower girl, followed. Miss Keepers and Mr. Le Roy entered together, and the service was read under a canopy of green.

An informal reception followed the ceremony. In the dining room Miss Lyda Wilson and Miss Alice Webster presided, and Miss Maud Culver and Miss Reader assisted. Mr. and Mrs. Le Roy will be at home after July 1 at 122 Twelfth avenue east. Mrs. Keepers, mother of the bride, was among the guests.

Main-Lynch.

The wedding of Miss Hattie R. Main and Edgar W. Lynch took place last evening at the home of the bride, in West Duluth. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by Rev. E. K. Copper, of the Oneota Methodist church, before a large number of friends. Mr. and Mrs. Lynch left on an evening train for St. Louis, where they will visit the exposition, and after their return will be at home at West Duluth.

A Summer For Pumps.

Women's stockings will be much in evidence this summer, judging by the number of pumps displayed in the shoe shops, and, even thus early in the season, on women's feet in the streets. The adaptation of men's dancing pumps for women's wear last winter proved them to be such smart-looking shoes that they have grown to be immensely popular. One of the chief reasons for this is that the shoes have to be worn in the smallest possible sizes to enable them to be kept on the feet in comfort, and any excuse for wearing small shoes is eagerly seized upon by women. The pumps are made in tan, white, green, brown and the new shade that matches linen gowns.

Events of Interest.

This evening the first social event given in honor of the visiting musicians will be the reception held at the Commercial club at which the local musicians will be the hosts. After an hour of informal greetings Dr. and Mrs. D. H. Day will present their little farce "The Music Lesson." A large attendance is expected.

A reception will be held this evening at the home of Bishop and Mrs. J. D. Morrison, of 2131 East Superior street, in honor of the visiting clergy and delegates.

The Grooms of June.

Oh, what is so small as a groom in June?
No one ever was known to care,
Or even to wonder in casual way,
What Harold is going to wear.

No intimate friends, confidential, select Ever call and beg Jimmy to show
The beautiful "things" that are up in his room—
The cream of his wedding trousseau.

And newspapers, seemingly, never inquire,
When giving society space,
If Rollo's regalia at church will include
"A bit of his grandfather's lace."

There are portraits of matrons and pictures of maids,
The altar and aisle all abloom;
Suggestions for table, and hints to the bride,
But nowhere a hint to the groom.

You'd imagine a man would be vexed with a lot
So bare, but there isn't a doubt of
The fact that the parts they forbid him to play,
He is mighty glad, to get out of.

PRISONER OF LOVE

For a Quarter of a Century, Miss Hannah McNamara Says.

She Sues a Multimillionaire For Breach of Promise.

New York, June 16.—A friendship of twenty-five years between Meyer Guggenheimer, 76 years old, multi-millionaire, head of the Smelting combine, and Miss Hannah McNamara, has ended in the supreme court, where Miss McNamara brought a $100,000 suit, alleging breach of promise against the noted "captain of industry." According to her lawyer she was kept practically a prisoner a large part of that time on account of his love for her.

Mr. Guggenheim, his nerves shattered by the strain of the woman's sensational charges, is now at Long Branch. Miss McNamara is living in New York under the name of Hannah Meyer.

She declares that she and Mr. Guggenheim traveled all over Europe and summered in Hollywood, Elberon Bratteboro and Narragansett, under the name of "Mr. and Mrs. Meyer," and that they were supposed to be hubsand and wife.

Twice she says she asked the aged millionaire to fulfill an alleged promise to marry her. Twice, she says, he promised to do so, and twice, she says, he broke his promise. On each occasion, the woman asserts, the wedding day was set for April 1, but when All Fools' day arrived Miss McNamara declares that there were no wedding bells for her.

Miss McNamara is now so fearful that Mr. Guggenheim will die before the case comes to trial that she has made two attempts to have Justice Clarke hear the evidence at once. On both occasions she has submitted affidavits, stating that the defendant is in very feeble health, and giving it as her belief that he may pass away within a few months.

These charges were vigorously denied by Mr. Guggenheim, who filed counter affidavits through his attorneys, stating that he was enjoying the best of health and expected to live many years. His declarations were corroborated in affidavits by Dr. Edward Steinberger. Justice Clarke refused to entertain the woman's demands for an immediate hearing, and the case will not be called for at least a year. Meantime, if Mr. Guggenheim should pass away, the woman would not have any claim on his vast wealth.

Miss McNamara, according to her attorneys, comes from a distinguished family in Philadelphia. She first met Mr. Guggenheim twenty-six years ago, while he was in Philadelphia engneering a deal for consolidating several large smelting concerns.

"Mr. Guggenheim was a guest at a party by society folks," said the lawyer. "Miss McNamara was one of his party. At that time Mr. Guggenheim was 50 years old and Miss McNamara was 23. He paid her marked attention and won her love. Then they began traveling. They went to Europe and to various big summer resorts in America. They were known as 'Mr. and Mrs. Meyer.'

Miss McNamara had stylish turnouts, and in every respect was treated as Mr. Guggenheim's wife. His legal wife died in 1901, and then he told Miss McNamar that he would marry her. But he kept putting off the ceremony, although they did not part until last February.

"Mr. Guggenheim had always been apparently in love with Miss McNamara. For many years he kept her practically under lock and key."

In her complaint filed in the supreme court Miss McNamara says that immediately after the death of Mr. Guggenheim's wife he declared that he would wed her.

"On or about February, 1901," she states, "the plaintiff and the defendant did mutually covenant and agree to execute and carry out the said mutual promise of marriage, and he agreed to wed her on April 1, 1901."

Miss McNamara lived in a state of the utmost bliss, she declares, and looked forward each day to the first of April. As it grew near, however, a change came and then:

"On or about or before the said first day of April 1901, the defendant became ill and suffered from various physical ailments, which confined him to his home for a long period thereafter, and he received medical aid and attendance therefor."

In view of this situation, she says, she agreed to put off the ceremony.

Since then, she states, he has several times promised to marry her, but never has done so. Hence the suit.

Mr. Guggenheim was born in Langnau, Switzerland, on February 1, 1828. He learned a trade, and as a journeyman traveled through Europe where, he says, he gained the insight into human nature that has been his chief capital all through life.

With this as his sole capital, then, Mr. Guggenheim sailed for America in 1848. On the ship he became interested in Miss Barbara Meyers. His father, who was a widower, at the same time courted Miss Meyer's mother. Both couples were married in Philadelphia.

Then young Guggenheim started out as a peddler, and followed that calling until 1859, when he became a manufacturer of stove polish.

As the boys grew up he established them in the business of manufacturing embroidery. He came to New York in 1888, and has since lived on West Seventy-seventh street.

Twenty-six years ago Mr. Guggenheim invested in a Leadville mining venture which developed millions of profit. He sent his sons West to look after the property, and in 1890 they established the first ore smelter at Pueblo, Col. All have since been devoted to mining ventures, and five of the family are members of the board of directors of the American Smelting and Refining company.

GUGGENHEIM DENIES.

Long Branch, N. J., June 16.—Meyer Guggenheim, who is occupying with his daughters "The Loeb" on Pond avenue, West End, had just returned from a drive when interviewed converning the breach of promise suit instituted by Hannah McNamara. The old gentleman looked in perfect health and preferred having his lawyers speak for him. He declined at first to discuss the suit, but later interposed a general denial that he had ever promised to marry the woman. In answer to a direct question Mr. Guggenheim said he knew the McNamara woman by sight, "but not a living soul ever saw me with the woman. My lawyers are at liberty to talk if they will. I deny the charge. To think of me promising a common woman is more than ridiculous. I know the woman by sight. She was also known by the name of Myers," said the old gentleman. "She brought a similar suit against me three years ago. At that time I was ill, and the judge wouldn't accept her complaint."

Mr. Guggenheim said he was surprised when he learned of the suit, and smiled when his poor health was referred to as hinted by the McNamara woman.

"I never felt better," said the aged millionaire, "and anticipate remaining so for years to come." Mr. Guggenheim came to the seachore two weeks ago. Six of his children, two daughters and four sons, are ocupying cottages either at West End or Elberon. They are Mrs. Albert Loeb and Mrs. Cora Rothschild, Daniel, Simeon, Sol and Benjamin. Two other sons are in Europe. Mr. Guggenheim said the woman was evidently looking for money. "I never received a letter from this woman and was never in her company. Why she brings suit I am unable to say. If she ever lived in Long Branch I did not know it. It is said, however, that the woman summered here two seasons ago.

"She will get no money out of me."

THE EVENING STORY.

THE SIN OF ANANIAS

By F. H. Lancaster.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub .Co.)

Everybody said that it had been an emmently successful experiment. They lived in perfect harmony, yet neither tampered with the other's individuality. Jim Carson was precisely the Jim Carson he had been before marriage. His wife lived the same free life she had led when single. Psychologists saw in this the triumphant vindication of the much smiled at theory of two lives in one; optimists heralded it as the solution of that vexing matrimonial question:

"When all women realize that a wife is not the whole shooting match in a man's life, we will be done with divorces," predicted the masculine onlookers.

"When all men make up their minds to the fact that a husband does not constitute the horizon as well as the heavens, we shall hear the last of the unhappy married woman," retorted the women. And they openly envied Helen the freedom with which she rode and read, walked and wrote.

"As for the two married people—they were merely living up to an agreement made before marriage.

"I don't feel," Helen said, "that the fact of my loving a man gives me the right to say how many cigers he shall smoke, what colored ties he shall wear, or where he shall spend his evenings. Neither should I feel that it gave him the right to criticise or control my actions. I'm a sane human being, and expect to be treated like one."

Jim heartily endorsed the decree.

"Sure," he said; "I always thought it beastly the way wives paw over their husband's privacy. "Where are you going when are you coming back; why didn't you do this and so?" I swear, Helen, that sort of thing would drive me as mad as a hatter."

Helen had agreed, saying: "Two perfect spheres can touch only at a single point. And she had been very careful not to "paw over his privacy," not to encroach beyond the point of contact. Their interests fused in the home life. There they met on common ground and enjoyed the easy relations of love and trust. Outside the home their lives were separate and distant. No questions were asked, and only upon rare occasions were confidences volunteered. It is not easy to tell the news of a triumph when one has to preface it with a long explanation. By the time one gets to it, all the pith has gone out of the victory. Jim realized something of this for the first time when he had been married about a year.

It chanced that a friend took him home informally to dinner, and opened the door with a ringing: "Won out!" that was met by a prompt: "Oh, Harry, I'm so glad!"

"If I were to go home with such a hat as that Helen would suspect my sanity," Jim reflected, as he pulled his mustache and talked to Harry's wife. "I suppose he talks over all his affairs with her and she makes suggestions—gives him advice and gets miffed if he doesn't take it. Good Lord!" And yet, when he entered his own well appointed home, took possession of his easy chair and dropped into their usual semibooky talk he was feeling resentfully that his wife was not as near to him as his sweetheart had been. He made an abortive attempt to talk to her about his downtown affairs, but it was like beginning a tale in the middle, or rather like talking in an unknown tongue. Confidence is a thing of slow growth. Mutual understanding and sympathy is what two lives may build up day by day, but it cannot be seized upon suddenly. And Helen did not help him. It had become a point of pride with her, this severe letting alone of the other side of her husband's life. She had no questions to ask; the topic was alien to her interest—it was alien to her. She had known nothing of the struggle. How could she understand the force of the failure or the flush of the triumph. These facts that were of so much moment to him inevitably appeared to her as a rather bare summing up of not very interesting details. She listened, of course, with that air of attention so easily assumed by cultured people, but Jim was not deceived. He gave up the attempt after a difficult half hour and went back to books, but when he sat alone with his cigar that night he found himself thinking drearily of that line of Carlyle's: "The time to talk little and that little from the newspapers." Was that the way he and Helen were drifting. Well, it was her fault. If it bored her to hear about his work, surely he could not intrude it upon her. That was all.

But it was not all. A few weeks later he found himself again in Harry's home, listening to the voice of Harry's wife as it came to him from an adjoining room: "Oh, Harry, you are such a comfort. I wonder if a man ever realizes what it means to a woman to be able to talk out all her troubles to him and be laughed at for her pains." Then he heard Harry laugh—a tender little laugh—and decided to postpone his call.

"I wonder if Helen ever has troubles or worries, or if she ever gets blue?" And that evening he surprised her with the demand:

"Tell me something about your work, Helen."

"My work?"

Yes. What are you working on now?"

"Why, some essays; about as much as anything."

Ah, they are bumping against the same old ice floe, but Jim determined not to see it.

"What sort of essays?" he persisted.

"Why—er—ethical, principally."

"How do you go about writing an essay, Helen?"

"Why, I don't know. Pretty much as anyone else does, I suppose."

There was a pause; then:

"That's good work you've been doing on the Meridian."

"Thank you."

Jim got up desperately, and began looking around for his hat. He wished with all his heart just then that it was not against the rule for her to ask where he was going, it would have been such a satisfaction to his soul to tell her he was going in search of some one who wasn't a clam.

As the weeks wore to months, Jim failed to understand that he was as angry as a hurt schoolboy over his repulse. He fancied that mysterious forces were at work within him—and perhaps they were. That the deeper instincts of his nature were awakening and crying for companionship—a cry to which his wife could not respond. It was as though he had groped in the dark for the touch of a human hand and grasped the cold clay of a dethroned idol. He seemed to be looking forward into long years of loneliness—the unutterable loneliness of a mismated soul; the conviction of failure, of incompleteness grew upon him. The story of his life spelled tragedy. He told himself bitterly that while he dreamed of affinity he had drifted upon affectation. And being young and vigorous, he flung out savagely against his fate. Other men frowned at will in their wive's gardens; he might enter only when she chose to let down the bars. To stand waiting without—always. This was not marriage—this was not even common companionship. It was not long before discontent ran up its evil seed. "When a tie becomes a farce, the sooner it is broken the better."

So it happened that while onlookers were still commenting admiringly upon the beautiful success of the experiment, one of the experimenters was in his heart face to face with the thought of divorce and the other was spending long hours with her head in her hands, thinking, thinking. Why had it failed? It had been carefully planned and faithfully executed. It looked reasonable—it was reasonable. And yet—and yet there was not a drudge in the street that did not get more happiness. "I suppose happiness is not a very reasonable sort of something," she murmured, wistfully, and rose to stand before the fire.

While she stood there, twisting the rings on her fingers, Jim came in. He had resolved to tell her plainly what he thought. That this death in life was no longer endurable.

"Helen," he began abruptly, "do you think we get as much out of matrimony as might be gotten?"

Helen smiled mirthlessly.

"We don't seem to get very much," she admitted.

Jim started. He had forgotten—rather it had never occurred to him that she might also be—well, disappointed. She looked very fair standing there in the firelight, and—she was his wife. All the manhood in him rallied at that thought. Checked, embarrassed, he took up the book she had been reading, and asked, awkwardly:

"Shall I read aloud?"

"If you think you will enjoy Ruskin." She dropped into a chair and sunk her cheek against her knuckles. Jim began to read mechanically. He was playing for time, and he knew it. If only there was some other way. But there was none—he knew that, too. Without an idea of what he was reading, he fell to marking time by pages, one more page and yet one more, then at last—to the bottom of this one and no more. His hands were cold, his voice husky, but he was conscious of it. Conscious only of that haunting question: "Why had it failed—?" Suddenly the words he was reading rang like an answer to it in his ears: "We are all sunk in the sin of Ananias; we want to keep back part of the price." He paused and read them again with swift comprehension: "We want to keep back part of the price."

"Helen," he said, in a low, eager voice: "Helen?"

The hand that propped her cheek had slipped to her temple, and he could not see her face. He leaned forward, the hand that held the book dropped between his knees, while his other hand clenched hard on the arm of the chair. "Helen," he repeated. "Look at me!"

She obeyed, and started up hurriedly to lean against the mantle.

"Oh, I know," she said, incoherently. Jim crossed the rug and took her into his arms with swift tenderness.

"Try to keep back part of the price, dear," he whispered, kissing her with the slow, caressing kisses men keep for women who are highly prized. "Think of it, dear. We dared to grudge love his sweet monopoly."

Her surrender was the surrender of a strong woman, instant and complete.

"I know," she said, again. "Oh, we deserve death more than Ananias ever did."

"My wife," he told her, gravely, "death itself is not more ghastly than life as we have been trying to live it. My wife!"

CODY DIVORCE SUIT

Has Been Postponed Until Next Month.

Denver, Colo., June 16.—Word has been received in Denver that the divorce suit of Col. W. F. Cody against his wife will not be tried until next month.

"Both sides are sparring for time," said a friend of the family, "and I do not look for the case to be tried before the middle of July. Mr. Cody is in Europe and, of course, can't be present at the trial. He has, however, given a lengthy deposition."

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Body of Missing Harrington Child Said to Be Found.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Rapid City—A report has come to this city to the effect that the missing Harrington child has been found by her father. While in the yard he noticed a piece of red cloth which, upon being pulled, revealed the dead body of the child which had been buried in the ground. The sod had been neatly cut the lengah of the child's body and had been placed back to defy detection. Suspicion points to a former employe of Mr. Harrington, who was working at the ranch at the time of the disappearance of the child. The Meade county coroner will investigate.

J. F. House, of Washington, D. C., a government Inspector of Indian schools, has been in the city several days inspecting the school here. This summer two additional buildings will be erected at a cost of $14,000. Fifty acres of an adjoining farm have been purchased and will be added to the large estate owned by the school. Inspector House says the school is one of the best in the West.

Sioux Falls—Edgar S. Pullen, of Millbank, arrested on the charge of sending objectionable printed matter through the mail, has been held in bonds of $500 to the next federal grand jury in October. The wording of the printed matter was indefinite, but appeared to offer an article for sale. The authorities satisfied themselves that the article was of such a character as to prevent it being lawfully sent through the mails. Pullen, however, asserts that all he advertised was a lady's comb.

The members of the Minnehaha Mandskor, a celebrated singing society which is made up largely of Sioux Falls business men, has concluded arrangements for the trip of the society to the Northwestern singing festival, which will open at Grand Forks, N. D., early in July. The members of the Mandskor will leave Sioux Falls in a special car on the morning of July 6. They will stop en route at Wilmar, Minn., where in the evening they will give a concert On July 7 they will again take up their journey, and will arrive at Grand Forks the same afternoon.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—John Crawford, a Wahpeton restauranter, reported to the police that he was touched on the Great Northern train into this city for a pocketbook containing $100. He tainks he had the money as far as Moorhead, and that it wa staken in the bustle of getting out of the train between Fargo and Moorhead. The police believe a gang of crooks is operating between Breckenridge and Fargo. Others claim the work is done by men who board the trains in Moorhead.

There is much discussion of the probability of the electric street railway being extended to Detroit, Minn., to give Fargo people communication with the Minnesota lake resort. President Larned of the company is here and a trip has been made across the country to Detroit to investigate the probable cost of such a line. It would prove a great convenience and be a big boom for the summer resorts.

The Commercial club has elected its former officers, headed by President J. C. Hunter and Secretary George H. Phelps.

There has been an exodus of Fargoans to the G. A. R. convention at Oakes, firemen's tournament at Carrington, races at Buffalo and Sunday School association meeting at Jamestown. The city is well represented at all the gatherings.

Rev. R. Auffroth, of Bowbells, was arraigned in United States court here on the charge of mailing scurrilous matter. He and Rev. M. W. Schraeder, of the same place, rented and farmed some land together. At the end of the season they had a row over the straw and Schraeder hauled it away. Auffrath wrote his brother a postal card alleging that the removal of the straw was an act of theft. The card was turned over to the officials and Auffrath was indicted. Judge Amidon lectured him on the folly of mailing such stuff, but considered his arrest sufficient punishment and imposed no further penalty.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Domestic Drinks Three Kinds of Poison and Dies.

Iron Mountain—Emma Federer, a domestic in the Iron Mountain house, drank three kinds of poison—carbolic acid, morphine and genelsion—and died an hour later. Her parents live at Sheboygan, Wis. She left a sealed letter addressed to a brother at Sheboygan, Wis. It is supposed Miss Federer was insane.

Calumet—Miss Jennie Brunnelle, a popular young woman of Chassell, had her nose broken by a batted ball during a game between the Chassel and Baraga teams at Chassell. The ball struck Miss Brunnelle squarely between the eyes and actually crushed her nose in. She received immediate surgical attendance, but it is feared that the injury will cause a life disfigurement.

Menominee—It is reported in marine circles at Chicago and Milwaukee that the compay which is to be organized to run a line of boats from Milwaukee and Chicago to Menominee and Marinette to compete with the Goodrich line, has chartered the Barry line steamer City of Fremont, and that she is being fitted for this service. The current report is to the effect that a meeting will be held in a few days when the organization of the company will be perfected. Several business men of Marinette, among them Isaac Stephenson, are interested in the new line.

Escanaba—Nearly every grocer in the city is now represented in the Retail Grocers' Protective association of Escanaba, which was formed a month ago. Although the blacklist which the members have decided to prepare has not yet been fully completed it is expected that the names of all people who have made it a practice to refuse to pay their grocery bills will soon be known to every groceryman in the city, and then the blacklist will be on in full force. The members of the association have already been provided with the names of the worst offenders and credit of the latter has been shut off.

DEARTH'S TALK

Renouncing Dunn the Topic of Discussion Among Politicians.

Van Sant Bringing Pressure to Bear on His Appointees.

St. Paul, June 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The interview of Insurance Commissioner Dearth renouncing allegiance to R. C. Dunn is the topic of discussion among the politicians of the Twin Cities. The Dunn men are satisfied that Mr. Dearth's change of front means that Governor Van Sant is a candidate for a third term, whereas the Collins men say it merely shows that Mr. Dearth does not care to be identified with a losing cause.

One of the Dunn managers yesterday sized up the situation as follows:

"I have received reliable information that Governor Van Sant is bringing pressure to bear on his appointees, who are friendly to Mr. Dunn, to get them to change their attitude. Mr. Dearth says himself that the governor felt awfully bad because he, Mr. Dearth, announced himself in favor of Mr. Dunn. This shows conclusively that the governor has talked with Mr. Dearth on the subject and that the insurance commissioner decided to take back what he said before. I have received reliable information, also, that the governor has sent a person to sound Gen. Libbey, who recently came out for Mr. Dunn, and that Gen. Libbey turned down the idea cold, whereupon Governor Van Sant never broached the matter to him personally.

"I am satisfied further that Mr. Dearth's interview means that Governor Van Sant is a candidate for a third term. On March 14 Mr. Dearth came out for Mr. Dunn, stating that he had promised Mr. Dunn three years ago that he would assist him, and that he was glad that he was in a position to do so, since Governor Van Sant had announced that he is not a candidate for a third term. The only logical conclusion is that the reason Mr. Dearth can no longer support Dunn is because Governor Van Sant is a caddate for a third term."

The Collins men take a different view of the situation. One of the judge's managers said yesterday:

"Mr. Dunn's interview stating that Dearth's change of front means that Governor Van Sant is a candidate for a third term is just aother hypodermic dose of the saline solution they are taking every three hours or so to keep them alive. They are losing ground so fast lately that they have to have something new to talk about every day to keep them going. We all know that the governor meant what he said when he declared that he would not be a candidate again.

"Mr. Dunn must be joking when he says that he has not attacked Governor Van Sant. He has gone after him in public and in private for months with every variety of epithet known to his extensive vocabulary."

Senator T. M. Pugh, of Duluth, who is in the city, says that both Mr. Dunn and Judge Collins have many friends in St. Louis county and that it is impossible to tell who will win out. Mr. Pugh says that the contest is not bitter and that whoever will be the nominee he will receive the united support of the Rpublicans of St. Louis county.

"The contest in St. Louis county between the friends of the two leading candidates is an intelligent one," said Senator Pugh. "It is not bitter, and I am satisfied that Mr. Dunn or Judge Collins, whoever is nominated, will get the united support of the Republicans of the county. There will not be a particle of difference in the Republican vote."

* * *

The Dunn men deny the statements of H. C. Block of Stearns county, member of the legislative committee that investigated Mr. Dunn's record, to the effect that P. A. Gunders, the expert employed by the committee to make an examination, showed his report to R. C. Dunn before presenting it to the committee and that R. C. Dunn brought undue influence to bear to get the members to sign the favorable report.

The following statement of the transactions was given out yesterday at the Dunn headquarters:

H. C. Block of Stearns county is credited with having made the statement that the report of the last legislative committee which made the investigations of the state auditor's office was writen by P. A. Gunders, then assistant public examiner, and submitted to Mr. Dunn before being shown to the committee and that he, Mr. Block, who was a member of the committee signed it under protest.

This seems to be a pitiful exhibition at this late date on the part of Mr. Block to shift the responsibility from his own shoulders to that of a clerk, who simply assisted the committee in making the investigation and who drew up the report under the direction of the committee, inserting therein only such facts as the members of the committee ordered. Mr. Block and the other members of the committee signed the report, no mater who prepared it for them, and the legislature adopted the report of the committee as made. There was no adverse comment in regard to its adoption and no criticism of it was made either by Mr. Block or any other member of the legislature.

Mr. Block's statement that the report would not have been permitted if Public Examiner Johnson had been in town, is amusing in the view of the fact that Mr. Johnson at that time was sojourning in California for the purpose of keeping as far as possible from legislative investigating committees.

Mr. Block's statement that Gunders showed the report to Mr. Dunn before giving it to the committee is not true and is flatly denied by Mr. Gunders.

Mr. Block, who is a Democrat, hails from Stearns county, the home of Judge Collins, of whom he is an ardent admirer.

The much-postponed high school interclass field day will be held at the Driving park next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The three-cornered meet that was to have come off between Duluth, Ashland and Ironwood, and the dual meet with Superior, will not now occur, as it is too late in the season, and as the treasury of the Athletic association is so greatly depleted that it would be impossible for the association to stand the expense.

The list of entres is as follows:

The Seniors and Sophomores have not yet entered the names of those who are to compose their team but those of the Junior are Smith, Miller, Harrison, and Jaques, and those of the Freshmen are Gilpen, McDevitt, Ryan and Jefferson.

ARE CAUGHT STEALING RIDE

Three Boys Nabbed on Blind Baggage of Northern Pacific.

Charged with attempting to steel rides on the Northern Pacific trains, three Duluth boys were arrested last evening by Detective Stanley of the railroad company.

The lads, whose names are Samuel Marcuse, Clarence Rose and William Blake, were caught attempting to work the "blind baggage" for a ride. They were found on the head end of the passenger train leaving the Union depot at 8:15. They claimed that they intended to go as far as Superior only.

In municipal court this morning they were arraigned before Judge Windom, under the state law which provides a penalty for attempting to ride on a train without tickets and pleaded guilty. Judge Windom sentenced Rose and Blake to pay fines of $25 and costs or forty days in jail, but suspended the sentence on the understanding that the boys would go to work immediately, and quit hanging around the freight yards. If they are caught again in the yards the sentence will be carried out.

Marcuse was held for $25 bail, without sentence. The police believe he was mixed up in the famous "beer and chickens" case, where a gang of some twenty young boys stole some beer and chickens and had a feast at Ninth avenue east. The police are investigating his case, and if nothing is found against him, he will also doubtless be released under the same conditions as the others. He admitted he was out with the crowd who stole the chickens, but claims he had nothing whatever to do with the theft.

Marcuse is 18 years of age and the other boys 17 years.

The company has had no little trouble with boys and tramps stealing rides on the bumpers and brakes of the cars since the warm weather set in. For the past two weeks scarcely a train has left the depot which did not carry at least one tramp ensconced on the bumpers, who was beating his way to the Twin Cities or some of the intervening stations.

Detective Stanley stated last evening that the company intended to prosecute all such persons in future.

Insanity Suspected.

Two informations of insanity were filed this morning in the probate court. One is against Selma Karolina Tirka, of Soudan, and it is filed by her husband. She is the mother of three small children, and her husband states that her mental condition is such that she is not a safe custodian of them. A deputy sheriff will be sent to Soudan after her at once.

A similar charge has been made against the mental condition of Antoine LaBlanc, of 1126 West Michigan street, and he will have an examination in the probate court.

ONE THOUSAND LIVES LOST

opened her eyes, and she was then hurried to the Lincoln hospital. There it was found that the girl had been severely burned, but that she might recover. She could remember nothing of the awful events of the day.

The body of Miss Hartman was picked up by one of the fleet of rescuing boats, which was already filled with a cargo of dead. There being no space for the body of Miss Hartman, it was fastened to a rope and towed astern of the launch, and was lifted to a pier on the Manhattan side of the river. On the wharf a man coming from a neighboring coal yard, carrying a tarpaulin, wrapped Miss Hartman in the sheet and helped to place her in line with the row of dead.

One of the several vehicles pressed into service for the transportation of the dead from the docks to the stationhouses conveyed Miss Hartman to the Alexander station, where the unknown woman made the discovery that life still existed. At the hospital today it was stated that Miss Hartman was improving.

PASTOR PROSTRATED.

Rev. Mr. Haas Unconscious Most of Time.

New York, June 16.—Pastor Haas, of St. Mark's Lutheran church, on the excursion of the Sunday school, of which the disaster to the General Slocum occurred, is completely prostrated. He has been unconscious most of the time since the disaster and under the constant care of a physician. His condition is critical. His son did not go on the excursion. He lost, beside his wife and daughter, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Carl Hanson, and his sister-in-law, Mrs. William Tetimore. Mrs. Tetimore's daughter, Edith, 2 years of age, is also lost.

Assistant District Attorney Garvan has placed under seal a dozen life preservers taken from the General Slocum. Of these only three were intact. The rest had burst compartments, from which the cork was pouring. The canvas coverings of the cork were so rotten that an assistant of Mr. Garvan, who made the experiment, had no difficulty in ripping them open with his finger nail.

Acting under orders from Police Commissioner McAdoo, photographers have been at work photographing the bodies of dead, as a means of identification. The bodies are placed in coffins and are stood in an upright position in groups of four and flashlight pictures are then taken. The work of photographing began at North Brother island and was later taken up at the morgue.

About 1 o'clock this morning, Assistant District Attorney Garvan, who has been detailed by District Attorney Jerome to investigate the disaster, visited the Tenderloin station and was closeted for some time with Capt. Cottrell. After a while the captain called two of his plain clothes men into the office, and in a few minutes they left the station on the run, refusing to answer questions.

A little later Mr. Garvan appeared, and was approached by the reporters. When asked if he was looking into the Slocum case, he at once became disturbed and said:

"I cannot answer that question."

RIGID INVESTIGATION

Will Be Made of Slocum Disaster.

Washington, June 16.—A rigid investigation of the Gen. Slocum disaster has been ordered by Secretary Cortelyou, of the department of commerce and labor. The investigation will be conducted by the steamboat inspection service under the direction of George Uhler, supervising inspector general. It will be conducted by Gen. James A. Dumont and Thomas H. Barrett, constituting the local board of steamboat inspectors in New York.

RUSSIAN ARMY MEETS DISASTROUS DEFEAT

that the Russians were receiving reinforcements. A sharp skirmish took place on the night of June 12 at the village of Oudiaden, five miles west of the railroad and seven miles south of Wa Fang Tien, and another skirmish occurred on the heights, near the village of Lidiatun, ten miles east of Ouladen. The Japanese were repulsed, but the Russian advance posts retired. On June 13, two Japanese divisions were five miles north of the scene of the skirmish, their left wing resting on the village of Vafangow and their right on the valley of the Tassa, which flows parallel with the railroad, falling into the sea ten miles south of Pitsewo.

After a day's rest the enemy advanced fifteen miles, June 14, and attacked the left of the Russian position, four miles south of Vafangow. The Russians had the best of the first day's fighting, annihilating a Japanese cavalry squadron and taking some prisoners, although at nightfall both armies retained their positions. Yesterday's battle extended over a rough country, where artillery was very effective. The Russian lines extended between the villagers of Lan Chou, near the railroad and Fa Fan.

BUILD AN IMMENSE TRENCH.

Che Foo, June 16.—Eight junks arrived here today from Port Arthur, all of them loaded with Chinese. They left that town yesterday. Up to that time the conditions there were unchanged. Small skirmishes are reported continually ashore and the Japanese ships throw a few shells daily into the city, around which the Russians have just completed an immense trench.

The City Without Strikes.

San Francisco presents an extraordinary and significant new phase of the labor problem. For two years past, while other cities have been having serious industrial conflicts, not one of importance has occurred there. With the introduction of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, over fifty years ago, a new phase in curing stomach ills was presented, and during those years it has demonstrated its wonderful curative powers so conclusively that it is now recognized everywhere as the leading family medicine in the world. For poor appetite, coated tongue, bad breath, sour stomach, constipated bowels, indigestion, dyspepsia, insomnia, or malaria fever and ague, the Bitters is unequalled. Be sure to try it. The genuine has our private stamp over the neck of the bottle.

WEST DULUTH

Yesterday afternoon the new Fond du Lac road, now in course of construction, was inspected by County Commissioners Charles Kauppi, E. M. Patterson and O. E. Berg. Aldermen L. A. Barnes, William Chesney and David Sang, and Alexander Kennedy, of the board of public works. Members of the party were favorably impressed with the new route and the work done thus far.

The total cost of putting the road into first-class condition will be about $7000. If the county commissioners will appropriate $1500, that amount, added to the city appropriation of $2000, will be sufficient for a temporary construction.

CIRCULATORS

Meet at St. Louis and Elect Their Officers.

St. Louis, June 16.—The annual convention of the National Association of Managers of Newspapers circulation, which has been in session here, has selected Toronto as the place of the next meeting in 1905. Officers were elected as follows: F. J. Hoy, Indianapolis News, president; Harper Sleper, Rocky Mountain News, Denver, first vice president; W. G. Darby, Toronto Mail & Express, second vice president; J. L. Boeshaus, New Haven Register, secretary and treasurer; D. G. Ross, Louisville Evening Post and R. S. Grable, St. Louis Star, were elected directors.

Out All Night.

Capt. Herbert Gooch, of the launch Skibo, was out last evening for a trip 'round the horn with a party of visiting Sunday school convention delegates, and after attempting to pass between the bow and stern of a passing sailing vessel, ran aground on a sand bar off Oatka beach. Signals of distress were left floating all night and the Marconi system was tried in vain, and it was 9 o'clock this morning before a handy tug relieved the Skibo.

There were no fatalities, just simply a tired crew and a bunch of wet and hungry passengers. Capt. Gooch was calmn and good natured throughout the long watch and Chief Surgeon Cheney relieved the fears and suffering of the distressed. The view of the big steamer Wolvin, lying at anchor near by, in majestic grandeur, and the call of the watch "All is well," only served to taunt and aggravate the situation, especialy after the supply of eatables had been exhausted. Both Capt. Gooch and Dr. Cheney are receiving the congratulations of their friends this afternoon on their relief from their long and distressing vigil.

AN UNWISE POLICY.

There can be no disputing the fact that the policy of the state of Minnesota in holding its agricultural lands at very high prices or refusing to sell them at any price is retarding the development of Northern Minnesota, and that this is a wise policy there is grave doubt.

In the opinion of The Herald the laws at present on the statute books invest the state auditor with altogether too much power. The public is absolutely at his mercy. He can if he wants to, and he need not if he does not want to, and there is nobody who can force him to do anything. This gives a dishonest and corruptible official an opportunity to graft if he is so disposed and for that reason the law should be altered so that somebody besides the auditor might have some power in determining the value of state agricultural lands and when they shall be sold.

Auditor Iverson may be and probably is entirely conscientious in pursuing a waiting and dilly-dally policy with regard to these lands, hoping thereby to best serve the interests of the state, but citizens who know and thoroughly understand the conditions in new settlements believe that he is making a great mistake in fixing the price of lands at more than their actual value, or refusing to sell them at any price.

In fact it would be better for the state and better for the public now and hereafter if the state would give away most of its agricultural lands to actual homesteaders. This would lead to much more rapid development of the new agricultural regions and as a result would soon bring into the state treasury through taxation more than the value of the lands, whereas by pursuing the present policy of tieing up these lands and withholding them from settlement the state gets nothing and settlement and improvement of adjoining territory is greatly hampered and retarded.

It is all well enough to look out for the interests of future generations and the provision of the law which reserves all mineral rights on state lands is wise and just. But the state has no right to retard the progress of the present generation in looking out for the interests of those to follow. Its first duty is to those here now.

Owing to the ease with which public land of agricultural value is acquired in the Canadian Northwest, many thousands of American citizens have been induced to go there and begin farming. We want to keep these people at home, and we could if our laws and regulations were as liberal as those of our northern neighbor. Therefore, while the law vests the state auditor with almost absolute authority he should use that power with moderation. To refuse to sell any agricultural lands during an entire year is an injustice to the people and a foolish thing for the state to do.

THE PERDICARIS CASE.

American citizens everywhere will rejoice that in the presidential chair sits an executive who is prompt to act when the rights of American citizens residing in foreign countries are in danger. That immediate steps were taken to rescue Mr. Perdicaris from the clutches of Bandit Raisuli in Morocco were entirely commendable. But that immediate display of naval force was either necesary or wise there is some doubt.

There is at least a faint suspicion that the kidnaping of Perdicaris was arranged by a clique of intriguers representing European governments who hoped by that means to use the American nation as a catspaw to pull their chestnuts out of the fire. And their conspiracy seems to have been quite fruitful of desired results.

A native of Morocco residing in New York calls attention to this phase of the matter in an able letter to the New York Sun. He commends the promptness of the president in looking after the safety of American citizens residing abroad, but declares that the starting of negotiations with a demonstration of naval force is a new diplomacy of Secretary Hay. He calls attention to the fact that President Washington, when dealing with the question of Mediterranean pirates in his time, tried to win the friendship of the sultan of Morocco by appealing to his majesty on the ground that the United States of America by its constitution was not pinned particularly to the Christian religion, and in conclusion, says:

"Had there been less fuss made over the matter the bandit Raisuli, who evidently belongs to the Khari sect—rebels against the authority of the sultan—would have been satisfied with a moderate sum of money as ransom.

"A little glance at the conditions of international politics—that is, Germany being isolated, Russia engaged in a serious struggle, and Sultan Abdul Hamid rendered impotent through his own inherent incapacity to do any good to Islam—will convince an instructed mind that a great conspiracy is going on at present at Morocco. Raisuli is playing into the hands of a cosmopolitan clique of intriguers, and American diplomacy has been made a catspaw for the ambition of some European powers. Had American warships not been sent to Tangier there would have been no mustering of French, Italian, Spanish and British fleets. The mobilization of the British and French fleets on a large scale has particularly in view the object of impressing on the minds of Moslems the might and majesty of Britain and France, so that the Moslems may not be filled with the hope of regaining independence by the success of the Japanese over Russia. There is also a possibility of carrying into effect the convention recently made between England and France in reference to the French protectorate over Morocco. In that case the tragedies of Tel-el-kebir and Omdurman, in which thousands of Moslems were slaughtered, will be repeated, for the Moors will not submit to foreign domination without offering a stubborn resistance.

"In my opinion the government of this great republic has no need to become either a tool in the hands of selfish and aggrandizing European powers or an instrument for the destruction of Moslems, who, after all, are human beings."

It is hoped that Mohammed Barakatullah's conclusions are incorrect, but it must be confessed that recent events in world politics lend to them the color of probability. The promptness with which certain European governments recognized the new republic of Panama after the United States had taken the lead, and this combined naval demonstration before the ports of Morocco, leads to the conclusion that the Roosevelt administration, instead of following the advice of Washington to avoid entangling alliances with any European power, has waded into the waters of old-world politics up to its neck. President Roosevelt's letter read at the Cuban dinner furnishes further evidence that he has led the United States into a secret compact with certain European powers to police the world, and that the Monroe doctrine of non-interference has been set aside for the Roosevelt-Hay doctrine of interference with everybody everywhere.

The American ship of state is a staunch old craft, but it is being guided perilously close to the shoals of international trouble.

UNITED STATES, AND—

Since the supreme court has set itself to the task of approving as constitutional every conceivable form of government that may be proposed by the party in power, this country ought to be known now and in future as the United States, and—.

The Herald ventures to say that few people realize the number of different kinds of government already established by virtue of the imperialistic sentiment dominating the powers in the Republican party and by the grace of the supreme court. Here is the list of governments; 9—count 'em—9:

1. Constitutional, state and territorial.
2. Special conditions for Alaska.
3. Special conditions for Indian Territory.
4. A commission for the Philippines.
5. An experiment in Porto Rico.
6. Naval officers in charge of Guam.
7. Temporary government in Tutuila, Samoa and other Pacific islands.
8. The territory of Hawaii.
9. The Panama canal zone.

The end of this condition must be ultimate statehood for the different dependencies or a system of imperialism whereby some of them shall be governed as subject colonies. Which do you prefer?

The Congregationalist points out in a recent issue that the supreme court, by its decisions in these matters, has in effect abrogated or changed in part the constitution, which should be a function of the whole people. It says:

"In short, the supreme court once more puts itself in line with the policy of expansion, of alteration of former national policy, of variety of political status within the governmental entity known formerly as the United States, but hereafter to be known as the United States, plus territories, dependencies and protectorates.

"Each recurring judicial decree from this great tribunal along this line of political development fixes the radical alteration of our national structure and policy the more surely, and makes against the authority of written constitutions in the popular mind. Sir Frederick Pollock recently described Great Britain as busy writing a constitution and the United States as unwriting one. What he meant was that British political developments and Mr. Chamberlain's vision each call for legislation fixing more definitely the precise status of the several parts of the British empire to the United Kingdom and to each other; while our recent history has made for the setting up of varieties of status, against the deposit theory of organic law under which we lived for so many years, and for the exaltation of the executive and legislative departments of government, especially the latter."

Should the people again restore to power the Republican party, they will in effect also endorse these supreme court mandates, which have revised and altered the fundamental law of the land to suit the demands of those who are chosen to carry out the popular will.

The people can have whatever they desire. All they need to do is to vote as their consciences dictate. The members of the supreme court now-a-days keep their eyes cast in the direction of the election returns. That is why this country is now properly known as the United States, and—.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

The Masters' and Pilots' association has finally arrived at the conclusion it should have reached last fall; "that it would be good policy at this stage of the game, owing to existing conditions over which we have no control, to advise our captains to go to work and make the most of a bad situation." It is a difficult matter to bring about a desire on the part of vessel owners to run their boats when there is nothing for them to carry. The time to strike, if at all, is when business is brisk.

After noting that the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company had hired a lot of husky Yale students to maintain order on their trolley cars, the New York Sun advises that they be sent home because another lot of Yale students have been guilty of smashing things up on the street cars of New Haven. On the theory that it takes a thief to catch a thief, why should not rowdies be employed to suppress rowdyism? Through being barked at by the dog that has bitten them, they might themselves be cured.

President Roosevelt may have no constitutional authority to send United States troops into a state without a demand from the state authorities, but he has a consitutional and a moral right to prevent a lawless state government from driving United States citizens from their homes.

It is stated that Venezuela has already had fifteen constitutions. The supreme court of the United States has put more than that number of different constructions on certain sections of ours. So Venezuela and this country are only different in the fact that they use different means to arrive at the same results.

It is now a law in Colorado that affiliation with a labor union is a crime. The Citizens' alliance has so declared and the governor backs up the decree with state militia.

Recent conventions in Minnesota and Illinois have a tendency to show that the highest type of argument that can be used by some Democrats is the fist or the club. Even in St. Louis county the chairman of the county convention sought to apply gag-rule, but fortunately there were men in the convention with minds liberal enough to see that justice was done even to those who opposed their personal views.

HOTEL GOSSIP

Day before yesterday Harry F. Hetzel, of Pittsburg, was registered at the Spalding and in the afternoon left for Ishpeming. Mr. Hetzel is connected with the auditing department of the Jones & Laughlins Co., and was up North on one of his regular trips through the mining districts where the company has interests.

Mr. Hetzel is prominent in his own city as an amateur musician and is considerable of an enthusiast. He is not only a capable violinist, but a conductor as well, and is the head of an amateur orchestra of about fifty pieces, the largest body of its kind in Pittsburg.

He was surprised to learn that the state music teachers were holding a convention in this city and expressed his regret at not being able to remain in the city and attend some of the proceedings, especially to hear Sauret, the famous violinist.

"I've heard a large number of fine violinists, and in my judgment I can safely say that Mr. Sauret ranks with the greatest that I have personal knowledge of, and is the equal of any one, in a general way," said Mr. Hertzel.

"I heard him in the East some time ago and was very deeply impressed with his playing, and I am sure if the people of Duluth have never heard him that they can look forward to something unusual. I have heard Sarasate, Kreisler, Petschnikoff, Burmester, Ysaye, Gregorowitsch, Marteau, Hallr, Rivarde, Jacobson, Listemann and a large number of others equally prominent in the art of violin playing, but I like none better than Mr. Sauret. I heard him play the Mendelssohn concerto, which I had heard played a dozen times, I guess, by as many great violinists, but I was more impressed with Sauret's rendering as a finished, scholarly and classical interpretation, than with that of any of the others I had heard.

"When encored he would come out and play something of his own, simple in theme, but appalling, almost, in its development, and working into variations which were exceedingly difficult, all done with the smoothest possible touch and tone."

One of the gentlemen who was in the conversation said that it was rather coincidental that the great musician who had been under discussion had come to this country as the successor of one of the very men mentioned, Mr. Listeman, who was until a couple of years ago head of the violin department at the Chicago College of Music, and who, it is said, used constantly to practice six and eight hours a day. He had a son Paul, who developed into a fine violinist, but whose swaying while performing, so characteristic of many violinists, was more marked than that of most players. It was said of the young Mr. Listemann that in order to overcome this habit he used to tie himself into a chair when practicing.

Mr. Sauret, who is a man in the prime of life, while a Frenchman by birth, was for some time before coming to this country a resident of London, where there are a great many American young men and women constantly studying music. Those who were under his instruction were very proud of him as a teacher, not only on account of his prestige and superior ability, but because of his unfailing interest in the ones who were industrious and his exceptional kindness. It is said that Sauret many times went out of his way to do little kindnesses for young people from the states who were having a hard time trying to develop their musical prowess in the great English metropolis.

It was just one more kick for the hotel clerk to straighten out and make himself square with the guest.

"Where'd you leave it?"

"Right here in the baggage room, on the floor, last night."

"What kind of a grip was it?"

"Brand new one, hardly used. Never been on the road until this trip. I can't afford to be shy a grip."

The clerk hesitated, but finally got out from the sacred confines of the office and deliberately ambled into the baggage division. He was not there long until the guest marched out quietly with the missing grip in his hand without saying any more than a murmur of surprise.

"That's the way we fellows get it every day," he said, with an air of disgusted resignation. "They come around here and holler before they're hurt. There's nothing strange about it to me. It was there on the floor right before his eyes."

"Wasn't it hidden under other baggage?"

"Not a bit of it. I was not in any hurry to go and look for it, because I did not want to appear alarmed if he had lost it, and I did not want to make a lot of fuss if he hadn't. If we took everything for granted that these guests tell us, we could not run a hotel. We'd have to have some one run us to an insane asylum."

WINKS AND A JURY.

St. Joseph News: A novel case is reported from St. Louis. Maude Williams was charged with stealing $94 from a World's fair visitor, who alleged that she enticed him into a resort near Ninth and Market streets and that when he left he missed his money.

During her trial the woman was not greatly concerned. Maybe she knew the weakness of man, through which he may forget his oath, his obligation to the public and his respect for himself.

Anyway, she smiled and slily winked at the jurors throughout the trial, and they promptly returned a verdict of acquittal, the evidence seems not to have been considered at all.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said the assistant circuit attorney, in a speech of thanks" after the verdict was rendered, "I thank you for your verdict. I thank you in the name of all that it lawless and shameless in crime and criminals. I thank you for the discriminating taste you have shown—for the high order of citizenship which you have displayed—in being influenced in your verdict by a pretty woman's winks and a glimpse at a bit of openwork stocking. You are a credit to your class."

And it is a large class. The frequency with which jurymen are influenced by pretty faces of defendants is a disgrace to the courts of the whole country. There have been many notable instances of this worse than weakness.

"It is strange," declared the judge who presided in this case, "that a jury cannot try a woman defendant as impartially as it can a man. It is a pity that a sickening flirtation between jurors and the defendant in a criminal case has the power in this court to defeat the ends of justice."

Can't Stand Fairbanks.

Philadelphia North American: As a Republican newspaper, deeply concerned in the cause of Republicanism and earnestly desirous that Theodore Roosevelt be elected president of the United States for the term beginning March 4 next, the North American feels called upon to enter an emphatic protest against the proposal to nominate Senator Fairbanks, of Indiana, for the vice presidency. All the good work it may do in nominating Roosevelt and drafting a platform sterling in its Republicanism, will be undone by the Chicago convention should it accept Fairbanks.

The idea that Fairbanks could do other than chill Roosevelt's popularity and blight Republicanism is preposterous. His is an ice-cold nature. His manner is repellent. He is absolutely lacking in the essential quality of personal magnetism. As a public speaker he is dreary and monotonous. His public record is void of acts to commend him to the people. Charles W. Fairbanks has, in short, nothing to recommend him for the vice presidential office except a bulging bank account, and if the Chicago convention is asked to nominate him as Roosevelt's running mate, it should, for the sake of the party, emphatically refuse.

His Conscience Smote Him.

Law Notes: Having fined a young man for entering a train while in motion, Mr. Plowden embarked on a short piece of autobiography which will not be found in his recently published book. "I should in his recently published book. "I should in his recently published book. "I should

TALKS FOR RUSSIA

Rev. Cleary Tells Why She Should Have American Sympathy.

Underdog In Fight and Has Always Been America's Friend.

The benefit for St. James' orphanage may have been the cause of a change in opinions of several score of Duluthians regarding the Russia-Japanese war. Rev. J. M. Cleary, of Minneapolis, last night lectured at the Armory, under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus, for the benefit of the orphanage. He took as his subject "The War in the Far East; with Whom Should Americans Sympathize?"

Before the eloquent Flour City man had completed his remarks a good portion of his audience, who had up to that time sympathized with the Japs without giving the mater much thought agreed with him in the statement that Americans should extend their sympathy to Russia in her time of need. He claimed that, in spite of first appearances, Russia was the under dog, making the reasons for favoring her in the present war doubly strong.

Rev. Cleary is a man of commanding appearance. His power of speech is well known in Duluth, for he has been heard here before. His earnest address and very presence before an audience gives one the impression that such a man would not arrive at any conclusive convictions without some good reasons for doing so, and that therefore those reasons are well worth listening to. So he is given close attention at the start. After that the powerful interest arounsed in the subject is more than sufficient to hold the attention until the lecture is completed.

"America is greatly interested in the Eastern war," said Rev. Cleary. "The conflict has attracted the most interested attention of not only America alone, but of the whole world as well. It is no more than natural that our sympathies should be extended to one or the other of the warring nations. If little or no thought is given to the matter it is also no more than natural that these sympathies should go to Japan, for at first glance, diminutive Japan, with her 40,000,000 population, as compared to Russia's 140,000,000, seems to be the under dog, and we Americans are prone to always give our sympathy to what is popularly called the under dog in any struggle, either between individuals or nations.

"Why is not Japan the under dog?" This extract from an article in the May Metropolitan magazine will make my meaning as clear as words of my own could do:

"'On the one hand we have Russia—the most formidable military power in the world—with her huge army of picked young men, case-hardened by their early life inured to privation; blindly courageous; simple, honest and pious, somewhat lacking in initiative perhaps, and apt to be at a loss if there officers are killed,' yet withal a splendid type of soldier. She is fighting 6000 miles away from her base, and these 6000 miles for many months of the year lie across a vast waste of snow and ice where the temperature is mostly below zero.

"'On the other hand we have the Japanese—fishermen in stormy seas, pirates, mariners, born fighters; active, aggressive, full of initiative; bold resolute and cunning warriors, and fighting practically on their own ground. They have an army known to be one of the best drilled machines in the world, a navy superbly drilled and absolutely up-to-date in navy practice.

"'Under thes circumstances it is difficult to understand why Japan should challenge our sympathy as the under dog in the fight. It is Russia who is the under dog. The New York Sun compares the situation to that of a householder gigantic, but barefooted and unarmed, going down stairs to tackle a burglar—dwarf-like—but armed to the teeth. Under the circumstances it is the householder who is the under dog.'

"How do our sympathies lie, with Russia or Japan? Ask almost any man you meet on the street this question and he will say that they lie with Japan. Ask him why and he will be unable to respond. He thinks so because someone else, no better posted, has thought so for him. His opinions are merely the reflection of others, equally groundless. He is too busy or too lazy to go into the matter, investigate and form his own conclusions in regard to it.

"The majority of the newspapers of America favor Japan. There is much in this of the sentimental. We opened the eyes of the Japanese to the world, introduced him into civilization, educated many of his officers and public men. He is, as another nas said, our little yellow adopted son, our ward, so to speak, and hence we have a certain national pride in him. But what has Japan done for us? Nothing! On the other hand, what has Russia done for us? She has done a great deal.

"Russia has always been the most devoted friend of America, the best friend we have ever had among the nations. There are three reasons why our sympathy should lie with her in the present instance. First among these is gratitude; second, motives of commercial interest; third, motives of interest in Christian civilization.

"Gratitude and these other reasons should not be alone sufficient to call out sympathy for Russia if Russia was in the wrong, or had been guilty of any crime or overt act. She is not thus guilty in this instance. She is fighting for her rights.

"As a matter of fact, Russia did not start the present conflict. Japan made the first attack. Russia claims she was not prepared for war. She was not prepared for war because she did not expect war. Japan made the attack while diplomatic relations were still on.

"Russia was not the assailant, nor did she invade the enemy's territory. The efforts of Russia during the past 100 years to get a port in the open seas make interesting history. She has spent millions in money. In the present case she has been honorable and upright in her effort, and this in every particular. The concessions for the Siberian railway were secured from China, not from Japan. Russia has expended more than $300,000,000 in building up the country adjacent to her railway in Manchuria. She was criticized for bringing an army into the territory in the first place. She did it to protect her own rights.

"Senator Beveridge, who has traveled extensively through Siberia and written a comprehensive work on the subject, says that up to four years ago, when Russia entered Manchuria, the country was a veritable robbers' roost, controlled by bandits, thieves and cutthroats. The country was abandoned by all except these, and was useless to the world. Today peace and order prevails there, or did prevail prior to the war, through Russia's influence. Manchuria is half the size of the United States, with as wonderful resources, and under Russia's influence is becoming of some use to the world."

The speaker briefly reviewed why the United States owes a debt of gratitude to Russia. He said Russia took the side of the United States first in the revolutionary war, again, thirty years later, when Napoleon attempted to close European ports to American interests; still again, in the war of 1812; in the civil war and in the late Spanish-American war.

"During the civil war, in the darkest hour of our national existence, Russia stood by us like a rock, and at the moment of our greatest need sent us two fleets, one to New York and one to San Francisco. The question of sealed orders in the hands of the commanders has been much discussed by the press, but the fact remains that the boats were here and that they completely stopped all talk of foreign intervention, and we were unable to work out our own destinies."

Rev. Cleary dealt extensively with America's commercial interests with Russia, saying that though commercial interests were sordid reasons for extending sympathy to either nation, they should at least be given some consideration. He showed that should Japan win in the present conflict, something which he regards as almost impossible in the end, America would be greatly injured commercially.

He said that this was the last stand of paganism against Christianity, and dealt with the religions of the two countries. He said that should the Japs win they would form a coalition against the rest of the world, and that with their more than 500,000,000 of people, they would be a yellow peril indeed.

TRIBUTES TO DEAD SENATORS

National Committee Pass Resolutions on Hanna and Quay.

Chicago, June 16.—At the meeting of the Republican national committee yesterday, in the absence of Postmaster General Henry C. Payne, chairman of the national committee, who was unable to be present on account of illness, Senator N. B. Scott, of West Virginia, presided. National committeemen from Idaho, Michigan, Minnesota, Rhode Island, Texas, Washington, Arizona and Hawaii were represented by proxies, while those from Arkansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Montana, Oregon, Utah, Vermont, Wisconsin, New Mexico and District of Columbia were not present.

Senator Scott paid a tribute to the memory of Senators Hanna and Quay, after which the following resolutions on the memory of Senator Hanna were adopted by a rising vote:

"The members of this Republican national committee bow their heads in profound sorrow over the loss of Marcus A. Hanna, distinguished throughout his active and honorable life by his devotion to principle, his personality, his splendid courage, his sound judgment, his quick sympathy and spirit of helpfulness, his masterful power of organization and his noble qualities of mind and heart.

"He touched society and government, labor and capital at every point. His success was won by industry, consistent purpose, economy and sacrifice, by loyalty to friends and consideration of the rights of his fellow men. In his great work in this committee we lean and rely on him, to trust him with great labors and responsibilities; and he proved equal to every demand upon him.

"In the senate, in the ranks of labor, in the conference of the masters of commerce, in the councils of political leaders of his country, he was wise, just and patriotic. He was a statesman in the true sense, an honorable man of affairs, a helper in the world's work and we mourn his death at the very summit of his power and influence with a depth beyond the strength of any ordinary words of ours to express.

"Resolved, that a copy of this tribute be sent to his family, to the governor of the state of Ohio, and be printed in the official proceedings of the convention."

Senator Bois Penrose, of Pennsylvania, offered the Quay memorial. It is as follows:

"Resolved, that the members of the Republican national committee have learned with profound sorrow of the death of our late colleague, Matthew Stanley Quay. For many years he represented the great state of Pennsylvana in this committee. In several campaigns he served as member of the executive committee. As chairman of the Republican national committee, he achieved by his skill, sagacity, courage and ability one of the most brilliant victories in the splendid history of the Republican party. He was ever found to be a genial friend and sagacious counsellor. His wide political experience, matured and well balanced judgment and extraordinary knowledge concerning political affairs will be greatly missed in the councils of our party.

"In his death the country has lost one of the ablest and best equipped statesmen of his time. He was one of the most influential, trusted and forceful members of the senate of the United States. His many and great public services to his party and his country are recognized and admitted by all.

"Resolved, that this resolution be sent to the family and be printed in the official record of the convention."

INTEREST IS WIDE

Evening Session of Sunday School Convention Largely Attended.

Interesting Topics Discussed Both Afternoon and Evening.

The evening service of the state Sunday school convention held at the Pilgrim Congregational church last evening was the most largely attended of any of the meetings yet held. The church was well filled with delegates from outside the city, from the local Sunday school and with friends of the Sunday school movement.

The praise service was conducted by Dr. A. F. Elmquist, pastor of the Bethany Lutheran church of this city.

On J. H. Martin, superintendent of the Wesley Sunday school, of Minneapolis, devolved the duty of raising the funds necessary for the work of the state association the coming year. Mr. Martin is a business man and he introduced business-like methods in his efforts with a gratifying result.

"We ought to raise $500 here tonight but we are going to raise $3500," said Mr. Martin at the outset.

"This is a partnership affair. God is the senior partner and we are the junior partners."

Mr. Martin then talked briefly on the importance of the Sunday school to the boys and girls, the homes and to Christian citizenship and urged liberality in response to the call for subscriptions.

After a short prayer he called for subscriptions and for twenty minutes there was a lively tender of subscriptions, from schools and individuals in amounts ranging from 50 cents to $100, the larger amounts being greeted with applause.

President Irish read a letter from the Commercial club of Duluth, extending to the delegates the privilege of the club while in the city.

A telegram from Auburn, New York, giving greetings from the New York state Sunday school convention now in session, was read. The greeting made reference to an appropriate passage in scripture.

President Irish responded to the greeting in behalf of the Minnesota convention, with a telegram to the New York organization in which he also give a scripture reference, the sentiment of which seemed to fit the occasion.

The address of the evening was then given by Rev. J. Percival Hugget on, "The Looms of Life."

Although the convention had already listened to two splendid addresses by Rev. Mr. Hugget his effort of last evening was considered by far the most eloquent and inspiring. Nor did Mr. Hugget neglect the humorous side of his philosophy.

He treated of life, its building, its mastery and its weaving, especially of the last named.

"All life is mystery because it is infinite, not because it is hidden," said Mr. Hugget. "All that is infinite is mystery. God is infinite. Men have tried to contemplate enduring time from time immemorial. When all the temples men have builded have crumbled, when the very remembrance of the stars shall have passed from the memory of angels the mystery shall remain."

The splendid and rapid development of this country was treated as the result of life, and the home influences and experiences were designated as having marked an important effect on life.

"Life is material in nations and in men. It is also a finished product. We speak of them, but assume and say 'he was a good man.' If life is something so wonderful and beautiful is it not worth the mastery? It is worth while for you and me to keep our lives under our control.

"Man can have just about what he wants in the world if he pays the price. I know of some men who search for trouble and misery and find it. 'Seek and ye shall find.' Seek the life that is worth while and you can find it. The trouble is there are a lot of things we want that are not worth having.

"The looms of life are ourselves. Out of the weaving comes character. The woof is all the experiences of life. The warf is the decrees of Providence. Day after day in laughter or in tears, weave we must until the threads drop from our hands. The patterns we may follow are human excellence and divine conceptions. He who marks the pattern out and marks the threads will mark them true. It purposes for my life some high accomplishment and in such purpose is such accomplishment begun.

"Above our petty weaving, the great weaving of life eternal is going on. Do Thou perfect our weaving, O Master of the looms."

Rev. S. C. Davis dismissed the congregation with benediction.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Address on Various Topics of Interest.

Several of the best feature on the program of the state Sunday school convention were listened to by the delegates yesterday afternoon. The practical talks by Miss Grace Longfellow on "Little Beginners," by Miss Beatrice Longfellow on "Primary Songs and Exercises," and the paper by Mrs. C. D. Risser on "The Training of the Will," were listened to with the closet attention and at their conclusion drew forth a hearty applause.

The afternoon session opened with a prayer and praise service conducted by Rev. R. A. Montgomery, pastor of the Glen Avon Presbyterian church of this city.

In dealing with the little beginners, Miss Grace Longfellow said her department included the children between three and six years old.

She laid special emphasis that the teaching of children between these ages be adapted to their natures, that they are at an age of great physical activity and their minds are just beginning to develop.

Miss Longfellow recommended that the principles of love, obedience, reverence and goodness be the first things taught. The primary end of the work among the children, she said, is to instill religious principles in their lives. She advocated the seperate room for the little beginners and urged the teachers to be early at class for then is offered the opportunity for getting acquainted with the pupils.

Miss Longfellow deprecated the practice of compelling the small children to memorize verses of scripture or songs. "All that is necessary," she said, "is to present the truth and let the memorizing take care of itself."

The exercises, she claimed, should be informal, and in the nature of kindergaretn methods.

Miss Longfellow then gave an example of a model lesson for the very small children, which was greatly appreciated by the teachers present.

"Simplicity," she said, "is the keynote with the child. Get close to the child when telling the lesson story for it gives you a greater sense of nearness to him. Let the beginners department be a happy place where the children will like to come and learn that God is love."

Mrs. Risser's paper on the training of the will was an able article treating of the physcological rather than the spiritual powers. In opening she held that a human life without a will is to be compared to a ship without a rudder or anchor.

"When a child enters the world," said Mrs. Risser, "its soul is sealed and it is gradually awakened through its senses. Therefore how necessary it is that the child shall have clear perceptions of everything that is presented to it."

Mrs. Risser claimed that the very toys that a child plays with lay a portion of the foundation of his character for the future. She laid special emphasis on the power of imitation developed in a child and said that the impressions thus gained are never erased.

In treating her topic of primary songs and exercises, Miss Beatrice Longfellow urged at the beginning that the quality of the songs rather than the quantity should always be considered. She said the child should have the very best of songs at the Sunday school for those are the songs that it will sing at home. She also said that the songs should be adopted to the child's powers, no special attempt being made to have the it memorize them, but to teach it that the songs are as important a part of the lession as the scriptures.

Miss Longfellow then gave a number of song selection and primary exercises for small children.

Mrs. Risser's paper and the talks by the Misses Longfellow paved the way nicely for the address of the afternoon, delivered by Rev. J. Percival Hugget on "The Emergence of Spiritual Selfhood." In general, this spiritual selfhood, the speaker held, was that which develops in a boy or a girl between the ages of 12 and 14 years, and which largely directs his or her future actions. He claimed that without the previous child training, however, there might not be any spiritual selfhood to emerge.

Two thoughts, Mrs. Hugget said had been impressed on him through the subject, and those are that the spiritual life rests back on the fundamental laws of all life and that there are some laws which appear in spiritual life that do not appear in the truly intellectual forms of life. He presented four things to be considered, namely, the fact of a spiritual selfhood; the emergence of a spiritual selfhood; the consciousness of a spiritual selfhood and the full powers of a spiritual selfhood. Treating of each subhead in turn Mr. Hugget gave an able pedagogical discourse of the spiritual forces in the individual lives.

"The spiritual possibility in an infant," Mr. Hugget said, "does not of itself come to its kingship. It requires the working of the spirit of God, manifest in conversion."

Mr. Hugget said that the time comes in life of all young men and women when they are to choose between the good and the bad, and when that time comes the spiritual individuality comes to the top and the selfhood that has been developed in the former years will dominate the young man or young woman through life.

Mr. Hugget also emphasized the power of heredity over personality.

At the close of the afternoon session President Irish announced the following committees:

Enrollment—T. S. Thompson, Duluth; Dr. Leo M. Crafts, Minneapolis; Mr. Bardwell, Excelsior.

Resolutions—C. J. Hunt, J. B. Blake, Mr. Robinson, Miss L. A. Emory and G. B. Eaton.

GEN. STEPHEN LEE

Elected Commander-in-Chief of Confederate Veterans.

Nashville, Tenn., June 16.—Miss Mary K. Ewell, of Norfolk, Va., maid of honor for the South, by her singing of "My Old Kentucky Home," yesterday, won for Louisville the reunion next year of the United Confederate veterans. It was after the old veterans had chosen Lieut. Gen. Stephen D. Lee as commander-in-chief and the latter had listened to a stirring speech by Col. Bennett H. Young of Kentucky, extolling the beauties, capabilities and hospitality of Louisville, that Miss Ewell thrilled the great crowd that filled the tabernacle. The last note of the song had barely left her lips when the convention went wild with shouts of "Louisville," "Louisville." Seconding speeches were unnecessary. The choice of the veterans was unanimous. The date will be determined later.

The veterans in addition to electing officers, disposed of a vast amount of routine business, but did not compiete their work, and a final session will be held Thursday afternoon.

LABAREE MURDERER

Brought By Consul to Tabriz For Trial.

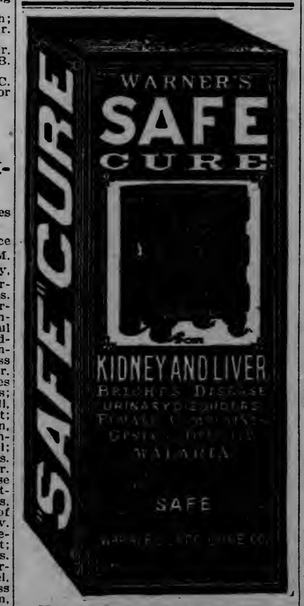

St. Petersburg, June 16.—A private letter form Urumiyah, north Persia, date1 May 31, says that Seid, who murdered Rev. Benjamin W. Labaree, son of Dr. Benjamin Labaree, superintendent of the American mission, had ben brought by the British consul to Tabriz for trial.

The murder of Rev. Labaree, who was assassinated in March last was an act of vengeance. Seid, his murderer a short time previously killed a Syrian, who was a British subject, whereupon representatives of both the Anglo-American mission insisted that the assassin be punished.

When the culprit learned of this he announced that he would kill the missionaries, so the latter no longer insisted upon his arrest. Seid nevertheless, took his revenge, Mr. Labaree being his first victim.

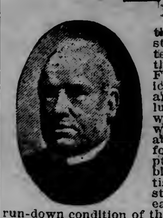

SURGEON SUICIDES.

Prairie Du Chien, Wis., June 16.—George A. Geist, chief surgeon at the sanitarium in this city, died of a hemorrhage of the brain caused by an overdose of morphine, which the doctor took, it is supposed, with suicidal intention. He was 39 years old.

Has been curing kidney troubles for thirty years. Get a bottle. At all druggists.

WHY IT IS SO.

When it is known that its power to strengthen the system and build up the body is why Father John's Medicine cures colds and all throat and lung troubles, it will be understood why it is so valuable as a tonic and for driving the impurities out of the blood. It feeds the tissues and makes strength. All disease is due to a run-down condition of the body, unhealthy tissue, blood poisoned with impurities, and general weakness. While we recommend Father John's Medicine for a number of ailments—in the cure of which it has always been successful, as those who endorse it will tell you—you must understand and remember that all these ills are of the same kindred or family; that they all come from the same source or cause, as stated above. The principle of this medicine is simple. It furnishes the food that the body requires, and strengthens each organ so that it can do its work—that is how the system is cleared of the impurities and poisonous waste matter, and it supplies bodily warmth and vitality. Its ingredients are the same kind of food and nourishment that blood and tissue are made of—pure and wholesome. Father John's Medicine is for sale by all druggists, the Leithhead Drug Co., Wholesale Distributors.

SECTION HAND SUICIDES.

He Puts a Bullet Through His Brain.

York, Minn., June 16.—After retiring to his room and securely fastening the door, C. T. Anderson, a section laborer, commited suicide by firing a bullet through his head. No reason for the act is known, and it is regarded as probable that he committed the deed while seized with a temporary attack of insanity.

The suicide took place in the section boarding house, where Anderson has stayed since he first came to this place about a year ago. The attention of the other inmates of the house was attracted by the report of the shot, and they rushed upstairs only to find the door securely locked. It gave way to a few strong attacks and Anderson was found dead on the floor with the revolver at his side.

The bullet had been fired through the mouth and streaks of blood on the floor indicated that he had walked around after firing the shot. Anderson was about thirty-five years old and unmarried and was not known to have indulged in any excessive habits.

DROWNED AT BLACKDUCK

Andrew Olson's Boat Capsized and He Sank In Lake.

Bemidji, Minn., June 16.—Andrew Olsen, a resident of Blackduck, was drowned in Blackduck lake about 6:30 o'clock Tuesday night. Olson, in company with another man, named Rasmus Olson, went out in a rowboat shortly before 6 o'clock. The two were going out fishing. In some manner the boat was capsized and both were precipitated into the water.

Olson grabbed one of the oars and started to swim ashore. Rasmus Olson clung to the overturned boat. The cries of the men attracted attention, and the Cascade launch went out to pick them up. Rasmus Olson was picked up first and the launch started toward Andrew, who was struggling in the water. He was much exhausted and called to the boat crew to hurry. He sank when the boat was a short distance from him and drowned.

The body was not recovered until next morning. Olson was about 25 years of age. He has made his home at Blackduck for about two years, and has been stopping at the Scandia hotel, in that city. He has no relatives in that city.

SITUATION STATED

L. A. Rosing Outlines the Democratic Position In Minnesota.

Should Nominate Loyal, Honest, Capable Man Likely to Win.

St. Paul, June 16.—L. A. Rosing, Democratic candidate for governor two years ago and a candidate for delegate at large to the St. Louis national convention, is in St. Paul to confer with political friends regarding the situation in Minnesota. There was a conference of the leaders of the anti-Hearst forces in the state, and at its close at the Merchants hotel Mr. Rosing gave out an interview to the press. He said in substance:

"I have examined the reports which have been published of the various county conventions held throughout the state, and in addition to that have received reports direct, and from all the data at my disposal I am convinced that a strong majority of the delegates elected to the state convention are opposed to any instructions favoring the candidacy of Mr. Hearst. I am, of course, pleased that this should be the result, as this is what I have advocated from the beginning.

PROPER MAN TO NOMINATE.

"The attempt has been made to claim that the Democrats who opposed the candidacy of Mr. Hearst belonged to the ultra-conservative element of the party, or to those who have been described as 'reorganizers,' but it is evident that the Democrats of the state generally understand the true situation. If conservatism means opposition to advocating unknown men and unknown policies, myself and friends may be so described. What I have favored, however, is just this:

"That the Democrats who believe in and venerate the fundamental principles of that patry, and who stood by the party and its nominee in 1900 and in 1896, should nominate this year as a candidate some man who, while coming up to the requirements in party loyalty and public and private honesty, education and intelligence, would, at the same time, by reason of his position and character be a candidate who is likely to win. Such a candidate as that would be able to unite the entire party; but to satisfy me he must not only be a man who was true to the party in the last two national campaigns, but one who was willing to make his campaign upon a platform which clearly and unambiguously states what I believe the Democratic position to be. I know of no better statement of the Democreatic doctrine than is to be found in the platform presented to the Nebraska state convention by William J. Bryan a few days ago, except that I would like to see added to it a plank favoring reciprocal relations with our neighbors, north and south. The platform referred to was as follows:

"'We, the Democrats of the state of Nebraska, in convention assembled, reaffirm our faith in democratic principles as those principles were set forth in the last national platform of the party, adopted at Kansas City in 1900.

"'Democracy means the rule of the people—a government resting upon the consent of the governed and administered according to the will and in the interest of the people.

"'With an increasing love for the principles of democracy and an increasing confidence in their final triumph, we look upon the present time as opportune for their earnest and courageous promulgation. With a chief executive who has disregarded constitutional limitations, stirred up antagonism between the races, employed all the powers of his office to secure a renomination and purchased political support by turning the treasury department over to the financiers and putting the law department in the hands of the trusts—with such a chief executive and with Republican leaders openly and arrogantly in alliance with organized wealth, the country imperatively needs a return of the government to positive and clearly defined democratic principles. Democracy as taught by Jefferson and exemplified by Jackson is the hope of the republic and offers the only relief from the plutocracy which now dominates the Republican party, and through that party the country.

"'Democracy would oppose as inimical to the welfare of the people all private monopolies, and would exterminate them by the enforcement of the remedies suggested in the Kansas City platform. The failure of the present administration to enforce the existing laws or to snggest more effective laws, is conclusive proof that it lacks the desire, the intelligence or the moral courage to attack the conscienceless combinations of capital that have flourished during recent years.

"'Democracy would relieve the country of the menace of militarism and imperialism by following the example set by this country in its dealings with Cuba, and giving the Filipinos an immediate promise of ultimate independence. The administration of a colonial system according to monarchial principles is repugnant to our theory of government and cannot be defended without the assertion of doctrines which, if carried out, will undermine free government in the United States.

"'Democracy would restore the tariff to a revenue basis and administer it for revenue only, thus demolishing the legal bulwark behind which the predatory trusts have found refuge. Protection for protection's sake is an ingenious device for the exploitation of the masses by the privileged classes; it has brought great injustice to the consumers and has been the fruitful source of widespread political corruption.

"'Democracy would administer the treasury department in behalf of the public, not, as now, in the interest of Wall street. It would prevent the recoinage of legal tender silver dollars into limited legal tender subsidiary coin; it would secure to the people a volume of standard money sufficient to keep pace with the demand for money; it would favor paper money issued by the government without the intervention of national banks; it would resist the attempt to establish an asset currency and branch banks, and it would oppose the loaning of government money to favorite banks—a scheme by which the people's money is employed to lay a foundation for a campaign fund and to bribe the financial interests to oppose any reduction of taxation. The present administration of the treasury department is progressively beneficial to the capitalistic class and progressively harmful to the producers of wealth.

"'Democracy would make taxation more equitable by collecting a part of the revenues from an income tax, secured by a constitutional amendment, and would bring the government nearer to the people by the popular election of United States senators and by direct legislation.

"'Democracy would strictly regulate the railroads thus protecting farmers and merchants from excessive rates and discriminations.

"'Democracy would safeguard the interests of the wage-earner and the artisan by providing for an eight-hour day, by substituting arbitration for strikes and lockouts and by restoring the right of trial by jury, now suspended through government by injunction.

"'Democracy would secure to the surviving soldiers and sailors and their dependents generous pensions, not by an arbitrary executive order, but by legislation which a grateful people stand ready to enact.

"'Democracy would construct an isthmian canal without a violation of treaty obligations and without exciting suspicion among our sister republics of Central and South America.

"'Democracy would regard public office as a public trust, provide for an honest and economical administration of the government, and punish with severity any betrayal of official duty.

"'Democracy has nothing to gain from ambiguity and nothing to fear from the light. Democratic platforms should, therefore, set forth Democratic principles, policies and purposes with frankness, clearness and definiteness. Those who champion the principles embodied in a truly Democratic creed can appeal to the moral sense of the country and trust for vindication to the awakened conscience of an inteligent and patriotic citienzship.

"'The delegates chosen by this convention to the Democratic national convention are hereby instructed to vote as a unit on all questions, provided that the unit rule may be suspended by a majority vote of the delegation.'

NO CHANCE FOR HEARST.

"It seems to me that the Democracy of Minnesota can have at least some influence in the national convention advocating such a platform as the above and such a candidate as I have described," continued Mr. Rosing. "If, however, the delegates are to be bound by instructions in favor of the candidacy of Mr. Hearst their influence is at once destroyed. Nobody now pretends to believe that Mr. Hearst can be nominated, and for all practical purposes the delegation from this state might as well remain at home as to go to St. Louis instructed for Mr. Hearst.

"The candidacy of Mr. Hearst is particularly unfortunate at this time so far as the Minnesota Democracy is concerned. With the Republican party split, as it is, by the contending factions, a united Democracy could well hope to elect a governor and at least some supreme court judges and several congressmen; instead, however, of getting together and arranging our lines of battle upon reasonable and intelligent lines we have presented the deplorable spectacle of Hon. John Lind being unwarrantably defeated in a county convention because he advocated the same policy which is advocated by John Sharp Williams, the leader of the Democratic minority in the house of representatives, and indeed by leading Democrats all over the United States. No greater commentary is required than this: and I sincerely trust that the result of the state convention will be to bring the Democrats of the state together upon a sound and reasonable basis so that we may work as harmoniously in the future as we have in the past."

MARTIAL LAW AT AN END

Legal Mixup Regarding President Moyer of Miners' Federation.

Denver, June 16.—Gov. Peabody yesterday issued an order declaring martial law in San Miguel county at an end, directing the release of troops from duty and instructing Capt. Wells, in command of the troops, to turn over to the civil authorities, President Chas. H. Moyer of the Western Federation of Miners, now a prisoner in the bull pen at Telluride.

Gov. Peabody declared to a group of newspaper men yesterday afternoon that he had not been informed of the action of Judge Thayer at St. Louis, in the Moyer case. He further said that orders to the civil authorities for Moyer's release had been prepared early yesterday and a telegram was sent to Capt. Wells at Telluride in the morning to deliver Moyer to the civil authorities at once.

Attorney Gen. Miller also says that the orders concerning Moyer and martial law at Telluride were decided on early yesterday.

The point is raised as to whether the action of the governor in the Moyer case places him in contempt of the order of Judge Thayer of St. Louis.

Telluride, Col., June 16.—Capt. Bulkeley Wells delivered President Moyer of the Western Federation of Miners, who has been in the military bull pen for several months, to the sheriff of San Miguel county at 4:15 yesterday afternoon in pursuance of telegraphic orders from Adjt.-Gen. Bell. Capt. Wells says that he acted on instructions as soon as they were received.

St. Louis, June 16.—United States Circuit Judge A. L. Thayer sitting in chambers, has granted a writ of habeas corpus to have Charles Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, brought before him on July 5. The writ is directed against Governor J. H. Peabody, of Colorado, Adjt.-Gen. Bell and Buckeley Wells, and other Colorado officials. The three have been cited to appear with Moyer and show cause why Moyer is being restrained from his liberty, by being confined in a stockade, or better known as a bull pen, at Telluride, Col.

RESTRICTION IN PIG IRON

Midsummer Will Show Marked Falling Off From High Point.

Cleveland, June 16.—Discussing market conditions, the Iron Trade Review in its current issue says:

Restriction in pig iron production is still under way and midsummer promises to show a market falling off from the high point reached in April when furnace output was at the rate of 19,000,000 tons a year. Decreasing consumption of iron and steel are plainly reflected in the June 1st statistics as well as in the news of the week and the recent curtailment, with the exception of the furnaces in the Chicago district has had no relation to the restricted movement of ore on the lakes. The strike as a factor in the iron market is no longer to be considered. Its complete collapse has come and before the end of the week a large fleet will be under way. Against about 1,700,000 tons of iron ore brought down at this time last year, the present seasons movement has been less than 100,000 tons.

AN ILLEGAL BANKER.

Green Lake, Wis., June 16.—J. E. Leimer, formerly cashier of the bank of Princeton, was yesterday sentenced by Judge Burnell to serve one year in the state prison at Waupun on the charge of illegal banking. Leimer was arrested several months ago at the instance of the state bank examiner.

SWINDLED MANY

Out of $500,000, Chicago People Being Principal Victims.

Clergyman Lost $50,000 In This "Get-Rich-Quick" Scheme.

Cincinnati, June 16.—One of the biggest frauds that has been perpetrated in recent years has just come to light as the operation of two prominent Cincinnati men in Chicago.

A half million dollars have been carted out of the city by these smooth workers. Men and women in all parts of the country subscribed their bits to swell this amount. A prominent Chicago priest was one of the victims, to thetune of $50,000, and it was upon his complaint that the warrants for the arrest of the swindlers was issued last Friday.

For several months the firm of Irving J. Isbell, James C. Gavigan and Arthur Wilbur has been occupying finely appointed suits of rooms on Sherman street, Chicago, and a corps of twenty-five clerks were kept busy attending to the voluminous business which came into the office.

The scheme was the familiar get-rich-quick dodge, which has wheedled the hard-earned dollars from many a pocket during the past few years. As usual, the bond company promised immense returns to the investors, mentioned prominent banks as the guarantee, and sent alluring letters to all parts of the country. The game was worked quickly and money began to pour in. Then the suspicions of the authorities were aroused, and the banks whose names were mentioned were called upon, only to state that they knew nothing of the company. The police department of the Windy City made a careful investigation and, concluding that the business was illegitimate, issued warrants for the three members of the firm. They became aware of the issuance of these warrants, however, and disappeared, leaving a host of sorrowing creditors wondering as to their whereabouts.

In a private letter to this city concerning the mangnitude of the operations, a former Cincinnatian writes that Gavigan had been dong a land office business, and that from all accounts he carted away a big sum of money when the authorities became suspicious and issued warrants for the members of the concern on the charge of swindling. It is estimated that the amount will reach $500,000. The offices of the firm are deserted and have been attached by Ezra Cook on a judgment for $300.

Both Isbell and Gavigan are well know in this city. Gavigan was at one time owner of the Grand saloon on Longworth street, in partnership with "Chick" Liger, and was employed in local tailoring establishments as cutter.

About two years ago he and Isbell started a bond company, with offices in the Union Trust building, at Fourth and Walnut, promising the usual big returns to investors. After having secured thousands of dollars and fleeced hundreds of people, the authorities became suspicious of their operations, and they were compelled to leave town. They then operated in Covington for a time, with fine offices on Scott street, near Fifth street, and succeeded in obtaining considerable more money. Among their victims were a number of ministers from Lexington, in fact, ministers form a good percentage of their dupes wherever they have worked.

After a few months across the river warrants were issued for them, and they were compelled to leave again.

In Covington he operated the Germania Investment company and absorbed the Germania Guaranty company, of Cincinnati, and got its affairs over into Covington. He was indicted at Lexington for misappropriation of funds, and gave himself up to the authorities in Covington. The indictment still stands against Isbell.

The two—Isbell and Gavigan—then traveling about considerably, operating part of the time in Boston, then going to Chicago, where they seemed to have been more sucessful than ever before.

Gavigan's name was recalled to many a few weeks ago in connection with the mysterious death of May McDonald, who was found dead on the railroad tracks in Cumminsville on Sunday morning, evidently struck by a passing train. Gavigan's first wife was the dead woman's sister. After his wife had died Gavigan paid court to May, and the night before her death she is alleged to have said that she still "had a mortgage on Jim."

About a year ago, however, Gavigan went to Washington C. H., working his familiar game in that city, and there married the daughter of a prominent preacher of Camp Washington. Isbell had also been married in Washington C. H. some time before to a Miss Roberts, connected quite prominently in that place. A few months after the former's marriage the two proceeded to Chicago and there took up with Arthur Wilbur in their latest venture. Wilbur is not known here.

Of a Beau Brumel appearance, Gavigan is regarded as one of the smoothest men in the business. Isbell is a fluent and affable talker, and the two form a twain of sucessful workers.

Friends in this city do not know of their present whereabouts, but it is supposed that they are in the East.

In Chicago complaints against the company came to Chief of Police O'Neill from the board of trade a week ago. The names of prominent firms and banks were being used as references, giving the dupes an idea that the promises of the firm would be fulfilled. After investigation Detective Wooldridge, of Chicago, became convinced that the scheme was illegitimate, and secured the consent of a prominent clergyman, who had been fleeced, to use his name as complainant.

Inquiries poured into the First National and Corn Exchange banks, where the company had agreed to deposit the profits of many of their clients.

In every instance the inquirers were informed that no fund had been received from the concern.

NEGRO SAVES

The Lives of Gen. and Mrs. Buckner.

Louisville, Ky., June 15.—To the bravery of a negro is probably due the lives of Gen. and Mrs. Simon Bolivar Buckner, who were involved in a runaway accident yesterday afternoon. "Jim" Clay observed the runaway, and dashing into the street, grabbed one of the horses by the bit. He held on grimly, falling under the horses' feet as he brought them to a standstill. The trap, as it stopped, struck a wagon and careened. Gen. Buckner hastily extricated himself and then assisted Mrs. Buckner out of the wreckage. Mrs. Buckner presented the negro with two $5 bills.

STEPS ARE TAKEN TO SETTLE SHIPPING WAR.

London, June 15.—The initiative in the settlement of the shipping war, is understood to have been taken by the continental lines, who requested the White Star line to open negotiations with the Cunard line. These negotiations, as cabled to the Associated Press last night, have already commenced and it is suggested that the bases contemplates the recognition of the Cunard company's right to the Hungarian field, while the Cunard probably will agree not to invade the countries hitherto regarded as in the sphere of the continental lines.

SHEIKS IMPRISONED.

Tangier, June 15.—Two sheiks of Beni M'Suar have been imprisoned by the governor of Tangier. This fulfills another of Raisuli's conditions for the release of his captives, Messrs. Perdicaris and Varley. The shieks imprisoned are two of those who helped to treacherously capture Raisuli some time ago.

PITIABLE LIGHT

In Which Mrs. Hannah Elias Appears By Her Story.

Gave Freely to Charity—Expected to Get Into Society.

New York, June 16.—Now that Mrs. Hannah Elias has been acquitted of the charge of blackmailing Millionaire John R. Platt, she seems only too anxious to get some one to talk to about her relations with the aged Lothario.

She tells of her pitiful struggle to obtain an entrance into good society—she, a woman raised from the gutter, a woman with not the slightest vestige of education, without the manners of society, and a negress.

She tells how hard she struggled to overcome these obstacles by disguising her negro features, by employing teachers to instruct her in writing, languages and the ways of society, and giving her a smattering of the literature most popular with fashionable people.

Her most prominent racial characteristic, her hair, she disguised by keeping it cut short and covering it with a wig dresed in the most fashionable style. She gave it out that she was a Creole to account for the color of her skin, and she thought she was fit to enter the most exclusive society in New York.

Her crowning stroke was to purchase a mansion at Asbury Park, the most exclusive district in New York and the negotiations were in progress when the crash came. The poor woman thought that her pitiful little accomplishments and her possession of wealth with all that it can bring would entitle her to an entrance into society. The crash came in time to save her from the worst disappointment of all.

That she has been a vile woman in her day, Mrs. Elias admits readily enough, but she imagines that she has wiped out all that by the sums she has given to charity, and is disappointed that society will not let her start with a clean slate and the money she wheedled out of the millionaire. Her relations with him she does not seem to think to be anything that would warrant the censure of society.

But while she exhibits herself in a pitiable light she unconsciously pictures the millionaire in one even more pitiable. She tells how he declared to her that she was the only one who was ever true to him, defaming the memory of his dead wife to laud a coarse negress, who was vulgarity personified with only a thin veneer of polish, and, if her statement be true, acting like a man who ought to be attended by a competent nurse. Here is her statement:

"In the first place, I am, as you know and as everybody knows, a negress. I am sorry that I am, but it is not my fault. I wanted to be a white woman, but I couldn't be, so I did the next best thing, I tried to conceal my blood and to acquire the ways of polite society. I have done a great deal in that direction and I think I have improved. Let me show you what I have done."

Mrs. Elias took several copy books from a drawer and showed what she had accomplished in penmanship. The books were dated and the writing, which began with a miserable scrawl, ended with specimens that would do credit to any woman of average education.

"I studied French, too," Mrs. Elias continued. To show her proficiency in the tongue she uttered several phrases. "Oh, I studied so hard, and I learned to deport myself as became a woman of refinement, I also studied table manners, and I did all this for my own sake, because I wanted to be as nearly like a white woman as I could. I hate negroes, and I never even wanted them for servants. That's the reason I employed Japanese."

Questioned about her criminal life in Philadelphia, Mrs. Elias wept.

"Please don't ask me about that," she begged, "for I have tried so hard to live it down. I was a bad woman. God knows that is true, but my sins have been washed away. I have atoned for my wicked life by giving to charity. I have given freely and without question to all who have come to me and I never gave less than $5. I have looked up deserving cases. There was a white man whose family was starving because of his drinking. I not only had the father cured of his habit but got him work, and he is a made man today and his family's happy. It cost me thousands, but I didn't care for that. I think my charity has washed out my Philadelphia life.

"Now about Mr. Platt. He loved me, and I believe he still loves me. He would be calling here if it wasn't for his family. They have him in duress and he cannot get away. He often told me he loved me as much as if I were his wife, and he would clasp me in his arms and call me his Queen of Sheba. He said I should be decked out in Oriental style, and he forced money on me.

"Why, he couldn't be stopped from giving it to me, and I never asked him for a cent or used a threat to him in my life. Many times I told him if he couldn't afford to give me so much, or if his presents involved him in any financial trouble, he should not give it to me. I told him I would care just as much for him, and I would have done so, too. But he took me up in his arms and said I was the only one who was true to him, and I should have it all.

"One day he went down in his pocket and pulled out a large roll of bills, tied with a string. There was $15,000 in it, he said, and he handed it to me. 'There, dear,' he said. 'I collected that on a few outstanding notes. Take it and get yourself something nice with it.'

"I told him it was too much, and that he was too liberal, and gave it back to him. I said he could buy me a present, but I did not want so much money then. He threw the money on the floor at my feet and the string broke. An electric fan was going nearby and blew the bills in every direction. He would not pick it up and neither would I.

"I touched a bell and Kato came in with a dustpan and broom. He took the money up in the dustpan and then dumped it in a drawer of my secretary.

"Mr. Platt was deeply interested in the furnishings of the house. I would go out and buy rugs, tapestries and furniture, but he never liked to close the deal until he had seen the things. I never sent a word to his brother Isaac in my life. Those who did that trick were a doctor and a lawyer" (she mentioned their names) "who had already blackmailed me and him out of thousands of dollars, and with their dirty fortunes stowed away, went to Mr. Platt's brother and told him all. The doctor and his wife never let up on us. They would send in medical bills for mythical services, and if they were not paid the doctor's wife would come around and make threats.

"And the lawyer was just as bad. He got $103,000 from me and $24,000 from Mr. Platt. I can't tell ust now what the doctor and his wife got, but they received thousands from me. I paid one bill of $12,000 myself."

MISTAKE MADE BY THE VALET

Handsome Dresses of His Mistress Placed In Wrong Trunk.

New York, June 16.—To find in one of her trunks half a dozen handsome new Paris frocks of which she knows nothing is an experience which falls to the lot of few women, but that is what happened to Mrs. Charles Briggs, of Philadelphia, who with Mr. Briggs and their daughter, arrived on Tuesday on the Kroonland, of the Red Star line.

When Mrs. Briggs' trunks were opened on the pier, the inspector lifted very gingerly from one of them several new Paris "creations" in lace and silk. Then he examined the declaration in his hand.

"Why, those are not mine," exclaimed Mrs. Briggs, and then the wonder was where the frocks came from and to whom they belonged.

A tittle further down the pier were Don Emilio Pardo, Mexican minister to Belgium, and his family, who had arrived on the same steamer on their way to Mexico. Senora Pardo had discovered that a lot of her new dresses were missing and naturally was somewhat distressed. Finally one of the special deputies straightened matters out,

The explanation turned out to be that in Antwerp the Mexican diplomat and his family had stopped the night before sailing at the same hotel in which were Mr. and Mrs. Briggs. Most of the baggage of the parons was stored in a room on the second floor, and Don Emilio sent his valet downstairs to pack some of Senora Pardo's new frocks in one of the trunks belonging to the family.

Now it happened that belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Briggs was a trunk of the same size and appearance, and the servant, not noticing the name, opened it with the key he carried, which happened to fit exactly, placed the dresses inside and left. Neither of the two trunks, it happened, had to be opened again until their arrival here.

SUED BY HIS DOCTOR.

"A doctor here has sued me for $12.50, which I claimed was excessive for a case of cholera morbus," says R. White, of Coachella, Cal. "At the trial he praised his medical skill and medicine. I asked him if it was not Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy he used as I had good reason to believe it was, and he would not say under oath that it was not." No doctor could use a better remedy than this in a case of cholera morbus, it never fails. Sold by all druggists.

EMPRESS' MARSHAL

Explains Donations of Banks to Charity.

Berlin, June 16.—Since the revelations of Privy Chancellor Budde, manager of the Berlin Hypothekan bank, in the trial of the directors of the former Pommeranian Mortgage bank regarding the application of the bank's money as gifts for charitable purposes, to Baron Von Mirbach, the empress' court marshal, various newspapers have kept up a war of criticism upon the court marshal, demanding that he testify and say whether the title of "bankers to her majesty" was given to the Pommeranian bank and personal titles to the directors in return for these gifts. Baron Von Mirbach, yesterday, appeared before the court and asked for permission to testify. He said the amount received for his societies was $43.50, but the money was received on the explicit assurance of the directors that it was from their personal accounts. The directors, further, at their own instance, opened an account of $87,500 for Baron Von Mirbach's societies, of which only $6250 was collected, because, when the troubles of the Pommeranian bank soon afterwards began, Baron Von Mirbach insisted on closing the account without collecting the rest. No conditions were attached to the gifts.

It was the kind of baseball that made the White Sox famous. Excitement? Why the excitement was sticking out in chunks. It was baseball better than even the fathers of the game knew it. Ten innings of it with a finish that should make the White Sox ashamed to look an honest team in the face. They are robbers. They haven't the common decency to stay beaten when the other team has them down and out. In that last inning yesterday Van Praagh's bunch was skinned, scalped, put to the cheer. But they didn't know it and started after Mr. Hillock in a manner that made that young gentleman dream of home and mother. Got six clean hits off him in succession. That's what they did, and won with a couple of outs to spare. It was lovely, but it was a shame to rob the visitors in that manner.

Down in the hotel last evening Mr. Hillock was seated with his head in his hands.

"Am I awake Perry?" he asked in a feeble voice.

"Yes, my boy, you're awake now," said the Fargo captain kindly.

"Tell me about it, Perry. Tell me about that last inning."

"Not now, my boy. Wait until you are a little stronger."

"I can bear it, Perry. I can bear it now."

"Well, my boy, Jack Corrigan started the slaughter. He hit safely and then Newton Rammeroat Randall got a double. Traeger threw Corrigan out at third and I had hopes for you. But it was sad, boy—very sad. Quillan scored, Lager and Hughes got hits and Zink scored, and then you became unconscious and we carried you here. Do you feel better now? Will you be able to go home tonight? Poor boy and you so young."

King Perry was the hero of yesterday's struggle. After disgusting the crowd on the first day with his rowdy conduct, he got down to business yesterday and played baseball, and he was the life of the team. In the seventh inning with the score 3 to nothing against his men, he lammed out what was probably the longest hit ever made on the league grounds. It hit the top boards on the deep center field fence, but sharp fielding prevented him from getting more than two bases on it. He went to third on Traeger's long outfield fly and came home on an error by the Boy-with-the-auburn-hair, who was playing second base.

In the ninth, after Rose had been hit, Perry got a clean single and Edwards was given four bad ones. With the bases in this populous condition Furlong didn't do a thing but rap out a saucy single that let in two runs and the score was tied. Duluth could do nothing in the last half, but went out one-two-three.

In the tenth the Indians came up determined to win one of the series. Demontreville was given a base on balls by Gehring, who was commencing to let up after pitching the prettiest kind of ball for eight innings. He got to third on Lynch's out and Rose's long fly and then Perry was Johnny-on-the-spot with another clean hit. Then Mr. Traeger tried to emulate his chief's example by slamming out a two-bagger to deep center. Perry came home, and it looked as if the stuff was off.

And it would have been for any team but the White Sox. All the good hitters were up, and they all had their swat sticks with them. When Corrigan rapped out a safe one, the fans who had started to leave, sat down. Randall as usual could be relied on, and hit out a beautiful double. Quick work on the part of the outfield caught Corrigan at third, and the fans groaned, but the groan did not get a good start before Lee Quillan swatted the bulb for a single, scoring Randall, and the fans rose in a body. Young Mr. Hillock looked pale around the gills about this time. Big Bill Zink nearly tore the second base from its fastenings with a grass-cutting drive and Quillan came home with the run that tied the score. But the White Sox weren't content with that. They meant to win the game right there, and singles by Lagger and Hughes did the trick with only one man out.

Three straights from the Indians. They were reported to be howling Indians from the plains of North Dakota seeking the scalps of Van's pennant-pursuers, and they turned out to be mild, tame reservation Indians perfectly harmless when properly handled. They left Duluth last night so tame that a child might drive them, perfectly safe and city-broke. Even the terrible Perry, the umpire tamer, was soft-spoken and crawled into his little cot in the Pullman with a sigh of relief as the train clicked over the switches in the yard on its way to Grand Forks, where umpires are less formidable than Gatewood was yesterday, and where a team knows enough to stay beaten when it has been knocked down and trampled over. The score:

MADE THREE STRAIGHT.

Crookston Takes Final of Series at Superior.

Camerons' Colts spent so much time yesterday dreaming of how they were going to wallop Duluth that they forgot to win the last game of the Crookston series, and let the Woodpeckers walk away with three straights, much to the disgust of the fans. Errors did it; errors and dumb playing.

Three Crooks crossed the rosy rubber in the first inning and three more in the second, and then Elken retired in favor of Shaw. The Demon was in fine form and held the Crooks down to one run in the remainder of the game, but it was too late. Martin also took a brace after the third inning, and Cameron's bunch never got within hailing distance of the plate during the remainder of the game. Egan was again the greatest offender in the field with a couple of bad errors marked up against him. It was a sad day for the fans when their favorites fell down so badly, but their hopes are placed in today's game with the White Sox. They remember the old adage, "Everybody beats Superior, and Superior beats Duluth." The score:

MAKE IT SIX STRAIGHT.

Tigers Take Another From Poor Old Winnipeg.

Grand Forks, N. D., June 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The last game of the series was played here today with Winnipeg. The Tigers won by a score of 5 to 1, making the sixth straight for the Tigers.

"Giant" Morton was on the slab for the Tigers and did good work. He allowed five little hits all singles, and six of the Maroons were unable to find him. Three errors and a pass account for the three scores in the first inning by the Tigers. Two men were out, and Bemis missed a nice little fly. While the ball was failing two men crossed the plate. Again in the third inning, Bemis forced in a run by issuing a pass with the bases full. The Tigers took their last score in the eighth on an error by Benson.

Cheek was hurt by a foul tip and Brown was put in to catch in the seventh inning. O'Brien was sent to center field. Dunn went to first, and Hanrahan went to second.

In the third there was trouble over what looked like a double. An infield fly was sent to Kelly, he got it on a pick-up and sent it down to first. Spooner doubled it back again to second, but Nagel did not try to run. He stayed at first. Kelly tried to modify the decision, but failed to make the umpire see it his way.

Sharnweber treated the fans to a double in the fourth inning. Clark sent him a liner and he caught it and stepped on the second corner from which he delivered the ball to Brown before Clark could make the initial sack. The score:

Rev. W. J. Moody Says Jamaica Has No Race Problem.

Ninety-Eight Per Cent Negroes—Compares It With South.

"Jamaica is not troubled with a negro problem in spite of the fact that about 98 per cent of the population is colored," said Rev. W. J. Moody, of Brainerd, who spoke last evening at St. Paul's Episcopal church at the evening session of the ninth convocation of the Episcopal diocese of Duluth.

Mr. Moody spent four years in the island of Jamaica doing missionary work among the native colored people, and in a very interesting address at St. Paul's church last evening he told something of his work there.

"The church in Jamaica is the most influential body on the island, and has a very firm hold upon the negro population. It has been there since Cromwell turned out the Spaniards. It was disestablished in 1870, and has increased more rapidly since then than when it was the established church. It has now 40,000 negro communicants out of a total population of 500,000. This is nearly one-tenth of the population of the whole island, and speaks well for the church, when you consider the other denominations that have churches there, and the fact that there are many who attend the church who are not communicants.

"Jamaica is at a great disadvantage in handling its negroes, from the fact that there was not the upheaval caused by the war. The white Southern people were discredited in the eyes of the negro by the war. To realize what that means one must understand the negro. The great majority of them do not understand a sign of weakness, and respect and stand mercy. They look upon mercy as bow only to the men who are their masters. When the Southern whites were defeated in the war, the negroes refused to longer bow to them. In Jamaica it is different. Every white man down there is an unofficial justice of the peace. When two negroes have a dispute, they go to a white man to have it settled, and his word is law with them.

"The crimes of the negroes in the Southern states and the lynchings are unknown on the island of Jamaica.

"It is true that the negroes in Jamaica are great thieves, in a petty way. They seldom steal money, or sugar, coffee or cocoa, the three staple crops of the island, but they look upon vegetables and fruit as their lawful perquisities. The idea is a relic of slave days, when the negro was free to take what vegetables he wanted as long as he left enough for his master. He was never allowed to take the things that were sold for money, but the crops that were raised to be consumed on the place were always at his disposal, and he took what he wanted. It is the same way today, and we were frequently compelled to preach sermons on the evils of "taking" as the negro calls the theft of fruit or vegetables.

"It is surprising what a hold the church has on these men, and how freely they contribute to its support. One congregation of 400 members raised a collection of $100 on one occasion. When you consider that the average wage of men there is twenty-five cents per day and of women fifteen cents, you will realize what this sum means to them. It meant a day's wages for each person in the congregation.

"Through Christianity and the aid of the church the negro is making wonderful progress in Jamaica. There are negro judges there who have been admited to the English bar. Some of the largest employers of labor on the island are negroes, and the number of small negro farmers owning a few acres of land is surprising. The bishop of Sierra Leone in Africa once visited the island, and he told me that the progress made by the Jamaica negroes as compared with those in Sierra Leone was amazing. He said that the work of three or four centuries appeared to have been compressed into one."

Rev. A. R. Mitchell, of Hallock, also made a very brief address, telling in an interesting manner of an evangelistic trip taken into the northern part of the state for the purpose of organizing Sunday schools and guilds among the pioneer settlers.

Missionary meetings were held in the other Episcopal churches of the city.

SUFFERINGS END.

Mrs. Charles L. Codding Dies After Long Illness.

Mrs. Katherine W. Codding, wife of Dr. Charles L. Codding, died early this morning after a lingering illness extending over a period of several years.

Mrs. Codding was the daughter of the late Maj. Guy Wells, who was prominently identified with the early history of Duluth. She was married to Dr. Codding about fifteen years ago. Her husband and one son, Albert, aged 14 years, survive her.

Mrs. Codding had a large circle of friends in Duluth, who will learn of her not unexpected death with the keenest sorrow.

The funeral will be held from the residence at 23 East Third street, tomorrow morning, at 10 o'clock.

NEW MAIL BOXES.

A number of new mail boxes, larger than the old, have been placed along Superior street. The people do not appear to understand their exact purpose, and much trouble results to the mail carriers as a result. Many persons take them for boxes in which papers are to be mailed, and when they are opened by the postoffice men, the boxes are frequently found to be stuffed full of newspapers. Another trouble is that many people try to put their letters in lengthwise of the envelope, when only way a letter can be dropped in the box, without twisting it up, is sideways.

GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE.

Owatonna, Minn., June 16.—Joe Lewis pleaded guilty yesterday. He murdered Louis Moberg in a Rock Island box car last April. A life sentence was imposed on him.

CURES LOSS OF APPETITE.

Clears the Complexion and Restores the Health—Rea Bros.' Cascarin.

Cure after all others have failed is the result of experience with this wonderful remedy. Diseases of the liver, stomach, kidneys and bowels are usually very pronounced in their manifestations; unpronounced symptoms the head aches; the back grows weaker and more painful; the patient becomes debilitated; the eye duller and more lifeless; the inability to sleep at night is more pronounced than ever; constipation, catarrh of the stomach, dyspepsia, inability to digest food, loss of appetite and all the distressing symptoms of diseased or inactive stomach and bowels, liver and kidneys become more aggravated and the sufferer feels more wretched and tired of existence than ever. You may take remedies and medicines which will relieve, perhaps for a short time, but you cannot get rid of the trouble unless you effect the cure of what causes it. Rea Bros.' Cascarin will do this, and when this is done you cannot be a sufferer from these troubles, because the cause of such ssuffering is removed. At all druggists, 50c a bottle.

Either course will be sailed twice around and all buoys will be distinguished by red flags.

At 2:20 p. m. the course to be sailed will be announced by firing of cannon. One gun will signify course No. 1 and two guns course No. 2.

Other signals are as follows: Preparatory signal for all boats, 2:30 p. m., three guns; warning signal, Classes A and B, 2:40 p. m., two guns; starting signal, Classes A and B, 2:45 p. m., one gun; warning signal, Classes C and D, 2:55 p. m., two guns; starting signal, Classes C and D, 3 p. m., one gun.

The starting time of a yacht crossing the line after the lapse of three minutes from the starting signal will be taken as if she crossed exactly three minutes after the signal. No yacht shall be considered as starting in a race unless she has crossed the line within fifteen minutes after the starting signal for her class.

A classification of boats and numbers assigned will be posted on the bulletin board at the club house and members are urged to provide themselves with the uniform "D. Y. C." cap.

GOVERNOR SHOT

General Bobrikoff, of Finland, Wounded By Lawyer.

Assassin a Member of the Finnish Patriotic Party.

St. Petersburg, June 16.—Gen. Bobrikoff, governor general of Finland, was shot and mortally wounded this morning at the entrance to the Finnish senate at Helsingfors.

The assassin, a man named Schaumann, a son of Senator Schaumann, immediately committed suicide. Bobrikoff was shot in the stomach and neck. He is being brought to St. Petersburg in a dying condition. The attack is ascribed to Finnish patriotism. Schaumann is believed to be a member of what is known as the Finnish patriotic party.

A private message from Helsingfors says Governor Bobrikoff was taken to a hospital at Helsingfors. Schaumann was a lawyer.

Gen. Count Bobrikoff, who was appointed governor general of Finland in 1899, made himself very unpopular by his severe measures against the press of Finland and the stern manner in which he followed out the policy of Russia toward the Finns. This led to serious rioting at Helsingfors in 1902, which was suppressed by Cossacks. The last recorded act of Gen. Bobrikoff was in March of this year, when he issued a proclamation forbidding the people to darken their windows at "unusual hours."

Peope who chose to go to bed before 10 o'clock at night were subject to heavy fines. This step was due to the neglect of the Finns to illuminate their houses in honor of the beginning of the war with Japan.

NORWAY'S BIG DAY

Why This Nationality Celebrates the Seventeenth of May.

It was a Norwegian Who First Discovered America.

In the celebration of Norway's independence day at Calumet, Mich., Mr. Tunen spoke in English on "The Norwegian in America." He said:

"Mr. Charman, Ladies and Gentlemen: It is not at all surprising that the Norwegian should emigrate to America. Nor is it at all surprizing that he so readily adapts himself to conditions here and makes the ideal American citizen.

"In the first place, it was a Norwegian who first discovered this country and he, therefore, seems to have an inherent right to it by virtue of this discovery and it is natural, then, that he should come here and live. In the second place the Norwegian receives as a birth gift a love for those very principles upon which is founded this great country of ours. That 'all men are born equal' is a principle which is sacred gospel to the Norwegian.

"But the opportunities for improving himself at home are lacking and he therefore leaves home to better himself elsewhere, for he is ever ambitious, ever on the alert for a chance to better himself. And what is more natural then, than that he should come here? What more natural then, than that he should come here? What more natural than that he should be attracted to this country.

"When he leaves Norway he does so with a purpose. He knows he leaves it forever. He knows that henceforth his interests, his ambition, his energies must all be centered in the interests of his adoptive country.

"Mother Norway wept to see her sons and daughters leave her in the prime of their life, to spend their energies and devote their talents in and for the benefit of a foreign country. She needed them. The very ones that were leaving her were the ones she needed the most and it filled her heart with regret and sorrow to see them go away.

"But lo, the tears of sorrow were soon mingled with tears of joy, as the report came back from America of what her children had accomplished. True to the principles she had instilled, they had come here and done honor to themselves and to Mother Norway.

"And America needed the Norwegian. A country governed by the people, needed just such men who were imbued with some patriotic spirit—who loved the principles upon which this government was founded.

"It is the man who loves his native land that makes the best American. It is the man who dearly loves his own country and leaves it with regret and never forgets it, that makes the valuable citizen. For it is the very love for his fatherland that inspires love for his adoptive country.

"Is there a man in soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said:
'This is my land, my native land.'

"Without love for your own country, there is no love for any other; and if such a one there be who has never loved his country, he is the very one we ask to stay away from our shores.

"The Norwegian is an American at heart the moment he steps upon American soil. As soon as he has been here the time required by law, he takes out his papers and becomes legally an American citizen. He adopts himself readily to the new conditions. He is progressive and ambitious. He very soon learns the language, thus qualifying himself for the better understanding of the affairs of the country of his choice and for an intelligent discharge of his duties as a citizen.

"The history of the early immigrants from Norway, reads somewhat like the history of any immigrant. It is the same story of hardship, privation and sacrifices. But take into consideration that these people were unfamiliar with the English language, that they had come to a country where everything was new to them and the obstacles they had to overcome seem almost insurmountable.

"They started in out there on the prairies with an indomitable will, a fixed determination. They were hard working, economical, and the ultimate result of their work—glorious success.

"As you travel through the West today, the result is evident. In the states of Minnesota, the Dakotas, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois, where the Norwegians are found in the greater numbers, you will find them as prosperous farmers settled on large, well-kept farms; or as prosperous merchants.

"But not only as a farmer and as a merchant has he made a success and made his influence felt. He has made his mark on every branch of industry. As a handicraftsman he excels. He makes the best mechanic and the best carpenter. This is owing no doubt to the thorough training he receives at home. There he must serve an apprenticeship of from five to seven years to master every detail of the work and this serves him in good stead here, where everything is specialized.

"As a sailor he has no equal anywhere. When the 'Reliance,' during the race against 'Shamrock III,' so admirably defended the cup and succeeded in retaining it for an indefinite period, that victory was a complete Norwegian victory; for out of the forty-five that composed the crew, one was a Scotsman, two were Swedes, one a Dane, and forty-one were Norwegians. The captain was Scottish and the two mates were Norwegians. Sir Thomas Lipton remarked in all sincerity: 'The smartest sailors I ever saw in my life sailed the "Reliance."'

"As a workman and as a citizen the Norwegian has won for himself an enviable reputation. He is true and loyal to a trust and can always be relied upon to do his duty.

"But has he succeeded in the different branches of industry, his very success has carried him into other fields of labor. The American people are not slow in recognizing and rewarding ambition and energy. They are glad to see anyone get ahead and do all in their power to encourage them.

"The Norwegian entered the political arena and displaying his ability, he advanced rapidly until today we find him represented in nearly every office that is within the power of the American people to give. You will find him serving in every capacity, from the policeman walking his beat up to the senator in the United States senate. And we point with pride to the fact that in every and any capacity in which he serves his government, he serves it faithfully. One name serves this fact—that of Knute Nelson; a man who has won for himself a national—aye, an international—reputation; a man who has rendered his country valuable services.

"To the early immigrants from Norway there arose the question—which arises in every new-founded settlement—the question of erecting a church; or, a meeting place where they might worship in the same manner they had been used to at home. The Norwegians built their churches throughout their settlements and worshipped in their own language.

"The immigration increased, the number of the churches grew and what is the result? We have in America today, according to statistics, about 1,300,000 Norwegians. They have 1424 churches where services are held in the Norwegian language. We must here take into consideration that a great number of these Norwegians affiliated themselves with American churches.

"At first they called their ministers to serve them from Norway but after a time they felt the need of educating their ministers here in this country. They felt that to do effective work among the Norwegians here, the minister ought to receive his education here, where he was to do his life work, so that he might be familiar with the ways and the system of doing things. Out of this desire soon grew the plan to build a school for this purpose—to educate men for the ministry.

"The plan was a successful one. Today we have thirty-four colleges with an aggregate attendance of about 4000 every year. While these colleges still have the main purpose for which they were started in view, yet they include in their curriculum all the studies that are taught at the American colleges and they have a very high standing.

"One must not think that these schools are narrow. Though they are all sectarian, and though their main purpose is to educate men for the ministry, yet out of these schools have come, not only ministers of the gospel, but lawyers, doctors, journalists and businessmen.

"Nor do they confine themselves to teach in the Norwegian language, but English is generally given the preference when such is needed.

"Besides this we have eleven Norwegians holding chairs in the different state universities and about 100 teaching in the different American colleges and high schools.

"In the literary field the Norwegian has also put his stamp. We have today seventy-three Norwegian publications in America. This naturally includes every paper—religious as well as political newspapers. One notable fact is, we have here in America the largest daily paper printed in the Norwegian language.

"This, of course, must be attributed to the fact that, while in Norway there are so many dailies, representing the different political parties and subscribed to only by members of such parties, here 'Skandinaven' (the name of the paper) is more of a representative for the Scandinavians in this country and is read both by Danes and Norwegians.

"Then we have another large daily paper in Chicago which is published by a Norwegian—The Chicago Daily News—published by Victor M. Lawson.

"Authors we have also, some of whom have now a name and reputation. Perhaps the two best known writers are the late Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen and R. B. Anderson. Mr. Boyesen was a prolific writer. Besides writing fiction and poetry, he was an essayist of note and contributed to all the leading magazines in the country.

"Mr. Anderson, who also served as a minister to Denmark under Cleveland, has given us several books, studies in Norse mythology and also one on the discovery of America by the Norwegians.

"In the world of art and music the Norwegians have worthy representatives. We have sculptors of note, also painters and musicians. One of the prominent ladies of the Grau Grand Opera company this last season was a Norwegian.

"Of charitable institutions which derive their support from the Norwegians, we have eleven hospitals, eight children's homes, three sailors' homes and three homes for the aged.

"If we take into consideration that all this has been accomplished within the last sixty-five years, the results must be admitted, are nothing short of marvelous. The progress he has made has been rapid. His influence has always been for the best welfare of his adoptive country. He has displayed the possession of the qualities that are essential for the upbuilding of a government like ours.

"In all walks of life he has proven himself to be true, loyal and peaceful and he has won the admiration of the American people. A good Norwegian, he is a good American, never shirking his duty no matter how hard.

"When Abraham Lincoln called for volunteers to come to the rescue of the Union, the Norwegian stepped forth and said: 'Here am I, send me.' He fought for his country and laid down his life that the integrity of this union might be preserved.

"He has sworn allegiance to the American constitution and he has sealed that oath with his blood. No danger that he will prove disloyal!

"Tonight we point with pride to what those who have gone before us have accomplished. We glory in their achievements. But let us not forget that our country needs us as much today as she did our people years ao.

"We are citizens of the foremost republic in the world. We enjoy the distinct honor of being part of the government of this great republic. Let us not forget that, upon us as citizens, rests the responsibility of guiding the ship of state safely through the many storms which attack her time and again. That, inasmuch as ours is a government by, of and for, the people, we are directly in charge and must shoulder the responsibility for its maintenance. The solution o fthe many difficult problems which today confronts the American people, rests with each and every one of us.

"Upon us depends now as much as it ever did upon our forefathers, whether this our government shall prove a success. It is not only in time of war that our loyalty is shown. There is as much need of bravery and courage in the peaceful times as in war.

"Our country needs our services today in working our the many problems and in answering intelligently the many puzzling questions which time and again come up for consideration; and often it depends upon the treatment these questions receive whether a crisis shall be averted.

"When all has been said of the Norwegian in America, perhaps he has not done any more than his duty. But after all, that is all that can be said of any one. No matter how much we do, we can never do more than our duty. For our country demands of us that we should do everything within our power for it. The greater your ability, the greater the expectation. But to do your duty with a will, with love for the work and love for your country, there is the secret.

"And this is the Norwegian in America. Never shirking his duty, always doing his utmost for his country, ever and always keeping in view its welfare.

"If occasionally—like tonight—they come together to talk over old times and sing the old songs—to let their thoughts revert back to the fatherland do not begrudge them the pleasure. If, on occasion of this kind, he sings

'Yes, we love with fond devotion
Norway's mountain domes,
Rising highward o'er the ocean,
With its thousand homes.'

He sings equally fervently, out of the fullness of a patriotic heart

"'My native country thee.'"

WHEAT IS LOWER

Chicago Weaker Than Other Markets Throughout the Season.

Millers Buying Wheat In the Northwest—Flax Lower.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 16.—The Northwestern markets were again strong today as compared with Chicago, continuing so all morning. The July option in Duluth closed ⅜c lower, in Minneapolis ¼c lower and in Chicago ¾c lower, and at times during the morning the weakness in Chicago was more pronounced than that. In the Northwest mills are buying considerable wheat and are sustaining the price of July by so doing. There is but little cash demand other than that which comes from them. Eastern buyers make offers now and them for small lots, but the demand from them is fitful and not to be depended upon for any large amount. Abroad there is no strength and Liverpool again closed lower, being ½d. Berlin was ¼c lower, Buda Pest 3c lower and Paris unchanged to ¼c higher.

Car receipts of wheat at Duluth were 29 against 51 last year, and at Minneapolis 190 against 187 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 219 against 238 last year. Chicago received 37 against 26 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 217,000 bus, last year 230,000 bus. Shipments 150,000 bus, last year 124,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 140,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ½@¾d higher. July corn in the Chicago market closed a shade higher. July oats closed ⅛c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 429,000 bus., last year 463,000 bus. Shipments 608,000 bus., last year, 569,000 bus. Clearances were 23,000 bus.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was dull. July opened ¼c lower at 93⅝c, advanced to 94¼c at 9:45, fell to 94c at 10:50, and then fell to 93⅝c at 12:30. The close was at 93¾c, a loss of ¾. The September option fell ⅝c to 80⅛c.

Cash offerings are slow and prices today were a little weaker, being quoted at July price to ¼c over.

Flax was a little more active, especially in the October option. The July option sold ½c up to $1.10¼ and then reacted to $1.09¾ at which it closed. This was a loss of ¼c and other options closed with the same loss.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Bearish Sentiment Prevailed In the Wheat Pit.

Chicago, June 16.—Liberal receipts in the Northwest, lower cables and excellent weather conditions caused bearish sentiment in the wheat pit today. The greatest weakness was in the September delivery which showed a loss of nearly a cent. July opened ⅛c to ¾c lower at 84⅝c to 84¾c, and on covering by shorts advanced to 85¼@85⅜c. Minneapolis and Duluth-Minneapolis reported receipts of 255 cars against 145 cars last week and 264 cars a year ago.

The market became decidedly weak during the latter part of the session. News of the day was largely of a bearish character and the market received little support. A reported increase of about 10 per cent in Canadian acreage and a perfect weather conditions in the Northwest were late bear factors. After selling down to 84c, July closed at 84¼c, a net decline of ¾c from yesterday's final figures.

Sentiment in the corn pit was firm under the influence of light receipts and bullish crop reports. There was a good demand from commission houses, but offerings were light. The opening was a trifle easier in sympathy with wheat. July being unchanged to ¼c lower at 48¾c to 49c. The price advanced to 49¼c. Local receipts were 260 cars, with 40 of contract grade.

In spite of weakness of wheat, the market held firm throughout the entire session. Light estimates for tomorrow had a supporting influence. July closed a shade higher than last night at 48¾@48⅞c.

Oats were steady on moderate receipts. A private crop report was bearish, showing favorable progress of the new crop. July opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 39⅝c to 39½c, and held within the opening range. Local receipts were 69 cars.

An active demand from shorts was the cause of considerable strength in provisions. A big decrease in hog receipts was the principal bull factor. September pork opened 15c up at $12.80 and sold up to $12.85. September lard was up 5c to 12½c at $6.96 to $7.02½ and held at the high point. Ribs opened 10c to 15c higher at $7.45 to $7.50.

Close: Wheat—July, 84¼c; old, 85c; September, 79¾c; old, 81⅜c; December, 79½c. Corn—June, 48c; July, 48¾@48⅞c; September, 49½c; December, 44⅜c; May, 48⅝@48¾c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—It showed some strength early on the strength in corn, but the fine weather and poor demand induced liquidation and the tone became heavy and the closing was not strong. Liverpool showed weakness early, but rallied some on the more unfavorable report of the Russian minister of agriculture. There is no improvement in the flour situation, and it is wholly unsatisfactory. The action of the market is distinctly heavy and on existing conditions we see very little to change it. Nobody sells wheat short with confidence and most of the offers in speculation are devoted to sustaining the price. We look for a further material decline ultimately, but think it will be brought about not by the speculative seller, but by the seller of cash wheat.

Corn—It showed a little more improvement than usual early in the day, but lost it on weakness in wheat. It is on the whole a rather firm market. There is nothing very unfavorable in crop prospects and nothing urgent in the cash situation. The weather is cool, but not hurting anything, and the immediate supply is fully equal to immediate wants. The speculative buying is, however, a little more concentrated than the selling and receipts offering at this time are small. It still looks to us like a scalping market for the time being.

Oats—The market is steady and undertone rather firm on small volume of business. July oats still have the support and endorsement of a legitimate and healthy cash situation. Receipts are moderate and the demand equal to the supply. We are inclined to think the buying of the next crop futures in oats is better than the selling and the chances are it will win.

B. E. Baker, Chicago, grain market letter: Wheat—The market opened strong under the influence of the report of sales made for export the day before, along with the generally oversold condition of the market. As explained later, the foreign business that caused the bulge Wednesday afternoon and the strength at the opening today composed all that had been done for a week. Crop reports were all rose-colored, both Maryland and Missouri reporting that harvesting would be general next week, and that the quality of the wheat promised to be fine. Winnipeg wires: "The secretary of the Grain Dealers' association estimates the acreage sown as 9½ per cent larger than a year ago.", Northwestern reports regarding the crop conditions were all satisfactory. The output of flour at Minneapolis last week was 46,000 barrels larger than the previous week, but 4000 barrels smaller than the corresponding week a year ago. Cash demand is poor. There were some merger reports in regard to wheat in Russia, Roumania and Hungary, but home markets did not reflect them. In view of the light stocks of contract wheat, we advise again further short sales of old July, and suggest taking profits and reselling for September at the difference. Estimates for tomorrow, 23 cars.

F. P. Frazier, Chicago: "I have just had a talk with a representative of the American Cereal company, which manufactures more oats into oatmeal than anyone else in this country, and who is very large capital. They have had several men out in the country in the last week, going all through the surplus oat states and they find the crop in very good condition. They also find a large increase in acreage over last year. My belief is that the government report last year was 100,000,000 bus too high and this year it is 100,000,000 bus too low and no one can make me believe that if we have average weather from this time on but what we will raise more oats in this country than we need and the surplus will have to go for export, and if it does it cannot be done at the price that our September oats are selling at, as we never have exported oats from this country freely unless the price is in the twenties."

• • •

Cincinnati Price Current: Wheat progressing favorably. Improving tendency in east and southeast Kansas. Lowlands damaged some and too wet for harvest southwest; elsewhere conditions maintained. Corn slow growth but well worked. Stand fairly good. Oats progressing favorably, good average.

INTEREST INCREASING.

Sacrifice Sale at M. S. Burrows Draws Big Crowd.

People are just beginning to realize the magnitude of the bargains offered at the sacrifice sale now in progress at M. S. Burrows', and yesterday proved the busiest day since the sale began. Many are taking advantage of the immense savings in all departments to make their purchases of clothing, underwear and shoes, for present and future needs. The price cutting also takes in all the trunks and satchels in the store, and offers a splendid opportunity to those who meditate a traveling trip. Though this sale means a tremendous loss to Mr. Burrows, he is forced to take it.

SEWED UP HEART.

Boy Who Shot Himself May Recover.

Chicago, June 16.—Edward Peltz, aged 15 years, attempted to commit suicide by firing a bullet into his heart while despondent over loss of employment. With death momentarily impending Dr. Carl Wagner, of St. Joseph's hospital placed six stitches in the bullet torn heart, effectually stopping the hemorrhage. The patient's condition is said to warrant belief that he will recover. The bullet pierced the lungs and passed through the heart and was found in the thoracic cavity and removed.

FIRMNESS RULED

In Stock Market, With Exception of the Pacifics.

Heavy Speculation Early In Southern and Union Pacific.

New York, June 16.—Opening prices in the stock market today showed some gains and losses quite equally distributed, the market apparently waiting on the action of the Pacifics. There were ten thousand shares of Southern Pacific thrown on the market and sold simultaneously at 45 and 45⅝, compared with 46 last night. There were 10,600 shares of Union Pacific sold at a decline of ⅜ with an immediate recovery.

Extensive realizing in Union Pacific lowered it ⅞. Southern Pacific on the other hand was supported. Elsewhere prices sagged, but recovered to the best when Union Pacific crossed 87 again. Virginia-Carolina Chemical declined a point. Trading was sluggish and individual transactoins were small outside of Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

A recovery in Southern Pacific and Union Pacific in company induced a rise to a fraction over last night in the general market. Union Pacific got ⅛ over last night and Southern Pacific ¼. Consolidated Gas rose 3 and reacted 1. Northwestern preferred ex-dividend gained 2½. Kansas & Texas preferred 1½ and Baltimore & Ohio a point. The market became dull on the advance. Bonds were firm.

Consolidated Gas was bought freely again after 12 o'clock and rose to 193½. D. & H. and Iowa Central also ruled a point higher. The general list was without special change.

The market was without animation during the late afternoon and there was no perceptible movement. The flattening out of the heavy speculation later in Union Pacific and Southern Pacific prevented scalping operations by the trading element.

Prices stiffened, carrying Missouri Pacific 1⅛ over last night and Rocking Valley ⅞. This movement was short-lived and there was a relapse of a fraction. Toledo, St. L. & W. lost 1¼. The closing was dull and easy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Southern Pacific was weak at the start but it was well taken and the loss was regained. The sober second thought onthe increase in stock seems to be as we suggested yesterday. It is so far unofficial and the details may not be so bad when they come. The rest of the market was as heretofore. Good dividend paying stocks are being gradually picked up. Five per cent investments and better in this class of securities cannot but attract to the great mass of unemployed money. The Southern Pacific matter has given the market a little shock and a pause, but a market which withstood the effects of Eastern war, enormous gold exports and the early unfavorable crop prospects would hardly be permanently and unfavorably affected by this comparatively local item. We advise the purchase of stocks.

• • •

Waldorf to H. E. Gooch & Co.: Coming upon the market like a thunderclap the announcement that Southern Pacific will authorize $100,000,000 preferred stock has thrown the bulls into confusion. Brokers who were command respect are of the opinion that while this news arrived at an unfortunate time it will not exert a lasting influence. Its effect on Southern Pacific, it is believed, will be to remove these shares for the present entirely from the list of stocks which have been regarded as likely candidates for a higher level of prices. Its influence on good dividend paying stocks is expected to be short-lived. Comment is made that banking interests behind Union Pacific and Southern Pacific properties would not have made public their plan for financing have made the latter's indebtedness had they not considered the financial situation vastly improved. Hence the theory of observant critics that liquidation being improbable the market will soon get a renewed advance and that it will sympathize with the strength of Union Pacific rather than with the weakness in Southern Pacific.

• • •

Coe Commission company: The stock market opened rather irregular this morning, dominated by the conflicted opinions regarding the Southern Pacific plan to finance the floating debt of the company. The general theory is that the plan is a bull argument on Union Pacific and bear influence on Southern Pacific, as dividends on the latter are indefinitely deferred. Southern Pacific opened from ⅜ to a full point below yesterday's close, but recovered all the early declines before noon. The rest of the market has ruled firm. Graners and traction stocks are all fractionally higher. We do not believe there is any money to be made on the bear side of the stock market.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 16.—The cotton market opened quiet at an advance of 6 points to a decline of 5 points. The advances were on the near positions, caused by covering as a result of better cables, while the later positions were deposed by the continued excellent weather and crop reports. Business was quiet immediately following the call, but after prices had sagged off a few points from the opening figure they were rallied by moderate covering and some buying by spot houses with July selling up from 11.24 to 11.40, while August advanced to 10.97. The market at the end of the first hour was steady at an advance of about 2 to 5 points.

Cotton spot closed dull, 10 points lower. Middling uplands, 12.00; middling gulf, 12.25. Sales 20 bales. Futures closed barely steady. June, 11.18; July, 11.28; August, 10.86; September, 9.99; October, 9.67; November, 9.53; December, 9.58; January, 9.64.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The bearish feeling aroused by the proposed issue of Southern Pacific securities in the market a heavy strain today and the bears met another defeat. This was the crucial test and the advance of prices today proves that the temper of speculation and investment has changed, and if the leading financial interests continue to act in the market as they have today, prices will go steadily higher. Copper is stronger and there is better buying of some of the coppers.

NIPPED IN BUD

Was an Elopement at Sandy River.

Bemidji, Minn., June 16.—William Curtis, quite well known in this city, and recently employed as a cook at one of the camps on the Sandy river, was the principle in an episode of the Hiawatha stripe last week, which got him in all sorts of trouble, caused his arrest and necessitated his paying a fine and a neat sum in damages to an outraged Red Lake Indian husband.

Curtis planned an elopement with Mrs. J. W. Mealey. The pair had been coresponding for some time and have been quite intimate, although their intimacy did not arouse any suspicion. The intrigue extends over sevarl years, but the latest developments came as a great surprise to the acquaintances of both parties.

Mrs. Mealey's trunk had been removed to the home of a neighbor and the pair had made all arrangements for flight when their intentions became known and Curtis was arrested. He was fined by Judge Daniels and paid a neat sum of damages to the outraged husband. Curtis has left the country.

HULL ONLY IS LOST

Remains of Wrecked Tug Niagara Are Brought to Duluth.

Machinery and Everything But Hull Saved—Other News.

All that remains of the ill-fated tug Niagara, which was wrecked on Knife Island on Saturday evening, June 4, arrived in the local harbor today and was placed on the dock of Whitney Bros., contractors, Superior, who were awarded the contract for saving what was left of the tug by the owner, Frank Perry, a resident of Sault Ste. Marie. Everything about the tug, including boiler, engine, machinery and iron and steel work, except the old hull itself, was saved, and is still in fair condition. It is understood that Mr. Perry contemplates placing the machinery in a new hull. Until definite instructions are received the stuff will remain on the Whitney dock.

The work of rescuing the boilers and machinery was started Tuesday by a small crew of men under direction of the Whitneys. The task of taking the articles from the water was completed yesterday. With the improved machinery used by the contractors the work did not take long. The water was not deep where the accident occurred, making the work of rescue the more easy.

FANCHON IS SUNK.

Hole Cut In Bottom By Steamer's Wheel.

The little tug Fanchon, a familiar sight about the local harbor, was sunk in the harbor last evening by one of the big lake steamers, said to have been the Sultana. The Fanchon is used on the harbor for collecting and distributing laundry for the boats. At the time of the accident the tug was attached to the Osmoria in the employ of the purpose of conveying bundles to and from the ship. In some manner the Fanchon was struck by the lake vessel, by the wheel, it is said, and a hole was cut in her bottom. She soon sank. There is six feet of water over the tug, which lies a short distance north of the interstate bridge. The crew escaped in boats. The tug was last winter remodeled especially for the laundry carrying business, at a considerable expense.

STOCKS—GRAIN—PROVISIONS

PROVISIONS.

For several weeks there has been manifested by the trade in general a more friendly feeling toward the products. Plans for bringing about a material advance have in the meantime been carefully perfected, but were held in check somewhat until something definite was known of the June run of hogs.

Because in some of the years in the past, when conditions were entirely different, receipts for the first month of the summer season were liberal, the claim was set up that the movement this year would be sufficient to more than supply our actual needs and permit stocks to pile up at all points of manufacture.

The very fact that all through the fall, winter and spring months receipts have been so much in excess of a year ago has necessarily left the country short of good hogs, and what is held of the old supply is little better than the culls. With the promise in favor of a very light movement, receiving houses are advising their shippers of an outlook for a very healthy market for the remainder of this month, and that during the summer months finished hogs will be scarce and prices will range higher. Further than this, it should be remembered that when feeders are compelled to pay better than 50 cents for feeding grades of corn right in the heart of the corn-producing states, and the hog market is forced down to a $4.50 basis in Chicago, from which there must come transportation charges and several profits to be distributed among the many parties interested, the farmer receives very little better than $3.00 to $3.25 per hundred weight, which at once shows a clear loss to him on the corn-fed alone, to say nothing about his time and money invested. Naturally, then, he refuses to market his hogs, and does as our advices indicate—turns everything out to pasture and goes out of business until conditions change and he can see a margin of profit to recompense him for his labor and money invested.

Now this is clearly the situation at the present time. There is no one who understands these facts better, or is in a position to see them quicker than the big packers, and their persistent and heavy buying of both the raw material and the futures is an acknowledgement of their disappointment in their expectations of liberal receipts, and it is regarded as a good indication that both are to be in good demand and will command much higher prices.

The hundreds of cars of meats that are being daily distributed to foreign and domestic dealers tells a story of a large and increasing consumption, which is in keeping with the fact that we are a laboring nation and must therefore include in our daily rations a liberal percentage of nitrogenous foods. We are also a growing nation, and supplies that a few years ago might have looked sufficient would at this time be consumed in short order should the demands from the consumer over-reach the production, which is the case today.

The relatively high prices now obtaining for the grains also warrants stronger markets for the products, and we believe we will see them. The advance during the past week shows a good start in this direction, and the market has taken on new interest and is growing broader and more active as values work upward. The situation is extremely sound, the packers are having plenty of competition in their endeavor to control not only stocks laid away in warehouses but the future as well, so that some excited markets and sensational advances are likely to be experienced.

The time to study the conditions of supply and demand is, of course, when the markets are dull, but that time has now gone by, and purchases should be made before the advance has gained greater headway. Competent judges are so confident of their views that they are counseling purchases at the market. This course may be proper, yet the action of the market during the last few days leads us to believe that there should be occasional reactions from these sharp bulges where opportunity will be offered for making an investment, and then, if for any reason the market should react further, hold yourself in a position to buy a little more, and when the big advance does come your profits will be handsome.

HANDSOME CHURCH

St. Luke's Episcopal, Renovated and Refurnished, Is Consecrated.

Episcopal Convocation In Session Here Assists In Ceremony.

St. Luke's Episcopal church, Nineteenth avenue west and First street, was consecrated this morning. Bishop J. D. Morrison, assisted by a number of the visiting clergy, who are attending the ninth convocation of the district of Duluth, now being held in the city, officiated. The services were beautiful and impressive. Rev. W. J. Moody, of Brainerd, delivered the sermon.

Rev. H. S. Webster acted as ceremonarius and Rev. T. Ryan, Rev. E. S. Murphy and Rev. Roderick J. Mooney assisted the bishop in communicating the people. Dr. Ryan read the deed of consecration and Rev. Mooney said the morning prayer.

Rev. Moody took as a text, "They found Him in the temple," from Luke. From the finding of the Lord in the temple he deduced the object of the church, saying that it was a place where man might find Christ. He showed that the building of a tabernacle was a new departure, and was the first establishment of a place where men might find God. He pointed out that originally there was but one temple for one people, and that Christ was at first one human form, explaining that the expansion of Christ's earthly body into the Christian church required a corresponding expansion of the temples of worship. He said the model of the church was the temple, and like the temple the ideal church should have daily services and be used for private prayer and devotions of all kinds.

There is a rule in the Episcopalian church prohibiting the consecration of a church while a debt hangs over it. Until very recently the local St. Luke's church, though not a new building, was in debt, so that it could not be consecrated. Since the arrival of Rev. Roderick J. Mooney, last August, however, the debt has been cleared, and not only that, but extensive repairs and improvements on the building itself have just been completed, thanks largely to the energetic work of its tireless rector.

The interior of the building has been refinished throughout. Almost every article in the structure, including the altar and pews, down to the very cross, is new. The pillars, casing and ceiling are beautifully tinted, and the walls are finished in maroon burlap. Although the building is not a large one, there is probably no church at the head of the lakes with a more pleasing or attractive interior.

The vestry of the church is made up as follows: Messrs. G. L. Hargraves, H. A. Liedel, C. A. Marshall, Adams and Burton.

At the meeting of the convocation yesterday afternoon Thomas S. Wood, of Duluth, was elected lay delegate to the meeting of the house of bishops in Boston next fall. Rev. Dr. H. F. Parshall, of St. Cloud, was elected from the clergy to attend the same meeting. W. S. Bishop was re-elected treasurer and Dr. J. E. Bowers, secretary. Rev. Parshall was made registrar.

The reception to the clergy, delegates and the churchmen of Duluth at the Episcopalian residence this evening will conclude the convocation.

This morning, prior to the ceremonies at St. Luke's church, holy communion was held in Bishop's chapel, Twentieth avenue East and Superior street. Last evening's session at different churches were taken up with addresses on missionary topics by several of the visiting clergy. Rev. W. J. Moody, of Brainerd, and Rev. A. R. Mitchell, of Hallock, spoke at St. Paul's church; Rev. H. F. Parshall, of St. Cloud, Rev. E. Spencer, of Wadena, and Rev. George W. Barnes, of Alexandria, at the Church of the Holy Apostles. At St. Luke's church the services were in charge of Venerable Archdeacon Appleby, and Rev. Charles Smith, an Indian priest, spoke interestingly on "Work Among the Indians." The The meeting was also addressed by Rev. Ernest Smith, of Aitkin, and Rev. W. E. Morgan, of Virginia.

TOO YOUNG TO RELY ON

Judge Windom Wants Corroboration For Child's Testimony.

"The testimony of a lad of such tender years cannot be relied upon unless it is substantiated by other facts," said Judge Windom this morning, in referring to the evidence of John Boler, a little white-haired youngster of about 5 years of age.

This boy had been called to testify in the case of the state against S. De Chambeau, who was accused of stealing a roll of barbed wire fencing. He stated that he had seen De Chambeau take the wire from the place where it was stored beneath the incline railway, adjoining his father's house. He said that he was about two blocks from De Chambeau when it happened and distinctly saw him pick up the wire and carry it away.

Cross-examination by Atotrney McMahon failed to shake the lad's testimony. He gave his answers in a clear voice and stuck to his statements without wavering.

"How far away were you?" asked the attorney.

"I was about two blocks off," said the lad.

"Could you tell who the man was when you were so far away?"

"Yes, I knew him. I could see him."

"Are you sure it was De Chambeau?"

"Yes, I am sure,"

At the close of the lad's testimony Attorney McMahon moved to dismiss the case, claiming that sufficient evidence had not been advanced for a conviction.

"In a case like this where the crime, if one was committed, was such a petty one, I am disposed to allow the motion," said the court."

"There is no evidence to show that the wire was the property of the complaining witness or that it was of any value of it were his. It was stored on some vacant property and the statement of the boy is all we have to go on. A youngster of his age cannot be relied upon to give accurate evidence With the best intentions of telling the truth he may make false statements. They always want to tell what they think people desire them to tell, and they soon grow to believe the statements themselves. The case is dismissed."

LET ALL SING THEIR PRAISE

City Officials Do Things to Rotten Fifth Avenue Dock.

The freight and passenger dock at the foot of Fifth avenue west has been repaired!

The big rich city of Duluth did it with a little hatchet, two men, a few inch boards and some shingle nails.

The two men worked very rapidly, showing how quickly and effectively the mighty officials of the Zenith City respond when the lives of the voters who put them in office are placed in danger. It is said by eye witnesses that the men worked fully three hours at repairing the dilapitated old dock, every timber and plank of which is so rotten as to be a continual menace to the safety of people and teams walking on it.

The worst holes in the structure, and the most rotten planks, were covered with strong inch pine boards, fastened down with the big shingle nails. It is said a number of shingles were also used to give additional strength to the surface of the dock, so that now it will be perfectly safe for the delivery teams of the city to drive out on it to discharge their loads of freight, provided, of course, that their drivers are careful to see that the horses step carefully from inch-board to inch-board and from shingle to shingle, like a farmer boy jumping from tussock to tussock through a bog in going after the cows.

It will also be advisable for people to jump carefully from one of these new boards to another in getting out on the dock. If they hit one of the old planks they are liable, very liable, to drop through into the bay. Great changes and improvements—in the city of Duluth—come slowly. It could not be expected that the whole of the mammoth ocean dock should be placed in a condition of safety all at the one time, requiring an immediate expenditure of at least $27. It is much better to spend $7.50 now and the other $19.50 after the city has a $10,000 damage suit on its hands, for then the city attorney will be given an excellent opportunity to exercise his legal talent, and show the stuff he is made of in saving the $10,000 to Duluth. If he wins out, with such a clear case against the city, he will indeed display legal ability to a wonderful degree, and will receive a guarantee of a life job, at a big increase in salary, from the city.

Peterson. Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic: Martin Adson. Earl McMartin, A. J. Perrin and J. D. Morrisey. Union station: W. S. Chadwick, Walter Adams and C. H. Gallagher. Wisconsin Central: Miles J. Bryan. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul: C. L. Kennedy.

It is said to be the intention of the gentlemen to say a number of very kind things about the departing officials and to cast a number of complimentary propositions at one another. The occasion is to be a memorable one, if the past records of some of the gentlemen to be present are kind of a criterion, and it is believed that as a consequence of the banquet and the speeches to be made, the weather observer can safely fly signals for warmer weather in Duluth this evening.

Mr. Adson says that there is no set program, as it was considered futile to prepare one, as it would be upset as soon as the gentlemen got together. The start will be made at 8 p. m. and the finish, so one of the invited guests said this morning, would be what each one cared to make it.

Sale Is Large.

Today witnessed the beginning of the $13.80 round trip rate to Chicago installed for the benefit of those wishing to attend the National Republican convention, and tickets are to be on sale up to and including Monday. There was a good inquiry today and a great many tickets were sold in the local offices. The railroad people say they do not think most people who are going do so to take in the convention, but are taking advantage of the low rate to transact business, see friends, or make points beyond Chicago at less than the ordinary round trip fares.

Clock Is Lacking.

No clock has yet been placed in the Omaha local ticket office, owing to the difficulty in getting from the Western Union people a timepiece of the correct color to harmonize with the mahogany furnishings which distinguish the office generally. Several chronometers have been submitted but none have proved to be of the right hue. Nearly every person who goes into a railroad ticket office expects to see a clock there and many a fellow has gone into the Omaha and exercised his neck in an effort to discover the clock wkhich was not there.

Builds Big Boats.

J. H. McFadzean, city ticket agent of the Northern Pacific, has received notice from the Hamburg-American line of the building by that company of two new vessels. Last month the company placed a contract with the famous Vulcan shipbuilding works at Stettin for a new twin-screw passenger steamer which is to exceed in size all vessels that have heretofore been built for the German shipping trade. She will be of the same size as the great vessel now building for the Hamburg-American line in Belfast, which is to be ready for service next year. These ships will each be about 710 feet long, 75 feet wide and 54 feet deep. The displacement with full cargo will be 34,920 tons and accommodation for 1200 cabin and 2389 steerage passengers, as well as freight room for a cargo of 14,000 tons.

Railroad Notes.

George W. Shute, general northwestern agent of the Ontario & Western, has returned to his office in Minneapolis.

As yet no announcement has been made by the Duluth & Iron Range road of a rate for the state Democratic convention next Wednesday.

DIPLOMAS GIVEN

Sunday School Convention Gives Bible Study Diplomas.

Interesting Discussions of Temperance and Kindered Topics.

Counter attractions about the city had the effect of detracting somewhat from the attendance at the Sunday school convention this morning, but those who were present enjoyed a very fine program.

The opening devotional services were conducted by Rev. J. W. Powell, Jr., pastor of the Endion Methodist church.

"The Training of the Normal Teacher in the Sunday School," was taken up in a very able and interesting manner by Miss L. A. Emory.

She laid down seven laws or rules that the teacher should follow. She said the teacher must know whom she teaches and what she is to teach; she must arouse the activity of the children; she must proceed step by step in the development of the ideas; she must associate the ideas; she must adapt the lessons taught to the needs of the pupils; she must vary the lessons, or, in other words clothe the old truths in new dress. She must repeat the lessons to fix them firmly in mind.

The teacher should know, Miss Emory held, much more than she teaches, and there is no better source for her knowledge than the Bible.

Miss Emory gave the delegates a list of the books and other publications helpful in Sunday school work, and demonstrated an easy method of fixing in mind the dates of important Biblical epochs or facts.

The presentation of the diplomas to the graduates in the normal course for teachers was an interesting ceremony. The presentation was done by President Jeff Irish, of the Sunday school association, who made a few appropriate remarks.

Those receiving normal or state diplomas for Bible study were Mrs. L. J. Lee, Mrs. Harriet Mott Lansing, Mrs. John Smith, Miss Carrie Pond, Mrs. H. T. Drake, Mrs. E. Ferguson, Mrs. J. C. Larkin, Mrs. Mary P. Hunt, Mrs. Flora M. Pintska, Mrs. Wilhelmina Keller and Mrs. Lottie Buttermore. With the exception of the last named, the normal graduates also received diplomas for completion of the course of the International Primary school course.

A greeting was read from the North Dakota state Sunday school convention, now in session in Jamestown, N. D., and President Irish was authorized to make a fitting reply to the telegram.

S. S. Williamson, of the entertainment committee, then gave the delegates instructions relative to the boatride tomorrow.

The steamer Easton, of the White line, has been chartered for the occasion, and all delegates to the convention and their friends will be taken tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock from the Lake avenue dock for a ride up the river and around the horn.

The announcements were followed by the Round Table, in charge of President Irish. This started a number of lively and interesting discussions relative to the position and deportment of the Sunday school superintendent, and his duties under certain circumstances.

Practical temperance work in the Sunday school was treated of in a paper by Mrs. Eva Waterman, state superintendent of the primary department in the W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Waterman said there are about 2,000,000 drunkards dying in every generation, and pertinently asked how many out of the 12,000,000 Sunday school pupils will be included among those dying in the coming generation. She claimed that there are some saloons in the country where kindergarten methods have been introduced, where the children are enticed and given candy and where is cultivated in them a taste for liquor.

Mrs. Waterman told of the work done in the local Sunday schools by the W. C. T. U. superintendents, and urged that the superintendents and the pastors become more allve to the temperance question.

A large portion of her time was given up to the discussion of methods and in answering various questions.

Mrs. Elma Gamble gave an interesting talk of about twenty minutes on the junior department in the Sunday schools and gave the delegate teachers a number of new ideas relative to the best methods of conducting the department.

The Round Table junior work, under the direction of Mrs. O. S. Chapman, was hardly less interesting than that conducted by President Irish, owing to the fact that so many of the visiting delegates are teachers in the primary grades in the Sunday schools.

The principal feature of this evening's program, which will be held at the First Presbyterian church instead of the Pilgrim Congregational church, will be the lecture to be delivered by Rev. E. S. Stucker, of Owatonna, Minn., on the topic, "And Ye Also."

Mr. Stucker comes to Duluth with the reputation of being a finished and entertaining platform speaker and a large attendance is anticipated.

OUTING UP THE RIVER.

Y. M. C. A. Juniors Go to Zenith Park Saturday.

The weekly outing of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. will take the form of a launch excursion. The launch Minneopa has been chartered for the day. This is the first boating trip of the season and the boys are looking forward to it with a great deal of anticipation.

They will meet at Patterson's boat house at the foot of Sixth avenue west, Saturday morning, at 9:30, and leave there for Zenith Island park, arriving about 10:45. The following is the program for the day: 9:30 a. m., leave Patterson's boat house for the island; 11 a. m. to 12 m., baseball game; 12 m., lunch; 2 p. m., athletics, 100 yard, dash, first, second and third prizes; running broad jump, obstacle race, relay race; 3 to 3:30 p. m., swim; 3:30 to 4:30 p. m., cruise up the St. Louis river; 4:30 p. m., start for home, getting about 5:30.

Each boy will bring lunch, baseball bats, gloves, cameras and 20 cents. The party will be in charge of Secretary N. D. McLeod.

THE FIRST ON RECORD

An Old Marriage Record Book at the Courthouse.

In arranging the valut under the city jail that is being used as a storeroom for records from the offices of the city auditor and clerk of the district court, Deputy Clerks Halloway and Hamilton this morning ran acros the oldest marriage license record in existence in this county.

The parties to the first marriage on record in the book are still living in this city. They were Walter Van Brunt and Mary A. Sexton, to whom a license was issued Feb. 15, 1871. The latter is also well-known in Duluth, having been in the hardware busines here for many years. He is now a banker at Graceville, Minn., and is talked of there as a candidate for the legislature.

Other marriages recorded in the early pages of the book are as follows:

George Lautenschlager and Katy Schwartz, Oct. 19, 1871.

Dr. S. C. McCormick and Lou E. Smith, Nov. 8, 1871.

J. H. Crowley and Virginia P. Spragins, Dec. 4, 1871.

E. R. Jefferson and Addie Wilson, Jan. 31, 1872.

George R. Stuntz and Mary J. Pugsley, Sept. 11, 1872.

Leonidas Merritt and Lizzie E. Wheeler, May 7, 1873.

Charles R. Haines and Amanda F. Randall, Aug. 5, 1873.

FIRE HOSE ON THE ILL-FATED STEAMER SLOCUM WAS ROTTEN AND BURST IN A DOZEN PLACES

Damaging Statements Made By First Officer of the Vessel.

Five Hundred Thirty-Two Bodies Have So Far Been Recovered.

Divers Discover More In One of the Paddle Boxes of Steamer.

New York, June 17.—Forty-eight hours after the burning of the steamer General Slocum, the exact number of victims is still unknown. In the early morning hours a few bodies were brought to the morgue, bringing the total up to 532. As the morning wore on, with no more arrivals, hope began to be felt that the awful total had been completed, but it was soon shattered by a report that divers at work on the hull of the Slocum had discovered a mass of bodies wedged in one of the paddle boxes. How many corpses there will prove to be in this place will not be known for some hours, as they will not be disturbed until the coroner is on the scene.

One hopeful phase of the situation is the steady decrease in the number of missing, though it is still appallingly large, being between 400 and 500. The various officials, whose position brings them into touch with the disaster, still adhere to the belief that when all is told it will be found that between 900 and 1000 persons perished.

The sad task of burying the dead began today. Early in the forenoon a meeting of the German Lutheran ministers of the city was held and a program of services arranged.

While in many cases a joint service will be held over several bodies, nevertheless, the clergymen of this denomination have a herculean task before them in administering the last rites over the dead of their faith.

The distressing concentration of the blow of the disaster is shown by the fact that in one apartment house in Eighth street there are thirty-five dead, while in a Rivingston street house, sixteen bodies await burial.

Preliminary steps have been taken for three distinct investigations of the disaster. These are being undertaken by the federal authorities through the department of commerce; by the coroner's office and by the district attorney. The coroner's inquest will begin Monday next and Captain Schaick of the Slocum and six of his crew lie in a hospital with a policeman at the bedside of each. They are at present detained as witnesses. The authorities are rapidly gaining such evidence as will aid in ascertaining whether or not there was neglect or carelessness in the safety appliances of the vessel.

First Officer Edward Flanagan, of the Slocum, is quoted in an interview as saying that the steamer's fire hose was rotten and useless and that it burst in a dozen places when he and his men tried to use it. The charge is also made that the life preservers on the vessel were old and rotten and in most instances proved inadequate when used. Several papers today print pictures of preservers taken from the Slocum, which bear in black letters this inscription:

"Passed by United States Steamboat Inspector, June 18, 1891."

William Thembley, a deckhand, corroborated Flanagan's statement regarding the defective fire hose and it is reported that evidence has been secured showing that some of the life boats were made fast by wires, making it impossible for them to be cast loose and lowered. All the men who have made these statements will be called as witnesses by the coroner.

Police boats and other harbor craft still maintain their patrol of the water of the river in the vicinity of the accident in hope of recovering bodies.

New York, June 17.—Every hour adds to the horror of the excursion steamer disaster of Wednesday, when the General Slocum was burned to the water's edge, near North Brother island. Divers had explored the wreck of the steamer yesterday and reported that no more bodies were to be found there, but today a diver, who was at work on the sunken hull, found a large number of bodies packed tightly inside one of the paddle wheels. Just how many there were was not known, but it was planned to remove them as soon as Coroner O'Gorman reached the scene. The coroner had arranged to visit the wreck today for the purpose of ascertaining, if possible, what evidence of culpability on the part of the Knickerbocker Steamboat company, or of the officials of the boat, if any, could be secured to present to the coroner's inquest. Therefore, it was determined to take out the bodies at that time. At various hospitals where the injured are it was said today their condition was satisfactory. There are now only fifty-three victims of the disaster in the hospitals.

It developed today that a new horror had been added to the terrible conditions resulting from the Slocum disaster through over-officiousness of some person at the morgue. As a result some of the bodies of the dead probably never will be identified and will go to a last resting place in the humble plot furnished by the city's charity. When the bodies were taken by hundreds from the water and laid in rows on the grass at North Brother island, each was tagged with a number. That number was carefully recorded and the papers, valuables and trinkets which would have served to positively identify the bodies were removed and placed in separate packages, each package bearing a number corresponding to the number on the body from which the articles were taken. These packages then were placed in the custody of the coroner. Scores of the bodies at the morgue were burned or bruised beyond recognition, but it was hoped that all might be claimed by friends by means of the papers and jewelry.

When the bodies were taken to the morgue, they were placed in numbered boxes, but in many cases these numbers did not correspond with figures the bodies previously had borne. As a result, the plans were completely upset, and the numbered packages of valuables became practically worthless as a means of identification of the dead.

One case which came to the attention of the officials today, was that of A. T. Hill, of Williamsburg. Mr. Hill called at the morgue yesterday and identified the bodies of his brother-in-law, William Richter, and the wife of the latter and they were removed to the office of an undertaker. In the afternoon the bodies of Catherine and Lillian Richter, 3 and 4 years old, respectively, also were identified by him. When he called at the morgue today with an undertaker who was to attend to the burial of the bodies they could not be found. The bodies were numbered 173 and 175 respectively and the authorities at the morgue have no record of any such bodies having been given to any one though they had a record of identification made by Hill on yesterday. It is thought that some undertaker was given the bodies in place of two others which he should have taken, through a confusion in the numbers.

Secretary of Commerce and Labor George B. Cortelyou, who had a long conference with Robert S. Rodie, inspector of the Second district of New York, after his arrival here, said today that he would give his personal attention to the federal investigation of the Slocum disaster. Mr. Cortelyou said:

"As secretary of the department of commerce and labor, I am the head of the federal inquiry into this affair, and I propose to give it my personal, and in so far as possible, my undivided attention until the matter is finally settled. As soon as practical the board of inspectors will get together and take testimony. This inquiry will be separate and distinct from any proceedings brought by city, state or county officials."

Mr. Cortelyou said that if it was found to be true that employes of the government have been criminally negligent in their inspection of boilers in New York harbor, the public can rest assured that no one will be shielded, but that the blame will be placed where it properly belongs.

Saved from the wreck of the ill-fated steamer Gen. Slocum, there is an unknown baby boy at the Lebanon hospital. Nurses of the island hospital, inspecting the dead, found the baby where a policeman had laid him down to be tagged with the other unknown dead. They hurriedly carried him to the reception hospital dormitory. Warm milk and a sleep made the little one himself again.

While the divers are confident that the wreck of the Slocum has been cleared of all its dead, the search will be continued today, as there may be bodies lying in the mud around it.

Coroner O'Gorman believes there are twenty bodies still unrecovered. He based this assumption on the belief that the number of people on board was very much greater than 1400, the number generally accepted as correct.

MORE DEAD IDENTIFIED.

New York, June 17.—Additional identification of dead made today at the morgue were: Lane, George; Merseles, Matilda; Michaels, Carrie; Marshall, Daniel; Meyers, Elizabeth; Morris, Kate; Ramenclkamp, Stella; Stolz, Bessie; Salkman, Margaret; Stahl, Emma; Schmedling, Annie; Seipert, Henry; Timm, Hedwig; Vetter, Frederica.

JAPANESE FLEET IN CLOSE PURSUIT OF VLADIVOSTOK SQUADRON IN JAPAN SEA

The Russian Squadron Has Again Come Out of Northern Port.

Very Dense Fog Has Prevented the Two Fleets From Meeting.

Sounds of Firing May Indicate That They Have Finally Met.

Tokio, June 17.—A report has been received from the police station at Saga, near Sasebo, saying that sounds of cannonading have been heard off the coast. It is possible that a Japanese fleet has met the Russians.

London, June 17.—The Japanese legation has received a dispatch from Tokio announcing that the Russian Vladivostok squadron was sighted off Oki island yesterday.

Tokio, June 17.—It is probable that fog has again saved the Vladivostok squadron. Many rumors are extant of an action at sea, but they are not confirmed. The Russian ships were first sighted off Oki island at 8:30 a. m., June 15, by a patrol boat, which reported the fact to Vice Admiral Kamimura at an unknown base, who left in pursuit with his whole fleet. At 9:30 a. m., on the same date, Vice Admiral Tsunoda, commanding the Takeshiki naval station, received the information of the enemy's appearance off shore and immediately dispatched a flotilla of torpedo boats in chase, but the wind, rain and fog, which prevailed, prevented them from doing effective work. During the afternoon the storm increased. Vice Admiral Kamimura with his squadron is still chasing the enemy. The fate of the transport Izumi is still unknown. There were no foreigners aboard the destroyed transports except their officers.

RETIRED RELUCTANTLY.

The Russians Were Not Beaten, But Outnumbered.

Liao Yang, Thursday, June 16.—During the night of June 14, the Russian forces under General Stackelberg, which had been engaged with the Japanese for two days slept in their position, four miles south of Vafangow, and on the morning of June 15, assumed the offensive and attacked the Japanese lines. The battle lasted all day and the Russians inflicted heavy loss on the enemy. No doubt was felt by the Russians of their ability to force the Japanese back, but heavy reinforcements for the enemy had been brought up rapidly from the south, arriving in time to turn the scale.

An entire division of fresh Japanese troops was thrown into line against the already tired Russians and the immense superiority in numbers enabled them to overlap the left flank of the Russians, who had not sufficient men to meet the turning movement and were forced to withdraw upon Vafangow.

The Russians retired reluctantly and doggedly, not beaten, but outnumbered.

RUSSIANS SATISFIED

That Troops Made Gallant and Stubborn Fight.

St. Petersburg, June 17.—The news of the result of the battle of Vafangow reached the morning papers too late to allow of comment. The public seem to accept the result stoically, and are content that the Russians made a gallant and stubborn fight until the arrival of fresh battalions of the enemy compelled Gen. Stakelberg's troops, weary and exhausted with three days' hard fighting, to give way.

The Invalid Russ points out that the Japanese had to give up the attack on the Russian left, and with all their reserves concentrated, only succeeded in crushing the Russian right after a whole day's fighting.

A special dispatch to the Associated Press from Liao Yang contains the first Russian estimate of Gen. Stakelberg's losses, placing them at 1000 men and twenty officers.

The same dispatch says Gen. Stakelberg had assumed the offensive when the Japanese reinforcements came up.

The present situation is not clear, although it is believed that Gen. Stakelberg will continue to retire to the northward. It is possible, however, that reinforcements are being sent to his support. This might be inferred from a significant message, just received from one of the Associated Press correspondents at Tashichiao, reporting an enormous movement of troops, including cavalry and infantry, along the railroad, but the correspondent was not allowed to say in what direction the troops were marching. It may be, therefore, reinforcements moving to support Gen. Stakelberg, or the force of that commander retiring to the northward. The message also says that the whereabouts of Maj. Gen. Mistchenko is not known, and this latter statement may be pregnant with significance.

SINKING OF TRANSPORTS.

Details of Disaster Told By Japanese Survivors.

Tokio, June 17.—Details in connection with the sinking of the Japanese transport Hitachi by Russian warships are being furnished by survivors. The Russian ships were sighted at 7 o'clock in the morning, and in response to a signal the Hitachi was stopped, but at 10 o'clock got under way again, and attempted to escape. The Russians followed and opened a heavy fire, directed about at the water line, with evident intention of destroying the troops on board. The fire was terrific, and in a few minutes the decks were covered with corpses and awash with blood. One shell, which struck the engine room, killed 200 men. The ship began to fill and sunk gradually by the stern. At 6 o'clock in the evening she was completely submerged. Capt. Campbell, the English master of the transport, jumped overboard at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and is numbered among the missing. The chief engineer was killed on the bridge. The commander of the troops ordered the flag to be burned, and then killed himself. The second mate committed suicide.

Many of the crew and troops escaped in the boats.

The transport Sado is still afloat, but is badly damaged. She is being towed into the nearest port. She sighted the Russian ships thirty-five miles west of Hiro island. Their signals to stop were unheeded, so the Russians opened fire and signalled for those on board the Sado to leave the ship. Upon that the crew took to the boats and in this way many escaped, when the ship was eventually fired by the enemy.

The number of men on board the two transports and the list of casualties are not as yet obtainable.

NO CAUSE FOR ATTACK.

Jury Says Death of Etzel Was Unjustifiable.

Newchwang, June 17.—The investigation of the death of Lewis Etzel, correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, who was killed by Chinese soldiers off the coast of the Liao Tung peninsula June 7, when cruising in a junk between Shwantaitze and Erdicko, in company with Ernest Brindle, correspondent of the London Daily Mail, has been finished. The jury finds that there was not the slightest cause for attacking the correspondents and makes several recommendations which United States Consul Miller does not wish made public now. Consul Milier is expected to arrive at Pekin this afternoon for the purpose of making a personal report on the affair to United States Minister Conger.

A NORTHERN PACIFIC TRAIN HELD UP AND EXPRESS SAFE DYNAMITED

Daring Badits Secure Good Haul From Train In Some Spot of Former Hold-Up---Passengers Scared.

Bearmouth, Mont., June 17.—Two masked men have held up the North Coast limited, Northern Pacific passenger train, eastbound, at about a mile and a half east of this station. After bringing the train to a stop they dynamited the express car, blew open the safe and secured all of its contents. The amount secured is not known, but is believed to be large. After blowing out the rear lights of the train the two men disappeared.

The hold-up was similar to the one which occurred two years ago, at nearly the same spot, and in which Engineer O'Neal lost his life. The hold-ups boarded the tender of the engine at the water tank, at Bearmouth, and after having remained quiet until the train had gone a mile and a half they crawled up over the coal and covered Engineer Wade and Fireman Reed with their guns, and told them to throw up their hands. Engineer Wade was then commanded to bring his train to a standstill, and he immediately complied. The engineer and firemen were ordered from their engine, and with the hold-ups, went back to the express car.

Before making an effort to gain an entrance, they forced the engineer to light a cigar. The express messenger was commanded to open the door, but refused. The engineer was next commanded to light a stick of dynamite, of which the robbers had a large amount, and placed the lighted stick against the car door. The force of the explosion completely wrecked the door, and the engineer and fireman were compelled to precede the hold-ups into the car. When admission was gained the hold-ups at once directed their attention to the strong box.

Five stocks of dynamite were placed on top of the safe, and ignited, but the force of the charge was insignificant, and another and larger cap was used. The second charge exploded with terrific force, blowing out the side of the car and throwing the safe a distance of forty feet. After rifling the safe of its valuables, the robbers commanded the train crew to remain quiet and no harm would be done to them. While this conversation was going on one of the robbers accidentally struck the engineer with his revolver, and, in apologizing, called him by name, indicating a possibility that the robber may be a railroad man.

The party then left the express car and the men were brought back to the engine, being covered with guns until thy had obeyed the mandate. The robbers then passed to the rear of the train, and after putting out the train lights disappeared in the darkness. Meanwhile the passengers were terror stricken and had crawled under every place that offered a hiding.

The rear brakeman, the moment he understood what had hapened, slipped off the rear of the train and ran back to Bearmouth, where communiaction was had with the superintendent and the sheriff's office at Missoula.

A posse was immediately summoned and an engine, a car of horses and Superintendent Thalmer's private car were soon on their way to the scene. The posse consisted of Sheriff Thompson, Under Sheriff Sterling, George Saunders, Ed. Larson, Chick Witt, James Tabor, William S. Carter and others. The blodhounds at Deer Lodge prison have been wired for. It is believed there are four of the holdups, all told. Four men have been in Bearmouth for the past two or three days and it is said they have been laying in a large supply of groceries, especially canned goods. The theory is that they have a rendezvous not far from the scene of the hold-up. A light engine from Drummond bearing eight deputies was immediately started and it is thought the men cannot escape.

Deputies Watson and Murray are on their way from Missoula up the Hell Gate canon to head off escape in that direction, while two other officers, Tabor and Saunders, were let off the train at McCarthy's bridge to head off escape there. It is learned that the railroad people were expecting the holdup for the past two days, but looked for it on the Philipsburg branch.

Two boys, Ralph Daly and Al Horton were stealing a ride on the blind baggage and both say they can identify the men.

Superintendent Thalmer is co-operating with Sheriff Thompson in planning the pursuit and early today started out on their hunt for the two desperadoes.

Daly, one of the blind baggage passengers, got down as soon as possible after the safe was robbed, looking for loose money. All he could find was a stack of worthless money orders, which he turned over to Superintedent Thalmer. The train was in charge of Conductor Grant. The wrecked express car was brought to Bearmouth.

COALITION FORMED TO DEFEAT DUNN

Collins, Van Sant, Eddy and Eustis Reported In a Combine.

Forces Have Been Getting Together In Last Few Days.

St. Paul, June 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—As the Republican state convention draws near at hand there are strong indications that a coalition of the political forces headed by Judge L. W. Collins, Governor S. R. Van Sant, Frank M. Eddy and William Henry Eustis, to defeat the nomination of R. C. Dunn of Princeton, is already in operation.

Not one of these gentlemen will admit that he is in a deal to defeat Mr. Dunn, but the fact is undisputed that practically all of the supporters of each one are lined up against the Princeton man, and it is reported that at a recent conference a well-defined agreement was made concerning the attitude of these four gentlemen in the convention.

This agreement is reported to be as follows:

Should it appear before the Hennepin county convention that R. C. Dunn will capture the delegation, William Henry Eustis of Minneapolis will be urged to announce his candidacy. The Collins men believe that he can wrest the delegation away from Dunn.

This will make three candidates, Collins, Eddy and Eustis, in opposition to Mr. Dunn. The opponents of the Princeton candidate believe that these three candidates together will have a large majority in the convention and the problem will be to decide on the candidate who can best unite the forces.

Eddy's friends, according to the report, will urge him to withdraw his name after the third ballot. If it appears that neither Judge Collins nor Mr. Eustis can command the situation, Governor Van Sant will get in the race.

That these forces have been getting together in the last few days is common knowledge in St. Paul. Leading papers in St. Paul and throughout the state that have supported Frank Eddy ever since he announced his candidacy are now making a personal fight on Mr. Dunn. The Soo railroad interests, who have been inclined to favor Mr. Eddy, lately have come out in open opposition to the Princeton candidate. United States Marshal Grimshaw, Mr. Eustis' leading supporter in Minneapolis, is leading the fight against Mr. Dunn in Hennepin county. The following are Mr. Eustis' own words repeated to Senator George P. Wilson at the Windsor hotel:

"We can skin the Dunn men, if we only get our men out to vote."

The efficacy of such a combination is discussed within the ranks of the Collins supporters. James A. Martin, Judge Collins' manager, describes this combination as "the heading-in process." It is the process by which all the opponents of R. C. Dunn "head-in" to defeat the Princeton candidate.

It is generally believed that Mr. Eustis, himself, is not a party to the combination in the sense that he has agreed to fight Mr. Dunn on the floor of the convention. The combination exists in the fact that Mr. Eustis' leading supporters are primarily inter-

EASY MARKS FOR WHITES

Winnebagoes of Nebraska Are Robbed Right and Left.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 17.—Secretary Hitchcock has issued orders to Superintendent Wilson, of the Winnebago, Neb., reservation to stop, if possible the big frauds being perpetrated upon the Indians by the whites.

The 1000 Indians of the tribes receive annually about $200,000 and this is practically all squandered. Speculators are buying the heirship lands worth $50 for $18 to $20 and holding them for sale at full value, when the reservation is opened to settlement.

Liquor is sold indiscriminately and wagon loads of hopelessly intoxicated Indians go out of Homer daily. Polygamy is practiced to a frightful extent, marriage relations are ignored and the children do not know their own parents.

Rev. Father Schell, the Catholic priest at the reservation, responsible for the investigation o fthe Pacific coast timber frauds, proposed to Secretary Hitchcock the apointment of a disbursing committee to spend all money for the Indians, and this is being considered.

Superintendent Wilson struck terror to the hearts of the speculators by refusing to recogniez any of the many private leases made by Indians, and Father Schell has become a locating agent for bonafide settlers, who will pay full value for the lands.

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF FINLAND DIES FROM WOUNDS

Passes Away as Result of Assassin's Bullets—Was Optimistic Over the Present Situation In Finland Just Before He Was Shot.

Helsingfors, Finland, June 17.—Gen. Bobrikoff, governor general of Finland, who was shot yesterday morning at the entrance to the senate, died at 1 o'clock this morning. The people are calm and there is no excitement.

St. Petersburg, June 17.—What may be regarded as Gen. Bobrikoff's dying declaration concerning the conditions in Finland is contained in an interesting statement made to M. Belaieff, a Russian literary man, who has just completed a tour of the country and who had a long talk with the late governor-general Tuesday. Bobrikoff regarded the present situation very auspiciously, expressing satisfaction. "The Finns," he said, "thoroughly understood the state of affairs and were manifesting correct relations toward the Russian administration. He continued:

"The trouble is all with the Swedes. Swedomania is still a very strong propaganda and is pushed in the most underhanded and disreputable fashion. In order to poison the people's minds proclamations are showered from Sweden. We seize what we can, but they form a regular hydra; wherever one head is chopped off another grows. My sympathies are on the side of the old Finns, who form seven-eighths of the population. I believe in them. The majority of the senate is composed of old Finns. I selected them. I prefer them to the Swedes, hence the hostility of the latter. Helsingfors gives me no rest night or day. The city is a hotbed of dissension. It seems to boil automatically because of the hostility and rivalry between the parties. I repeat that I rely mostly on the old Finns. The young Finns and the Swedish party are much the same, the only difference being that the former are more cowardly than the latter. The Socialist party, of which the young Finns are the heart and soul, is a cunning crime-serving organization.

"The conscription this year passed off quietly. Only a small percentage proved unsubmissive. The Swedish proclamations are having little effect, the conscripts themselves bringing them to us in bundles."

RELEASED ON BOND.

Montana Murderer to Have a Second Trial.

Helena, Mont., June 17.—After being confined in jail for twenty-six months, James S. Keerl, accused of the murder of Thomas Crystal, a bartender, has been given his freedom. Keerl was released a few minutes after Judge Clements had approved a bond for $30,000, filed by the attorneys for the defense. Judge Clements held that Keerl, having ben tried for murder in the first degree and being convicted on a second degree charge, could not again be tried for the greater charge. Keerl's second trial will be held June 22.

The much mooted question of whether a man who is charged with murder in the first degree, and convicted of lesser degree murder, and is then granted a new trial, can again be tried for murder in the first degree, has proved a stumbling block in the way of progress in the trial of Llewellen L. Felker, of Butte, in another department of the district court. The arguments will consume probably all of today. Felker is charged with having killed his brother-in-law, J. V. Cummingham.

RUSH FOR LANDS

At Red Lake Felt at Thief River.

Thief River Falls, Minn., June 17.—The town is filled with strangers who have come to make sure of a chance at the lands to be thrown open on June 20. Every train brings in several extra coaches filed with landseekers. Arrangements are being made to put up many tents for their accommodation and there will be a small tented city on the outskirts.

Many of the newcomers are making trips up the Great Northern extension to Greenbush and the intervening towns, and some have decided to locate in the towns that are springing up in that section, and are negotiating for the purchase of land.

The biggest real estate deal Thief River Falls has ever known was closed yesterday. All of the land owned by the Meehans, including 223 lots and eighty acres adjoining the city, was sold to Messrs Page, Lamb and Wicks, of Minneapolis, who will take charge at once.

DR. J. H. DUNN DIES SUDDENLY

Was Stricken With Heart Disease at a St. Louis Hotel.

St. Louis, June 17.—Dr. J. H. Dunn, a physician and surgeon of Minneapolis was found dead in his room at the Southern hotel last evening. The body is in charge of an undertaker, undergoing preparations for transportation to Minneapolis. Heart disease is supposed to have been the cause of Dr. Dunn's death, who was attending the sessions of the American Surgical association, before which he read a paper yesterday.

Minneapolis, June 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Dr. James H. Dunn was one of the most eminent and most popular of the men in the medical profession in Minneapolis. He has for several years occupied one of the chairs of surgery—the branch of the profession which he makes a specialty—in the medical school of the university of Minnesota. He has been a frequent contributor to medical journals and a man who was always attentively heard by the medical societies, state and national. He was born in 1853, in Indiana, and after completing his education, studied medicine at Rush Medical college and graduated from the medical department of the university of New York City. After practicing for some years he took post graduate courses at Heidelberg, Germany, and in Vienna. Following that he pursued medical observations in Paris and then in Italy. Locating in Minneapolis about 1885, he quickly became prominent and in 1887 and 1888 was city physician. He established the first city hospital in this city and has been surgeon in charge of St. Mary's hospital since its foundation in 1887. His wife who survives him is a daughter of the late Judge John L. Macdonald, at one time congressman from the Third district of Minnesota. He also leaves a son.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Sioux Indian Squaw Is Charged With Killing Her Husband.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Bismarck—Good Roads Woman, a Sioux Indian, has been held to the district court of Mercer county, charged with the killing of her husband, Milton Fowler. Fowler's body was found buried near his house and a tomahawk wound showed the manner of death. The woman has had four husbands, and it is suspected she has murdered two of them.

Fargo—The convention of the Cass county Democracy was a quiet affair. Only a few were in attendance, but they proceeded to select the delegates to the state convention without regard to the number present. There was no instructions for presidential candidate and none for delegate to the national convention from this district, though it is understood there are at least three men who want to go.

Near Slaughter, Burleigh county, a young son of Farmer Brodle is reported to have committed suicide by shooting.

The Fram, the leading Scandinavian paper of this city, has changed ownership, Lars Christianson, a pioneer druggist here, is the new proprietor.

Architect Friedlander has secured a patent on a new invention for heating and ventilating buildings.

The board of trustees of Fargo college re-elected John H. Morley, president; R. M. Polock, vice president, and E. H. Stickney, secretary. The number of trustees was increased from fifteen to twenty-two, and several Minnesotans selected as members. There were three graduates.

The 18-months-old daughter of Engineer and Mrs. G. G. Ellsworth, was drowned in the vault of an outhouse.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—The Lamb Lumber company, which has had many retail yards in the Dakotas, has sold practically all of them and will reorganize as the Lamb Hardwood company, and remove headquarters to Memphis, Tenn., from which the development of a large tract of hardwood timber in Northern Mississippi will be directed.

Different firms have bought the company's yards, as follows: Hollandsworth-Hart company, at Selby, Java and Bowdie; Laird-Norton company, at Redfield, Madison, Pipestone and other Minnesota points; Equity Lumber company, at Pollock, Herreid, Artas, Wishek, Lehr, Zeeland, Strasberg and Hague; Dacotah Lumber company, at Linton, Hazelton, Britton, Bismarck; North Star Lumber company, at Oakes and Kulm; Mellen Lumber company, at Vienna and Naples; Hall-Wellman company, at Groton, Webster and Bristol. The Lamb company still has yards at Aberdeen, Hosmer, Eureka, Ipswich and Roscoe, which it is understood will soon be transferred.

Miller—The county prohibition party nominated a full ticket—except attorney and judge. Leading Populists are agitating the reorganization of their party on non-fusion lines.

Redfield—L. D. Daniels died suddenly of appendicitis.

Deadwood—Both the Burlington and Northwestern have their narrow gauge lines in operation between Weadwood and Lead. Standard gauge trains are arriving over both lines in this city from the East. It will be several days before the Northwestern can get its ore cars to Bald Mountain, or the Burlington scenic Spearfish line be repaired.

WEST DULUTH

BUILDING ACTIVE

Western State Bank Contemplates New Building For Its Use.

Many Good Improvements Are In Progress—Other News.

The probabilities are that in the very near future work will be started on a handsome new bank building for West Duluth. The directors of the Western State bank are considering a proposition to purchase a site on Central avenue for the proposed banking house. As yet the details of the transaction are incomplete, but it is regarded as a certainty that the deal will be consummated.

It is understood that the site under consideration is located in the same block as the building now used as a bank, north of the present site.

Although the plans for the structure have not yet been drawn up, it is known that the new bank will be built of brick and stone, with rich and handsome interior finishings, and a banking outfit up-to-date and modern in every detail. The structure may be no more than one story in height, and if this is the case it will be devoted exclusively to banking purposes. It is possible, however, that two stories will be erected, and that the upper floor will be used for offices or as a hall. In any event the walls of the first story will be made sufficiently strong so that at any time the building may be made higher, at the discretion of the directors.

The Western State bank, although a new corporation, only recently established, has met with fine success since the day its doors were first thrown open to the public. The reports of the board of directors show it to be in the best possible condition. The business is increasing at such a rate that it is thought advisable to provide for larger and more modern quarters.

Besides the contemplated bank building, numerous other building improvements are now in progress in West Duluth, both in the business and residence section.

Dr. David Graham is expending $3000 in improvements on his building, at the corner of Bristol street and Fifty-fifth avenue west. Among other things a steel ceiling and stone foundation are being added. Other improvements on almost as large a scale are being made on the main streets.

In the residence district, C. J. Johnson has just completed the making of his Fifty-eighth avenue house. Alderman Sang is expending a large amount of money in improving his residence property, at the corner of Wadena street and Fifty-eighth avenue west. Charles Greeves and several of his neighbors are having cement walks laid before their residences, along Fifty-eighth avenue. Numerous other improvements of a like nature are now going on.

BASEBALL GAMES.

Three Teams Scheduled For Sunday Contests.

Three West Duluth baseball teams will play games Sunday. Hamilton's Athletes and Schell & Wade's Wonders will contest for $100 a side at Zenith Park, up the St. Louis river, and the regular West Duluth team will play the Universal Millers on the Thirty-second avenue grounds. It is expected that both games will be hot ones.

The regulars will play at Cloquet, July 3 and 4.

The most interest is manifested in the contest between the minor teams. To accommodate the people desiring to see these two nines engage in battle on the diamond, a boat will be run every half hour to the island, from foot of Sixty-first avenue west, during the afternoon. A. Hamilton will pitch for the Athletes, while Art Jacoby will do the twirling act for the Wonders.

IRVING SCHOOL BANQUET.

The annual banquet of the alumni association of the Irving school will be held this evening in the upper hall of the school building. The banquet will be quite elaborate, with a hundred or more plates laid. Several alumni from out of town will be in attendance.

The banquet will be preceded by a program to be given in assembly hall, to consist of music, recitations, addresses and specialties. The hall has been handsomely decorated for the occasion.

PAVING COMPLETED.

The work of paving Central avenue has been completed and the street is now in fine condition. Contractor McDonnell yesterday had the steam roller taken off and announced that the contract had been completed. The city engineer will probably inspect and pass upon the work today. Until he says that the paving is satisfactory, and until it has been accepted as such by the city, it will not be sprinkled. It is said that it would not be allowable to do work of any nature along the street until it has been thus accepted by the city.

NEW CAMPAIGN

For Six-Year Term For the President.

Chicago, June 17.—The National Business league has distributed leaflets among Republican leaders here proposing an amendment to the constitution of the United States making the presidential term six years and the president ineligible for the second term. The principal reasons given for the proposed changes are:

Presidential campaigns are too frequent, are enormously expensive to business interests and keep the country in a state of turmoil and uncertainty most of the time, to the great disadvantage of both labor and capital.

Presdential years show increase of business failures, decrease of exports, bank clearings, stock sales and commercial transactions generally.

Presidential campaigns indefinitely prevent the growth of industrial enterprises.

The president during his first term, naturally being anxious to succeed himself, is kept busy considering the demands of politicians and planningg for a second term. Meanwhile important service for the general good waits.

It pays to advertise in The Herald—ask I. Freimuth.

AUCTION SALE OF JEWELS.

Great interest is taken in Paris in the sale at auction early in June of the historic jewels that belonged to the late Princess Mathilde. Among the most important numbers is a superb necklace given by the first Napoleon as a wedding present to his sister-in-law, the queen of Westphalia, who married King Jerome of Westphalia, and who was mother of Princess Mathilde. "The necklace," says I. N. Ford, the Tribune's correspondent, "consists of seven rows of 384 white pearls, weighing 4200 grains, the intrinsic value of which is estimated by experts at $100,000. There are also three pearl necklaces that Princess Mathilde inherited from Queen Sophie of Holland, one of which contains 102 large white pearls at equal intervals, the ends terminating in a large tassel of 900 small white pearls. There is a brooch of diamonds forming an imperial eagle, a gift of the third Napoleon to Princess Mathilde. There are rivieres of diamonds, bracelets, and magnificent pear-shaped solitaire gray pearl ear-rings, also a gold traveling alarm clock used by the emperor in his campaigns.

COULD FUNSTON SWIM?

The Kansas Attack on the Story of His Exploits.

From an interview with D. O. McCray in the Topeka Capital: "All the information I can get, shows that the first swimming episode occurred at the Marilao river. It was flashed over the wires to the United States that Col. Frederick Funston at the head of twenty men swam the Marilao river,' by the overworked press agent, and the Kansas history so records it. The facts are that Sapt. Edward L. Hardy, of Council Grove, at that time second lieutenant of Company H of the Twentieth Kansas, Privates Jack Huntsman and Willey, of Company H, were the only soldiers who swam the Marilao river, except the numerous members of the regiment who were in bathing at the time Col. Funston crossed in a boat which Hardy, Huntsman and Willey brought back from the other side. Col. Funston informed Capt. Hardy at the time that he could not swim. It is to be regretted that Col. Funston's hatred for Capt. Hardy has prevented him from giving the facts about the Marilao. The Marilao was the first river to swim. It set the pace for all the rest. The feat was performed in the midst of a sharp battle and was as dangerous as it was meritorious. You will remember that it was not known in the United States that Privates Trembly and White were the heroes who swam the Rio Grande under fire until the Twentieth arrived at San Francisco. Then it was that White made a statement as to the facts of this feat, forcing Gen. Funston to announce that it was Trembley and White, and not he, who swam the Rio Grande. Trembly and White were so unfortunate as not to have a press agent in the Philippines—nor were they promoted to life positions for brave and meritorious deeds.

"That Bagbag swimming episode seems to be the one certain Kansas newspapers are picking out and playing upon. Of course, they don't know anything about it. They do not discriminate between the deeds of valor of a brave soldier and the daring of an adventurer. With them the dignity which should hedge about the exalted office of president of the United States, and the daring and skill of the cowboy who ropes a Texas steer on the Western plains, are synonymous terms.

"The only Kansas company which took part in the battle at the Bagbag was Company K. Capt. Boltwood, of Ottawa, Lieut. John Hall, of Lawton, Okla.; young Ramsey, now a cadet at West Point; Lieut. Colin Ball, and others were right there, and they know all about it. All of these men say that Col. Funston crossed the Bagbag on a bridge, one span of which has been washed away. Reaching the end of the wrecked bridge, Col. Funston and party jumped in and paddled across some ten or twenty feet. Lieut. Ball was first, and says Funston waited to take off his boots, and when Funston caught up Ball was drying his clothes on the bank. As Funston had said to Hardy at the Marilao that he couldn't swim, history does not record just how he did get across. However, I presume it matters little to Gen. Funston what history shall record. His promotion came before the soldier boys got back from the Philippines. Therefore, great is the power of the press agent.

"Unfortunately the real facts were not before the author of the Kansas school history when the same was written. Necessarily he was compelled to accept the reports sent to the press of the United States. All who knew Noble L. Prentis and his love for truth and justice, know that if he was living now his pen would be the first to strike out this error and injustice from this splendid book."

STRIVE TO KEEP IT

St. Peter Working to Prevent Removal of Gustavus Adolphus College.

Senator Johnson and Prof. Towley Here In Its Interest.

Charles A. Johnson, senator from the Twentieth district, and Professor G. H. Towley, are registered at the Spalding. Both are from St. Peter. They are here in the interest of a fund to be used in connection with the Gustavus Adolphus college, at St. Peter, about the location of which there was a spirited controversy at the last conference of the Swedish Lutheran synod.

The college is under the control of the church, and an effort was made to have it removed to Minneapolis. The people at St. Peter, where it is a very important factor in the town, and has a great many old-time friends of the institution, protested against any such move, and Senator Johnson, who likes a good contest and can hang on a long time when he gets started, was one of the leading workers in behalf of retaining the institution in its original town.

His side was successful in the fight, at least for the time being, it being decided to leave the college in St. Peter. It is now the purpose of the senator and Professor Towley, who is connected with the college in an official capacity, to raise a fund which will be sufficient to put the college on a financial basis, where there will be no danger of it being removed from St. Peter for years to come, if ever.

It is said that the people in St. Peter are earnestly opposed to letting the college be taken away from their town, and will give toward the fund as far as they are able, but that such a large sum as is necessary to finance the college properly could not be raised there, so that all the Scandinavians who can be interested throughout the state, especially in this part of it, will be asked to contribute.

Dr. J. J. Eklund and a number of other prominent Scandinavians are being interested in the movement, and it is believed that the element of this nationality who are in favor of retaining the college where it is will prove helpful enough to give the college what money is necessary for the purpose.

A great many well known Scandinavians of Duluth and vicinity received their education in Gustavus Adolphus college, which was named for one of the oldest and greatest kings of Sweden.

Senator Johnson is understood to be particularly interested in the fight to retain the college where it is because of his remembrance of his own difficulties in obtaining an education and the desire to keep all the educational facilities that he can at his own town.

REVERSES ITSELF.

State Supreme Court Changes a Former Decision.

St. Paul, June 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The supreme court today in the old case of Russell Sage, as assignee in trust for the Hastings & Dakota railway company vs. Michael Rudnick, reversed a former decision of this court in the same case. In the former decision the court affirmed the order of the Swift county court holding for Sage and the railroad, but in the present case which is a rehearing, the order of the court, is reversed. Judges Start and Lewis dissented, abiding by the former decision of the court.

The action relates to grants of land made by the state of Minnesota in 1866 in aid of the construction of a railroad giving odd numbered sections within ten miles on either sides of the central line of the road. The court held that the title to the land passed to the Hastings & Dakota company and that the statute of limitations began to run in favor of the defendants alleged title by adverse possession at the time of his settlement on the land, the legal title thereto being then in the railroad company.

NOW APPEALS TO SHERIFF

Nelson Carter Exhausts Supplications to Providence and Switches.

After praying in vain for Providence to deliver him from jail, Nelson Carter appealed to Sheriff Butchart in a letter which covers some thirty pages of note paper.

"I prayed to be delivered from jail," he says in the communication. "I told the other prisoners I was going. They said good for you. When I didn't go I knew God had put me here. I know He did it and I know it was all right. I told the boys in the office that God had put me here and that I wasn't going to offer any more prayers to get out."

After thus explaining how his presence in jail was due to Divine Providence, and telling how Providence had therefore refused to open the doors of his prison, Carter apepals to Sheriff Butchart as the last resort.

"You may say that I could not get work if I got out, but you are mistaken," he writes.

He also takes a slam at the condition of affairs existing in the county jail.

"I have always been honest and had good health, good food to eat and a good place to sleep free from these creatures which infest these bunks."

Whether herefers to the other prisoners in mentioning "creatures" or to some nameless, many-legged insects, is not clear.

In a long rambling preface to his essay, he tells how he was converted and given the power to perform miracles. He states that he once healed a burn which a friend of his had sustained while frying griddle cakes in a lumber camp.

An examination of the police records this morning showed that Carter had been arrested for carrying concealed weapons. He had an old-fashioned Colt's horse pistol in his possession, which resembeld a miniature cannon and Judge Windom gave him twenty days in the county jail for going about armed in that manner.

He has served ten days of his sentence already and in ten days more he will be free to wander about the streets converting people, as is his avowed intention, unless the authorities swear out information of insantly and have him brought before the judge of probate, which is not unlikely.

LOVE OF A DOG

Parts a Husband and Wife In Iowa.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 17.—The arrest of Dr. M. A. Scott, formerly of Sioux City, in St. Paul, on Tuesday, for arguing too vigorously with his wife, who had left him to secure a divorce, is a chapter in a unique story.

Dr. Scott, aged 63, married Laura Swan, aged 20, a year ago this month. He had been an old bachelor and possessed a greyhound of which he was very fond. He had slept with the dog for years, and after their marriage insisted on the dog's being provided with a bed in their room. This made trouble. Finally Mrs. Scott left, declaring she wanted a husband without a dog.

SALOON TRUST

Seeks to Control Everything In Chicago.

Chicago, June 17.—Planning to acquire all the better class of saloon and cafe property in the down-town district, the big corporation, known as Hannah and Hogg is acuiring leases and purchasing "license privileges" wherever possible.

It has been rumored persitsently that the officers of the corporation, which now controls thirty-one saloons in various sections of the city, will attempt to bring about an increase in the yearly license fee, and will ask the city council to make the rate $1000 a year in the business district, thus practically creating a saloon trust.

RAISE THE RATE.

Zenith Company Puts Up Price of Telephones.

Notices have been sent out by the Zenith Telephone company informing its subscribers that after July 1, the price of business telephones will be raised to $36 per year, for one party on a line, and $30 per year for more than one party.

The raise is in conformity with the permission given by the voters at the recent election. Formerly the business 'phones had but one party on a line, the price being $30. The raise will therefore affect only those who have individual lines.

Big Clothing Sale.

A sensational sale of clothing begins tomorrow morning at the Eagle Clothing and Shoe House. Caldwell, Jr., is president. Mr. Duncan has a host of friends in the city, which, with his wide circle of business acquaintances, insures his success in his new enterprise.

EX-GOVERNOR NASH DYING.

THE AFRICAN DWARFS.

The Peculiar Little People of the Congo Basin.

The news that the Rev. Mr. Verner is returning from his old missionary field in teh southern part of the Congo basin with about twenty-five dwarfs for the anthropological exhibition at St. Louis will interest not only the visitors there but also a wide circle of scientific men, says the New York Sun. Anthropologists have for years improved all opportunities to study these curious peoples, whose chief peculiarity is that they are much under the average stature, but they have been studied chiefly in Africa, for only a few of them have been taken to Europe. The party now coming to America numbers at least twice as many dwarfs as, up to this time, have been taken from their forest homes.

Du Challlu's book, published in 1861, gave the first modern information relating to the dwarfs of Equatorial Africa, the results of his discovery of the Obongo tribe near the west coast, north of the Congo river. The dwarfs now on their way to America are from the Batwa family, living on the southern tributaries of the Congo, whose existence was not known till 1885 and 1886, when the four famous Congo travelers, Wolf, Wissmann, Grenfell and Von Francois brought them to light.

"Don't go near these dwarfs," was the admonition of the Congo natives to Grenfell. "They permit no one to enter their country. They poison all their weapons. They are the ugliest of mortals and have great heads with bearded chins up on the smallest of bodies." Sure enough Grenfell and Von Francois found beards on the faces of many of the Batwa, but the heads of the dwarfs are not disproportionately large and their features are not especially ugly. Unlike their cousins, the Akka, who live in the northeastern part of the Congo basin and go nearly naked, the Batwa wear a wide strip of native cloth around their litle loins.

Verner has lived for years among these little people. If he had not become well acquainted with them and won tehir confidence he could not easily get them down to the sea and embark them on an ocean vessel. In the very district where Verner lived so long, Von Francois drew a lively picture of the howling little demons who showered hundreds of arrows that dashed against the steel network which protected his steamer or stuck in its wooden sun roof. Grenfell saw the same little warriors clamboring along precipitous slopes or swinging like monkeys from limb to limb of trees and climbing out on branches overhanging the water so that they might speed their arrows at shorter range against the men who had dared to intrude upon their privacy. He said their ear-splitting yells were out of all proportion to their physical insignificance. The blank cartridges he fired at them, however, had an excellent moral effect upon the little folks when they took to canoes and seemed bent on making a prize of the white man's boat.

One day Dr. Wolff, pushing up another stream in the same district where missionaries are now living, suddenly came upon about twenty tumbledown beehive huts, the homes of the Batwa. It was the first time he met them and they were so awestruck by his sudden advent that they would hardly utter a word. A crowd of nearly a hundred coffee-brown little folks, none of them larger than children two-thirds grown stood timidly at a distance. After some hours the explorer won their confidence so far that they permitted him to approach and he took the heights of many of them on a spear shaft. His measurements of full-grown adults varied from 4 feet 3 inches to 4 feet 7½ inches. Their average height has since been found to be about 4 feet 5 inches. Unlike the Akka, the Batwa are not unusually prognathous nor have they disproportionately large abdomens, but most of them are compact, well built little creatures without any physical peculiarity except their small size.

This was long before the days of the mission stations south of the Congo river. Today the wide region where the Batwa hunt is teh home of a oonsiderable number of white teachers and rubber collectors. The dwarfs no longer look upon the white as enemies who have come among them to destroy them. It is because they have given the strangers their confidence that a single white man, by gentle means, is now bringing a party of them to America. They will arouse much curiosity and interest here; and when they go home they will have wonderful stories to relate of the unknown world to which they are soon to be introduced.

SHE WAS MISTAKEN.

Life: A young kindergarten teacher of Manhattan, who is made much of by her pupils—frequently meeting their parents—has a very affable manner, and on entering a Broadway car recently, exclaimed in her most cordial way to one of the passengers: "Why, how do you do, Mr. Brown!" As the man addressed evidently did not know her and looked rather dazed, she saw her mistake and hurriedly apologized, saying: "Oh, I beg your pardon—I thought you were the father of one of my children."

Then everyone within hearing looked so amazed that the young lady left the car at the next stop.

WANTED THEM ITEMIZED.

The following "true story" is vouched for by Senator Depew, says the Chicago Tribune.

"Just to oblige" a depositor, the cashier of a bank in a Western town allowed him to overdraw his account $1000. A few days later the cashier learned there was to be an examination of the bank's account. He sent at once for the depositor, told him of the impending examination, and asked him to make his account good.

"I can't do it," replied the depositor. "I haven't the money, and I can't possibly raise it inside of three weeks. What can I do about it?"

The cashier was in sore straits. He did not have money enough of his own to make good the deficit, and for a long time he couldn't think of any way of bridging the trouble. Suddenly a bright idea dawned on him.

"I'll tell you what we'll do," he said to the depositor. "You draw a draft on the shah of Persia for $1000 and deposit it in your account. It will be at least six weeks before we have it returned protested. Meanwhile you can skirmish up the money to make good the overdraft."

The depositor laughed at the idea, but made out the draft on the shah and put it in for collection.

"There'll be a hot time in Persia when the shah gets that," the depositor said to the cashier, and the cashier agreed with him.

Within the three weeks the depositor made some collections through his regular business and straightened out his bank account.

About six weeks after the draft was made on the shah the cashier received a check from Teneean for $1000 from the equerry of the shah. On the back of the voucher which accompanied it and above the indorsement of the equerry this statement was written:

"The shah of Persia requests that hereafter all bills from the United States of America shall be itemized."

TOADS AND RABBITS.

Francis E. Luepp writes in the New York Evening Post this epilogue to a long dissertation on toads:

Speaking of toads, with incidental deference to other saltatory animal life, recalls a mot attributed to one of the justices of the supreme court, which has been giving the Washington gossips a good deal of amusement of late. He was dining the other evening with the family of a distinguished ex-senator, who are noted for their extravagant advocacy of the vegetarian diet. Over the delicacies of the table, which included pretty nearly every form of edible plant-life suited to the season, conversation turned upon the familiar theme; and the hostess, after trying in vain to convert her beef-reared guest by arguments based on the chemical constituents of various food, pleaded:

"But surely, Mr. Justice, you must admit that vegetarianism means strength and agility, when you remember that the rabbit, which feeds wholly on vegetables, can make such great leaps through the air from hiding-place to hiding-place."

"True, madam," answered the jurist, gravely, "but we must also remember that the minute creature for which naturalists claim the ability to jump more times its own length than any other belongs in the class of pure carnivora."

LIMITATIONS OF HIS ART.

Shortly after the late Franz Lenbach had painted the portrait of Emperor Wilhelm I a privy councilor called on him to express the emperor's satisfaction. There was only one criticism to make: Would the professor be so kind as to paint more distinctly the buttons on the uniform which were only indicated vaguely. Lenbach looked at him a moment over his glasses and said: "Look here, Mr. Councilor, I paint heads, not buttons dich mal nur Knopf, aber keine Knopf'!" Tell his majesty that!" The emperor, when this answer was brought to him, laughed heartily.

GOSPEL IS GENTLE

Founder of the Spirit Fruit Farm Defends His Theories.

Self-Sacrifice Is the Keynote That Is Insisted On.

Lisbon, Ohio, June 17.—Jacob Beilhart, founder of the Spirit Fruit farm, has written a "defense" of his teachings.

The Spirit Fruit Farm is incorporated under the laws of Ohio and such a storm of comment has followed its recent publicity following the removal of "Blessed" Herbeson, the 18-year-old Chicago girl, by her father, that the attention of Attorney General Wade H. Ellis has been attracted. He has replied that if moral laws are being ignored by Beilhart's men and women converts, the grand jury of Columbrand county should investigate, but that no formal complaint has yet reached his office.

To teach mankind how to apply the truths of Jesus Christ to daily life; to disseminate a practical knowledge of the principles which pertain to man's spiritual, social, mental and physical nature; to assist each other in attaining the highest state of spiritual and physical perfection.

Believing that selfishness is the one great hindrance to human happiness, we desire to unite as one and assist others in eliminating this element from their nature by practicing unselfishness in our own lives by helping others, and to acquire by donations or otherwise, all necessary property and funds.

The discovery of the whereabouts of "Blessed" Herbeson through her sister, Mrs. C. L. Grise, of Chicago, is expected to result in the breaking up of Beilhart's happy family and the blocking of his policy of non-resistance in human conduct.

He has many other converts, among them Irving E. Rockwell, a Chicago millionaire gold mine owner, who declares that he never knew peace and happiness before.

Other recent Chicago converts are Robert G. Wall, a former labor leader, his wife and their daughter, Mildred, Eugene Clark, George Hawkinson, Mrs. Jeannette White, David Stanforth and E. J. Knowdell, the latter of British Columbia.

Among the women in the colony are Miss Virginia Moore, of Lisbon, Belle Norris, the daughter of a Detroit minister, Dr. Kate Waters, of Chicago, and Rose Dieffer, of Nashville. In all there are now about 100 men and twenty women domiciled in the big 14-room house at Lisbon.

Jacob Beilhart, founder of the strange new cult that has found root in Ohio and which bears such great resemblance to free love, was born an American son of Lutheran parents, and is 37 years of age. At 21 he was a Seventh Day Adventist preacher in Kansas, and later took a course in nursing at the Battle Creek (Mich.) sanitarium, which he was ordered to leave for attempting to effect cures by prayer. He then devoted himself to an investigation of Christian science, theosophy, the Protestant and Catholic religions, single tax, socialism and political economy.

He has arrived at the conclusion that the entire social, economic and political system is unjust, and the composite result of his varied study has been the development of his theory on religion of "universal love," "non-resistance," and "common ownership of all things."

Beilhart himself, big, hearty, strong, and claiming to be possessed of a happiness that surpasseth understanding, has written a "defense" of his teachings. He claims to be living simply as Jesus of Nazareth taught and lived. "To resist is to strengthen opposition," he says. "Is selfishness or the plan of self-centered interest a success in practice? Man has been such a slave to selfishness with so many separate interests opposed one to the other that he has become a battleground, and the battle between the condemned and justified elements in his nature has raged fiercely. Man has become an abnormal creature because he has imagined himself to have separate interests apart from the rest of the universe not realizing that he is a mere member of a body including all, and that personal resistance is useless.

"Quite a number of years ago while I was engaged in religious work I determined to see what would become of a man who gave himself wholly to humanity. I saw others sacrificing themselves in various ways. Some trying to locate the North Pole, others locating themselves in various positions among their fellows. Others trying to attain prominence in war or contest between man and man, and occasionally one would sacrifice his life by going over Niagara in a barrel. I seemed to be willing to make the sacrifice of myself or separate life to try and find a better way for humanity to live here in this world. I would follow my highest desire each day, caring not for results.

"If there was a way by which a higher power or intelligence could reach and direct the human mind and will, I intended to give that power full right to do all it could through me. I would not restrict it in any way. Well, I must say that I have been guilty of disregarding many of the conventionalities and customs which seem to hold humanity in bondage. However, I am quite satisfied with the results, for not only have continuous lights come to me and others through me, but I have learned beyond the possibility of doubt that it is safe to trust wholly to that power, or spirit, or father, who wells within my heart. I have no confidence in any other law or power.

"As a ship can be turned and guided by operating the helm, so man is only to be rightly directed by the power placed within him. This spirit (as I call it) is infallable in the direction of all his thinking and doing, moment by moment. 'Consider the lilies,' etc., and the bird that builds its nest. Who teaches it how? All the qualities of mind and all functions of body are necessary, but spirit must rule them all ere they can give satisfaction.

"I teach universal love because I practice it. The spirit that is in me draws no distinction on account of blood relationship. This does not result in confusion, but in a harmony so complete that it gives perfect satisfaction. When I say 'universal love' I mean universal service for the good of all humanity, giving free to all who receive anything which is given me to give them.

"I have no intention of forming a colony or government. This universe is perfect, or it is if man only becomes conscious of it and obeys its laws within him. External laws or organization will add nothing to it.

"Yes, I have power over people, but it is because what I live and teach finds a ready echo in their heart. The drummer boy has power to cause a company of tired men to march to the tune he beats because it finds a response in each man. I am master of human nature because I obey the law. It is not unlikely that the world must meet plain truth in the near future as to practical living, for they have prayed for light and it must come to them.

"I am not opposing the existing institutions, either moral, financial or educational, but I come to those who are the victims of these institutions and wrong conceptions of human life. Institutions will change of themselves when the individuals change."

ASPECT OF SUMMER

Arrival of Fruits Give It to Michigan Street Market.

Plums, Cherries and Melons In—Strawberries at Height.

Michigan street begins to assume its regular summer appearance with the arrival of the first plums and cherries, and other Southern fruits. The big, round, sweet cherries from the South are now becoming quite plentiful on the local market, although the price never falls very low. There are two varieties, the red and the white. They come from Arkansas and Southern Missouri. Some sour cherries have also been received from the South. They are from Arkansas and are selling for $2.75 for a twenty-four-quart case.

The plums are very scarce as yet. Only a few small local shipments have been received from Chicago, where they are received in carload lots. They are from Florida and are selling on the local market for $2.50 per twenty-four-quart case. Even watermelons have begun to appear.

• • •

Strawberries are now being received from three different parts of the country. The Illinois crop is still on the market, selling at $2.40 per twenty-four-quart case. Some choice Oregon berries are also coming in. They are larger and finer than the Illinois berries and are selling for $2.75 per case. The first of the local or Wisconsin berries have also been received. They are coming from the country about Chippewa Falls and EauClaire, where the crop promises to be a heavy one.

• • •

The first raspberries have been received, but the price is very high, and they are not likely to be within the reach of the average purse for a week or ten days to come. The present shipments are from Illinois and they are selling for $4 per twenty-four-quart case.

• • •

Potatoes have continued to soar in price. The old potatoes are selling for $1.50 per bushel, and the new crop for $1.35. The cause for the raise in price is given by the dealers as being the floods in the river valleys of Kansas, which is the source of supply for the new potatoes at present. The farmers have been unable to get the tubers to market, and the result has been an increased demand on the remainder of the old crop, which is about exhausted.

• • •

Buter, eggs and dairy products remain unchanged in price, creamery prints selling for 20 cents and fancy dairies for 14 and 16 cents. Eggs are worth 15 cents.

It pays to advertise in The Herald—ask Simon Clark.

Carnations 25c a dozen.

2000 fresh carnations—white, red and pink, will arrive on the Omaha tomorrow and go on sale at 11:30 a. m. Florists get 50c and 75c—Our price will be only 25c a dozen.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Pure Water Found Six Thousand Feet Out In Menominee Bay.

Menominee—Dr. Davis, the chemist, believes that sufficiently pure water can be found from 4000 to 6000 feet out in the bay at Menominee. It has been determined by analysis that water out that distance is suitable for use, but whether its purity is of a permanent nature and not due to a shifting of the water is still a problem to be solved. The investigation is being continued. At present water is being secured 1000 and 2000 fet from the shore, and the analysis shows that the supply there is impure.

Statistics just compiled show that the old-line life insurance companies paid out $5,648,962 the past year in this state. The upper peninsula claimed a large share of this amount, the principal sums going to the following places: Marquette, $65,455; Baraga, $4160; Bessemer, $7020; Champion, $3000; Crystal Falls, $2950; Escanaba, $37,598; Houghton, $45,500; Iron Mountain, $19,872; Iron River, $3230; Ironwood, $17,977; Ishpeming, $35,499; Lake Linden, $20,600; Hancock, $33,960; Hermansville, $2460; Newberry, $9250; Ontonagon, $3075; Sault Ste. Marie, $7100.

Manistique—Manistique's steam roller dropped into a cistern located at the corner of Walnut and Pearl streets the other day. The cistern was used for fire protection in the early history of the city, and as it was thought to have been filled up years ago, Engineer Bower felt secure in running the city's automobile over it. Much trouble was experienced in extricating the machine.

Stephenson—The Stephenson creamery has completed arrangements to establish a skimming station at Carney, Menominee county. The sum of $800 has been subscribed by the people in that vicinity towards the project, and the necessary machinery has been ordered. The building will be 16 by 20 feet, and will be erected a short distance from the depot. A committee of three will be appointed among the stockholders at Carney to work with the directors of the Stephenson creamery.

Nadeau—B. E. Swain, formerly principal of the Nadeau (Menominee county) schools, has secured an excellent position as teacher in the government schools at Manila, Philippine islands. He sailed for the Orient on one of the boats of the Pacific Mail line last week.

Escanaba—The owners of Escanaba bicycle repair shops have been charged with being in league with the authorities in having the signs and placards removed from the poles along Ludington street. Thousands of tacks were distributed along the street by this process and a good many tires have been punctured.

STARTLING EVIDENCE.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds to be unequaled. A recent expression from T. J. McFarland, Bentorville, Va., serves as example. He writes: "I had Bronchitis for three years and doctored all the time without being benefited. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and a few bottles wholly cured me." Equally effective in curing all Lung and Throat troubles, Consumption, Pneumonia and Grip. Guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free, regular sizes 50c, and $1.00.

C. A. TOWNE SAYS

Bryan Will Not Fight For Reaffirming Kansas City Platform.

He Outlines His Own Ideas of the Party's Principles.

New York, June 17.—William Jennings Bryan will not make any fight at St. Louis for specific reaffirmation of the Kansas City platform, according to the announcement made by Charles A. Towne, Mr. Bryan's close friend, and a delegate to the convention from this city.

Mr. Towne outlined what he considered the platform to be adopted at St. Louis ought to be. His views are very interesting just at this time, in view of the fact that he will be put forward as one of Tammany's chief spokesmen at St. Louis.

"Will Mr. Bryan ask for a reaffirmation of the Kansas City platform?" Mr. Towne was asked. "No he will not. Have you read the Nebraska platform? Though it contains two or three things I would not put in the national platform, it is a very good one. Mr. Bryan will be a potent force at St. Louis, and he will not insist on a reaffirmation of the past platforms. His sole concern is to see the party faced the right way and take an honest and sincere attitude. If it does that, although it may not do all he might ask, he will be content."

"An editorial printed in the New York World," said Mr. Towne, "is the best thing I have yet seen written about the attitude which should be maintained toward Mr. Bryan at St. Louis. It was written in a broad, sane, charitable temper and in the spirit which will reunite the party at St. Louis. It is precisely what I have been preaching all along."

Following is the World editorial referred to by Mr. Towne:

"Mr. Bryan has made public his desire to represent Nebraska on the resolutions committee of the Democratic national committee. His wish, of course, will be granted. While it is unusual for a man who has been his party's candidate for president to serve as a delegate to a national convention, and still less usual for him to seek a place on any of the committees, Mr. Bryan regards himself as a crusader in a holy cause whose duty it is to lead in person the forces arrayed against the political infidels.

"No objection can be made to Mr. Bryan's serving on the platform committee. On the contrary if he takes advantage of his oportunities, there is no other place in the convention from which he could exert such a tremendous influence in behalf of party sanity and his country's welfare.

"To acheive this he need surrender none of his past or present beliefs. Nobody is asking the Bryan element in the party to fall on their knees and implore forgiveness of their sins. They need confess no fault and volunteer no penance. It will be enough if they refrain from interfering while the dead past buries its dead.

"The main issue of the Chicago and Kansas City platforms is dead. Mr. Bryan knows this. We need not say why it is dead: If Mr. Bryan and his friends choose to believe that the demand for the free coinage of silver has been satisfied by the incerased production of gold and that their quantitative theory of money has been cvindicated by the march of events, well and good. All conservative Democrats can offer is to let it go at that, so long as no attempt is made to resurrect an issue that the American people have twice buried under an avalanche of ballots.

"All that reasonable Democrats are asking of Mr. Bryan is to turn from the past to the present. There are plenty of live issues, all of which are expedient. The gross inequalities of the Dingley tariff, the criminal trusts, the imperialistic tendencies of the Republican party, the wanton extravagance of congress, the departmental scandals, the recklessness of a 'big stick' administration, the burden of the new militarism—these are immediate issues in which the Democratic party must find its opportunity.

"What is past is past. It would be as foolishly to reaffirm the Chicago and Kansas City platforms as to reaffirm that disastrous "the-war-is-a-failure" platform upon which the party was overwhelmed in 1864, in spite of McClellan's efforts to extricate it.

"Let Mr. Bryan turn his attention to the issues of 1904 and he will encounter no antagonism at St. Louis. The conservative Democrats will not only welcome him as a member of the committee on resolutions, but if he will select only live issue planks he can frame the platform."

"Here," continued Mr. Towne, "is a magnificent array of issues—just the platform I would write at St. Louis, with a little elaboration: The gross inequalities of the Dingley tariff, the criminal trusts, the imperialistic tendencies of the Republican party, the wanton extravagance of congress, the departmental scandals, the recklessness of a 'big stick' administration, the burden of the new militarism—these are immediate issues in which the Democratic party must find its opportunity."

"What, in your opinion, are the chief issues?" Mr. Towne was asked.

"There is but one," declared Mr. Towne with great emphasis. "The abdication of every American ideal which has been held by our republic since its birth—the abrogation of the very constitution itself. It divides itself into two questions, one international and the other internal—the guarantee of national independence to all nations and the preservation of equal opportunities to all citizens within our own country.

"By the policy which the present administration has adopted toward foreign countries it has struck at the very heart of the constitution. We are to waive that aside and interfere whenever the evanescent impulse of the executive shall direct with the independence of other nations. By sheltering favored interests and giving certain individuals advantages over others the administration has destroyed the constitutional guarantee of equal opportunities to all our citizens.

"That is the great question. It is a national disease and an issue appealing to the moral sense and the patriotism of every citizen. It involves the question of whether our form of government shall continue, or whether we shall countenance changes which tend to destroy all of our ideals and contravene our constitution. The convenience of the executive today is the precedent tomorrow and the next day it is law. We do not pass from a republic into an empire at once, but if we permit the executive to usurp the prerogatives of other branches of the government we have taken a fatal step.

"Of course, this involves the making of the president's personality an issue in the campaign to a certain extent, but in writing the platform I would be careful not to make Mr. Roosevelt a martyr. I would point out, not with too great prolixity the fact trat if these dangerous departures from all precedent and authority have been taken by an executive who is merely an inheriter of power through an unfortunate calamity, what might not be expected from that same executive chosen by the votes of the people.

"On the tariff I would declare that the expenses of this government for a good many years, at least, will be so great that in order to meet them it will be necessary to raise the revenues from duties levied on imports. But I would levy those duties with the view to the effect they would have upon the home markets and the cost of the article to the consumer.

"The present position of the Republican party for protection with revenue only as an incident, is absolutely contrary to the original position of the party on that question. The party's first position was for incidental protection only.

"I would declare for the regulation of all those monopolies which arbitrarily increase the cost of living. I would be careful, however, to differentiate between those corporations and other necessary and evolutional combinations which, by increased capitalization and concentrated management, reduce the cost of production. But I would see to it that the benefit from the decreased cost was reaped by the public and did not go into the pocket of the manufacturer. I would arrange those corporations which, through combination, decrease the cost of porduction, but raise the price of the articles produced to the consumer.

"There should be a strong plank against the existing corruption in the federal departments. I would point out that the American voters cannot permit a system to continue under which gross abuses have grown up."

"Would you reaffirm the Kansas City platform?"

"No. I se no reason why it should be. I would begin the platform with: 'We, the representatives of the Democratic party in convention assembled, renew our declaration of faith in the principles of it serty in which our party was founded,' and then go alead to present the live issues."

BABY PLAYED

With a Blacksnake and Was Not Harmed.

Bloomsburg, Pa., June 17.—Undisturbed by a blacksnaek that crept into a clothes basket in which she lay in the yard, Eva Buelah, a 3-year-old daughter of Peter Buelah, a River Hill farmer, hailed the intruder as a new pet and carressed it as she would a kitten until rescued from her dangerous position by her frightened father.

Her years were too few for knowledge of the scrape her prototype had got into in connection with a serpent, but little Eva perhaps was wiser than Eve; for, whereas the mother of the race let the constrictor do most of the talking, the baby kept up an uninterrupted flow of prattle to the snake. From the moment in which it dragged its four feet of length into her wicker paradise she was the most delighted youngster in those parts. She cooed to the sable playmate, rapped it over the head with her rattle and laughed with delight when it wriggled over her. Her parents heard and saw her, but they didn't perceive the snake until the father walked from the door of the house toward the basket. Then he dashed to her side.

Buelah snatched the little one from the basket and gave her a fling that sent her rolling over the grass. Then he raised a clothes pole and swung it on the snake until he had beaten the reptile to a pulp. He was astonished to find Eva unharmed. There was no danger from poison, but the snake, being of the constrictor species, easily might have choked the child in its folds.

REMARKABLE STORY TOLD

By Young Woman of Being Carried Away By Gypsies.

Springfield, O., June 17.—One of the most remarkable cases of kidnaping on record, followed by a thrilling and daring escape through the woods and field in the darkness, is related by Miss Roxie Fence, a pretty seventeen-year-old girl, living at Medway, this county.

She has been keeping house for a farmer, whose wife is a patient in a hospital. According to her story, a band of gypsies stopped in front of the house and one of the men came to the door. He told Miss Fence that his wife would like to speak to her. The girl declined to leave the house and the man went away.

She says that he returned a few minutes later, slipped up behind her and put a shawl over her head. He drew it down tightly, raised her in his arms and carried her to the wagon, where she was strapped down and gagged. The gypsies drove rapidly away and when Miss Fence was taken from the wagon she found herself in a dense woods. She was informed that if she attempted to escape she would be killed. While strapped in the wagon the man cut off her hair, and after they had stopped in the woods the women in the party made her remove her clothing and don men's attire.

Miss Fence was badly freightened, and says she would still be a prisoner had not a boy in the party assisted her to escape. The lad told her that he had been abducted by the gypsies when a mere child, and that he had made three attempts to leave them but was prevented each time.

When the others fell asleep the boy told her to flee, and that as soon as she was missed he would start them in the opposite direction. The girl ran through the woods to a field. She realized that she was in the Funderburg timber, near New Carlisle, from the surroundings. She turned towards Medway, keeping herself concealed from view as much as possible until she was almost home, and then she walked along the road, arriving at her mother's home at a late hour, still wearing men's apparel and minus her locks. Her mother had been notified of her departure from the farmer's house and could not account for her absence.

The girl's story caused wild excitement. Men drove to the Funderburg timber but could find no trace of the gypsies. The search was renewed next day without success. The pair of trousers the girl wore belongs to the man she worked for and the girl says the gypsy must have stolen them when he was at the house.

CHANGED CARS,

And Michigan Farmer's Bride Strangely Disappeared.

Columbus, Ohio, June 17.—T. J. Kenworthy, a farmer of Vermontville, Mich., asked the police to help him find his bride of a few days. She was Elizabeth Chafin, of Williamson, W. Va. He had never seen her until the day of their marriage late last week. It was a correspondence courtship, and then she went to his home to be married.

They were on their honeymoon, headed for her old home. He left her awhile at the Union Depot, where they changed cars, and he lost her. The police were unable to give him any assistance. Kenworthy thinks she got on a train thinking he was aboard. He hopes to find her at Williamson. She had $50 of his money.

ONLY COLORED WOMAN

Who Is a Member of the G. A. R.

New Albany, Ind., June 17.—Lucy Nichols, said to be the only colored woman in the United States who is a member of the G. A. R., is critically ill from a stroke of paralysis. She is probably the only colored woman who draws a pension on account of service in the civil war as a nurse.

While the Twenty-third Indiana infantry, which was recruiting in this city, was in camp at Bolivar, Tenn., in 1863, she joined it as a nurse and cook. Her master had intended to send her South with a number of other slaves and she ran away from his plantation.

After the fall of Vicksburg she went with the soldiers on their march to the sea with Sherman's army accompanied them to this city, where she has since made her home. Several years after the war she was made an honorary member of Sanderson post, G. A. R., of this city, which was composed largely of soldiers of the Twenty-third regiment. A special act, granting her a pension, was passed by congress about six years ago.

She has attended all the state department encampments and several of the national encampments, and has never missed a reunion of the Twenty-third, and whenever any of them has been ill she could be seen carrying to his home a nicely-cooked chicken or some tempting bit of food.

CHEAP IMITATIONS

Are the Jewels of Mrs. David Rothschild.

New York, June 17.—While David Rothschild is trying to learn how to make mats in Sing Sing prison without spoiling the shape of his finger nails, his wife and his immediate friends are trying to find out what he did with all the money that came his way while he was president of the Federal bank, and the man who turned the screw in that now famous usury shop, the Globe Securities company. At the time of his arrest it was said that he had spent at least $150,000 on jewelry for his wife. Mrs. Rothschild thought he had.

"Rothschild didn't leave his wife with any too much ready money," said the friend of her family yesterday, "so she consulted her father a few days ago about the best way to realize on her jewels. The old gentleman is pretty wise, and, moreover, had had some experience with David that wasn't as inexpensive as it might have been. So he said to his daughter.

"If you want to find out just what the stuff is worth take it to some broker that never had even a remote connection with the Globe Securities company, and you'll find out just how much cash it would net you if you had to sell it quick. In the jewelry line quick assets mean a pawnbroker's valuation."

"So Mrs. Rothschild got all her jewels together one day and took them down to Simpson's. She has found that she is worth just about $1200, instead of $150,000 or more. And now she and others are wondering what Rothschild did with his money."

Other friends and relatives of Mrs. Rothschild denied that she had discovered that the jewels her husband gave her were paste.

Mrs. Rothschild's father said the story was untrue, and that, as a matter of fact his daughter had never had a stomacher or a string of amethysts. He said her jewels were not worth more than $5000, but what jewelry she had was genuine.

VACATION IDEA

Approved By Senator Depew, Replying to Russell Sage.

Financier Does Not Appreciate Meaning of Real Work.

New York, June 17.—In spite of Russell Sage's views on the vacation question, there is one man in his office who once had a holiday. It was years ago.

The fortunate person is Carlisle Osborne, who in the early '80s went off on a week's business trip. He has been the envy of the office ever since. Mr. Osborne has ben twenty-seven years in Mr. Sage's employ.

Russel Sage may never have enjoyed a day's vacation during his 83 years' career. That is a matter in which no one but Russell Sage is especially interested. But when the eminent financier lays ruthless hands on one of the few privileges which corporations and private capitalists have graciously permitted the great mass of the people—in such instances as they could not prevent it—to enjoy, he will not find many enthusiastic supporters.

Mr. Sage congratulates himself on never having acquired the "vacation habit." He also holds that the employe has no right to demand from his employer two weeks of time for which the employer pays, when, if the employer demanded two weeks extra work without pay there would be an awful row.

Another strong contention of Mr. Sage is that a man who can work eleven and a half months can just as well work twelve, and that it is absurd if a man suffers wear and tear of vitality in eleven months to think he can recuperate from that damage in two weeks.

Perhaps a fit answer to that last objection is contained in the admission of Senator Depew that a six weeks' or two months' vacation effects complete recuperation. Mr. Sage will please take notice.

When Senator Depew was shown the statements against vacations made by Mr. Sage he expressed surprise.

"I judge by my own experience," said he. "I know that if I work ten months at the top of my bent, which means overdoing it, I am all used up.

"But with a vacation of six weeks or two months I will do better intellectual work than ever the next year.

"After a vacation my judgment is better. Things that have to be done are easily accomplished and problems which kept me awake nights before my vacation solve themselves. I should say that very few men can do like Mr. Sage, and that it is hardly fair for him to judge other men by himself.

"For fifty years he has been a loaner of money, operating in Wall street. At 3 o'clock every afternoon his daily task was over. He certainly cannot appreciate the burden that rests on men who manage big corporations, some of them with tens of thousands of employes.

"Such men's labor never cease. They are continually confronted with new problems—the labor question creates sudden contingencies, and many other things enter into the conditions to be considered.

"These are the things that the head of a big corporation not only works over all day, but takes home with him at night.

"A man who carries such responsibilities as these and adds to them social or public obligations, or any outside accomplishment, must drive the spurs into his mental steed until the blood comes."

"But how is the employe affected? Granted that the man of affairs needs his vacation, how about those who carry out his plans?"

"'All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy,'" replied Senator Depew with a twinkle in his eye. "That is an adage as old as the English language—and it is absolutely true in its application to every man who works with his brains.

"It is a very great mistake to think that the employer who gives his employe a two weeks' holiday with pay is throwing away the two weeks' pay. He is in reality making a profitable investment by increasing the earning capacity of the man who enjoys his vacation. The employer more than gets his money back.

"Holidays and feast days add to the efficiency of those who thus receive respite from the daily grind. They make men happier and more contented. And that sort of men are the most valuable to their employers."

John De Witt Warner, of the law firm of Peckham, Warner & Strong, also takes issue with Mr. Sage on the vacation question. Said he:

"While I may not have been able to follow my inclinations for everybody else—and especially for my own employes.

"I think that the vacation tends to increase a man's working capacity and raise the standard of his mental powers.

"It keeps men out of the rut, and the rut is dangerous. I know I would be better off if I could follow my preaching instead of keeping at the grind."

FORMER OHIO MAYOR

And Another Man's Wife Caught In Raid.

Mansfield, Ohio, June 17.—Arrested in the house, No. 48 West Sixth street, by police officers who had served under him when he was mayor of Mansfield, and arraigned before Mayor Huntington Brown, his successor in office, was the fortune of former Mayor Thomas R. Bobison, a prominent attorney of this city.

Complaint had been made to the police regarding the house, and about 2 o'clock in the morning the place was raided. Four women and two men were arrested. One man got away.

One of the women arrested was Mrs. Maud Wigton, wife of Walter W. Wigton. Mrs. Wigton is a beautiful woman, 23 years old, and first attracted attention to herself by hurling a billiard ball through a large mirror in Wagner's saloon, in the old Presbyterian Church building, a couple of years ago, the Carrie Nation act being done because her father had taken her little son with him to the saloon.

Last year when Mayor Robison's wife sued for divorce she named Mrs. Wigton as co-respondent.

Mrs. Wigton, when arraigned in the police court, pleaded not guilty to the charge against her, but was found guilty and found $50 and costs.

Robison, when arraigned, pleaded not guilty, but later changed it to guilty. Mayor Brown announced that he would give his decision later.

Piles Can Be Cured

By Internal Treatment

Without the Aid of Narcotics or the Knife

You who suffer with piles know what a glorious boon it would be to you to be absolutely and painlessly cured. You know from actual experience that salves, ointments and other local applications do not cure. You may get relief, but you keep on suffering.

There is a cause for every human ill. Remove the cause and you cure the complaint. Piles have two distinct causes: First, congestion of the liver; second, constipation resulting from poor digestion.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific

The Internal Remedy

absolutely removes these causes by increasing the flow of digestive juices in the stomach, and relieving the congestion of the liver. It is a tonic for the entire bowel system and helps each particular member of this system to work easily and naturally.

You simply take a teaspoonful of this positive, internal remedy three times a day before each meal. It is pleasant to the taste and absolutely free from opium, cocaine or other narcotics. It is not a palliative or temporary remedy; it produces a positive, radical and lasting cure.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific is sold under an

to cure any case of blind, bleeding, itching or internal piles, no matter how chronic or aggravated it may be. Out of over 10,000 cases there are only three on record where a positive cure has not been made.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific can be procured of any reliable druggist under an iron-clad agreement to refund your money should you take two $1.00 bottles of the remedy without receiving positive benefit.

BINDERS TAKE RECESS

To Give Their Committees a Chance to Work.

St. Paul, June 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The International Brotherhood of Bookbinders held a short session of about an hour today and then recessed in order to give several committees a chance to proceed with their work.

The committee considering the Miller case had an all night's sitting last night in the hope of being able to report today but they came before the convention and asked for more time. It is expected that a report will be forthcoming this evening. Among other things considered is a resolution making the office of president a salaried one ,fixing salary at $1800 a year and a resolution creating a reserve fund of $50,000, through a per capita tax of members.

BOUND OVER WITHOUT BOND

Archie Ouge Not Given the Opportunity to Get Bail.

Archie Ouge, which is the right name of the man who is claimed to have attempted to shoot his divorced wife on Garfield avenue yesterday afternoon, was arraigned in the municipal court this afternoon, and waived his preliminary hearing. Judge Windom bound him over to await the action of the grand jury without bonds, on account of the seriousness of the offense with which he is charged.

"I was afraid for a time that I had killed him yesterday afternoon," said Sergeant Gilion today in speaking of the scuffle he had with the man in arresting him. "He kept flourishing the revolver which contained three cartridges and every time it passed my head I expected to feel the bullet penetrate my skull. I finally threw him and caught him by the throat. I had never choked a man in my life before and I guess I must have overdone it a little, for it was several minutes before he regained consciousness."

WILD BILL NAVES

Accused of Many Crimes and Now Behind the Bars.

Prefers Missouri Sentence to Facing a Jury In Arkansas.

Jefferson City, Mo., June 17.—Rather than face an Arkansas jury and stand trial for shooting a neighboring farmer, Bill Naves, one of the most desperate men the Ozark region ever produced, decided to serve a sentence of four years in the Missouri penitentiary. Naves was convicted at the January term of the Howell county circuit court of felonious assault. He was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary and pending a hearing of the case by the supreme court, has been out on bond. A few days ago, when the Arkansas authorities secured a requisition from Gov. Dockery for Naves, the mountaineer chose the smaller of the two evils.

Scarcely 28 years old, Naves has lived a reckless life. His home is near Pontiac, in Ozark county, where for a number of years he has resided with his invalid mother and two sisters. When only 21 years old Naves was convicted of cattle stealing, an offense more serious in the Ozark region than any other crime. For this breach of mountain law he served a term in the penitentiary and then returned home.

Naves has a number of well-to-do relatives in Ozark county. One of these had several hundred head of cattle running on the range and frequently a steer would be found with a horn missing or a tail cut off. These acts of vandalism continued until the owner of the cattle remarked that "he was going to turn 'Bill' Naves loose on the guilty parties." On the evening of July 3, 1901, a man on a gray horse rode from the timber country on North Folk. Within an hour two men fell at the doors of their homes and a boy lay dead on the ground. Bill Naves was accused of the crime.

The first person shot on the wild night raid was Ike Lantz, whose home is in Marion county, Arkansas. He was called to his gate just at dusk and found Bill Naves on a gray horse. As Lantz came to the gate Naves slowly turned the horse until the muzzle of a shotgun resting across the pommel of his saddle was opposite Lantz's body. There was a sudden report and Lantz fell to the ground, badly wounded. Naves then put spurs to his horse and rode away.

Lantz sent his son, Frank Lantz, 12 years old, to the home of his uncle, Samuel Hillhouse, a mile distant, just over the state line in Baxter county, Arkansas, to tell of the shooting. The boy found Hillhouse and his wife in the barnyard, milking. Just as he began telling his story he saw a gray horse standing behind a cedar tree near by. Thinking it was Naves, all ran for the farmhouse. The boy was in the rear. Suddenly a shot rang out and Frank Lantz fell dead at the door of the cabin.

It was scarcely dark when Jerry Jenkins, living in Ozark county, about two miles from the scene of the shooting of the Lantz boy, was called to his door. As Jenkins stepped outside some one shot him in the breast with a load of bird shot. Jenkins says it was Naves who did it, for he recognized his voice when he called and saw him shoot.

When the news of the tragedies became known Naves was a much-wanted man. He fled into Arkansas and hid among the caves and hills of North Fork. Finally he gave himself up to the authorities of Baxter county. For a year he was in the Baxter county jail at Mountain Home, awaiting trial for killing the Lantz boy. His trial was a memorable one and he was acquitted because no tangible evidence could be produced to convict him of first degree murder.

Then came the Marion county authorities who wanted Naves for shooting Ike Lantz, father of the murdered boy. Naves was taken to Yellville, but his wealthy relatives secured his release on bond. Upon his return to Ozark county, Naves was arrested by the authorities there for the shooting of Jerry Jenkins. Again his relatives came to his rescue with their wealth and influence.

Public sentiment in Ozark county was against Naves. His attorneys took the case to Howell county on a change of venue. When it came up for trial here in January more than 100 witnesses were in attendance. All had made the journey of 60 miles in covered wagons, many bringing their cooking utensils and victuals, prepared to camp for a week or longer. The trial was the greatest known in the history of southern Missouri. Naves was found bullty of felonious assault and sentenced to four years in the penitentiary. An appeal was granted to the supreme court and pending the appeal Naves was released on bond. He returned to his Ozark county home.

When the Arkansas case against Naves was called at Yellville he did not appear for trial. His bond was declared forfeited. Then the Arkansas authorities secured from Gov. Dockery a requisition and started after Naves. The fear of facing a jury of Marion county mountaineers caused Naves to conclude that four years in the Missouri penitentiary was preferable to a term on the Arkansas convict farm or in a coal mine.

¶ Your brain is tied pretty closely to your digestive machinery.

¶ Like a coal fire when it gets clinkered up, it's generally the fuel that's to blame.

¶ "FORCE" is what you might call a "free-burning" food.

¶ If you eat plenty of it you won't have those stuck-in-the-mud days when everything seems to be going backward instead of forward.

Sunny Jim

When you buy coal you find some stones mixed with it. These stones cost as much as the coal. They also take up and waste more heat than the coal they displace would have developed.

Just so with the foods you eat which you do not digest.

People who would quickly build Brawn, Brain, and Bone should eat plenty of "FORCE."

Because it is not only rich in the Phosphates and Nitrogen of Wheat that build Brain, Nerve, and Brawn, but is malted with Barley, so that it digests other foods in the stomach, extracting greater nutrition from them.

To Husband Who Was Serving Term as a Convict.

Refused to Be Reconciled to Her Wealthy Father.

Jeffersonville, Ind., June 17.—It was a happy woman who greeted Melvin Beavers on his release from the Indiana reformatory last week.

Before their marriage, nine years ago, Melvin Beavers was addicted to the liquor habit. It was on this account that William Browning, a wealthy farmer at Heltonville, eight miles east of Bedford, objected to the attentions of the young man to his stepdaughter, and gave orders that they break off the engagement. Mrs. Beavers, who was then Miss Maggie Hunter, her father having been Marshall Hunter, a Union soldier, who died when she was one year old, and whose mother later married Browning, refused to obey the dictates of her stepfather, but instead, saw more of Beavers than ever, and they were married the day before her 16th birthday.

So great was her influence over her husband, and so tactful was she, that she secured from him a promise to refrain from further use of intoxicants, and the promise was kept for the next six years. Their devotion to one another was marked and he was surrounding her with all the comforts of life. With the breaking off of the drink habit, he entered the lumber business, and was doing well.

Three years ago Beavers had been out buying lumber and had become chilled from exposure to the cold. He yielded to the temptation to take a drink of whisky, and this called for more, until he became intoxicated. In this state he forged the name of his brother to a check for $8, and passed it on a saloonkeeper. The brother later made the amount good, but prosecution was started and it could not be withdrawn, and Beavers was sentenced to serve from two to twenty-one years in the Indiana penitentiary.

After sentence was pronounced, William Browning, stepfather of Mrs. Beavers, offered to permit her to return to his comfortable home, provided she would give up her convict husband, but she declined and secured employment as a domestic with a family at Bedford. She remained at Bedford about one year, and then went to Terre Haute, where she remained another year, when she learned that her husband would be paroled, as is customary at the expiration of the minimum sentence. She scraped together her scant savings and came to Jeffersonville to meet her husband when he should be released, and accompany him to their old home. Disappointment awaited her, for when she arrived in this city she learned that for some infraction of the rules her husband would not be released until the expiration of another year.

Disheartened, but not discouraged, Mrs. Beavers decided to take up her abode in this city. She secured employment as a domestic, and has since lived in happy anticipation of the time that is so soon to arrive. Since her stay in Jeffersonville she has seen her husband but once, and then in the presence of a guard.

LONGEVITY OF ANIMALS.

The camel is said to live forty years; the horse, thirty; the ox, twenty; the cat, ten; the dog, nine; and, although the allotted span of man is given as seventy years, it will be easily extended to one hundred when everybody gets to eating pillsbury's vitos. This unequaled cereal food is made from the very best portions of the wheat, and feeds both body and brain.

"PINK DOMINOES."

Miss Eulalia Bennett Makes Fine Impression.

Brisket.... ....Jack Doyle
Lady Maggie Wagstaff..Eulalia Bennett
Sophia Greythorn.. ..Helena McKerron
Mrs. Tubbs.. .....Elizabeth Harcourt
Rebecca..... .....Lelia Shaw

Miss Eulalia Bennett, Elliott & Courtenay's new leading woman, made an excellent impression on her audience at the Lyceum last night, on the occasion of her first appearance in Duluth. She bids fair to fully equal Florence Stone's great local popularity. The play was "Pink Dominoes," which has been produced in Duluth before, and which was finely staged and carried out last night in every particular.

Miss Bennett, who is loaned to Elliott & Courtenay by David Belasco for the summer months, makes a very attractive stage apeparance. She is pretty, natural, easy and graceful in her movements and possesses a charming voice and infectous laugh. She plays the part of Lady Maggie Wagstaff. Although the audience last night was not a large one, the applause was frequent and vigorous.

"Pink Dominoes" is rightly called a "screaming farce comedy." There is laughter for the audience and plenty of it. It is a comedy of errors. The funny situations and interesting complications keep one in good humor with himself and the world in general throughout.

John Milton appeared to his usual good advantage in the part of Charles Greythorn. His ability to extricate himself from an extremely unpleasant situation, in the eyes of his wife, Sophia, at least, is most remarkable and amusing. Miss Helen McKerron made a charming and altogether satisfactory Sophia Greythorn.

Walter Goodrich gave a good account of himself as Sir Percy Wagstaff. John L. Wooderson was funny as Joshin Tubbs. His characterization of the part was clever in the extreme.

Lelia Shaw was delightful as Rebecca, the demure maid. Jack Doyle as Brisket and Elizabeth Harcourt as Mrs. Tubbs were equaly pleasaing.

"Pink Dominoes" will be given tonight and Saturday matinee and night.

CHARGE OF MURDER

Will Be Brought Against Miners President Moyer.

Cripple Creek, Col., June 17.—Assistant District Attorney S. D. Crump, yesterday wired to Sheriff Ruttan at Telluride, to hold Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, until K. D. Sterling, a secret service agent of the Mine Owners' association, can bring him to Cripple Creek. Sterling left for Telluride.

Moyer will be brought to Cripple Creek on a warrant issued by Justice of the Peace Patrick, charging him with aiding in the murder of Charles McCormack and Melvin Beck, who were blown up in the Vindicator mine by an infernal machine on Nov. 1, 1903.

The warrant implicates Charles G. Kennison, formerly president of Miners' union No. 40, who was arrested in Denver last Monday; Sherman Parker, Stephen Adams, W. B. Easterly and a number of others, not yet under arrest.

THREE MINUTES OF EXECUTION

Respite Comes Just In Time to Save Murderer's Life.

Chicago, June 17.—Charles Stimmell, a condemned murderer, confined in the penitentiary at Columbus, O., came within three minutes of being executed this morning because of a misunderstanding regarding the granting of a respite.

At 11:35 last night a message came for GovernorHerrick, who is in Chicago, asking if he had granted a respite to Stimmell, declaring that the matter was not understood by Warden Hershey of the Ohio penitentiary, and that unless GovernorHerrick confirmed the reprieve, Stimmell would be executed at midnight. Messengers were sent out in all directions to find Governor Herrick, but for some time they were not able to find him. At 11:45 o'clock Governor Herrick was found at the Union League club. He hastily wrote a reply to the message, announcing that he had granted a respite. He then hastened to a telephone and was put in communication with the warden at 11:57 o'clock. After leaving the telephone, Governor Herrick said:

"I granted the respite yesterday, but there must have been some mistake, for the official notice had not reached the warden. Preparations had been made for the electrocution, and I understood from the warden that I telephoned just in time."

SUIT FOR INJURIES.

Nicholla Perrella Claims Damages From Elliott & Co.

Claiming that he was run down by one of Elliott & Company's meat wagons, at the corner of Michigan street and Eleventh avenue West, by reason of careless and reckless driving of the rig, Nichollo Perrella has brought suit for damages against Hiram E. Elliott and Warren Mendenhall, in the sum of $1540.

The complaint, which was filed in district court, this morning, by George L. Spangler, attorney for Mr. Perrella, states that the accident occurred November 20 last. It alleges that the rig was being driven at an unlawful rate of speed, also that Mr. Perrella was knocked down and run over, his leg being so bruised and mangled that he will be permanently lame.

Mr. Perrella claims that his only source of living was physical labor and he was able before his injury to earn $2.50 per day. Since that time, he claims, he has not been able to work.

Of the total amount sued for $40 is for medical attendance and $1500 for general damages.

Tomorrow Evening.

UNSETTLED HIS MIND.

Monetary Losses Cause Morris Levien's Undoing.

Morris Levien, a baker, residing at Twenty-ninth avenue west and Third street, was examined for insanity before Judge Middlecoff this morning and an order was made committing him to the state asylum as Fergus Falls. Mr. Levien has been exhibiting unreasonable suspicions as to his relatives and has been intensely jealous of his wife. Heavy losses of money are supposed to be responsible in a large part for his mental trouble. For two or three days he was kept at St. Mary's hospital, but it finally became necessary to take him away yesterday and place him in the jail for safe keeping.

Up to this noon Antoine Leblanc, who boards at 1126 Michigan street, and who was to have been examined for insanity, had not been taken in custody by the sheriff. Leblanc is said to suffer from the delusion that his relatives and the company in which he is insured for $1000 are seeking his life to get the money. Yesterday an officer was sent to his boarding house to apprehend Leblanc, but it is supposed that somebody gave him warning, for he had disappeared, after making threats that he would drown himself before submitting to capture. Last evening he returned to the boarding house after the officer left and spent the night, leaving at 4 o'clock this morning, before the officers got there a second time. Leblanc is said to have been formerly employed as a sheep herder in Canada.

TO MEET IN DULUTH

American Institute of Mining Engineers Coming In September.

Will Visit Iron Ranges and Copper Country—May to Come.

The American Institute of Mining Engineers, the largest organization of its kind in the country, and one of much importance, will meet this year in the Lake Superior district, from Sept. 14 to 22, inclusive. The meeting last year was held in Mexico. Several hundred will attend.

Members of the association, which has a membership roll of several hundred names, will arrive in Duluth on Sept. 14, early in the day, or in time for the business meeting of the day, coming to the head of the lakes on either the Northwest or Northland passenger steamers.

Much of the time on the day of arrival will be taken up by routine business and the reading of papers on subjects of interest to mining engineers. The business of the meeting will also continue through the following day.

On the evening of Sept. 15 the party will leave by special train for the Mesaba range, and two days, the 16th and 17th, will be spent in examining the mines and mining interests on the two ranges.

On Sept 18th the party will again be in Duluth and will make a tour of the docks, etc., taking in all the features which would be of interest to a mining engineer. A portion of the time will probably be devoted to pleasure. The trip of inspection of the docks will probably most of it be made by means of launches.

On the evening of the 18th the engineers will leave Duluth for Houghton. Three days, Sept. 19, 20 and 21, will be spent in the copper country, on a trip through and about the different mines and mining properties.

Sept. 22 the party will go to Ishpeming, where an adjournment will be taken until the time for meeting next year.

CLEVER LITTLE STORIES.

James McNeill Whistler was extravagantly fond of a French poodle that he owned, and once, when the animal had throat trouble, its owner had the audacity to send for Sir Morell Mackenzie, the great throat specialist. Mackenzie was not a bit pleased at being called to treat a dog. But he prescribed, and got partial revenge by charging a big fee. He still further "got even" the next day by sending for Whistler to come to him immediately, says the Chicago News. The artist, thinking he was summoned on some matter connected with his beloved dog, dropped his work and rushed like the wind to Mackenzie's. On his arrival Sir Morell said, gravely: "How do you do, Mr. Whistler? I wanted to see you about having my front door painted."

"Jim," an old colored retainer, had never been on speaking terms with truth. One day his mistress lost her temper and rated him soundly. "Jim," she said, 'you have been on this place ever since I can remember, and ever since I can remember you've been the most unmitigated liar I have ever known. To my own knowledge you've been promising these forty years past that you'd learn to tell the truth, but you never learn. Now, I want to know, once for all, will or will you not, in one single instance, tell me the truth?" "'Deed, Miss Lizzie," Jim answered, his head hung in shame. "I'll try; but you mus' 'member I was bo'n in dis fambly, and I 'spect I'se 'herited some of de fambly traits."

W. S. Gilbert on one occasion, when a well-known actor could not be heard by his audience, said: "No one admires Mr. X. more than I do, but I always feel that I am taking a liberty in overhearing what he says."

FRANK OPINIONS.

A prominent English statesman when a boy at school was taken by his father to see Carlyle and was bidden to treasure in the depths of his soul the words of wisdom which would fall from the great man, says the Chicago News: At first Carlyle was taciturn and the boy, by way of opening the conversation, suitably said: "I have seen two philosophers today, for as we came along papa pointed out Herbert Spencer in a 'bus." With majestic emphasis Carlyle replied: "And have ye seen Herbert Spencer, laddie? Then ye've seen the most unending ass in Christendom."

F. Hopkinson Smith, the author and artist, told this mother-in-law yarn recently: "Arrah, you're lookin' very sad," said Pat O'Hollihan, addressing his friend Denis the other day. "Oi feel sad!" responded Denis. "Oi've lost my mother-in-law!" "Hark!" exclaimed Pat. "B'gorrah, it's almost impossible!"

Norman E. Mack, of Buffalo, was asked to define the word bonanza. Mr. Mack has had some experience in mining propositions, and replied: "A bonanza is a hole in the ground owned by a d——d liar."

WISCONSIN CONTEST

Is Heard Before the National Republican Committee.

Attorney Olin Argues at Length For the Stalwarts.

Chicago, June 17.—When the Republican national committee met today, the chief contest to be settled was that on the seating of the delegates-at-large from the state of Wisconsin. The faction headed by Governor R. M. La Follette, was fighting for the four delegates-at-large, Isaac Stephenson, Robert M. La Follette, James B. Stout and W. D. Connor. The "Stalwarts," so-called, who are opposed to the La Follette men, were demanding seats for United States Senators John C. Spooner and Joseph V. Quarles and Congressman Joseph F. Babcock and Emil Baensch. Each faction has a state ticket of its own, as well as a state committee. Interest in the result of the contest before the national committee was more general probably than regarding any other question before the committee.

The meeting today was called to order by Chairman H. C. Payne, who, however, withdrew on account of his personal interest in the matter, the chair being taken by Senator Scott of West Virginia. It was decided that H. W. Chenoweth, of Madison, and G. E. Roeb, of New York, formerly associated with Governor La Follette, should present to the committee the La Follette side.

John Olin, of Madison, Wis., made the first speech for the Stalwarts, the anti-La Follette side. He spoke at much length, the committee waving the rule fixing a time limit. G. E. Roeb opened for the La Folletee side.

Attorney Olin covered the details of th contest made before the state central committee at the Wisconsin state convention. He recited the facts regarding Ashland, St. Croix, Dodge and Milwaukee counties. He told the national committee that there were not grounds entitling the state central committee to throw out the regularly elected Stalwart delegates. Although he spoke more than an hour and a half he was obliged to omit details regarding other counties. In all, he said there were about seventy-five delegates unsated by the La Follite state central committee in order to gain control of the state convention. The speaker referred to the manner in which the state convention was conducted. He charged that a number of pluguglies had been hired by the opposition and he complained of the treatment the delegats had received. At the close of Mr. Olin's addrss, a recess was taken.

PREPARED FOR TRAFFIC

Range Railroads In Fine Shape—Other Railroad News.

More activity is being shown by the range roads now than for some time, owing to the commencement of shipping from various mines. The Mountain Iron mine, Mountain Iron, the Burt-Pool at Hibbing, and the Duluth at Biwabik, have all started to send ore.

The railroad are well prepared to take care of all that is offered, the late quietness having given them exceptional opportunities to get their equipments in shape. It is expected that in a short time all the Pittsburg Steamship company's fleet will be in commission, as well as boats of other ore carrying lines, which will make rapid shipments more feasible, clean up a good many stockpiles, and give the mine owners who may find operation feasible a chance to start up again.

Goes to Superior.

Henry Grocheau has been appointed to succeed Frank L. Bacon as general agent of the Omaha, at Superior, Mr. Bacon going to St. Paul as commercial agent. Mr. Grocheau has been traveling freight agent at St. Paul, to which position he went from this city, where he had been soliciting freight agent. His friends here will be glad to know that he has returned to the head of the lakes.

Railroad Notes.

W. H. Gemmell, general manager of the Minnesota & International railway, has issued a very comprehensive and artistic booklet, called "Around Leech Lake," giving the historical features and summer resort qualities of theat place.

A neat envelope for tickets has been adopted by the Great Northern. A passenger who buys a ticket has it placed in an enevelope that is printed on the outside in bright green type, with spaces in which may be written the time and depot from which the owner of the ticket may leave.

Win? Of course they won. Why say, that team has forgotten how to lose. It's a fact. They have simply fallen into the habit of winning all of their games, or at least taking two out of every series, and the art of losing a game is gone.

First they buried the Champs under an avalanche of hits and runs. Then they tamed the terrible Tigers, caged the Woodpeckers, and now they are trying their hands at broncho-busting.

Cameron's Cussed Colts came cantering across the bay yesterday expecting to take a crimp in Duluth's pennant aspirations. They cantered back last evening without the crimp.

We won. They lost. Buck did it. With his little southpaw he did it. Would have shut 'em out if it hadn't been for a gentleman by the name of Leach who rammed the ball rambunctiously for a two-bagger in the seventh inning when one of the four men who reached the first pillow happened to be on the bases.

Buck was whirling those shoots of his around the necks of the lumber-shovers, shooting them past their eyes, under their bats, around their bats, over their bats, but never against their bats. They sawed viciously at them, but only succeeded in carving pieces from Duluth's glorious summer climate. Four little hits was all. One in the sixth, two in the seventh and one in the ninth, and not a base on balls or a man hit. Remember how everybody used to beat Superior and Superior beat Duluth? And Emil, the rooter, sat on the front seat of the grand stand and bore his sufferings in silence, or comparative silence, broken at times with frantic appeals to his favorites to "start something."

The "Only Ones" started the fun in the first. Began early. Artie, the boy captain, gave one of Kilroy's shoots a most joyful polt to the center field fence. Good for three bags, it was. Then Corrigan put his trade-mark on a nice new white ball and while he was getting his engines started for first, Capt. Artie was dimpling the dust on his way to the rosy rubber. Newton Rammerout failed to hit for once. He died on a pop fly and then Shamdown Quillan fattened up his average going to second on an error by Egan which brought Corrigan home. Big Bill, the Boy Baseman, slammed the ball for a single and Quillan came home. Zink actually started to steal second on Rogers. Nobody ever accused Bill of petty larceny before, and Rogers was so surprised he almost forgot to throw the ball, but he shot it down and Bill was caught by a mile. But there was method in Bill's madness. Quillan scored while O'Dea was running him down on the base line. Lagger struck out. Just a mere trifle of three earned runs to start with, and the White Sox took it easy for the rest of the game.

Two errors and another hit by Ball brought a run in the seventh, but they didn't need it.

And those hated rival things from Bugville are over here again this afternoon with their pulsative penchant for pennant-swiping. Today is ladies' day, and if the White Stockings cannot show themselves to be the paramount persons before those hundreds of pairs of beautiful orbs, if they don't stand on the vulgar necks of those swamp-jumping longshoremen from the suburbs, let them hike back to the tall uncut; let them nestle down somewhere in a corner and quietly and peacefully kick themselves to death. The score:

FINEST OF YEAR.

Grand Forks Wins From Fargo In Hot Contest.

Grand Forks, N. D., June 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Werdenites were sadly demolished here yesterday by a score of 3 to 2. It was the finest game seen on the local diamond this year. The Werdenites had the game cinched until the ninth inning, when the locals put two men across the plate, and this is how it happened:

For six innings the Tigers failed to score, and it looked bad. It seemed that the Fargo bunch had gotten new life put into them while at the head of the lakes. Hanrahan, the hero of the day, saved the Tigers from a shutout in the seventh inning. With two men down, he stepped up to the plate where so many had fallen, a handful of dirt he rubbed on the willow, and then, fixing his cap, faced the little giant and with the second strike sent the sphere sailing clear over the fence. The fans went wild, but Hanrahan's work was not completed; he was yet to cover himself with more glory.

The eighth inning was a shutout, and the Tigers started to play ball. Fargo failed to score in the ninth and the Tigers came to bat. Cole, the first man to bat, got a life on an error by King Werden. Then Martin got a two-bagger and went to third on an error by Hess, while Cole scored. Sharnweber went to first while Foulks delivered the ball to third. There were none out, and Hanrahan, amid the cheers of the appreciative fans, again stepped to the rubber. He had made three hits, and now was the critical time, for it was the ninth inning and the wrong end of the batting list was up. Would he make good for the fourth time and close the game with a percentage of 100?

"One strike," "Two strikes," called the umpire.

The fans were silent. Everyone looked at the bases—three men waiting to score. Biff, bang, and the little sphere sailed away out over the shortstop's head.

Fargo scored in the second inning. Werden, the first man to bat, reached for a two-bagger. Then Hess played the game and sacrificed. Treager took a two-bagger and sent King Perry home. Edwards drew a base, and Mackie was caught out by Marrtin.

In the fifth inning Fargo again crossed the home plate. Edwards, the first man up drew a base. Mackie struck out, and Foulkes got a life on an error. Demontreville went out on a caught fly by Hutchinson. Lynch reached for a two-bagger and scored Edwards. Rose went out on first by a grounder from short. This was the last and second score made by the visitors.

It was also a day of doubles. The Tigers were playing ball all the time and got no less than three. The first was in the first inning. A grounder to Dunn, who touched the man trying to reach second and then to Cole. The next double was in the fourth inning, one man was gone and Treager hit to O'Brien, who doubled it down to Sharnweber, on second, who, in turn sent it to Cole. The eighth was the scene of the third and last double. One man down and Rose hit to Sharnweber, who sent it to first from second.

Dunn made a sensational catch in the sixth inning, and was well applauded. A bunch of Fargo rooters were up to see the team play, and even these applauded the remarkable play. Hess sent a high one which looked like a hit. Dunn went back, back and then up in the air with one mitt and he came down with the ball. It was the infield catch of the season.

In the second inning Hess ran on a caught fly and was put out before he could get back to second. For this King Perry reproached, in language which is detrimental to the great American game, language which is the aernacular of those connected with the lower persuits of life. The burning words were carried by the gentle wind into the grand stand and into the ears of the fairer sex, and into the ears of sweet innocence. The score:

ACTUALLY WAKES UP.

Winnipeg Breaks Hoodoo, Beating Crookston.

Crookston, Minn., June 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—After winning four straight games at the head of the lakes, Crookston came home today and let the tailenders win the first game of the series in easy fashion. The home team went to pieces in the first inning, and a couple of inopportune errors let in three runs. Bartos had Crookston at his mercy and allowed but two hits. Hus support was ragged, but the errors were not costly. Currie Pitched good ball, but the errors of the home team came at critical moments. The Score:

ILLINOIS DELEGATES

Will Not Go to Last Ditch With Hearst.

Chicago, June 17.—The Record-Herald says: While the Democratic state convention gave instructions for W. R. Hearst, it is conceded they will be nullified at any time a majority of the delegation of fifty-four members desires it.

The national Democratic convention has ruled that when a delegation has voted once it has fulfilled its instructions. The instructions of the Illinois delegation are that "the delegates shall vote for Mr. Hearst so long as his name is before the convention." To follow those instructions, it is pointed out by friends of John P. Hopkins, who probably will be the chairman of the deiegation, would eliminate the Illinois Democracy from representation or voice in the selection of the next candidate of the party.

Another reason why the Illinois delegation will not go to the last unit rule, which makes it obligatory upon the minority to vote as the majority shall dictate. The majority of the Illinois delegates are Hopkins men—many of them gold Democrats—and therefore will not act with Mr. Hearst and Mr. Bryan in the national convention.

FIRED SHOTS AT FORMER WIFE

Archie Ozier, Longshoreman, Is Accused of Attempting Murder.

Charged with firing two shots at his divorced wife, Archie Ozier, a longshoreman, was arrested yesterday afternoon by Officer Brigham and Sergt. Gillen on Garfield avenue.

The woman, who was formerly Mrs. Ozier, lives at 1116 Garfield avenue, with her children. Ozier left the city after his wife secured a divorce from him, several months ago, and returned yesterday. In a saloon at the corner of Eighth avenue and Superior street, he is claimed to have exhibited a revolver and boasted that he intended to go down and shoot his wife. The revolver was accidentally discharged while in the saloon, and one of the bullets went through the ceiling. Ozier then placed the weapon in his pocket and left.

Mrs. Ozier stated that he entered the house where she resides and commenced calling her vile names. She claims that he then drew a revolver and fired two shots at her. Neither of the bullets took effect on her person, and she ran from the house screaming for help.

Sergt. Gillen and Officer Brigham went to the scene. Ozier was found in possession of the house, and he is claimed by the officers to have resisted arrest and threatened to shoot if they entered the house. He was finally disarmed and taken to police headquarters, where he is held for preliminary examination on the charge of assault in the first degree.

The supporters of Former Senator H. J. Miller, of Luverne, candidate for the Republican nominaton for congressman of the Second district, believe that they have additional campaign material in the fact that Congressman James T. McCleary, according to a dispatch from Washington, advocates a plan to raise the tariff, instead of lowering it.

Senator Miller, of Luverne, is an ardent revisionist. He believes that the tariff should be cut down on several articles and removed entirely from others. He is making his campaign largely on this issue and has hitherto made use of the belief that Congressman McCleary is a stand-patter of the most pronounced type. Now it appears that Congressman McCleary is a revisionist, but a revisionist in the sense that he wants the tariff increased instead of lowered.

"Inasmuch as wages have advanced much more rapidly here than abroad, it may be that the next revision will need to be upward, not downward," says Congressman McCleary in a recent speech. "Revision upward can always be undertaken safely. It has not yet had any but a good effect on business. Revision downward has never yet failed to have a bad effect, no matter by whom done."

The supporters of Judge Loren W. Collins are making good use of the interviews of Representative H. B. Block, of Searns coputny, to the effect that R. C. Dunn exerted undue influence to induce the members of the legislative committee, who investigated his accounts last year, to make a favorable report.

Mr. Block gave out another interview yesterday on this question as follows:

"Mr. Rosenwald, they tell me, was practically forced to sign the report. He, like myself, saw in a minute that it did not conform with what we really discovered, and kicked vigorously, but for certain reasons he agreed to lend his endorsement to it later. As to myself, the committee pestered me to death, telling me that it would hurt Bob's chances two years hence if I refused to sign, and that I would not gain anything by holding out.

"I don't want to say that we found out in the little investigation that we made, for it was necessarily limited—that Bob had done anything criminal. Far from it. We found, though, that he had utterly disregarded the law. That feature of it, however, never got into the report. Bob bluffed everybody connected with the investigation.

"When I spoke to him about his failure to observe the law, he answered, 'O,—, Block, do you want me to put every lumberman in Minnesota into bankruptcy?'"

IN BEAUTIFUL JAPAN.

Why is it Called "Cherry Blossom Land?"

IT IS not remarkable that the Japanese art possesses a most peculiar and dainty loveliness, when we consider that the nature of their country is of the most picturesque type. Even the trees and shrubs seem to delight in taking on the most unusual shapes, and flowers flourish in luxurious profusion. The cherry tree is very abundant throughout the land, and in the early spring, before the first shoot of green appears, the whole tree becomes covered with the most exquisite mantle of delicate pink blossoms ranging in tint from a slight blush to a deep red, and the effect is most delightful, the odor of the flowers being very fragrant. For this reason travelers seeing Japan in the springtime have called the country "Cherry Blossom Land." But the flowers soon fade away, and then the tree puts out leaves, and settles down to the serious business of bearing a crop of fruit.

Not only in Japan, but throughout the world, is youth the season of beauty. Our young girls in the freshness of approaching womanhood have a peculiar charm and attractiveness which is never exceeded at later life, but is replaced by the rounded outline and sedate step of maturity. A woman should develop from a child as naturally and gently as the cherry tree puts off its petals, and in a truly healthy woman this is the case.

A girl has as good a claim to strength and health as a boy, and generally needs them more. The vital organism of the young girl requires fresh air and sunshine, just as much as the beautiful American-beauty rose. If the young woman is run down and weak, it is not possible for her to take vigorous athletic exercises, but she should then consult with some prominent specialist, and if she does not like to confide in some one at home, it would be well for her to consult, by letter, with some physician of world-wide reputation, such as Dr. R. V. Pierce, the specialist in woman's diseases, at Buffalo, N. Y., who will carefully scrutinize her symptoms and give her the best medical advice free of charge and in perfect confidence. Dr. Pierce was early a student of plant life as well as of the human system and he found that certain herbs, roots and barks made into a tonic without the use of alcohol or narcotics would cure the diseases peculiar to women, this he called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

The young girl or the matron at times in her life is weighted down by periodical disabilities which become hard to bear. What is needed is a tonic for the womanly system. During the past thirty-eight years this vegetable compound of Dr. Pierce has sold more largely than any other medicine intended only for woman's diseases. Few women in the United States have not heard of its splendid remedial qualities, for it is a Prescription that can always be depended upon when women suffer.

Hundreds of thousands of women testify to the truth of these statements. Let every ailing woman read the two testimonials given below and remember that these two women speak for more than half a million other women cured by the skill of Dr. Pierce and by the use of his "Favorite Prescription." There is no alcohol in "Favorite Prescription," neither has it any opium or other narcotic.

"Two years ago I began to gradually lose my health," writes Mrs. Nellie D. Stark, Vice-President Bethesda Society, of 39 Gardner Street, Worcester, Mass. "Became nervous, lost my appetite, and it seemed impossible to obtain a good night's rest. I became emaciated, hollow eyed, and suffered with frequent heart palpitation. Complexion was bad and "muddy" looking and I had a haggard expression. I felt as though life had lost its charm; did not care to live, for life without health is simply a living death. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription changed all this. It came as a blessing into my home; I felt better in a short time after starting to use it, and within a month I was like another woman. New life, health and vigor returned and my husband fell in love with me all over again, and a new light and happiness came into my life. Your medicine did all this for me, and it is certainly worthy of praise."

"I was a great sufferer for six years and doctored all the time with a number of physicians but did not receive any benefit," writes Mrs. Geo. Sogden, 641 Bonda St., Saginaw (South), Mich. "I had given up all hope of ever getting better, thought I would write to you. When I received your letter telling me what to do I commenced to take your 'Favorite Prescription' and follow your advice. I have taken ten bottles in all, also five vials of the 'Pleasant Pellets.' Am now regular, after having missed two years and suffered with pain in the head and back. I was so nervous, could not eat or sleep. Now I can thank you for my recovery."

The proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription offer $500 reward for women who cannot be cured of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus or Falling of Womb. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

HOW TO KEEP HEALTHY AND BEAUTIFUL.—There is an easy solution: study Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a work for every woman. A copy will be sent by Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps for a copy of the paper edition. For cloth-bound book, 31 stamps.

We guarantee that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription does not contain alcohol, opium, or any harmful drug. It is a pure compound of medicinal plants scientifically combined. Persons making false statements concerning its ingredients will be prosecuted.

PRESIDENT.

AN INDIAN SENATOR

If Oklahoma and Indian Territories Become One State.

Quannah Parker Said to Be the Most Likely Choice.

Anthony, Kas., June 17.—If Oklahoma and Indian Territories are united as one state and admitted into the union, as has been proposed, it is tacitly agreed that one of the United States senators from the new commonwealth will be an Indian if only as a matter of poetic justice.

The United States senate today has in its membership the descendants of the sons of nearly every country in Europe, and has, in addition, men who were born on the soils of Ireland, England and Norway. In view of the fact that men of all nationalities and clergymen of all denominations have occupied seats in congress—not to speak of a Mormon senator—it is deemed fitting that an Indian, representing the original holders of the vast territory now known as the United States, could very properly and picturesquely represent the remnant of a once great people on the floor of the greatest deliberative body on earth.

If, in the uncertainty of politics, the proposition should take practical form there is no reasonable doubt but that the honor would fall on Quannah Parker, one of the ablest and wealthiest Indians in America. Parker, who is one of the chiefs of the Comanches, might properly be called the connecting link between the aborigines and the white people of the United States. His career has been filled with the most thrilling adventures.

Quannah Parker, who is now about fifty years of age, is the son of a white woman and a Comanche Indian. In one of the first of the Comanche raids in Texas his mother was captured by the Indians and her parents scalped and killed. The Texas Rangers, that celebrated body of fearless men, organized by the early settlers for their own defense and protection, gave chase and pursued the Indians to their lair.

The case was so rapid that the white men compelled the Indians to abandon everything but their light traveling stuff, and eventually corralled them at the foot of the Wichita mountains. After a spirited skirmish the woman was recaptured and taken back to civilization and handed over to her relatives in Texas. But the woman had had a taste of Indian life and she preferred it to life among those of her own volition she returned to the Indians. At an early age she married one of the Comanches, and Quannah Parker was the outcome of this curious match.

His mother died when he was a child, and Quannah grew up as an Indian among the Indians, naturally falling into their ways and customs, speaking their language, wearing their dress and living their life. He had natural abilities of a high order and these asserted themselves even in his youth. Before he had attained his majority he was a power among the Indians, and while yet a young man he became the chief of one of the two principal bands of Comanche Indians.

He was progressive in his ideas, introduced many striking innovations in their lives and became more powerful than any of his predecessors had dreamed of being. Chief Tabanock, who controlled the other band, was a full-blooded Indian, conservative in his ideas and jealous of the power of Chief Parker, but for the most part the two men went their respective ways, and, while there was much muttering, they, fortunately for their tribes, did not engage in open hostilities.

Chief Parker's home and reservation nestle at the bottom of the foothills of the Wichita mountains. He owns a modern, comfortable and roomy two and one-half story frame building where he lives the life of a civilized man with his wife and children. In his youth Quannah was a wild Indian, but having sowed a plentiful supply of Indian wild oats, he has now settled down to a thoroughly domestic life, overseeing the workings of his vast farm during the day and smoking the pipe of peace on his doorstep in the cool of the evening. His land is chiefly used for stock-raising purposes and the ponies reared by Quannah Parker have a reputation for excellence through all that section of the West.

His cattle, too, have earned a name for superiority that enables him to get better prices for his output than many of the white men that have settled in the same locality. All of Parker's vast lands are inclosed by neat fences—this in itself being regarded as a mark of wealth, sagacity and good management in the far West—and inside the house where the chief lives, the farm contains 5 or 6 tents where the farmers, Indian employes and cowboys live, eat and sleep. At stated intervals—usually four times a year—Parker deposits his surplus money with the post trader—a primitive sort of bank that pays no interest, but insures the safety of the cash deposited.

The Comanche Indians have never been noted for their gentleness or their law-abiding qualities. In fact, many distinctly "bad" Indians have come from that tribe. Quannah Parker, therefore, stands out as an object lesson, showing the restraining and refining influences of matrimony and the home. Being a husband and a father and a property owner, he has set his face against lawlessness of every cahracter and has made the Indians under him understand that any advantages they may desire in the world must be obtained by industry and mental alertness and not by the use of the bow and arrow and the tomahawk.

Treasurer, H. B. Avery, Minneapolis.

The foregoing are the officers of the Minnesota Sunday School association elected at the business session held yesterday afternoon.

The names were presented by nominating committee and the secretary of the finance committee was authorized to cast the vote of the convention for those selected.

The nominating committee also recommended the re-employment of Mrs. Jean E. Hobart, of Minneapolis, as secretary and primary superintendent, and of Rev. John Orchard, of Fargo, as general secretary of the state association.

* * *

The following resolutions, reported by the committee on resolutions, were unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, that the unlimited possibilities for the Sunday school work in our state demand the best efforts of the churches and the Christian men and women.

"That the larger cities as center of influence should be thoroughly organized to do better work in the Sunday schools.

"That while grateful for the progress made by our efficient field workers in county organiaztions, that we should not be satisfied until every county is effectively organized, and we make persistent efforts through these county and city organizations to bring the entire population of the state under the influence of the churches and Sunday schools.

"That to accomplish this purpose we urge systematic house to house canvass, both in cities and country, and through such home visitation the attention of church and Sunday school be brought to all the inhabitants of our state.

"That we urge in all our Sunday schools the organization of home departments to enlist in the study of God's word those in home or shop who cannot regularly attend Sunday school sessions, by providing lesson study literature, with pledge of at least one-half hour study of the current lesson each week, and making report thereof to the home school each quarter.

"That we recommend the cradle roll department in our schools that the little ones from earliest infancy be looked after, birth days recognized, and at proper age be gathered into the school.

"That the Bible is the text book of the Sunday school and that its use should be encouraged in churches and schools, and its study in the home aided by lesson helps, be urged upon parents and children.

"That the great aim of the Sunday school is the conversion of the children and to promote this, the observance of stated times called Decision days, when choice of the Christian life may be specially urged, are important helps and should be established in every school.

"That the effectiveness of the Sunday school will be materially increased by careful and systematic grading of classes and regular promotion to the different departments of the school, and that proper grading should be carefully considered and practised in our schools.

"That teachers meetings are necessary to promote efficient teaching, and unity of purpose, and should be maintained in every Sunday school.

"That normal classes and advanced methods in Sunday school teachers' training, in individual schools, or in union of schools for that purpose, should be encouraged in every community, that we may secure higher ideals and better methods in our Sunday school work.

"That we recommend to the executive committee the consideration of the employment of a normal superintendent for the work in this state, if funds can be provided and a suitable person secured for this work.

"That it is important that our youth be trained in righteousness, temperance and purity, and a kindly consideration for all God's creatures.

"That the thanks of this convention be extended to the speakers, to all who have in any way contributed to the success of the convention, to the people of Duluth for their courtesy and thoughtful attention to the comfort of the delgates, to that party who has so kindly provided for the lake excursion for the delegates, to the press for their excellent and full reports, to the Commercial club, and to the churches, who have so hospitably opened their doors to us; to the railroads for reduced rates of transportation furnished the delegates."

* * *

The enrollment committee, in its report, gave a number of interesting statistics relative to the attendance at the convention. The report showed a total of 202 delegates, with fourteen counties of the state represented. The representation was divided as follows: St. Louis, 52; Stearns, 4; Hennepin, 86; Ramsey, 28; Carlton, 5; Steel, 1; Crow Wing, 2; Nobles, 2; Goodhue, 2; Becker, 8; Traverse, 8; Sherborne, 1; Todd, 2; Douglas, 1.

In attendance were seven of the state officers, four county officers, twelve pastors, twenty-five superintendents, five primary superintendents, 104 teachers, twenty visitors, twenty-seven pupils and two state missionaries.

The denominations were represented by the following number of delegates: Methodist, 58; Presbyterian, 45; Baptist, 40; Congregational, 36; Episcopal, 6; Union, 5; Lutheran, 2; Christian, 2; Friends, 2; Disciples, 1; Evangelical, 1.

A report by the finance committee showed that between $1200 and $1300 was raised by subscriptions during the twenty-minute session for that purpose Wednesday evening.

* * *

The convention proper was brought to a close last evening by a ringing gospel sermon by Rev. E. S. Stucker, of Owatonna, Minn., a pastor, and also a member of the faculty of Pillsbury college.

This morning the delegates, both those from outside the city and those residing here, were given a steamboat ride up the river, through the harbor and around the horn. The excursion was given at the expense of one man, whose name the entertainment committee would not divulge.

Dr. Stucker's topic was, "And ye also." His address was a powerful plea for the winning of souls through the medium of the Sunday school.

He dwelt first on the two characteristic expressions of the Savior, "Eternal life" and "Kindom of heaven," and said that it was this life which enabled a person to enter the kingdom of heaven. He told of Christ's methods, of His gathering toghether His little band of disciples to give them specific instructions as to their procedure after His departure.

"Christ left," said Dr. Stucker, "two witnesses, the Holy Spirit and His disciples."

He urged on the teachers in the Sunday schools that they are the agents in God's hands of bearing witness to the Holy Spirit, and that they must not, therefore, resist the call nor neglect the opportunity, but do everything that in their power lies for the advancement of their Master's kingdom.

At the meeting yesterday afternoon, Ernest Fagenstrom, a state missionary, gave one of the best talks of the whole convention.

Mr. Fagenstrom's topic was "The Boy Problem," and he gave a talk that was simply brimming over with interest about the boy and his connection with the Sunday school. He has a large sense of humor, a fact that developed time and again during his talk and left little wonder that he has been so successful along his special line of work of dealing with boys.

"Boys," he said, "are no counterfeits. They are the real thing. You can no more saddle on them a thing that don't fit than you can on a broncho. The disadvantage of the boy's position is that it does not last long enough. It has been said that boys are so plentiful that they are not appreciated. It is a sad fact that we are not reaching the boys with our Sunday schools as we should. We would not change a boy if we could. If we did we would spoil the type. We want the kind of boy that bothers the life out of us. Every boy that is good for anything is a natural born savage. Catch him young and study him before he has either virtues or vices, and you have the primitive man.

"Lots of boys have exploded simply because they have not been given the opportunity of letting off steam, the accumulation of surplus energy. If a boy has this exhaust, he will return quickly to a physical and mental equilibrium. It is too often a misunderstanding of this condition that leads to the vilification of the boy. The only thing for you to do to reach him is to live your boyhood over. Can you do it, ladies? (Laughter).

"The slow-going Sunday school will not interest the boy. The teacher must enter into his pleasures and activities with a whole heart. We cannot expect the boy to go to meeting all the time, but we are all looking forward to the time when the boy's life shall center around the church.

"It is our mission to reach the boy and hold him when we do. If you are patronizing he will shut himself up like a clam and you can't pry him open with a crowbar. I think the problem is too often that of a poor teacher rather than the bad boy. I believe you would have a hard time finding a really bad boy in Duluth. You could find bad young men, but not many downright vicious boys. I believe it would be far better to speak of him as the difficult boy.

"A boy is inclined to be what everybody expects him to be. An infant is caressed, but the boy is held at arm's length. There is the piano, the nice room and the company for the sister, but for the boy's room, his bonbons, his company, well—keep off the grass. (Laughter). The boy is expected to attend when there is nothing to attend to. If he is sent on an errand to the store he is kept waiting until everybody else is waited on and then he is charged two prices. In a dozen ways the boy is made to feel that he is a blot on the face of nature and that the hand of man is against him. He is liked as a baby, and as a man, but there is no place for him as a boy.

"We should use great caution not to make out Sunday school a scholastic institution at the expense of the social side of its life."

Mr. Fagenstrom gave a number of answers that were given by boys to the question why they attended Sunday school. Some of the answers were quite a revelation in their thoughtfulness, while others was as amusing as they were characteristic. An example of the latter class was the following:

"I've been brought up to go. Mother makes me go—force of habit."

"I believe," said Mr. Fagenstrom, "that some parents are training their boys right out of the Sunday school.

"One of the best safeguards of a boy in Sunday school is to throw a wall of men around him.

"Boys go in gangs. They are usually about the same age. The gang exists for fellowship. It is possible to introduce the gang idea into the Sunday school, but we must be cautious not to make it too conventional."

Mr. Fagenstrom gave some entertaining personal experiences of his work among "the gangs."

Some of the essentials of a good teacher of boys he claimed, were tact, faithfulness, regular attendance, interest in boys, Christian spirit, knowledge of the Bible, attractive leadership, organization and aptness.

"In all this," said he, "our supreme motive is to save the boy for time and eternity."

C. J. Hunt gave a very able paper on the topic, "Young People's Classes" in which he held that the futre of the church and state depends on what the Sunday schools do with the young people. He urged that the youths be instructed in Christian citizenship. Mr. Hunt named three aims for Sunday school teaching, evangelization, education and training for service. He emphasized the personal element in teaching.

"The Bible Class," by J. M. Anderson, was another topic of interest treated of during the afternoon session.

Mr. Anderson held that while there is not the reverence shown the Bible and divine things nowadays as in the past, that while in the field of Biblical research there have been fierce conflicts and controversies and things have been unduly magnified at the expense of the great truths, because of the Christian influence the world has been slowly but surely climbing to a higher plane of civilization, to which there will come a period of greater reverence than now shown.

Telegrams of greeting to the Minnesota Sunday school convention, were read, and answered, from the state Sunday school conventions now in session in Nebraska, Illinois and Montana.

Several telegrams of congratulations from individuals were received.

Most of the delegates left for their homes on the afternoon trains.

Yesterday afternoon the meeting of the Women's Auxiliary board of Missions of the Episcopal district of Duluth was held at Trinity Mission at Twentieth avenue East and Superior street. V. Appleby and Mrs. G. V. Quillard; for the Deanery of the Mississippi Valley, Mrs. H. F. Parshall and Mrs. E. S. Murphy; for the Deanery of Red River Valley, Mrs. A. R. Mitchell and Mrs. H. M. Greene; secretary and treasurer, Miss Carrie E. Redman; secretary of Junior Auxiliary, Mrs. F. C. Berry; secretary of Baby branch, Mrs. Henry Taylor; correspondent of Church Periodical club, Mrs. Sturtevant; and Box Custodian, Mrs. Le Quesne.

Reports of the work in the different departments were given and a steady increase and interest was reported. The report of the secretary-treasurer was read by Miss Redmond. The Junior Auxiliary was reported upon by Mrs. Frank C. Berry and Mrs. Henry Taylor reported for the Babies' branch favorably. Mrs. A. H. Viele reported for the church periodical branch. Mrs. Henry Taylor gave an interesting map talk on the Missionary work in Alaska, that was enjoyed by the members. The society voted $250 for the Bishop's mission work in this district and in a short address Bishop Morrison thanked the society for its interest and help.

* * *

Mrs. Morrison has been president of the auxiliary for several years and her annual address is interesting to a large number throughout the district. It was as follows:

"Today finds us assembled for our Eighth annual meeting and I take great pleasure in welcoming to our midst several representatives of far distant branches, which have never before sent us a delegate. To them, and to those who are nearer home, but who are new to our ranks, as well as to those who have been our fellow workers for years, I extend a most cordial greeting.

"We are met today to hear from our officers the material results of our Duluth branch for 1903-4, to elect officers to serve during the coming year, to consider plans of work, to gain inspiration and enthusiasm, each from the other, and to give thanks that it has been our blessed privilege to give another year of loving service for Him who gave Himself for us.

"Before we listen to the reports, I would say a few words regarding our work and general outlook. I have had the pleasure of assisting in the organization of two new branches in Duluth, one at the Church of the Holy Apostles, West Duluth, another at St. Luke's church, West End. These new branches have done some helpful work during the winter, and have made a beginning in systematic giving, which will, I hope, serve as an example to other struggling missions.

"Continually we hear from even the established parishes the same reply to our letters, 'We are too feeble to give a penny outside of our own parish.' When in all probability the great reason for their feeble condition is this very policy of self centered effort. No parish or mission lacks the healthy sap of warm generosity in its veins can be otherwise than a sickly branch of the church.

It has grieved me to feel that our work has in any respect dropped below the work set by previous years, but I regret to state that in one of our oldest branches, work has been entirely suspended for a year past. That it has been suspended and not abandoned gives us hope for the future year.

"Our district boxes at Christmas were sent to Cannon Ball, N. D., and to Berd in the River, in our own district. They provided amply for the Christmas needs of the missions, and carried generous gifts to the two Indian clergymen in charge of these stations. Several valuable packages of clothing have also been sent to St. Lukes hospital at Easter, which were most acceptable and useful and have been warmly acknowledged by Miss Thornton.

A number of our missions, where we have no organized branch of the auxiliary, were asked to contribute to these boxes, in the hope that when once the joy of giving had been experienced, an organization for systematic work would follow. In two cases our hopes have been fulfilled. Our growth has not been as rapid as we might wish, and it has often been discouraging to feel the lack of that spirit which we know makes for the best development in parish life—the spirit of self-sacrifice—which, in holding out a helping hand to others, receives strength and comfort into the very palm which gives. We have, as I have said, been oftimes disheartened, but after all there is no need or cause for that. We are doing God's work, and though we fail, the work shall be done. "We have God's own promise, and that cannot fail." It is the poorest mission which will profit most by giving of its little, for the gift, however small, will bring that mission into touch with other life outside itself, and a bond of common sympathy and common endeavor is thus created, which will stimulate the best and noblest ambitions. God will bless the hand outstretched to aid another, as He did the widow of old—who fed the prophet of God from her scanty store.

"I read the other day a statement that the two dioceses of Florida and Missouri have a branch of the Woman's auxiliary in every parish and mission. That is a good goal to set up for the Duluth branch. A branch in every mission station. And please God we will go on with the noble example of Missouri and Florida as a beacon light, and not rest till we are abreast of these dioceses in zeal and accomplishment.

"Our responsibilities as a church have increased with the incoming of this century. To meet these responsibilities calls for greater effort, deeper consecration, more sacrifice upon our part. Our cords have been lengthened, it is our part to see that the stakes are strengthened.

"One cause of our weakness, I am convinced, is our neglect of the young people. We have offerings in Lent in most of our Sunday schools, which are sent to the board of missions, but the children are told little of the actual needs of the work. They are urged to fill the pyramids, but usually it is 'to make a good show for the Sunday school in the report,' and seldom are they taught the right principle of giving. Our one Sunday school hour is all too short to admit of much instruction in that line, and frequently the teacher knows as little of missionary lore as the child she teaches. Now these children will soon be the men and women who will be asked to take an interest in missions and support them by gifts, and I ask and urge that some devout and earnest woman in each branch gather the children of the church together in her parish and form a junior auxiliary, which shall be taught the pleasure of working and giving for Jesus' sake. I think that these juniors should have representatives at our annual meeting, and at least have an hour of the day devoted to their edification.

"The branch of juniors at Brainerd has suffered a total eclipse by the removal from that place of our able and zealous worker, Mrs. Gemmell. She it was who guided and inspired the children of that parish. To her also is due whatever holding the babies' branch has in Brainerd.

"This is the close of the last year in which we gather our united offering. In October your delegate will carry the offering of this district to Boston and place it upon the altar at our great thanksgiving service. I take this opportunity to ask each woman to think and decide in her own heart if she has made in her blue box an offering at all commensurate with the blessings God has showered upon her from the heaven of His love. This offering is intended to be a thank offering for spiritual advantages and opportunities. Has it been such an offering in our individual case? Or has it been an irregular and ill-considered gift of the pennies we did not want in our purses?

There is still time to add to our treasury. Let us consider the matter carefully and ask in our hearts if we have been conscientious with these little blue boxes, which for the next three years are to give to the mission field the women workers for which there is such demand. God looks at the heart as well as the hand, and if the heart be right the hand will hold all He asks.

"At our officers' meeting held last week it was felt that some means should be devised by which we might add to our gifts to general missions. And the suggestion of a special week of self denial met with warm approval. This suggestion will be soon submitted to you for consideration. The fundamental principle of missions is, as I have said, self sacrifice and gifts, which mean no sacrifice surely canont bring the blessing which comes from the offerings that cost us dearly. So I ask you to think seriously of this proposal, and if you decide to make use of this special week to do so as unto God and in His sight.

"The first thing that a member of our auxiliary is asked to do is to pray for missions. A wise request on the part of the church, for the value of those prayers to us and to the cause is infinite. Mrs. Brierly, who was for thirty-one years a worker at the Sierra Leone, and Cape Mount mission in Africa, was asked upon one of her visits home how she could endure the loneliness of her life. She replied: 'I could not have stood it, only I knew you were all praying for me. This thought sustained and comforted me and by God's grace I was enabled to stay at my post. Truly prayer is the power which moves the hand of God.

"Let us use that power in season and out of season. Let no day pass without asking our heavenly Father to bless all those who are working for the extension of His kingdom, to prosper their efforts, to give them zeal and patience in their work, to keep them from bodily harm and from depression of spirit. And let us ask Him, too, that the time may swiftly come when all men shall believe in the Lord, and shall worship Him in the beauty or holiness."

LARGE RECEPTION.

Guests at Convention Received at Bishop's Residence.

Last evening the bishop and Mrs. J. D. Morrison held a delightful reception at their home on East Superior street in honor of the members of the Episcopal convocation, which has been held in Duluth the past few days. The rooms of the bishop's home were prettily decorated. In the parlors tulips, lilacs and lilies of the valley were pretty decorations and the rooms were fragrant with the blossoms. The dining room was aglow with rose-pink shaded candles and roses. Receiving with Bishop and Mrs. Morrison were Mr. and Mrs. James A. Brown, of Fergus Falls.

In the dining room Mrs. J. E. Bowers, Mrs. O. G. Brice and Mrs. Annie Smith presided, and were assisted by Miss Glen Murray, Miss Bessie Hoopes and Miss Lillian Brown. THE EVENING STORY.

THE PSYCHOLOGICAL MOMENT

By Charles Eugene Banks.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

In the dusk of the evening a woman sat at a piano, softly improvising. Outside the katydids trilled an answering refrain. The air was heavy with the fragrance of roses that clambered over the low walls of the cottage.

The house, built of hewn logs, sat in the center of a wide stretch of lawn. To the right stood a grove of oak and elm, poplar and maples. To the left ran an apple orchard warm with the blush of early ripening fruit.

The woman at the piano rested her hand on the keys and sat for a moment in silence. Then she rose and going to a door leading to a room at the back called softly, "William!"

"Well," came a deep response.

"May I come in?"

"Certainly, my dear. You are always welcome."

He laid his pen aside and held out his hand to her. "What it it, little sweetheart? Lonesome, eh? Never mined. I shall be done with this work very soon and then we will have a long play spell."

"Don't write any more tonight, dear." She trailed her fingers softly through his tangled hair. "It's so beautiful out-doors. Take me for a stroll under the trees."

"I can't stop until the book is done.

THE TYPE OF BEAUTY.

"Is the type of beauty changing?" queries Henry Labouchere. "Is delicacy of feature old-fashioned? And is it gradually becoming modish to have rather thick features, a complexion so mat as to approach sallowness, and eyes that express the very reverse of the joy of life? Is dullness like a canker eating into our very tastes and affecting our apprehension of the beautiful? A few faces there are of the mignon type, sweet in expression and neat of nose. But all the most admired of modern women are very different indeed. There is a lady of the lyric stage whose features can be described only by the word flat. There is no denying her charm. The difficulty lies in analyzing it. What kind of soul looks out from those apparently almost lifeless eyes? The stolidity of expression is almost inconceivable. The lips are like those of the women of ancient Egypt, large, thick, and yet with some vague, if sensuous, charm about them. The chin is solid, firm, and masculine. One can imagine men obeying the owner of that chin. One could never picture her obeying anyone. A smile would wonderfully transform the face. But it is not easy to imagine it curving into a smile. Is this the coming type? It almost seems so. Such a woman as she whom I have been trying to sketch would never trouble herself to ask 'Why?' about anything, and her answer to every question would be 'Because,' a sufficient reason to anyone who understood her."

STAGE DEGRADATION.

The probable incarceration of Nan Patterson for life in a New York prison will be the end of public interest in the latest sensational tragedy which brought one man to his grave as a result of illicit passion, made a presumably faithful wife a widow and brought sorrow and disgrace to the relatives and friends of all the parties concerned. But the cessation of public interest will not be the end of the evil effects. The wound thus given will leave an ugly scar in many hearts that never can be entirely healed.

And for the awful effects of this terrible tragedy the American public, particularly the patrons of the theater, are largely to blame. By their patronage and approbation of all that is low, immoral, lewd and vicious on the stage the people encourage and promote such crimes as were committed by this woman.

It will be remembered that when the "Floradora" sextette, of which Nan Patterson was a member, last visited Duluth with their show, the principal advertisement used by their press agent to exploit their charms was the statement that the members of the sextette hired and carried with them a young woman as private secretary. What for? Why, to answer their correspondence! What correspondence? The impression sought to be conveyed by this advertisement was that these women received so many notes, invitations and indecent proposals from male admirers that it was impossible for them to answer all without assistance. There was no hint, of course, that there was anything wrong in this. The press agent sought to convey the impression that this was a virtue and all the more reason why the public should patronize the show. Did the public rebel, and by its absence, exhibit its displeasure? Not a bit of it. The advertisement had the desired effect. The press agent knew his business. He rightly gauged the mental caliber of the average American theater attendant. He exploited viciousness, immorality and lewdness in a clever way as an especial attraction and an especial inducement to patronage.

The women comprising this sextette are not actresses. They are best described in the slang of the day as "actorines." They are not chosen because of any ability as interpreters of character, or because of any musical or other culture. They are simply picked out because of bodily perfections and perhaps the ability to sing pleasingly. Their physical qualifications are the first consideration. They are "show girls" because they have something to show, not because they know anything worth knowing or can accomplish anything worth seeing. Their forms are the attraction, not their art.

Formerly men were compelled to go to low resorts to see things that they are now enabled to see on the stage. And many of the "show girls" on the stage are recruited from the ranks of those who have frequented or who should be confined to these low resorts. The result is a decided lowering of the moral standard of both the theaters and theater patrons.

"To the pure all things are pure," but even the pure can be defiled by impurity. It is not in the female form itself nor yet in bodily perfection that the evil lies. That is a thing of beauty and a joy forever. Nature intended that it should be admired and appreciated. But it is in the way it is arrayed and exploited that offense is given. Neither is it necessary to abolish the female chorus nor even tights from the stage. These things can be legitimately employed to form beautiful stage pictures without giving offense by lewd suggestiveness.

Two recent theater attractions in Duluth furnished examples which will illustrate the idea that The Herald seeks to convey. With the "Rogers Brothers in London" there were many shapely women and beautiful costumes, yet neither the demeanor of these women nor the dresses in which they were arrayed gave offense in the least suggestion of lewdness. Neither did their press agent seek to convey to the public the idea that they were immoral and vicious and proud of it. On the other hand we were furnished a splendid example of the opposite effect in the troupe headed by Anna Held. Every possible effort was made by this company to pander to the low and vicious in man's nature. Even the plot of the play itself was calculated to throw a glamor of glittering gilt over immorality and sin. It even sought to show the immortal Napoleon in the role of a rake and roue, who was only restrained from giving full play to his bestial passions through regard for one of his trusted officers. Napoleon was bad enough, but it is difficult to believe that a man with such a hold upon the people was as bad as that. Yet this play sought to make such a character in an emperor, if not entirely justifiable, at least excusable. Furthermore the "show girls" of this troupe were shape exhibitors exclusively, while the costumes they wore and the positions they assumed were all intended to appeal to the baser passions of the audience. The star herself bases her success chiefly upon the attractions of her person and the suggestive manner in which she is able to display them.

Be it said to the credit of the people of Chicago, where wickedness is rampant, that they soon tired of this performance, and turned their attention to healthier plays.

The decent citizens of Duluth and of all the country should read a lesson in this New York incident that will lead them to withhold their patronage from such theatrical performances as are especially designed to pander to viciousness, evil and lust. The show which makes the female form its first attraction should be last in the estimation of good citizens. If we must have the Nan Pattersons on the stage they should at least be compelled to hide from public view their true character instead of exploiting it as a special virtue. The stage will be elevated in moral tone at least when the people refuse to aid and abet its degradation by their approval and patronage.

NEEDLESS LIFE LOSS.

Those people who base their belief in the near approach of the end of the world upon the Bible prophecies that just preceding the finish there would be many great disasters, wars and loss of life, have reason to think that at least that part of the prophecy is being fulfilled. Hardly a week passes without the recording of some awful disaster entailing great destruction of life.

The burning of an excursion boat at New York, whereby the lives of 700 or more women and children were lost, is a soul-sickening affair, but it will not create such great horror in the public mind as did the Iroquois theater disaster because theaters are supposed to be fireproof while everybody knows that all boats are not and are not required to be. A theater fire is generally understood to be a result of violation of law while a steamboat fire, though rare, is looked upon as inevitable and perhaps unavoidable.

The Herald does not agree with this view. There is no more reason why a boat should be built of combustible material than a theater. It is especially unfortunate that the law permits boats whose interior and decks are constructed entirely of wood and other highly inflammable material, to engage in the excursion business, where there are all sorts of opportunities through carelessness on the part of passengers to start fires.

There should be rigid laws governing the construction of boats that engage in the business of carrying pessengers on the great lakes, so that it would be practically impossible that a fire could be started which could gain such headway as to imperil the lives of passengers. There is neither need nor justification for such awful catastrophies as this New York affair. They are the direct result of criminal greed and official corruption.

A CRY FOR BREAD.

Reference has previously been made in these columns to the destitution and actual hunger now and for some time past prevailing in Porto Rico, directly and chiefly a result of American occupation of that island. A recent issue of the Mercantile Bulletin of Porto Rico contains an appeal for relief legislation directed to the representatives of the United States under the heading, "Our Ruin." This appeal is written in broken English, in the hope of attracting more attention from the American people.

In another issue there appears an article, evidently from the pen of a resident American. From that the following is extracted: "From the very first moments of the American invasion of Porto Rico up to the present time the island has been in a state of disorder economically, and the clouds which lie low upon the horizon as yet show no silver lining. Our cities and towns have in the past five years felt a scourge which was previously unknown to them—hunger! Hunger as a result of the general ruin wrought in the agricultural industries of the country by the change of sovereignty with its attendant institutions."

Since Porto Rico has lost, as a result of American domination, her foreign markets for her principal production, coffee, her people look to the United States to take this product off their hands and place a tariff on the coffee of other nations so as to insure the American market to Porto Rican planters. Manifestly this would be unjust to the people of the United States. And yet, having interfered with the other markets of Porto Ricans, why should not the United States reimburse them for their loss? Why should not they have protection for their home market as well as American manufacturers?

It is not necessary to go so far away from home as the Philippines to find the dangers and injustice of imperialism. The present condition of Porto Rico furnishes it right at our doors. President Roosevelt was insistent that we should do our duty toward Cuba, an independent nation, when worse conditions were prevailing in Porto Rico, an actual dependency, and of this he said nothing.

If the Porto Ricans had been encouraged to establish an independent republic of their own when the island was wrested from Spain, her government would have been in position to make reciprocal trade relations with other countries which would have given her an ample market for her principal product. As it is, her hands are tied by the United States. She can neither obtain relief through our government nor in spite of our government. The result is hunger and starvation for thousands of her inhabitants "from the very first moments of American invasion."

These people appeal for bread in respectful and peaceful terms. Will the United States respond by giving them a stone until patience ceases and they resort to open rebellion?

The planks in the national platforms promising ultimate independence to the Filipinos should include a clause promising immediate self-government to the Porto Ricans with the right to deal for themselves in their trade relations with other nations. Nothing short of this will do them justice unless we needlessly and unnecessarily tax our people for their support.

THE FIELD SURVEY

At least a man has been self-persuaded to bring a breach of promise suit against a woman. He lives in Plymouth, Pa., and his name is Elmer Oliver. Although Elmer will receive scant sympathy, he will be remembered as a pioneer. Heretofore it has been generally considered that only a man's promise to marry was worth money.

* * *

To skip or not to skip is now the question. An eminent physician recently stated that rope skipping was a cause of many of the diseases which afflicted womenkind and was responsible for many deaths of young girls. Now comes Dr. Francis T. Bond, of London, as an advocate of rope skipping for boys and men, giving the testimony of many authorities for its benificent effects upon the system. It looks as though it would be necessary to give the boys the skipping ropes and let the girls play the marbles and mumblety-peg.

* * *

A hungry man might stand in front of a restraurant all through a meal hour and although known and recognized by scores of friends the chances are that nobody would ask him to go in and eat. Let him stand that long in front of a saloon and the probabilities are that he would receive several invitations to drink, even if he had no thirst. What strange beings custom makes us.

The present Sunday school convention in Duluth would serve a very useful purpose if it could devise some system of moral and religious training of children that does not include the teaching of a lot of exploded myths and impossible fables which befog the mind of the child and have a tendency to make it impossible for him to recognize the truth when he sees it. The trouble with such teaching is that when the child reaches years of discretion and begins to think for himself he is liable to reject the entire theory because he is unable to reconcile that which nobody of good sense can believe with that which appears to be truthful. It is a question whether Sunday school teachers or infidels create the greater number of agnostics.

"Mississippi seems ready to condone 'the crime of '73.' And even Mr. Bryan will not dare to question the Democracy of Mississippi," says the Omaha Bee. There is reason to question the Democracy of any state that deals with a large proportion of its citizens as Mississippi has done. Democracy does not justify wrong, even when it is committed by Democrats.

IF YOU DO NOT KNOW, YOU OUGHT TO KNOW:

That in our farm productions, corn stands at the head of the list; next in value are eggs, then comes cotton, and next, hay. The latter crop this year ought to yield to the farmers over $500,000,000.

* * *

That Cincinnati has just computed its actual worth, the value of its fixed assets, that is the land, buildings and equipment of its water works, its wharves, its university and hospitals, libraries, etc., and the result totals up $81,000,000.

* * *

That some interesting data have been collected showing that in twenty or more of our big cities, 28 per cent of the fires that have been started during the past year were extinguished with buckets without the aid of the fire department; 33 per cent were extinguished with chemical engines or extinguishers; 17 per cent with chemical engine or hydrant streams, and 22 per cent with engine streams.

* * *

That the electric railways have cut tremendously into the short-haul business of the steam railroads, so much so that many of these have taken off their short-line services, but the strangest part about this trolley system is that it actually creates travel, the "visible" business of a district is no indication whatever of what a trolley line may bring forth. For instance, the road between Detroit and Ann Arbor, Mich., may be given as an illustration. The latter town has 15,000 population and the distance is 40 miles. Before the electric road was built the purely local business of the Michigan Central between the two points averaged about 200 passengers a day. No sooner was the trolley installed than the daily average between the two places ran up to over 2000, while in summer time it is no unusual thing for 5000 local passengers to be carried. The trolley has done wonders in extending the radius of possible suburban residential territory and has no doubt created the traveling habit.

* * *

That the Michigan Central has lately run a train from New York to Chicago that made as high as 79½ miles an hour, and averaged 75¼ miles in running time.

* * *

That in New York there are actually $9,758,560 worth of new buildings under construction; in Chicago, $2,037,000; Brooklyn, $1,016,000; Philadelphia, $3,700,000; St. Louis, $1,617,000; San Francisco, $1,373,000; Kansas City, $1,033,000; Washington, $978,000, or in the twenty-five largest cities of the country there are $31,487,000 worth of buildings actually under way. A large sum of money involved, but the figures show that there has been a falling off of 42 per cent of building in Milwaukee, 55 per cent in Chicago, 61 per cent in Philadelphia, and 81 per cent in Pittsburg. On the other hand, Buffalo shows a gain of 116 per cent and Brooklyn 64 per cent, while in the South very considerable gains are the rule. In all, the showing for the country at large indicates a gain in the number of buildings under way, but a falling off of 18 per cent in the aggregate cost.

* * *

That since 1820 there have been forty-five fires in this country in which the losses have been over $2,000,000. The losses involved in the forty-five fires aggregate $540,000,000. With such figures confronting us it hardly seems necessary to advocate the greater use of fireproof construction, construction by the best-known method, not any makeshift—slow-burning, fireproofed wood, or any other such substitute—but of steel frame encased in hollow fireproof tile with the maximum of outer brick walls, and the minimum of granite, stone and other destructible materials in the exterior and without wood or other combustile materials in the interior.

That congress, in its recent reclamation act, has approved one of the most stupendous of hydraulic undertakings in the great reservoir to be built at the junction of Salt river and Tonto creek, Arizona. This reservoir will be 25 miles long, 8 miles wide and 200 feet deep, necessitating a masonry dam 250 feet high and involving an expenditure of $3,000,000.

* * *

That few people appreciate the vastness of the lake commerce. Much of it never goes near the Soo canal, but taking that point on the lakes as a barometer of the general commerce, particularly that from Duluth to Buffalo and Duluth to Chicago, and vice versa, the figures are worthy of note. During the past season of navigation 34,674,437 net tons of freight, valued at $358,306,300 were carried through the canal, and $26,727,735 was paid to the 16,596 vessels that carried it through these locks.

HOTEL GOSSIP

M. P. Wright, of Hermosillo, Mexico, who put his name on the register at the St. Louis a couple of days ago, is interested in mining in that town, and Hermosillo was one of the places that President T. F. Cole of the Oliver Iron Mining company and party visited during their Western and Southern trip early this year. Mr. Wright says Mr. Cole and his friends made a delightful party while they were at Hermosillo, and seemed to enjoy their stay as much as the people there enjoyed having them.

Hermosillo is a mining town and a small place, but growing substantially. There are many Americans in the town. Mr. Wright says the town has just begun what gives evidence of being a very desirable growth; not a boom, but a steady, healthy, general advance. Prospecting and exploring are continual there, and new developments are considerable. The town is just across the line from Arizona, and practically a neighbor of the famous Bisbee district.

"When I was married, a few years ago, a funny thing happened," said a Benedict who was recounting some of the experiences of his early days. "We got married with the usual lively time given to us by our friends, and went away on a train to the town where we were going to spend our honeymoon. We put up at a well-known hotel and were expecting to be met by some friends of my wife who were apprised of our intention to stop there. But they did not appear. No cards came to us and we waited in vain for a friendly summons. Finally I looked them up and asked what was the matter. They informed me that they could find no record of the bride being at the hotel, although they saw that I was there.

"For I had forgotten to register my wife. I had been so used to going to hotels and registering by myself that when we landed there I thoughtlessly put down one name only, that of your humble servant. When my wife's friends saw only my name on the register they shunned me for they had all sorts of misgivings about my conduct. They seemed to think I must have developed into the kind of bridegroom that falls down on the marriage day, or else that we had quarrelled or something of that kind. At any rate, they wanted nothing to do with me when only my name appeared among the guests at the hotel. Of course explanations brought everybody into an understanding of what the difficulty was, and all went as merry as a marriage bell afterward.

"I ran across a hotel waiter on that trip, though, who was a prize, for you know nearly every cloud has its silver lining, and the trouble about my bad break was made up for by this waiter. A prize waiter, you know, is rarer than a day in June, but this lad was rarer than a February day in any other year but leap year.

"Well, we went into breakfast in the dining room the first morning we were there and this waiter came up to us. He was an Irishman and dressed up in the stylish fashion that a servant in a fine hotel should be. He must have picked me for a 'green' one, or else he thought I was going to give him good treatment. Maybe he took us for bride and groom, though, as that would be an indication of more liberal guests than anything else.

"At any rate he came up to me and whispered, asking if I'd let him give me a little tip. I thought the form of the question ought to be reversed, and that there must be some mistake, but I told him to fire away. He said there was enough for two in any of the single portions of the bill, in fact, he said, there was more than enough.

"I acted accordingly. He was right. There was enough and to spare and I have felt grateful to that fellow all my days since then, for he remains an oasis of liberality in a desert of 'tight' ones in my memory."

Miss Fanny Pitcher, of Mankato, is at the Spalding.

This was inscribed with a rubber stamp on the register at the McKay today: "Ed Quistgaard, Hotel Antlers, Grand Forks, N. D." This called a bluff that had often been made by William McKay, the landlord.

Mr. Quistgaard has been stopping at the McKay for a couple of years, off and on, and every once in a while the proprietor would ask him his name, because he either did not remember it or was not sure whether he made it out right on the register. He suggested, in fun, that Mr. Quistgaard get a rubber stamp, and this has been done. Mr. Quistgaard used to live in Duluth, but some time ago married and moved to Grand Forks. He is accompanied on this visit by his family.

They'll Have to Advertise.

O modest hairy Ainu,
Now camped within our gates,
Where life's a big kaleidoscope,
On view at moderate rates,
If you expect to cut a swath
Or stir us with surprise,
You'll have to get right up to date:
You'll have to advertise.

O giant Patagonians,
Who come from that cold shore
Where wild Atlantic's waves—or is
It the Pacific's?—roar,
If you would have us visit you
With wonder-seeking eyes,
You'll have to get an agent for
To help you advertise.

O all ye foreign peoples
Of customs wild and strange,
If you expect to startle us,
Your ways you'll have to change.
You'll have to ape the Igorrotes,
Who, mark ye, are dead wise,
You'll have to start a buzzard-fest:
You'll have to advertise.

YOURS FOR FUN.

Philadelphia Press: Mabel—Really, I don't care what sort of a husband I get.

Her Mother—Why, Mabel! I'm surprised at you.

Mabel—So long as he's rich and handsome and kind to me I don't care—so there, now!

Washington Star: "So you think the public ought to be satisfied with the way things are going?"

"Certainly," answered the trust magnate; "people who can afford to pay the prices we are charging for coal and meat are certainly to be congratulated."

Philadelphia Record: Mr. Stubbs—Look here, Maria, why is our daughter's head so full of nonsense these days?

Mrs. Stubbs—Why, John, she's been putting her curls up in comic papers.

New Yorker: Lady—Now, you can cut down that little tree for me, and I'll find you a good dinner. Why, what are you crying for?

The Weary One—Oh, lidy, I was jest a-thinkin' of that bootiful song, "Woodman, spare that bloomin' tree," and I'm that sensitive I couldn't do it, lidy—I really couldn't.

Chicago Journal: A teacher having explained at length about the three kingdoms, then asked if any one in the class could tell her what the highest degree of animal life was.

A bright-eyed little girl raised her hand and answered: "The highest degree of animal life is a giraffe."

Atlanta Constitution: "What do you think of this world, anyhow?"

"Bless God, I ain't got time to think! Six chillun, house rent, en de grocery bill takes up all my spare time!"

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Grand Marais Herald: Quite a number of real farmers who come to build homes, open up the land and till the soil, have settled in the vicinity of Grand Marais during the past winter, and it is quite a common thing to see farm teams loaded with farm implements making their way over the hills to the farms. When the dreams of these sturdy settlers are realized and they come the other way with wagons loaded with the produce of the farms they will no doubt find a ready market paying ample reward for their industry.

Anoka Union: When the delegates to the state conventions are selected from each county commissioner's district, the big counties will not cut such a figure, and it is the only way to circumvent them.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: The Duluth News-Tribune is throwing a few fits because Collins is developing unexpected strength. The News-Tribune is an excellent newspaper, and it has been helping make Collins votes in Duluth by supporting Dunn.

Wadena Tribune: During the fight made to prevent the election of Dr. Babcock as speaker of the house it is at last learned that the administration managers spent more than $100 of the state's money in behalf of the cause of their candidates in telephone charges alone. This is shown by copies of the vouchers filed by the governor's office. In one day they spent about $16 for long distance talks with a man named Maybury at Crookston. This is a specimen of the manner in which the administration crowd serves the people of Minnesota, and goes to show that common honesty is not one of their strong points.

Anoka Union: There will be something doing in Duluth when the Democratic state convention meets, and the delegates are to have a ride on the lake. Next fall they will ride up salt river.

THE SUMMER GIRL.

Summer girl with cheeks of tan,
Blessings on thee, little man!

(Little woman, I should say—Blessings on thee, anyway).

With thy merry whistled lore
And thy turned up pompadour,

And thy form divinely tall
And thy last year's parasol,

And thy—oh, the same old story!
Why this lengthy inventory?

Jenny-on-the-spot again
You are on the bounding main.

Like an imitation peach,
Like a landmark on the beach,

Twinkle, twinkle, little star!
Yes, I know just what you are.

You're a mile behind the hour,
You're a blushing chestnut flower.

Vainly pining to acquire
Anything in male attire.

With your brain surcharged with dances,
Clothes and chewing gum romances.

With your silly little walk
And your line of Flossie-talk.

(Pray excuse these lines of mine.
Like a comic valentine).

But, I hope, with right good reason,
This will be your final season.

That some seaside lover true
Will show up and marry you.

He is welcome, if he can—
Blessings on him, little man!
—WALLACE IRWIN, in New York Globe.

GIFT SCHEMES.

Gossip in Anoka Union: Confirmed old smoker that I am, I wish those tobacco manufacturers would leave out those coupons in their sacks of the stuff, calling for premiums, and give us the value in more tobacco. Mighty few users of the weed in any form, derive any benefit from these coupons, as they are usually gobbled, begged and bought by some enterprising gatherer, who gets the prize. There are parties in Anoka who make it a business to purchase the coupons, and have secured some very valuable premiums in this way. Now these coupons are no good to me, and more tobacco would be. Let's have more tobacco and no coupons.

* * *

The older I grow the more I am convinced that this whole system of premium giving is a delusion and a snare. Someone must pay for these extra inducements and in consequence the man or woman who buys goods to use must pay the percentage or those who give them reduce their profit just so much, and if they can reduce their profit, why shouldn't they sell goods to everybody on a smaller margin? Lots of people never allow themselves to accept premiums, and why should they pay tribute to those who must have them. Were all served alike no premiums would be offered, and some of us then would get the worth of our money, and not be required to contribute—little, to be sure—to those who have become chronic coupon gatherers.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: If a man can get married and have any money left there is still left him the way of building a house.

The more a girl's boots hurt her feet the more she pretends she is mad because nobody will go walking with her.

When a man hears his wife bragging about the way he fixed the lawn mower he wants to go off and try to invent a sub-marine destroyer.

Good Word to Wrestle With.

Boston Transcript: Flemish has enriched its vocabulary by a new word for automobile. It comes from "snel," "rapid," "paardeloos," horseless; "zoondeers; poorweg," without rails; "petrooirijtuig," driven by petroleum. How would you like to be hit by a "snelpaardeloozoondeerspoorwegpitroolrijtuig?

Characteristic of the Boss.

Boston Herald: The late Senator Quay wrote two famous messages. To his candidate for governor of Pennsylvania he telegraphed:

"Dear Beaver: Don't talk!"

And this message was found among the papers of the cashier of the ruined People's bank of Philadelphia, after that official had committed suicide:

"If you will buy and carry 1000 Met. for me I will shake the plum tree."

Both of these messages were eminently characteristic of their author. And they illustrated his methods.

Rather Expected It.

Washington Star: "Were you surprised by the energy?" asked the commanding officer in the Russian army.

"No," answered the subordinate. "We were defeated. But we weren't surprised."

Anarchy in Colorado.

Wall Street Journal: The first principle of civilization is supremacy of law to protect the individual or any class of individuals may take the law into their own hands in defense of their rights is intolerable in a free country. The first duty of every citizen is to obey the law and give its support to those whose duty it is to execute the law. If we are to have what amounts to civil war in this country whenever the rights of an individual or a class of individuals appear to be threatened, we are simply in a state of anarchy, and that is all about it.

DELEGATES RETURN

Those Who Attended New Ulm Labor Convention Are Back.

Duluthians Pleased With Their Part In the Gathering.

Several of the delegates from Duluth trades and labor unions, who attended the annual convention of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, at New Ulm, lasting from June 13 to June 15, inclusive, have returned home. They report a satisfactory and successful meeting. Everything passed off as well as could be desired, and several important measures were adopted.

One of the most important of the resolutions was one calling upon President Roosevelt to investigate the acts of the militia in the present Colorado miners' strike, and to deal properly with the generals and other authorities if the investigation shows the reports regarding their rather violent manner of dealing with the union men to be correct.

J. A. Barron, secretary of the Duluth Federated Trades assembly, who attended the convention as a delegate from the local assembly, in speaking of the state meeting, says:

"We Duluthians had good reason to be satisfied with the results of the convention. W. E. McEwen, a brother member of our assembly, was re-elected secretary of the state federation by acclamation. He is immensely popular with the boys all over the state, and no one cares to run in opposition to him. The opinion is generally expressed that he simply cannot be baten. Many claim that he is the best secretary the federation ever had. His work in that capacity has been more than satisfactory, and his reputations as a speaker and writer appears to be thoroughly established.

"A resolution recommending that the legislature pass an act to define the liabilities of employers in certain cases in relation to damages sustained by their employes, adopted by the federation, is one of particular interest at this time, in view of a recent supreme court decision and subsequent comment and criticism in labor circles and in newspapers.

"The act provides that every person, co-partnership or corporation doing business or operating in this state shall be liable for all damages sustained by any agent, servant or employe on account of personal injuries received by such agent, servant or employe in the course of his employment, without contributory negligence on his part, in consequence of the fault or negligence of the master or the fault of any other agent, servant or employe of the master or employer. Five specific cases, thoroughly covering the field, are named in the act."

UNSATISFACTORY ELECTROCUTION

Murderer Revives Twice After Being Pronounced Dead.

Columbus, O., June 17.—Michael Schiller, a Youngstown, Ohio, wife-murderer, was electrocuted in the Ohio penitentiary between 12:02 and 12:30 o'clock this morning. It was the most unsatisfactory electrocution that has yet been performed in Ohio. Twice the condemned man was pronounced dead, but it was not until the third shock had been applied that life became extinct. Schiller went to the electric chair without any apparent show of emotion. He was strapped in the chair and the electric current of 1750 volts was applied for 53 seconds. The condemned man was pronounced dead by four physicians, but in a few minutes it was noticed that Schiller was breathing, and the current was again applied for 40 seconds. Schiller was again pronounced dead, and the body was unstrapped and laid on the floor of the execution room. The crowd that had seen the attempt to electrocute the man was dispersing, when the physician again discovered signs of breathing. Warden Hershey was hurriedly called, and Schiller was again strapped in the chair. The current was then applied at 1800 volts and was kept on for a full minute. At 12:30 he was pronounced dead for the third time, the physicians fully satisfying themselves that life was extinct.

Schiller was a saloonkeeper at Youngstown, and stabbed his wife to death on June 1, 1903. She had secured a divorce and was preparing to return to her old home in Hungary when she was murdered.

HARRISON TO MAKE CONTEST.

Chicago, June 17.—Mayor Carter H. Harrison and his political managers yesterday decided to file contests before the national convention in five of the Chicago districts. They had before them legal advice to the effect that in the event of the ten delegates including the mayor himself, being seated as delegates by the national body they will not be bound by the Hearst instructions adopted by the state convention at Springfield. The districts in which contests will be filed are the Second, Third, Sixth, Ninth and Tenth.

CANADIAN TRADE

Exports to Canada This Fiscal Year Greatest on Record.

For Ten Months the Total Exports Amount to $104,000,000.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU

Washington, June 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Exports from the United States to Canada will be larger in the fiscal year about to end than in any preceding year. Reports just prepared by the department of commerce and labor, through its bureau of statistics, show for the ten months for which figures are already received total exports to Canada amounting to $104,000,000, against $98,000,000 in the corresponding months of 1903 and $89,000,000 in the same months of 1902. Going back to 1897, the year in which the Canadian reduction in tariff on imports from the United Kingdom went into effect, the figures of our exports to Canada during the ten months ending with April, 1897, are $51,903,579, or but one-half those of the ten months ending with April, 1904.

The Canadian reduction of duty on imports from the United Kingdom and certain of its colonies began in April, 1897, with a reduction of 12½ per cent. In 1898 this reduction was increased to 25 per cent, and in 1900 to 33 1-3 per cent, and has so continued up to the present time. A table showing the total exports from the United States to Canada, covering a long term of years, indicates that there has been a more rapid growth in exports to Canada since 1897 than at any period preceding that year. For the full fiscal year our exports to Canada were, in 1874, $41,000,000; in 1884, $44,000,000; in 1894, $56,000,000; in 1897, the year in which the Canadian reduction of duty on imports from the United Kingdom occurred, $85,000,000, and in 1904 seem likely to be nearly or quite $130,000,000, and will exceed those of any preceding year.

Of imports into the United States from Canada the total for 1874 was, in round terms, $34,000,000; in 1884, $38,000,000; in 1894, $31,000,000, and in 1904 will be about $48,000,000.

Comparing the growth of Canadian imports from the United States and the United Kingdom since 1897, the Canadian figures show imports for consumption: From the United States in 1897, $61,649,041, and in 1903, $137,665,195; from the United Kingdom, in 1897, $28,412,188, and in 1903, $58,896,901.

The table which follows shows the exports from the United States to and imports into the United States from Canada in each fiscal year from 1874 to date, the figures for 1904 being those for ten months only:

Year ending June 30.	Exports to Canada.	Imports from Canada.

REMOVING THE INDIAN DEAD

From Squaws' Point on the Red Lake Reservation.

Walker, Minn., June 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the conditions on which the Indians of the Red Lake reservation relinquished possession of the "Eleven towns" was that the dead should be removed. The contract was let to Joseph Du Champ, who receives $14.50 for each body. Many grewsome sights meet the gaze as the graves are opened. Just how long the spot on the Red Lake reservation, known as Squaws' point, has been used as a burial ground nobody knows, but it is said Indians were buried theer over 100 years ago.

In the more recent burials wooden coffins or boxes were used for a covering for the remains, but in the old graves the wasted skeletons are found wrapped in birch bark, and in the graves of all is usually found pipes, beads, knives, spoons and trinkets of various kinds, articles which they will need on their long journey to the happy hunting grounds, and in the little boxes or houses that cover the graves a quantity of food is also left to supply them on the way.

It is stipulated in the contract that the bodies are to be reinterred in as near the same position, and in the same order as they are found. They are buried in groups and families. An old squaw is at the ground identifying the graves, and she must have a most remarkable memory, for as the bodies are taken out she gives a name and a record is kept. The old woman, as she sits there contentedly smoking her pipe, surrounded by other Indians, tells to those about her of some good trait or brave deed of the dead when in life. From one of the graves was taken the skeleton of an old squaw, who died twenty-five years ago at the ripe age of 106 years, and the old woman who is identifying the graves, told the interpreter that when alive she broke her leg and was lame, and sure enough, when the bones were shoveled out into a rude coffin it could be plainly seen that the shin bone had been broken and had knit together again.

Mr. Du Champ said there were about 125 bodies to be removed, seventeen of which were of the Catholic faith in their lifetime, and those are taken to the agency for burial in the cemetery there, while the other bodies are laid away on the diminished reservation on a spot as near like Squaws' point as possible, the same distance from the river as they were, and the little houses that covered the graves are put back over them in their new resting place.

TRIUMPHS OF MODERN SURGERY.

Wonderful things are done for the human body by surgery. Organs are taken out and scraped and polished and put back, or they may be removed entirely; bones are spliced; pipes take the place of diseased sections of veins; antiseptic dressings are applied to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, which causes them to heal without maturation and in one-third the time required by the old treatment. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principle. It is an antiseptic and when applied to such injuries, causes them to heal very quickly. It so allays the pain and soreness. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money, not to mention the inconvenience and suffering which such injuries entail. For sale by all druggists.

CHIPPEWA BRAVE

Is Congressman Halvor Steenerson of the Ninth District.

Degree Was Conferred at White Earth This Week.

Bemidji, June 17.—One of the greatest Indian celebrations which has ever taken place in the Northwest occurred this week at White Earth agency in the celebration of the thirty-sixth anniversary of the settlement of the White Earth Indian reservation. In point of attendance it was a success beyond all expectations and it is an event that will live long in the memory of all who attended.

Bemidji visitors who attended were Judge and Mrs. Spooner, who returned to the city last night after a very pleasant trip. They were present during the festivities and the judge says he had one of the most enjoyable and interesting visits of a life time at White Earth.

Besides the White Earth Indians and whites from all sections of the country, including many distinguished visitors, there were large delegations of Chippewas from the Red Lake, Cass Lake, Leech Lake and Winnezegoshish reservations and a considerable delegation of Sisseton Sioux.

The Indians are camped at White Earth and have danced incessantly ever since the celebration begun. They are having the time of their lives, but their behaviour has been excellent and a credit to the entire nation.

There were all sorts of sports into which the Indians entered with the keenest interest, plenty to eat and a general good time. The head chief of the Chippewa nation from the Red Lake reservation made a speech in Chippewa, which was interpreted, and the judge says it was one of the most eloquent efforts he has ever heard. He was followed by Congressman Halvor Steenerson, who made a long talk to the Indians and was very well received. Mr. Steenerson was formally adopted into the tribe. The ceremony was quite simple. He was decorated with a bead collar and smoked the pipe and is now a full fledged brave.

REGISTER JONES

To Resign From Cass Lake Land Office.

Cass Lake, Minn., June 17.—Congressman Buckman was at Cass Lake Tuesday, where he was called by Register Jones of the land office to consider the matter of Mr. Jones' resignation as register. For some time Mr. Jones has been in poor health, and felt that it would be the proper thing to resign the office.

The resignation will not be handed in until some time in July, and the position will be tendered to M. N. Koll, of Douglas county. It is possible that a change will be made, and that E. S. Oakley, of Wright county, the present receiver, will be made register and Mr. Koll receiver, as Mr. Oakley is a fine attorney and the legal work comes largely before the register.

ELEVATOR CONSTRUCTORS

Strike For a Large Increase In Wages.

New York, June 17.—The executive board of the Elevator Constructors International union, at a meeting here, has ordered an international strike against the Otis Elevator company. Notifications were sent to all the local concerns in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Pittsburg, Cleveland, New Orleans, Baltimore, Washington, San Francisco, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Kansas City, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Omaha, Buffalo, Rochester, Montreal and Toronto.

The strike is expected to go into effect today and tomorrow and will affect about 7000 men, including 300 in New York. It is in support of the local unions in Boston and Philadelphia, which have been on strike for seven weeks. The Philadelphia union demanded an increase in wages from $5.00 to $4.25 a day, which was refused.

Committees of the international union and the Otis company and its subsidiary companies were in session for two days at the main office of the company here, but the conference failed.

THE MUSIC TEACHERS

Some Changes In Constitution and By-Laws Are Suggested.

Winona May Get Next Meeting—Fine Program Given.

This morning the opening session of the second day of the Music Teachers' convention was held in the lecture room of the church. Vice President Gerard Tonning of this city presided. Changes of the constitution and bylaws were recommended by President E. C. Murdock, and these alterations will be acted upon at the business session tomorrow morning. The changes suggested provide that the secretary-treasurer shall settle up all affairs of the association within three months after the annual meeting, instead of six months.

Another proposed change is in the by-laws, and provides that the official year of the association shall be from Oct. 1 to Oct. 1, instead of the calendar year, and that officers shall assume their duties on Oct. 1 following their election, instead of Jan. 1.

Miss Nellie Hope, of St. Paul, was appointed delegate from the Minnesota association to the meeting of the National association, at St. Louis.

At 10 o'clock an organ recital was given by Gordon Graham, of Winona; Herbert Sprague, of St. Paul, assisted by D. F. Colville, of St. Paul. In Mr. Graham's numbers, "Largo," by Handel, and an andante by Mozart, the favorable impression which he made at the recital yesterday morning was strengthened. Mr. Sprague played a fugue in D minor, by Bach, "The Answer," by Wolstenholme," and an andante, by Lemare, with showing especially fine technique.

Mr. Colville appeared in a group of songs that brought out his rich baritone voice effectively. He sang "Pilgrim's Song," by Tschaikowsky, "How Deep the Slumber of the Floods," by Lowe, and "The Piper of Pan," by Elgar. In response to an enthusiastic encore, he sang "Gypsy John." Mr. Hunt played the accompaniments.

After the program a round table for the discussion of organ planoforte was well attended and most interesting. It was conducted by C. G. Titcomb, of St. Paul, and papers were read by Carl Hellmair, of St. Paul, and Marx Oberndorfer, of Duluth.

The reports of the nomination committee on place of meeting were postponed until the business meeting tomorrow, but an informal discussion was held concerning the place of meeting for next year. Invitations have been extended the association from Mankato and Winona. The latest date upon which Mankato can entertain the convention is May 15 and Winona will be able to accommodate it one month later. It is probable that the invitation from Winona will be accepted, as it is much easier for the majority of the teachers to convene at that date.

The program at this afternoon's session was devoted to the works of Minnesota composers. To stimulate and aid the state composers is one of the special features of the association's work and at this afternoon's concert the works of the following were given: Carl Helmair, St. Paul; Lillian Curry Buck, St. Paul; W. M. Nelson, St. Paul; Clarence A. Marshall, St. Paul; A. F. M. Custance, Duluth; Gustavus Johnson, Minneapolis; W. Rhys-Herbert, St. Paul; Robert G. Gale, Minneapolis; Ernest Lachmund, Duluth.

At 4:30 a round table on string instruments was held and was well attended.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Concert By State Talent Is Delightful.

Yesterday afternoon at the concert by state talent at the second session of the Minnesota State Music Teachers' association a large number of musicians and music lovers of the city were in attendance and the program was one of unusual merit.

The program opened with two organ numbers by Herbert Sprague, of St. Paul. His selections were Allegro Appassionata of the fifth sonata by Guilmant and Andante Cantabile of the fourth organ symphonia by Widor. The first number was played with fine dash and spirit and the softer passages of the second selection were played with especially beautiful effect.

A group of four tenor solos by Dvorak, "Wird soch die Liebe," "Ich schleich 'um jenes Haus Herum," "Im Sinnesen Bann" and "Ich weis dass meiner Lieb 'zu dir" were sung by John A. Jaeger, of St. Paul. Mr. Jaeger's voice is a tenor of rare sweetness combined with considerable power and in the four songs was displayed in all its beauty.

Greig's sonata F Major, Op. 9, a violin and piano number, was given by Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Bradbury of this city. It was finely played and was received well by the critical audience.

Emily Ellis Woodward, of this city, followed with the effective "Swiss Echo Song" by Ecker that is heard with pleasure and Carlo Fisher, of St. Paul, appeared in two 'cello numbers, "Cantabile" by Cui and "Minuet" by Becker that were given delightful interpretation. Two piano numbers, "Fruehlingsrauschen" by Sinding and the Sextet from "Lucia di Lammerlour" for the left hand by Leschetizky were played in a musicianly manner by Mrs. T. A. Whitmore of Stillwater.

Georgo L. Tyler, of this city, sang three Italian folk songs with the spirit and feeling one would expect to find in the interpretations given the songs in the provinces from which they came. The songs were "Canzone" by Rotoli, "Funicoli-Funicola" by Denza and "Dormi pure" by Schudere. The translations of songs provided for the audience added much to the pleasure.

The program closed with MacDowell "Concerto" Op. 23 A Minor, second and third movements finely played by Miss Blanche Strong, of Minneapolis, with the orchestral parts at the second piano played by Miss Eulalie Chenevert, of Minneapolis.

Mrs. Charles Blunt, of Albert Lea, was unable to appear in the piano number in which she was announced.

The accompanists were Leo G. Bruenner, of St. Paul; Marx Oberndorfer, of this city, and Gerard Tonning of this city.

Following the program a round table on the voice was held. It has been the ettfort of the officers to make these informal discussions along the line a special feature of the convention and next year greater efforts are to be expended.

About fifty attended yesterday afternoon's meeting and papers by William Patten, of Minneapolis, Charles A. Fisher, of St. Paul, were read. The discussion was conducted by D. F. Colville, of St. Paul.

THE PSYCHOLOGICAL MOMENT

The proofs are all here and I must change this ending. When the book is off for good, little one, we will have a long vacation."

"It is always so," she said with a disappointed sigh, "and it will always be. The book! The book! You care more for any one of those scribbled pages than you do for me."

He glanced up at her with a half smile, expecting to see a laughing denial of her words in her eyes. But she turned away and went back to the piano. Through the doorway he watched her for a moment and then bent again to his work.

How different was this from the married life she had dreamed of. She was young, pretty, fond of friends, pleasure, music. Before they were married they had artists and literatures for their associates and the hours had been bright with wit, repartee and song. Now they had been for months in this secluded spot, with hardly an old friend to pay them an occasional visit. He must not be interrupted in his work. When the book was done they would have time enough for enjoyment. Her heart cried out for sympathy and love, for the touch of nature that makes comrades of two souls, for that answer to the animated heartbeats of a conscious being, without which life is as a dry well in a desert. She had looked forward with delight to the time when she should be her husband's confidant, when the people of his creation should be her people, known to her almost as soon as to him, so that she should have a sort of partnership in them, and something to do with giving them to the world. She had planned to be his helpmeet, his inspiration. She had seen herself suggesting a lesser character for a tale, adding a word or a phrase, contributing a witticism. But into that world she had found no entrance. It was a kingdom with but room for one, and she was further away from it now than when they were married twelve months ago. If her husband took her into his confidence concerning his literary pursuits it was to read her a page here and there, and that in such an unaccented way as to leave it almost meaningless. He saw she found no enjoyment in these perusals and gave them up together. Night and day he thought of his work and she grew more and more lonely. She did not doubt his affection for her, but she could not be satisfied with an occasional caress or a gentle word, as the whole expression of it.

One day, at the little station near their cottage, she met Ralph Farnsworth, and the instant look of admiration that came to his eyes was not displeasing to her. She had grown so weary of solitude that another being out of their old world was gladly welcomed. He was staying with a relative in the neighborhood, he told her; his physician had advised the country; but for his part he hated it. But he did not go away, however, but planned many ways of meeting the pretty wife of the author, who found no time from his books to entertain her. She was too much of a woman not to know Farnsworth remained because of her. She did not admit it to herself, yet down deep in her heart she was pleased with the admiration she had awakened in this man of the world, with his air of weariness toward everything. It was something to have power over one who had seen everything and despised it. She was so much alone that he found little difficulty in meeting her and she began to look forward to those meetings as a rightful release from the changeless round of every-day life to which she had been subjected. He was so ready to offer every attention, to anticipate her slightest wish, to discover what was pleasing or interesting to her and make that the subject of his study that the companionship ripened fast.

Tonight she had been unusually lonely and depressed. The days of her girlhood came back to accentuate the lack of friends and confidants. Two brothers and a sister had made a lively household, in which there were few hours of loneliness. Now she was forced to find entertainment within herself and she found the task was burdensome.

The stillness of the house, accentuated by the steady scratching of the tireless pen in the other room, oppressed her. She went to the window and looked out. The moonlight fell soft over the landscape. Down at the farther end of the orchard a small red light glowed and disappeared to glow again at regular intervals. She could see a shadowy form moving backward and forward under the trees. Down there she knew was conversation, admiration, sympathy. She glanced into the room where her husband sat writing. If only he would give up his work for this evening and talk with her! She pulled a rose from its stem and went softly in to him, putting one arm about his neck and laying the blossom on the page before him. He did not look up, but with a hurried gesture pushed the flower aside and bent over his work. She felt how utterly she was out of his life and turned away with clouded eyes. A few minutes later she was going slowly down the dewy path under the orchard trees toward that glowing end of a cigar.

"Dear little woman," he soliloquized, tenderly, "I might have told her, but I wanted the surprise to come when the work is over so that there will be no interruption to our enjoyment."

He bent again over the pages. He did not hear the rustle of his wife's gown as she returned to the house and ran hurriedly up the stairs. Nor did he see her as she came down with a small portmanteau and her cloak. She paused at the door and threw a hurried glance into the room where he was, still at his desk. Then she glided away in the moonlight.

An hour later the book was completed and, with a sigh of satisfaction, the author pushed the pages from him and picked up a letter, of which the seal had already been broken. He drew out the contents from the envelope and, opening the narrow blue sheet, disclosed a check.

"Two thousand dollars and six months in Europe for preparation and study," he soliloquized. "At last we shall see something of the world under favorable circumstances, sweetheart. Too bad I couldn't tell you when you were in here just now. I couldn't have kept the secret a moment if I had spoken. We will make up for this long imprisonment. I must have been dreadfully dull for you. I'm used to loneliness."

He went through the rooms, the check in his hands and a smile of contentment on his face. Passing the open door he paused to look out into the moonlight. Overhead the stars looked down upon nature, serene, fragrant, sweet. Suddenly out of the stillness leaped the chrill cry of a locomotive. It was the night express for the city. He smiled to think that before another night had passed his wife, for whom he had worked so faithfully, would be with him aboard such a train on their way to the land of romance and history. There came the puffing of the engine as it gathered head for another onward rush with its load of human freight. The author turned into the house and mounted the stairs, a glad light in his eyes.

"She will be so happy," he whispered, "so happy!"

TOWNSITE CASE OF RICHARDS

Held That Judge Spooner Could Not Make Application.

Washington, June 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Acting Land Commissioner Fimple has rendered a decision in the long discussed Richards, Cass county, Minn., townsite case. He holds that Judge M. C. Spooner, district judge, who made application for the townsite people, is not the properly constituted official, nothwithstanding the statute of Minnesota and the decision of the supreme court of that state to the effect that a district judge exercises the same function as a county judge. Commissioner Fimple rules that the federal statutes must prevail and that where a townsite is entitled in trust by a judge he must have probate jurisdiction. He does not deny the equities of the Richards people, but declares they must comply strictly with the terms of the law.

He further decides, in considering affidavits filed by the Richards residents, that before their entry can be allowed it must be shown that business is carried on and actual bonafide residence established. Judge Fimple states that he has gone no further in his decision and has not taken cognizance of any proceedings subsequent to the hearing before the Cass Lake land office on Dec. 30, when the Richards application was allowed. Commissioner Fimple takes issue with the local officers in passing upon the proof submitted.

Today several affidavits were filed by Judge Matthews, counsel for the Richards people, showing that a hotel and several stores are in operation there. Speaking of the effect of the decision, Judge Matthews said: "It is simply a legal question as to the authority of Judge Spooner and can in no way defeat the ultimate result. The case will be presented fully to Secretary Hitchcock on a motion for review."

The townsite of Richards was occupied last October and has had rather a stormy history. Major Scott, acting Indian agent, raiesd the point that the townsite boomers had no right to occupy the lands, and the forestry bureau raised the point that the townsite was in the forest reserve established under the Morris act. Maj. Scott, with the aid of Indian police ,arrested twenty citizens of Richards but pending the outcome of this proceeding Secretary Hitchcock, on Dec. 3, decided that the land occupied was subject to townsite settlement under the provisions of the act of 1902, extending the provisions of the general townsite act to the ceded Chippewa land in Minnesota.

These Two Women were Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

READ THEIR LETTERS:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Gratitude compels me to acknowledge the great merit of your Vegetable Compound. I have suffered for four years with irregular and painful menstruation, also dizziness, pains in the back and lower limbs, and fitful sleep. I dreaded the time to come which would only mean suffering to me.

"Better health was all I wanted, and cure if possible. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me health and happiness in a few short months. I feel like another person now. My aches and pains have left me. Life seems new and sweet to me, and everything seems pleasant and easy.

"Six bottles brought me health, and was worth more than months under the doctor's care, which really did not benefit me at all. I am satisfied there is no medicine so good for sick women as your Vegetable Compound, and I advocate it to my lady friends in need of medical help."—MRS. B. A. BLANCHARD, 422 Broad St., Nashville, Tenn.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to express my gratitude for the restored health and happiness Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought into my life.

"I had suffered for three years with terrible pains at the time of menstruation, and did not know what the trouble was until the doctor pronounced it inflammation of the ovaries, and proposed an operation.

"I felt so weak and sick that I felt sure that I could not survive the ordeal, and so I told him that I would not undergo it. The following week I read an advertisement in the paper of your Vegetable Compound in such an emergency, and so I decided to try it. Great was my joy to find that I actually improved after taking two bottles, so I kept taking it for ten weeks, and at the end of that time I was cured. I had gained eighteen pounds and was in excellent health, and am now.

"You surely deserve great success, and you have my very best wishes."—MISS ALICE BAILEY, 50 North Boulevard, Atlanta, Ga.

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the diseases of womankind is not because it is a stimulant,—not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and reconstructor ever discovered to act directly upon the uterine system, positively CURING disease and restoring health and vigor.

Marvellous cures are reported from all parts of the country by women who have been cured, trained nurses who have witnessed cures, and physicians who have recognized the virtue in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and are fair enough to give credit where it is due.

If physicians dared to be frank and open, hundreds of them would acknowledge that they constantly prescribe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in severe cases of female ills, as they know by experience that it can be relied upon to effect a cure.

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular menstruation, backache, bloating (or flatulence), leucorrhoea, falling, inflammation or ulceration of the uterus, ovarian troubles, that "bearing-down" feeling, dizziness, faintness, indigestion, nervous prostration or the blues, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences, and be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and then write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for further free advice. No living person has had the benefit of a wider experience in treating female ills. She has guided thousands to health. Every suffering woman should ask for and follow her advice.

VENGEFUL MAIDEN

Pursued Lover Across Ocean But Found Him Too Late.

Statute of Limitations Was Running While She Was Traveling.

Dubuque, Iowa, June 17.—Because he wrote sweet letters to Alma Paul, a petite and winning young woman of Berlin, Germany, George B. Provost, a man of affairs of Dubuque, was made defendant in a $15,000 breach of promise suit.

When the young woman began her suit a great deal of surprise was occasioned, owing to the prominence of the defendant, and the mention of Senator Allison's name in the correspondence that passed between the litigants. Additional interest was found in Provost's claims to close friendship with President Harrison, who had then just been elected chief executive.

In her petition, which was quite brief, the fair plaintiff set forth for the court's enlightenment that she had met the defendant in Berlin, September, 1888. At that time she was owner and proprietor of the Berliner Jagdlappen and a strong friendship developed between herself and Provost, who was then touring Germany. The friendship, she averred, soon ripened into love, and then came the proposal of matrimony.

Plaintiff averred that a verbal contract was entered into by which she was to become his wife. Provost, she declared, left Berlin in October of that year, but before departing advised her to dispose of her property so that she would be free to meet him at the altar in America.

Defendant, according to the plaintiff's statements, represented that he was a resident of Chicago and that he was engaged in the dry goods business.

Acting on his directions, plaintiff avers she sold all her property and went to England in November, 1888, preparatory to sailing for America. She received no answers to her letters, however, and this made her apprehensive. She continued to write, hoping ultimately to get word to her fiancee that she was ready and willing to become his bride.

In 1892 she set sail for America, determined on finding Provost, even if it required years to do so. Accordingly, she continued in the search until 1898, when she learned that Provost was a resident of Dubuque, Iowa.

To show that close relations existed between them the plaintiff submitted a letter, which she affirms was written by Provost from Ilfrocombe, England, under date of Nov. 7, 1888. In the effusion, the writer refers to having received "a sweet letter" from "my dear Alma" and that it "grieved him to hear that she was unwell." References are also made to the election of Gen. Harrison to the presidency, which, the writer says, would lsure him a foreign appointment perhaps to Berlin. The writer also sets forth that he is a particular friend of Senator Allison, which meant that he stood high in this country.

The case never came to trial, counsel on both sides being kept busy by the numerous preliminary discussions. The defendant's attorneys made numerous motions to strike out certain allegations on legal grounds and finally submitted a demurrer to the petition on the grounds that it was filed too late for redress as the statute of limitations regarding verbal contracts became operative. It seems that a verbal contract is not binding after five years.

On this showing the court dismissed the suit.

ADVICE FOR HOT WEATHER

Agricultural Department Tells What to Eat and Drink.

Washington, June 17.—What to eat and drink and what to avoid during the hot summer months is a question which Professor Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the chemistry division of the agricultural department, and one of the most noted dieticians in the country, has given years of careful and painstaking study.

Prof. Wiley lays down the essential principle that there must be moderation in all things eatable during the summer months, and if perfect health is to be obtained under the trying conditions of the heated term there must be absolute denial of alcoholic drinks and cold beverages of the more harmless sort from the temperance standpoint, but equally dangerous in their effect upon the stomach.

"Statistics show," says Wiley, "that in cases of sunstroke the great majority of the victims are addicted to the use of liquor. This of itself may not prove much, however, for the majority of the people seem to be addicted to the use of alcoholic drinks in one form or another.

"Iced beverages should be shunned altogether or sipped slowly, not more than a teaspoonful at a time. Pouring large quantities of cold liquid into the stomach, where the natural temperature is about blood heat, is contrary to all physiological principles. The shock to the stomach is severe; the pores of the body are immediately stopped up and it requires some time for the system to throw off the effects of this congestion so uselessly forced upon it.

"The quantity of food should also be diminished decidedly during the hot weather. One of the principal functions of food is to furnish heat and energy. The lower the outside temperature the more food is required to produce animal heat. It is safe to say, that at least one-fourth the ordinary winter diet should be omitted in the summer. A person who in winter consumes food daily amounting to 3000 calories would do very well during the hot months with 2250.

"The foods peculiar to summer should constitute a large portion of the diet—the various succulent fresh vegetables, according to one's taste. These foods tend to fill the stomach and satisfy to a certain degree thee sensation of hunger, without causing too great a load in the digestive organism. It follows, therefore, that it is wise to eat less meat, and, in general less nitrogenous foods. Those who engage in vigorous exercise and out-door work must have sufficient food to supply the energy furnished by the starches and sugars than by meats."

STRANGELY

Young Girl Disappeared, as Has a Youth.

Frankfort, Ind., June 17.—The vicinity of Sedalia is greatly excited because of the disappearance of Miss Carrie Schaffer, a daughter of a merchant.

Miss Schaffer, who is about 15 years of age, was accosted near her home Monday night about 8 o'clock by a man said to be Virgil Cunningham, and asked to go buggy riding. She went in the buggy without any hat or wrap. She has not been seen since and her father reported the matter to the officers here.

About 1 o'clock Tuesday morning young Cunningham, it is said, aroused a neighbor and told him that he must have $15 at once to pay a fine against him. Court records show he owes no fine. He was much excited, and quietly disappeared in the buggy when he got the money. The neighbor did not notice whether or not there was any other occupant of the buggy.

The young people were not known as lovers, as they had gone together only a few times.

HAVE YOU GOT A BEER HEART?

New Disease Where Malt Liquors Are Largely Drunk.

New York, June 17.—There is a new disease in New York called "Tubingen heart," "Munich heart," or "Beer heart." It has also recently made its appearance in London, and is supposed to be developing in every American city where malt liquors are drunk to any considerable extent. So far as the experts have not been able to ascertain the precise cause of the peculiar condition of the heart. Its prevalence in London has been commented on by Dr. W. Hale White.

About all that is yet definitely known about "beer heart" is that it is developing where there is a very heavy consumption of beer.

The patriotic doctors of Munich insist that a better classification of affection is one which ascribes it merely to overindulgence in alcoholic drinks. Dr. Hale White declares that the disease is well known where beer is drunk to excess, but rare where other alcoholic beverages are taken to excess; this fact giving rise to a very strong doubt as to whether alcohol is at the bottom of the trouble.

Prof. Koehl doubts if the symptoms follow excessive wine drinking, and says he never knew a case to result from whisky drinking.

Professor Strumpell, in the Erlangen clinic, told Professor Osler, a celebrated Baltimore professor of medicine, that the "beer heart" was very common amonk workers in breweries.

The autopsies show an enlarged heart, without any reneal or valvular disease to account for it. It is said that carbo-hydrates in the beer are the secret of the mysterious disease, but the German sharps ask:

"Why do not the carbo-hydrates in potatoes give the same kind of a heart to the Irish peasents?"

METEORIC CAREER

Of Dr. Flower and His Mining Ventures In Mexico.

Widows With Plenty of Money Were His Long Suit.

Chihuahua, Mex., June 17.—The talk of mining circles for the past week has been Dr. R. C. Flower's flight from New York and jumping his bond of $23,000, when he was to appear on June 24 for trial on charges of grand larceny in connection with various mining deals. Flower is well known here and in Parral, and interest centers principally around his $15,000,000 gold company, the Pan-American Mining and Smelting company, to see if Flower apears here to look after it. A report has been given out to that effect, but no one believes it.

So far Grant G. Gillette, the noted cattle plunger of Kansas City, is Flower's partner in Parral, but from all accounts he is maintaining his characteristic bold front and is continuing operations on the Quebridillas and Grenadena.

Another reason for the talk that Flower may come to Mexico instead of going to South America, as reported in the press dispatches, is that A. D. Meloy, his old partner, arrived in Parral last week. While the latter, in organizing the Terrenates Consolidated Mining company at Parral, dumped Flower and Gillette out and later Meloy was energetically crowding the cases of criminal charges against Flower in New York, during the past year, there are many people who know the methods of the two men, who declare that it was all a "put up job."

Meloy and Gillette, apparently, are enemies, at least the latter says so; Meloy is out of the Terrenates, so it is claimed, and John P. Elkin, of Pennsylvania, is supreme in the United States Mining company. Yet Meloy is in Parral partly on business connected with that concern.

Besides the Quebridillas and the Grenadena, both considered good mines, Flower has turned out numerous properties here and in different parts of the state to the Pan-American company. Among these are the Sunset Mining company's properties at Maguarichic. These are the mines upon which Mrs. Frances Hagaman put up the money. She it was who figured in the sensational cases in New York, as Flower was practically acused of being the cause of her husband's death while as the latter's physician, and then afterward sued her for over $1,000,000. Dr. Flower brought this wealthy widow down here two or three times, and she went to the mines with him, eighty miles by mule train, west of Minaca. It was her money, it is said, that went into the Marguarichic properties originally and gave Flower his first boost in Mexico.

Flower and the widow, with two or three other women in the party, made a spectacular exhibit to the natives and everyone else. He always did everything in grand style, with a pack train of twenty-five or thirty mules, a dozen attendants and every convenience take along. The wealthy widow was in keeping with Flower's caravan, as she lent a centaur-like apearance as she bestrode the typical Mexican mule. Her hair was red, as was her complexion, her build was stocky and stout, and to cap it all she was always elegantly dressed and ecked out in diamonds. Flower himself, with his Henry Ward Beecher face and hair, lent the classical to the apearance of the scene. Many a time his fine elocutionary powers would be brougit into play along the mountain trail to entertain his guests, so the trail would not seem to long to his Golconda. Oftentimes he would bring into play his great power of word painting and his prospects in the Sierra Madres would appear in a light of that would make the mines of King Solomon pale into insignificance.

But the widow Hagaman was not the only wealthy widow that the magnetic and fascinating doctor got interested in Mexican mines. The aged Mrs. Amelia Storrs, fully 75 years old, but wonderfully well preserved, was another. She, the widow of a prominent New York politician, a woman of culture and education, came down two or three times, and on one occasion bestrode a Mexican mule for 200 miles over rugged mountain trains to the Cienegulta mines in the Urique country, in the western part of this state. On this trip over the doctor is said to have been robed in a suite of snow white corduroy, and carried over the trails in a sedan chair by eight Tarhumara Indians, clad in the native costume of gee-string and guarachis (sandals).

Mrs. Storrs' money went into the Urique property, a mill was built later, but Flower's troubles came on, deferred payments were not made, and all was forfeited to the owners. Still the aged Mrs. Storrs has stayed by the doctor, and it is stated she will have to put up the $23,000 bond that he has forfeited.

Out of the numerous mining ventures Flower has made in this state, he has not made money out of them, not that anyone has said anything derogatory to the properties. He has always seemed to be visionary, and more given to the floating of stocks, etc., in the East.

Notwithstanding Flowers wonderful ability on some things, he seemed actually insane, particularly along the line of inventions. He would tell a story of his invention of a flying machine, and would actually tell of wonderful trips he has made. He would actually tell for truth a story of a trip from the mouth of the Rio Grande to Laredo. He would then paint lurid pictures of his invention of an explosive with which he could destroy the navies and cities of the world, and even a good-sized island was not safe if he chose to drop a few tons of his stuff upon it.

Some of Flower's inventions ran to mining machinery, and some of his worthless stuff in his mill at Maguarichic today.

One thing he said in favor of this erratic mining promoter—it can be said that he always paid his debts here. He would bring in his people from the states, he would entertain lavishly in a big establishment in this city, which he rented from Touche, the notorious Turk gambler.

It is known that Flower has had South America in his mind for a long time, and it is believed that he has gone there. No faith is put in the statement that he may come here.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

ANOTHER CARRIE NATION.

Mrs. McHenry Opens War on Kansas Saloons.

Independence, Kas., June 17.—Mrs. McHenry has taken up Carrie Nation's mantle. She has been arrested nine times for assaults upon the hydra-headed demon rum. She came to Independence to make trouble for liquor sellers.

She made a long harrangue the first day she arrived, and the following day she went into a saloon and ordered a glass of the best brandy. Of course she was refused, the bartender asserting that there was no such thing in the house. Then she stated she would return shortly and hold a prayer meeting in the saloon. During the afternoon she repeatedly said she did not know what she would do in the furtherance of her aim, but would move when she felt like it. Finally she calmly walked into one of the three saloons grouped on Main street just west of Penn avenue, and in a moment the word was passed and a crowd commenced to gather. She says she walked over to a table and sat down, defying any of those present to eject her. She evidently knew her rights and no one had the hardihood to brave her sharp tongue and the chance of prosecution by attempting to put her out. The attention of the officers was attracted by the crowd and the chief appeared in a few minutes and ordered her to leave the saloon. He led her to the door, but she returned and he arrested her.

In the evening when she was released she made the officers of the jail another speech about the sins of the world and Independence in particular, and succeeded in getting considerable money from sympathizers, which she proudly displayed.

It pays to advertise in The Herald—ask Simon Clark.

PAGAN FEAST

Ends In Wholesale Gorge on Dog Soup.

Guthrie, O. T., June 17.—A pagan religious camp meeting and feast closed after a continuous performance of several weeks, as conducted by the Sac and Fox Indians, near Stroud, in Eastern Oklahoma. The main purpose of the meeting was to initiate candidates into the order, which, by the redskins, is held as sacred and as secret as a white man does his Masonic or Odd Fellow vows.

There were three candidates for initiation, and prior to the ceremony they were compelled to fast three days and nights, and, of cours, this made them revenously hungry. And following the ceremony there was a feast where the candidates and members of the order fed so glutonously that they were dormant for several days.

The order, among the whites, is known as the "Dog-Eating Otto-Skin" lodge, because all members must own otto skins, filled with Indian medicine, and because dog soup is a leading dish. After the ceremony of initiation the members of the order gorged themselves on dog soup, wild turkeys and venison. There are only two women members of this order, which is peculiar to the Sax and Fox Indians alone, having been observed by them since the primeval days.

SKIN DISEASES

The Outcropping of Bad Blood.

While not always painful these are aggravating beyond expression. With few exceptions they are worse in spring and summer, when the system begins to thaw out and the skin is reacting and making extra efforts to throw off the poisons that have accumulated during the winter months. Then boils and pimples, rashes and eruptions of every conceivable kind make their appearance, and Eczema and Tetter—the twin terrors of skin diseases—Nettle Rash, Poison Oak and Ivy, and such other skin troubles as usually remain quiet during the cold weather, break out afresh to torment and distract by their fearful burning, itching and stinging. A course of S. S. S. now will purify and enrich the blood, reinforce and tone up the general system, and carry off the bodily impurities through the proper channels. The skin, with good blood to nourish it, remains smooth and free of all disfiguring eruptions. Send for our book on diseases of the skin, and write us if you desire medical advice or any special information. This will cost you nothing.

SSS

Canton, Ohio, August 6, 1903.

S. S. S. is a good medicine. I keep it in the house all the while. It is an excellent tonic to give strength to the system and tone to all the organs. It gives appetite and energy and makes one feel better in every way. I have found it also an excellent blood purifier. For months I was troubled with an itching skin eruption on the face, and tried specialists and many remedies to get a cure, but S. S. S. is the only medicine that seemed to relieve. I am now comparatively free of this eruption. I think a great deal of your medicine, believing it to be the best blood purifier and tonic known to the world to-day.

IT CLOSES LOWER

Weakness In the Wheat Market Throughout the Session.

Liverpool Firmer Under Decreased Argentine Shipments.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 17.—The wheat market opened this morning showing signs of weakness, but during the first couple of hours held fairly steady at slightly lower prices. About noon, however, it went off ½c or more. Northwestern markets were weakest, Duluth closing ⅜c lower and Minneapolis ½c lower for July, while Chicago was only ⅛-¼c lower. New York was off 1-1⅛c. Foreigners were a little firmer on wheat, Liverpool closing ⅛@¼d higher. This was attributed to the smaller Argentine and Indian shipments. They fell considerable below expectations last week.

There was a little better tone to the foreign inquiry for wheat in this market, though the bids are not at a figure to permit the working of any business of consequence. New York reported 15 loads of wheat and 50 of corn today worked for export.

Stocks of wheat at Duluth are estimated to decrease 180,000 bus this week.

Car receipts at Duluth were 9 against 56 last year, and at Minneapolis 86 against 192 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 95 against 248 last year. Chicago received 30 against 31 last year. Winnipeg receipts were 69 against 108 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 223,000 bus, last year 352,000 bus. Shipments 131,000 bus, last year 839,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 35,270 bus. Argentine shipments of wheat this week were 1,224,000 bus against 1,936,000 bus last week and 1,776,000 bus last year.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ½d lower. In the Chicago market, July corn closed 5⅞-5¾c lower. July oats closed ⅝c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 488,000 bus, last year 648,00 bus. Shipments 377,000 bus, last year 299,000 bus. Clearances were 76,995 bus. Argentine shipments of corn were 1,936,000 bus against 2,960,000 bus last week and 1,640,000 bus last year.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was very dull. July opened unchanged at 93¼c, and after that held at 93¾c and 93⅝-½c for the first couple of hours. It then slumped off to 92¾c at 12:45 and closed at that price, a loss of ¾c from yesterday. The September option lost ⅞c, closing at 86c.

Cash offerings are increasing somewhat with mills taking most of the wheat. The premium is declining and July price is about all that can be obtained for No. 1 northern. Car lots on track during the morning were 163.

Flax trading was very dull. The July price advanced ½c to $1.10 and then fell back and closed ½c lower at $1.09¾. The September option also lost ½c and October closed unchanged.

Stocks of flax at Duluth are estimated to show a decrease of 450,000 bus this week. Argentine shipments of flax this week were 704,000 bus., against 976,000 bus. last week and 224,000 bus. last year.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Sentiment Bearish In Spite of Firm Cables.

Chicago, June 17.—In spite of firm cables sentiment in the wheat pit was bearish. An impression seemed to be quite general that harvest will be as early as usual and that new wheat will be coming on the market before the end of June. The Canadian crop report was considered quite bearish, and there was moderate selling on that account. The larger part of trading was in the September option. July opened unchanged to ½c up at 84¼@84⅝c, declined to 84c and rallied to 84¼c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 125 cars, against 159 cars last week and 258 cars a year ago.

The market was heavy the entire day, the demand being inadequate to offerings. Weakness of new crop deliveries at Minneapolis was principal selling motive during the latter part of the day. There was some recovery from the low point on covering and after touching 83¾c, July closed at 84@84⅛c, a loss of ⅛@¼c for the day.

Moderate buying of corn owing to smaller Argentine shipments caused a slight bulge in prices, but the gain was subsequently lost on selling resulting from favorable weather conditions. July opened a shade to ⅛c lower at 48⅝@¾c to 48¾c, advanced to 49c, and then reacted to 48½@⅝c. Local receipts were 329 cars, with 29 of contract grade.

The market followed wheat in its downward course, July closing ⅜@⅝c lower at 48¾c, after selling at 48c.

Sentiment in the oats pit was easier in sympathy with other grains. The volume of trading was very light, and prices showed little change. July opened ⅛c lower at 28⅝c, sold off to 28½c and rallied to the opening figure. Local receipts were 112 cars.

Light receipts of hogs and higher prices at the yards caused considerable covering of provisions resulting in a firm undertone. September pork opened up 2½c at $12.90 and sold up to $12.92½. Lard and ribs were each 2½@5c hiher at $7.02½@7.07½ and $7.50 respectively.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

B. E. Baker's Chicago grain letter: Wheat—Some rally was expected today, but very little was realized even when the market was strongest and prices on the whole was heavy. The news was against the price but it was mainly a repetition of facts and conditions already known. The weather was fine with the forecast indicating a disturbance West and probably showers late tomorrow and Sunday. The Modern Miller was decidedly bearish. Argentine furnished some bullish items on drouth interfering with spring and planting. Shipments from there this week show considerable falling off compared with the previous week and last year. We do not believe in pressing further the short side of the old July. The decline this week amounts to 3c a bus. and for the past fortnight 5c. The trade is local and the market becomes easily congested. Everything relating to the market is perfect from a bearish standpoint and any new developments are likely to aid the bull and start shorts to covering. Esthmate for tomorrow 15 cars.

Corn—Corn was extremely dull with little interest shown in the market, except by a few local traders. Prices weakened with the easier tendency of wheat and the lower prices in oats. Receipts were little over the stimates, the forecast shows some increase. Next week's movement is this market will be smaller. This market is on about a legitimate supply and demand basis and as long as this is the case there is no reason to get too bearish. We believe that September will sell considerably higher in the long run. The cash market ruled from steady to ¾c lower. Estimates, 350 cars for tomorrow.

Oats—Developed considerable weakness led by liquidation of July contracts. The situation presnts no new features. The cash proposition is still strong and the outlook of the new crop is bright. Barring future damage we think the September price is high. The cash market was strong to 1c higher for the best grades and from 1c to 2c lower for the poorer ones. Estimates, 102 cars for tomorrow.

• • •

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—It was very dull with a decidedly heavy tone and a dragging tendency. There is only a small bearish contingent, which covers quickly on any strength; and on the other hand the buying is scattered and of poor quality. The news is chiefly bearish. The only strong thing in the situation is the holding of the stocks of old wheat at an enormous premium. As we have repeatedly pointed out, these premiums are not maintained by the sharpness of the demand but by the extravagant views of holders. The demand is small and the market almost nominal. In the meantime the new crop of wheat of good quality is being offered in the Southwest markets for the first half of July at large discounts. All crop advices are coming bearish. There are some complaints of dry weather for the new crop in Argentine. We see nothing to make more than scalping rallies.

Corn—The weakness in wheat was something of a factor, and fine weather and higher temperatures also contributed. It is not an active market, however, and the trading is not significant of any great change. The cash business showed some improvement. We cannot yet see that the market has any distinct tendency either way, and its movement seems confined to those resulting from scalping operations.

Oats—As in corn, the weakness in wheat was something of a factor, and most favorable weather likewise. We as yet see no change in the immediate conditions of supply and demand. Any material increase in country offerings for early shipment would be a bearish factor, but so far these have not transpired. In the meantime the immediate cash situation is a healthy one. We still rather feel that the discounts on September and December are too great.

• • •

Modern Miller: The winter wheat harvest is steadily advancing northward with conditions favorable excepting temporary interruptions by rain in the Southwest. Cutting has begun in Southern Kansas, Missouri and Illinois. The returns received thus far indicate satisfactory yields of grain of which the quality generally is good. Mills South including Texas, are running on new wheat crop. The prospects are that the movement from the farmers will be free as soon as the crop is ready for marketing.

STRENGTH SHOWN

In the Stock Market and It Ruled Fairly Steady.

Heavy Selling of Southern Pacific Produced Unsettled Effect.

New York, June 17.—Southern Pacific was the feature of the opening dealings in the stock market today, 6000 shares selling at 45⅝ and 45⅞, compared with 45⅞ last night. Louisville rose ⅜ on the sale of a thousand shares. In the general list small gains predominated over the losses.

Speculation became steadier in tone when Union Pacific advanced a point. General gains were slight and were cancelled by 11 o'clock. Profit-taking in Union Pacific, wiped out about all its rise and Metropolitan Street Railway dropped 1⅞. Kansas City Southern preferred advanced 1⅝.

The market became dull and after some hesitation, prices sank to below last night. United States Steel preferred lost ¾. Third Avenue dropped 5 and rallied 1¾. Metropolitan Securities fell 1⅝ and Kansas City Southern preferred reacted 1. Brooklyn Union Gas jumped 5 and Consolidated Gas 1⅛. Bonds were firm.

Lake Erie & Western preferred dropped 10 points on the trade, reflecting yesterday's dividend reduction. The common also yielded 1½. But little changes occurred in the general market, though prices were slightly above the lowest at 1 o'clock.

Prices dropped to a lower level in the later session, Union Pacific selling under yesterday's final price. Comparative figures showed only trifling changes over last night in the general railroad list. Kansas & Texas preferred declined 1, Delaware & Hudson 1¼ and Lake Erie & Western 2½ in all.

Very heavy offerings of Southern Pacific carried it ½ under last night and the whole list receded in sympathy. Reading declined ¾ and Union Pacific got below 87. Northwestern dropped 2. New York Central 1¼, Colorado & Southern second preferred 1 and Republic Steel preferred 1¾. Vigorous support checked the decline in Southern Pacific and the closing was steady, but dull.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market is a little easier. The Southern Pacific matter still hangs over it and in the absence of definite knowledge the street does not like the superficial aspects of the proposition. It is forcing considerable liquidation in that stock and is giving a little check to confidence in respect of the general market. The market has, however, in the past few months stood several very much harder, broader and more fundamental propositions than this. The view of the situation is the course of prices if not likely to be controlled by temporary spasms of fear. We are advising the purchase of good standard properties that are paying dividends and which are selling on a 5 or 6 per cent basis. Our advices are that the bond market has been pretty well cleaned up by this investment demand. That it will extend, and is extending to the dividend stocks, we have no doubt.

• • •

Randolph to Paine, Webber & Co.: Following the default on the Detroit Southern first mortgage bonds and the passage of the dividend on Minneapolis & St. Louis comes the announcement that the first mortgage bonds of the Lake Erie and Western preferred has been cut in half. These are minor railroads, but they are straws which show very significant how severely railroad earnings have been cut and it is probable that the reduction in dividend rates will continue and that some of the standard issues will sooner or later be affected. Sentiment in the main, however, continues cheerful and the professional element is ranged very decidedly on the bull side of the market. I can see nothing to bull the market on, and I think it will hold fairly strong for some few days longer. I believe that it is a sale on all rallies.

• • •

Randolph to Paine, Webber & Co.: There was a firm tone to the market this morning at the opening, with prices as a rule fractionally improved from last night. Quite heavy selling started up in Southerl Pacific, however, and this produced an unsettled effect throughout the entire list. The market did not go down much and grew dull on the decline, with the tone fairly steady during most of the day. Many excuses have been made for this proposed issue of stock, but Wall street continues to look upon it in any way but a bearish light. A huge floating indebtedness which must be financed at any cost, and it cannot be made a bull argument. People are wondering how many railroads in the country are in the same position as Southern Pacific. Consolidated Gas showed great strength throughout the day.

• • •

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The New York market opened strong and had an hour of activity, there seemed to be more sellers than buyers and the market gradually sagged during the remainder of the day, brokerage offices in Boston were deserted. The Boston Exchange being closed.

Copper advanced 7 shillings further in London on large transactions. The heaviness of Southern Pacific indicates that the proposed new stock issue is being taken unfavorably and unless given renewed support the whole market will be lower tomorrow.

• • •

New York to Paine, Webber & Co.: We find that in most parts of the street, regardless of criticism of the Southern Pacific plan itself, there is a disposition to interpret the flotation of this new issue at this time as indicating that the powers that be feel confident of an improving financial situation and this is based a great deal on the crop outlook and the plethora of money.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 17.—The cotton market opened weak at a decline of 11 to 12 points on the old crop, and of 3 to 13 points on the new crop position under active liquidation and bear pressure following very bearish cables and excellent weather news. There was considerable demand for the crop on the decline from local shorts and following the call this buying served to steady the new crop positions, while the old crop being sold freely by the South and room operators, broke to 11.00 for July and 10.62 for August. At the end of the first hour the market was nervous and unsettled at a new decline of 8 to 24 points.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 30 points lower; middling uplands, 11.70; middling gulf, 11.95; sales, 1046 bales. Futures closed steady: June, 10.85; July, 10.95; August, 10.15; September, 9.32; October, 9.56; November, 9.48; December, 9.57; January, 9.76.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, June 17.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $164,050,919; gold, $65,559,030; silver, $25,579,725; United States notes, $10,682,575; treasury notes of 1890, $119,113; national bank notes, $14,896,843; total receipts this day, $1,632,661; total receipts this month, $25,157,307; total receipts this year, $518,437,38; total expenditures this day, $1,510,000; total expenditures this month, $20,550,000; total expenditures this year, $506,122,071; deposits in national banks, $120,353,285.

UP FROM WEALTH.

There is no more unique figure in America today, 1975, than John G. Smith, the poorest man in the world, says the Kansas City Star. He owns less real estate than any man living, and he has vast debts in England and Scotland, as well as in this country. All of this by a man who was born among the wealthiest of the wealthy.

And still Mr. Smith, with his vast poverty, is a plain, unassuming man, and he speaks with pride of his struggle with wealth in his early days. He talks lovingly of his rich but honest parents, and he has never forgotten the money-burdened friends of his boyhood days. Neither has he forgotten his relatives who have been less fortunate than he, but he has assisted them by permitting them to pay debt after debt for him, until many of them are in comfortable circumstances, although not enormously poor.

It was in Pittsburg, Pa., that, in 1871, John G. Smith first saw the light of day. His father was a millionaire, and he had troubles enough even before John put in his appearance. It is related that the mother comforted him with the words: "The little fellow may relieve you of much of your responsibility; I feel that he's going to be a great spendthrift." So she took the best of care of the newcomer, and as he grew older she instilled in him the principles which, he says, were the foundation of his success through life—extravagance, lavishness and prodigality.

"Home training has everything to do with a man's career," he said. "I was taught to idle when very young and to spend money—two very important things in a man's life."

His early life was one of extreme hardship. He was hardly out of his kilts when his father gave him $6000 a month to spend. "While I may be able to get rid of all this before I'm gone," the old gentleman would say, "still I may go suddenly and leave my family with billions of dollars in their hands. Then's when John will have to buckle into the harness and help to get rid of it."

The little fellow accepted the responsibilities of life from the start. Some of the old-timers still remember him at Monte Carlo, trudging up to the roulette wheel to lay his thousand or two on the red. And it was on the race track. While boys rolling in the lap of poverty were dawling their time away playing "keeps," young Smith was playing the ponies, studying nights to find flaws in the bookmakers' calculations.

And so time sped on. Before the lad was 8 years old his stern old father had him operating a 40-horse power man-killing motor car, with the results that little personal damage bill alone amounted to $15,000 a week. In his daily labors with the big devil wagon he would pass hundreds of happy-faced youngsters going to and from the shops, the factories or the mines. He never veered to right or left, but drove his machine straight through them, if needs be, varying not a hair from what he recognized as his plain duty. Finally the youth mastered a steam yacht 260 feet long sufficiently to be a passenger through the Mediterranean, making the usual journey to Monte Carlo.

Young Smith had not shirked a duty when he was prepared to enter Harvard university. Despite the fact that he spent seven years at the historic old college, he got little education, reading and writing fluently, and knows something about pictures besides. He won honors with his graduating thesis on "Expenditure and Outlay," which since has rescued the position of classic in New Camebridge.

His college days over, Smith went at once into serious work, his father's constantly increasing wealth making this course necessary. He was very succesful with a string of running horses, making large inroads into the elder Smith's fortune before the unsuspecting "talent" suspected he was loading them with money. The stock market next drew his attention, and for two years he was steadily on the losing side, the pride of his father and the envy of every struggling, wealth-ridden billionaire in America. Time and time again they planned coups to make him take back every cent he had forced on them, but in vain, and Wall street had the spectacle of one man dumping money onto a helpless lot of speculators, literally drowning them in wealth. Having drowned them, Smith retired for a time to count his losses. He had lost heavily, 'tis true, but this man of ambition was not yet content; it was his plan to die the poorest man of his day. His accounts showed him to be yet the possessor of a fair amount—some fourteen billion dollars—and he sought a means to rid himself of it. To men of meaner clay the old library or university system of expenditure and exploitation would have suggested itself, but Smith considered these methods nothing less than dishonesty. Even as late as the early part of the last century that method was looked upon as philanthropy. Mr. Smith would have none of it. "Rather burn the stuff," said he on one occasion.

It was just a year after his great victory in the stock markets. He had lived nearly in seclusion and his expenses were again falling far behind his income. "We've got the old fox!" said the men who were gradually drawing themselves above the wealth he had poured upon them. But they reckoned without their host; there was still another coup in old Smith. Before his enemies realized what he was planning he had adopted twelve young women, each 18 years of age, and the same day entered them in twelve of the most fashionable schools for young ladies in all America. "Spare nothing," he told the heads of the schools. In four years he was an object of charity and now makes his living by caning chairs.

"I was very rich when I began life," he said, sitting on an upturned bucket in his room, "very rich, but still I look back on those hard days with pleasure."

"Is not one happier amid such surroundings as yours?" I asked.

"No," he replied quickly, "great poverty can not bring happiness. I have seen wealthy people who are happy. I would rather be a very good man than a very poor man."

BREAK IN RATE

Tonnage Is Freely Offered Grain Shippers at 1 3-4 Cents.

Little Grain to Place and Further Break Is Expected.

The grain rate has broken and it was a foregone conclusion that it would with line boats coming into the market for cargoes, and shippers having little to place. They are now offering to take grain for 1¾c and are getting little or nothing at that. Shippers are selling little wheat to go East and hence have little to place. Last year in the early part of the season rates went to pieces and were very low until finally the line boats got together and fixed a minimum and advanced it slightly every month for a few months. It is very probable that unless they do that this year the rate will be as low as 1 cent.

ALMOST UNLOADED.

It is expected that the steamer Augustus B. Wolvin, which for the past two days has been unloading her mammoth cargo of coal at the Northwestern Coal company's dock, in Superior, will be ready to clear for Two Harbors early this evening. She will load with ore at Two Harbors. The work of unloading the big boat was not completed yesterday, as was expected would be the case. It is thought that she will get out of the local harbor between 6 and 7 o'clock this evening.

OCEAN TRADE POOR.

Norwegian Owner Says It Is Demoralized.

T. S. Trovik, of Norway, owner of an ocean freight boat, is now in the city, on his way East from visiting with a son in Dakota. Mr. Trovik says that the ocean trade is so dull that operating the freighters only means a loss to the owners. His boat is one of 2500 tons burden. He is a member of an insurance association and says that last year the insurance paid out on his vessel amounted to 28 per cent of the boat's value, because of the heavy losses on the sea. According to Mr. Trovik, who has sailed the ocean for thirty years, the ocean trade is completely demoralized, because there are too many freighters in commission.

VAFANGOW FIGHT

Associated Press Correspondent Describes the Three Days' Battle.

The Scene Was Awe-Inspiring From Start to Finish.

Liao Yang, June 17.—A correspondent of the Associated Press, who was present at the battle of Vafangow, describes the fighting as follows:

"The stern, dogged fighting at the battle of Vafangow was like another Borodino. The roar of the machine guns and the boom of the cannon still ring in one's ears.

"Throughout the three days of combat the officers and men vied with each other in pluck and heroism. They have added a glorious page to Russia's military history.

"The enemy's advance originally included the Fifth, the Eighth and Eleventh divisions, twelve squadrons of cavalry and splendid artillery. About 200 guns were belching a continuous stream of shot and shell. Large reinforcements enabled them to turn the Russian flanks. A diversion on the right precipitated the battle in the morning of June 15.

"While the big guns were thundering I made my way, at about 11 o'clock a. m., to the Russian right flank and climbed a hill whence I could view the whole field of battle.

"Behind me a battery had taken up a position from which it kept up a continuous fire upon the advancing ranks of the enemy. Through glasses I could see the sandy valley of the Tassa, with the Chinese village of Fafan. The heights of Foo Chou, the railroad bridge and the surrounding copses were occupied by Japanese. Then black lines of infantry threads could be seen creeping through the verdure. Nearer, the slope of a hill was dotted by the gray shirts of Russian riflemen, a brownish smoke overhung some of the batteries, and others showed flashes of flame. The crack of rifle was punctuated by the roar of guns. Occasionally I heard the hiss of a Japanese bullet.

"The scene was awe inspiring. Over the Russian center and left flank hovered chocolate clouds from bursting shrapnel. It was evident that tide of battle was coming toward the Russian right. I saw reserves hurrying forward, the Cossacks galloping, followed by columns of infantry at the double-quick. Suddenly they disappeared in an adjacent defile. The valley where the Russians had camped was emptied as if by magic. Rattling volleys were fired behind the screen of hills which concealed the fighting troops from view in that direction, the sound of the firing being the only evidence of the deadly struggle proceeding there. This continued for half an hour. Suddenly a company of Cossacks appeared on the crest of the hill and began to descend. They were followed by infantry. The Japanese gunners promptly pursued them with shrapnel. Horses and men began falling.

"A moment of harrowing suspense was relieved by a thunderous shout of 'hurrah.' It was from a couple of thousand of Russian troops just brought up by train. They quickly jumped from the cars, fixed bayonets and literally ran into the fight.

"Again the crackle of musketry under cover, during which the retiring Russian regiments formed up and moved off in complete order toward the railroad. While a long line of commissariat wagons, escorted by Cossacks, took to the road, a battery of horse artillery stationed near the railroad banged away furiously as it covered the retreat. The Japanese shells were falling on the station buildings, from which train after train had moved.

"I descended the hill and just succeeded in jumping on the foot board of the last car. Some of the Russian batteries on the left flank, were still firing. The main force then began slowly to retreat towards Vantslailin, thirty miles north of Vafangow and at about 1 o'clock in the afternoon had accomplished its mission. The battle of Vefangow had deflected considerable Japanese forces from Port Arthur.

"The fighting was glorious. For two days the Russian regiments valorously maintained their positions and took the offensive on the left, so pressing the enemy there that a couple of Japanese batteries fell into the Cossacks' hands. The Russian soldiers went into battle singing, their spirits not affected by the fierce heat and furious cannonading, whose intensity may be gauged from the influence it had on the atmospheric conditions.

"Many Russians have fallen, but a greater number of Japanese were killed. The Russian shells and bullets mowed them down like wheat. The whole valley was bestrewn with their corpses and the river Tassa ran red. But it was with Japanese more than with Russian blood.

"I left on the last train, with Gen. Stakelberg. This train collided with the one preceding it, near Vantslailin, but it was not damaged.

"The whole road north was occupied by Russian troops. The Russians say the Japanese cannot advance much further north, even when they recover from the effects of the battle of Vafangow."

WOMAN'S RULING PASSION.

Women who are driven to suicide presumably lose most of their ambition before taking the fatal plunge, but there is one feminine trait that they retain to the end, namely, pride of clothes, says the San Francisco Argonaut. "Seldom," says a doctor, whose position has required him to perform post-mortem services for many of these unfortunates, "have I seen a woman who did not go to her death as well dressed as her circumstances would allow. The published reports of these tragedies confirm my observation. Read in the papers the account of a suicide, and nine times out of ten it will wind up by saying 'the woman was well dressed,' or, at least, 'her clothing was neat and clean.' Unless these women belong to the dregs, they are found dressed in the silk skirt and silk waist which have become the inevitable garb of the suicide of moderate means. At the last the true feminine instinct seems to assert itself, and, although the woman will not be here to read the account of the tragedy, she wants to die in the blessed satisfaction that she will be written up as a well-dressed member of society."

GREAT HYMN WRITERS.

Frances Jane Crosby, the writer of hymns, has just found in a Presbyterian church in New Jersey the organ she played on fifty years ago, when she was in the New York city institution for the blind. She was led to the organ loft and played beautifully and strongly. She had played on that organ for many distinguished visitors to the institution, such as Henry Clay, Marshal Bertrand (Napoleon's marshal), Gen. Scott, and Martin Farquhar Tupper, says the Springfield Republican. The hymnist's proper designation, by the way, is Mrs. Van Alstyne, for she was married in 1858; but she is always referred to as "Fannie Crosby," and generally with "Miss" prefixed. She is now 84 years old. Her hymn, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," was written in twenty minutes, on an "emergency call," so to speak. She has written over 5000 hymns. But she also has written other songs, and favorites, too,—such as "There's Music in the Air," and the old-fashioned "Rosalie, the Prairie Flower," both of these set to music by G. F. Root.

RUSSIAN LOSSES IN VAFANGOW BATTLE EXCEEDED 2000 MEN

Over 1100 Wounded Have Arrived at Liao Yang.

March of Army and Sailing of Fleet Prearranged.

Battle Will Delay the Attack on Port Arthur.

St. Petersburg, June 18.—About eleven hundred men wounded at the battle of Vafangow, including fifty-five officers, have reached Liao Yang. The total Russian losses are about 2000.

Gen. Stakelberg's force is marching north, the railroad being unable to transport more than a few thousand men.

Special dispatches say the Russians at Vafangaw had forty-two battalions against forty-four Japanese battalions. The Japanese had great superiority in artillery, having more than two hundred guns.

London, June 18.—A dispatch from Mukden to the Central News says two ambulance trains have arrived there having on board 38 officers and 734 men, who were wounded in the fight at Vafangow.

PRECONCERTED PLAN.

Raid on Russian Squadron and Stakelberg's March.

St. Petersburg, June 18.—It transpires that the simultaneous raid of the Vladivostok squadron and Gen. Stakelberg's march southward were the direct outcome of a plan agreed upon by Viceroy Alexieff and Gen. Kuropatkin, at Mukden, immediately after the battle of Kin Chou, to relieve the tension at Port Arthur. The authorities apparently are satisfied with the results of Stakelberg's mission, he having compelled the dispatch north of detachments of the Third Japanese army, commanded by Gen. Nodzu, delaying the siege to that extent, while at sea the raid of the Russian squadron has rendered the further transport of troops from the Japanese mainland impossible.

The admiralty has no direct news from the Vladivostok squadron, and has not intimated what its further mission is. The papers are all rejoicing at its exploits, the Novoe Vreyma describing the raid as a marvel of dash and pluck.

The war office has received important news regarding Gen. Kuroki and the reason why he is at Siu Yen with three divisions of about 20,000 men and without reserves. But dispatches, dated yesterday, do not mention his advance. It is believed Kuroki really contemplated combined operations to cut off and pocket Stakelberg, but that he delayed too long. It is understood that Kuropatkin sent a strong Russian force south of Liao Yang to meet Kuroki's move. It is possible that a general engagement may be precipitated in the neighborhood of Hai Cheng.

JAPANESE INCENSED

By Russians' Alleged Violation of Japanese Flag.

Tokio, June 18.—The Japanese government may decide not to make any formal protest through France against the alleged violation of the Japanese flag at the battle of Telissu on the ground of its uselessness. It is believed that Russia will deny whatever the facts may be creating a discussion which would only involve a waste of time. Herein lies one disadvantage of the Japanese plan to restrict military observers and press correspondents, for the reason that no matter how flagrant the violations they may charge of the law of nations, they are unable to substantiate them without the testimony of neutral witnesses. The Japanese people are intensely incensed at the Telissu incident and the press bitterly denounces the Russian army commanders. While the Japanese government desires to wage war in the most humane way it is improbable it can restrain its men from violations in revenge for atrocities perpetrated by the enemy.

KILLED DEFENSELESS MEN.

Russian Fleet Raked Crippled Transport With Shrapnel.

Tokio, June 18.—A total of 500 survivors of the Japanese transports Sado and Hitachi, destroyed by Russian warships, have arrived at southern ports.

The Russians permitted 610 non-combatants to leave the Sado, but their whereabouts are unknown.

The Japanese officers and soldiers, who were detained on board the Sado, had prepared to commit suicide, but changed their minds when the Russians suddenly departed. There was apparently no chance given the non-combatants on board the Hitachi to leave, and the Russians raked the crowded decks of the crippled transport with shrapnel. The Japanese denounce this action as barbarity, indicating the clear intent of the Russians to kill defenseless men, instead of a simple desire to destroy the ships.

WILL DELAY ATTACK.

Che Foo, June 18.—Japanese officials here believe that the loss of the transports Hitachi and Sado will delay the proposed combined attack on Port Arthur.

The Taotai of Che Foo has protested to the Russian consul against the use of wireless telegraphy between Che Foo and Port Arthur, but the consul has not yet made any reply to the Taotai's representations.

KUROKI IS WAITING.

Gen. Kuroki's Headquarters in the Field, via Fusan, June 18.—Gen. Kuroki is quietly awaiting the results of the fighting to the Liao Tung peninsula, on the result of which, according to a high officer, the future movements of the First Japanese army largely depends. The Russian's reoccupation of towns northwest of the Japanese front is believed to indicate a plan to prevent Gen. Kuroki from attempting a junction with the Japanese forces on the Liao Tung peninsula. Correspondents with Gen. Kuroki's army have been promised greater liberty, and have been given permission to visit the outposts of the army. Heavy rains prevail.

NASH'S CONDITION BETTER.

Columbus, O., June 18.—Ex-Governor Nash's condition was improved this morning and it was expected that he would be permitted to sit up for a time during the day. Prospects for his recovery are remote, however.

CHARGED WITH BRIBING.

New York, June 18.—Charged with bribing a secret service agent and confessing the charge to be true, Cosmo Ranalli, a deputy in the office of George W. Morgan, superintendent of elections, has been lodged in jail. Ranalli's arrest grew out of an investigation into naturalization frauds among the Italian workers in the cleaning department.

HENNEPIN COUNTY THE STORM CENTER

Of the Political Fight Now and No Expense Is Being Spared.

Minneapolis, June 18.—The Times today says: Hennepin county is the political storm center of the state and will be until the Republican county convention is held a week from Tuesday. Messrs. Dunn and Collins, both non-residents are straining every nerve to carry the county and its 113 votes in the state convention.

Both sides are not chary of expense, and are sending speakers into every ward in the city, and numerous house meetings, as they are called, are being held in every precinct in the city.

The candidates themselves are working overtime. Mr. Dunn addresses from one to three meetings every night and Judge Collins can be found on the rostrum every evening—frequently more than once.

The pace is a strenuous one. The candidates seem to bear the wear and tear of the fight, but all will welcome the adjournment of the state convention on June 30, when the fight will be over.

Both candidates claim Hennepin county. Both want it. Without the support of Hennepin, neither Judge Collins nor Mr. Dunn is absolutely certain of the nomination. Hence the battle here.

The country people are watching the conflict in Hennepin with interest, for they realize the action of the caucuses on the evening of June 27 will have an important bearing upon the politics of the state.

In commenting upon the situation, A. N. Dare, state printer, expert, and publisher of the Elk River Star News, expresses himself as follows:

"The gubernatorial campaign is raging in Hennepin county with all the vigor of an election campaign. If Dunn carries Hennepin country, the contest will be settled and Dunn will be nominated. On the other hand, should Collins carry it, the fight will be carried into the state convention and fought out to the bitter end."

GRAND CROSS OF THE LEGION OF HONOR CONFERRED ON AMERICAN

President Loubet of France Bestows on Ambassador Porter, the Highest Grade of Historic Order, an Honor Seldom Conferred.

Paris, June 18.—President Loubet has conferred upon the American ambassador, Gen. Porter, the grand cross of the Legion of Honor, which is the highest grade of that historic order. It is an honor rarely bestowed even on chiefs of state and ambassadors, and it is the first time it has ever been offered to the representative of America. As under the provision of the constitution the acceptance of any rank of distinction from a foreign country, even from a republic, requires the approval of congress' final action in the matter, and will await the authorization of that body.

Foreign Minister Delcasse called at the ambassador's residence this morning and personally presented him with the superb insignia of the grand cross. This consists of a wide, silk band, worn across the breast, having an enamelled, gold cross at the hip, with an elaborate silver star to be worn on the right breast. M. Delcasse, accompanied the presentation by an earnest expression of the high personal esteem which M. Loubet and himself felt toward the American representative.

The grand cross is the highest of five grades of the legion of honor. These consist, first, of chevalier; second, officer; third, commander; fourth, grand officer; and fifth, grand cross. The datter is the grade worn by M. Loubet and has been conferred only a few times in recent years. That the American ambassador should have been singled out for this notable honor is considered to be a personal tribute to him and another evidence of the cordial sentiments of the French government towards America.

THE CONSERVATIVE CLASS OF FINNS DEPRECATE SHOOTING

No Disturbances of Any Kind Have Occurred Since the Assassination of Governor General Bobrikoff and None Is Feared By Authorities.

Helsingfors, Finland, June 18.—No disturbances have occurred in any part of Finland as the result of the assassination of Governor General Bobrikoff, nor do the authorities believe that there is danger of any demonstration of sympathy with the act of Schaumann.

The conservative class of Finns deprecate the deed, not only because of immediate effect upon them, but because it is calculated to alienate the sympathy of the outside world, which is essential for their campaign. Members of the senate who had insisted that the responsibility of guarding the governor general inside the senate chamber should rest on their shoulders, publicly condemn the act, and are apprehensive that it may lead to a curtailment of their powers. Several Finnish senators have already gone to the emperor to express their regret and endeavor to prevent the adoption of harsh measures, which they fear would further alienate the Russians and Finns. The Russian officials seem absolutely convinced that no popular movement will follow Schaumann's act, and are reposing confidence in the better feelings of the people. They drive about Helsingfors without guards and attend to their usual duties apparently without fear of personal violence.

Although Schaumann left a letter saying he had no accomplices and that he acted entirely on his own initiative, the authorities firmly believe that a plot existed. Several friends of Schaumann have been placed under arrest, but no evidence has yet been obtained. The father of the assassin, who was dismissed from the senate at the time of the opposition to the introduction of the Russian language, has convinced the police that he knows nothing of his son's purpose. The assassin had been on bad terms with the police for a year, having been arrested in 1902 for public criticism of the conduct of the Cossacks in connection with the dispersion of the rioters on the occasion of the conscription troubles.

Schaumann's uncle commanded the disbanded Finnish dragoons.

ELEVATOR MEN'S STRIKE FAILS TO MATERIALIZE.

New York, July 18.—A strike ordered against the Otis Elevator company all over the United States and Canada by the executive committee of the Elevator constructors' international union, has not materialized as yet among the company's employes in this city.

According to the secretary of the union, however, several thousand men have quit in other cities, including Chicago, St. Louis, Boston, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Cincinnati and Toronto.

MOYER IMPLICATED

In the Explosion at the Vindicator Mine.

Telluride, Col., June 18.—Sheriff Rulan surrendered Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, to two deputy sheriffs from Cripple Creek who held a warrant charging Moyer with having been implicated in the Vindicator mine explosion of Nov. 1, 1903, by which two men were killed. Moyer has been held as a prisoner here nearly three months under Governor Peabody's orders without recourse to the courts. He was turned over to the sheriff Wednesday evening after United States Judge Thayer at St. Louis had issued a writ of habeas corpus in his case. District Attorney Mullin has dismissed all charges against Moyer in this county.

IS WITHOUT TRUTH

Statement That Van Sant Is to Enter Gubernatorial Contest.

The Governor Reiterates the Denial He Had Previously Made.

St. Paul, June 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—In view of the fact that statements have recently been made that he was a probable candidate for a third term in the present campaign, Governor Van Sant today gave the Associated Press the following statement:

"The statement sent broadcast throughout the state that I am about to enter the gubernatorial contest, is without the slightest foundation. Months ago, I gave public utterance to the fact that I would not be a candidate for the nomination and I desire to reiterate that statement.

"Personally I have, and do now, favor the nomination of Judge Collins and sincerely hope that he will be successful in the convention.

"He has lived in this state for the past fifty years; he has served his country well in war and in peace; he stands on the right side of all public questions and is in every way an ideal candidate.

"I will take this occasion to say that the published statements to the effect that the examination by the public examiner, of the records of the state auditor's office was instituted by the administration for political purposes is untrue.

"The investigation was directed by the legislature. The legislative committe having in charge the investigation of that office, in its report, called attention to stumpage accounts appearing on the books of said office and made the following recommendation: 'We would recommend that the public examiner investigate thoroughly into these accounts, and if same are actually due the state, that he be requested to take such steps as are necessary to enforce the collection.'

"This investigation having been made, the public is entitled to know the facts. The amount obtained from the sale of timber adds to our permanent school fund and every citizen has a deep interest in this sacred fund. The reports of the examiner show that compromises in obtaining prices far below that received at public sale the same year, whereas, if the penalty proscribed had been exacted the reverse would have been true. The datter is the grade worn by M. Loubet and has been conferred only a few times in recent years. That the American ambassador should have been singled out for this notable honor is considered to be a personal tribute to him and another evidence of the cordial sentiments of the French government towards America.

"This investigation was made, and it matter, not easy. It has been cheaper to trespass than to purchase from the state. This explains why so much trespassing has been repeatedly resorted to by the same parties. Until the present year there never has been a conviction for trespassing upon state lands. If it was thoroughly understood that for every trespass the laws would be strictly enforced, then these illegal acts would cease. When the magnitude of the state's interests in land, timber and iron ore is considered, it can be seen that the greatest care should be exercised in the handling of such interest. The way to secure the very best results is to carefully follow the course prescribed by law—every provision is a safeguard.

S. R. VAN SANT,
"Governor."

AT PORTLAND, ORE.

Charities Association Will Meet Next Year.

Portland, Me., June 18.—Superintendent F. H. Nibecker, of the house of refuge, Glen Mills, Pa., addressed the National Conference of Charities and Correction today on the "Forward Work of Boarding Schools for Delinquents."

The standing committee on "Children" had charge. The best ways of teaching good boys have been learned in rounding out bad boys to first rate men, according to Mr. Nibecker. "The true idea of education," said he, "has nowhere been so fully exemplified as it is now in boarding schools for delinquent children."

The conference voted to hold its next year's meetings at Portland, Ore., the vote standing eighteen states for that city and ten for Minneapolis, Minn. The vote was made unanimous.

HAD NO AUTHORITY

To Bring Suit Against Governor Peabody.

Colorado Springs, June 18.—Irving Howbert, vice president; Frank G. Preck, secretary-treasurer, and Thomas F. Burns, constituting a majority of the directors of the Portland gold mining company, have given out a statement disapproving of President Burns' action in bringing suit for damages against Governor Peabody for the closing down of the Portland property by the militia. They say he acted without the authority of the board of directors.

MONEY FOR RANSOM

To Be Paid Raisuli Before Release of Prisoners.

Washington, June 18.—A cablegram received at the state department, from Consul General Gummere, at Tangier, in confirming the press report that the sultan had agreed to all of Raisuli's terms, adds that the money ransom, $55,000, was to be paid over today. Mr. Gummere expressed grave doubt as to the advisability of making this payment before Perdicaris and Varley were actually released and safely returned to Tangier. Based on past experience, it is feared that Raisuli is not to be depended on and that once he has the money in his hand and still controls the prisoners, he will make fresh demands. However, nothing more can be done at this stage, according to Mr. Gummere and the state department will await the conclusion of this last attempt to free the prisoners.

DEEP HOLE IN THE RIVER FILLED WITH THE SLOCUM'S DEAD

Divers Make a Ghastly Discovery In Their Search.

Scores of Bodies Found Piled Up In the River.

Eight Secured Before Diver Was Forced to Stop.

New York, June 18.—A diver who today renewed the search for victims of the steamer General Slocum disaster, found a deep hole in the bed of the river practically filled with bodies. Within an hour after the search was begun eight bodies had been brought to the surface and when he was forced to abandon the work for a time because of the swift current, he stated that between thirty and fifty bodies still remained in the hole. The diver was searching along the river bottom and had reached a point near the foot of the sloping lawn on North Brother island, where the bodies of the first victims of the tragedy were laid last Wednesday, when he found several bodies lying together and at first the divers supposed there were no more than half a dozen in the pile, but upon removing several he found a great hole in the river bed literally packed with dead. He says that no less than thirty more bodies will be found when the tide again turns and permits a resumption of the work. This number he says may be greatly exceeded. One of the bodies taken from the water today was that of a woman, wrapped in a large American flag.

After the lapse of three days since the disaster the most carefully collected data shows that five hundred and sixty eight bodies have been recovered up to this time.

Based on the same data the list of missing today were estimated at 320, while fifty-three victims of the disaster were in hospitals slowly recovering from their injuries. Elaborate arrangements had been made by the police for the handling of the crowds that were expected to attend the many funerals in the stricken district today. So far as could be learned plans had been made for the burial of 111 bodies from homes in the vicinity of St. Mark's church. The arrangements include services in thirty-seven churches of all denominations in that neighborhood.

Twenty-three sergeants, ten roundsmen and 40 policemen were detailed to attend the funrals, in policemen in charge of a sergeant and a roundsman being stationed at each church. Commissioner McAdoo had issued instructions that the police use as little force as possible in handling the crowds and they did not carry the batons which usually form a part of their accoutrements.

Considerably difficulty has been experienced by the undertakers who have contracted for the burial of the bodies in securing a sufficient number of hearses, and it became necessary to call upon Jersey City, Newark, Hoboken and various other places in order to supply the demand. In accordance with the German custom the people who were obliged to be out of doors passed through the streets in the stricken district with bared heads. Business was practically suspended, and nearly every store was draped in black. The streets were literally filled with hearses. The funerals began at an early hour, and at times the streets were completely blocked and traffic of other kinds was impossible. Every church in the vicinity was filled to its capacity. Clergymen from all parts of the great city had left their own congregations and come down to the bereaved district to do what they could to give spiritual consolation to the afflicted.

Capt. Van Schaick, who is lying at Lebanon hospital with a broken foot and severe burns about the head, has given out an interview replying to the criticisms of his conduct, it having been alleged that he ran the boat two miles past at least places where it could have been beached after the fire was discovered. He is quoted as follows:

"I was in my cabin when some one yelled 'fire' thrilly through the tube. I ran out, saw flames sweeping over the boat, ran back, waited five seconds and then gave the order to run ahead to North Brother island and beach the boat sideways, believing this was our only chance.

"The critics don't know the territory. We were more than 2000 feet above the buoys on the sunken meadows and about 2000 feet from North Brother island and were going at fifteen miles an hour.

"A short distance ahead and to the westward was a large tug. I had no choice but to keep on for the island. If I had stopped and turned round and gone back to the sunken meadows, the chances were that the boat would have been burned to the water's edge and the passengers with it before we reached the meadows.

"Even if it would not have been burned, the boat, striking the meadows, would have backed off again and everybody on board when they jumped off, would have been drowned in deep water. And if I had run to the neck on the Bronx shore, I could not have made fast on account of the panic on board.

"I knew the water was very deep there, and thought the people would have no chance to save their lives by jumping overboard. The tug, at any rate, would have prevented me from going in that direction without some delay."

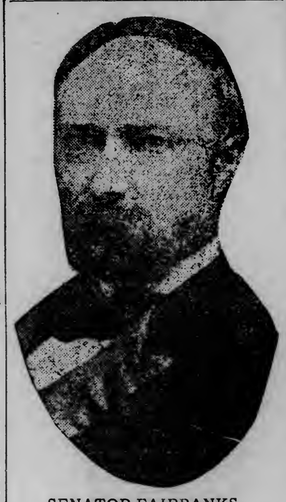

Previous statements have been made to the effect that the fire was discovred before the boat passed the sunken meadows.

SENATOR FAIRBANKS WILLING TO ACCEPT

Nomination For Vice President If Tendered to Him.

Will Make No Attempt to Secure the Honor.

Indiana Will Not Present His Name For Position.

SENATOR FAIRBANKS.

Chicago, June 18.—Politics, even though it did concern a national convention was in second place today with the great majority of the delegates who were in the city, and particularly with the men who came into the city this morning. The greater number of them had just two questions to put to the hotel clerk. These were: "Where can I check my grip," and the other was "How do I get out to the Derby?"

The rooms of the national committee were practically deserted, save for a few clerks who were there to attend to necessary work, but the members of the committee were conspicuous by their absence. Senator Scott was one of the first to put in an appearance and remained but a short time, saying as he went out:

"You know we decided yesterday to hold a continuous session until we finished up all of these contests, and I remarked to the other members: 'I don't suppose any of you gentlemen are aware that there will be a big horse race in this town tomorrow.' I don't know whether they knew it before I told them, but they know it today, and I think would be somewhat difficult to obtain a quorum if we had any business late this afternoon."

Congressman James A. Hemenway, of Indiana, made the most specific statement this morning that has yet been made regarding the desires of Senator Fairbanks for the vice presidency.

"He will take the position," said Congressman Hemenway, "but he will not ask for it, nor will he express a desire for it. He does not think that there will be a scramble for the place, and he will only say that he will accept it after he has been selected for it."

"Does that mean that when the roll of states is called for the presentation of candidates for the vice presidency, that Indiana will not present the name of Senator Fairbanks?

"It means exactly that," said the congressman. "Indiana will not present the name of Senator Fairbanks, or any other man, according to the present program. If the senator is nominated, he will take the place and that is all and I might as well add right here, that all attempts to get him to make a statement will be fruitless. He will say nothing either one way or the other, but if the Republican party desires to have him in the second place on the ticket, he will accept it after he has been chosen for it. That is as far as he will go, and that is as far as Indiana will go in pushing his candidacy. Of course the state takes its cue from the attitude of the senator, and the situation I have described will continue until somebody is nominated for vice president."

During the early part of the day but few delegates put in an appearance, and the situation with one was the situation with all. All of them were for Roosevelt, none of them knew exactly who he wanted for vice-president, and nobody had a new plank for the platform. It was expected that headquarters would be opened this morning at the Stratford hotel. Owing, however, to the fact that Mr. Hitt is ill in Washington it was decided by his friends to run his campaign from the headquarters of the Illinois delegation.

The fight over the chairmanship of the Illinois delegation was growing warm today and will probably reach the climax Monday. The friends of Governor Yates claim that he has a clear working majority of fourteen votes, and that he will without question defeat Senator Cullom for the chairmanship.

Twenty members of the California delegation together with the Philippine and Hawaiian delegates arrived shortly before noon. J. W. McKinley, of Los Angeles, will be the chairman of the California delegation and he announced today that his state had no especial preference for vice-president, but understood that it would go to Senator Fairbanks if the senator wanted it. When told of the attitude the senator had decided to maintain in regard to the position, Mr. McKinley declared himself unable to say positively just what California would do but in any event a contest of any account over the position was not looked for. In the opinion of Mr. McKinley the man for the position would be practically agreed upon before the time came for his nomination and not more than one ballot would be necessary to nominate him whoever he might be.

A few members of the Iowa delegation put in an appearance at the Stratford hotel during the day. The prominent men of their state will not be here before Monday, when Senator Allison and Governor Cummins are expected.

The Philippine delegates were jubilant when told that there was an excellent chance of their being seated as delegates. They were strongly of the opinion that they had as good a right on the floor of the convention as had the men from Hawaii, and were decidedly pleased when informed that the national committee held the same view.

George B. Carter, chairman of the delegation from Hawaii, said:

"There are some things that the people of the Hawaiian islands would like to obtain in the way of special legislation, but they are hardly matters to bring before a national convention, and I do not think that we have any special plank to offer for the platform. It looks very much to me as though the platform would be about the same as that adopted by the Philadelphia convention. Conditions have not changed materially in the last four years, and what applied then would be good at the present time, as far as I can see."

The finishing touches were put on the convention hall this morning and it is now, in all respects, ready for the convention. The local committee is of the opinion that it ranks well up with any of the convention halls of recent years in the matters of arrangement and decoration. There is less adornment in the hall than has been seen at any Republican convention for the last sixteen years at least, but the colors of the hall itself are bright, and being tastefully relieved with bunting and grouped flags, the effect is excellent.

It is not expected that the great number of delegates will be here before Monday morning. The majority of the rooms at the hotels have been engaged with this understanding. The number of visitors who have come in advance of the convention proper is smaller than at any national convention for a long time. The hotelkeepers ascribe this condition to the settled condition in the convention which promises excitement only in the matter of the choice of a vice president and not a great deal of it in that direction.

RACING FOR THE EMPEROR'S CUP

Dover, Eng., June 18.—In a fine northwesterly breeze fourteen yachts started this afternoon in the race to the island of Helgioland, for Emepror William's cup. There was much more interest this year than heretofore, as is had been given an international character by the admission of American, French and German competitors. The stars and stripes were represented by a sole entry, the schooner-yacht Ingomar, (by Morton F. Plant, of New York.)

The yachts presented a magnificent spectacle as they got under full sail, all bunched so close that the Ingomar and the German schooner Clara narrowly avoided a collision.

America, Germany and France had a single representative against Great Britain's eleven.

The greatest interest centered in the Ingomar and the showing she will make against the European two-stickers.

Captain Barr confidently predicts her victory, and as if to confirm his view, the Ingomar soon went to the front and off the foreland was leading the fleet, sailing in magnificent style.

COURT AWARDS $5000 FOR SHOCK

St. Paul, June 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Phillip Bardon was given a verdict for $5000 yesterday in his suit for damages against the Northwestern Telephone company. The action was novel in this that few causes of like character are found in the records.

Bardon, who is an elderly man, claimed that in responding to a telephone call at his apartments, received a shock through the receiver that rendered his hearing defective and injured his nervous system.

It is thought the telephone wires to Bardon's residence became crossed with an electric light or street railway wire.

PUBLIC AFFAIRS COMMITTEE MEETS

Discussion of Expenditure In Entertainment of Conventions.

Duluth Not Getting Fair Treatment In St. Louis Exhibit.

Less than half the membership of the public affairs committee of the Commercial club turned out last night and the proceedings were correspondingly tame. The weather was warm and the keeping open of the doors permitted welcome the sounds of many competing steamboat whistles to enter and instill courage into the members.

On the question of distribution of the fund for advertising, Chairman Hugo said that it was for the committee to say what method might be pursued in expending it. Heretofore, he said, the committee on distribution had granted to applicants who wanted money for public purposes like the music teachers' convention and the Memorial day celebration 10 per cent of what money had been raised by them. In case $500 had been raised $50 was given and where $150 was raised, $15 was given. The Gun club tournament, July 2d, in Duluth, the Good Templars and Sunday school conventions would have to be given subscriptions. Mr. Hugo said it was a question how to proceed, whether to give pro rata on a basis of the number of people expected into Duluth on an ocasion, or the general merits of the delegations.

E. L. Millar said that having been a member of the committee which attempted to get the state Republican convention for Duluth, and which did not get it, he would be in favor of granting a substantial donation to the Democratic convention. Mr. Hugo said that a committee had met with the local Democratic committee and granted all that body had asked for.

President W. A. McGonagle said it had been his experience that a small committee was best to handle work, as it was easier to get together and could dispatch business more quickly than a large committee. He moved that the chairman appoint a committee to consist of the chairman himself, the chairman of the finance committee and two others, to do the work. The motion was seconded and prevailed.

W. B. Silvey said he did not think as much importance attached to the conventions and other events that needed money or those looking for elemosynary institutions when they come to the city, as to secure additional conventions. He favored employing a man to look after this, not necessarily to be employed all the time, but who could be used for certain occasions.

L. W. Powell suggested that some movement be made to have the club open on the occasion of visiting conventions and have a committee on hand to look after visitors.

Mr. McGonagle said tickets had been issued to all the delegates which will visit the Democratic convention, that they might use the club at will and that other visitors had been similarly treated.

Mr. Millar moved that a stated committee of three on conventions be appointed with power to appoint a special committee of three more. This was concurred in and Chairman T. W. Hugo will appoint such a committee.

Capt. Alexander McDougall reported that although less than half the $500 granted to this part of the state for representation at the St. Louis fair had been spent, that the commissioners were already writing up here for money, and he read the following letter from C. S. Mitchell, secretary of the commission.

"We have been having the devil's own time here but are now nearing the end of our troubles. Stevens has proven a splendid man. I absolutely couldn't think of a better man for his department. He has the Duluth model arranged as he has doubtless told you and it is a splendid success. I do not think there is any feature in the entire building that attracts as much attention. Some things we have wanted we have not been able to do because our space proved to be somewhat cramped as well as our finances.

"I do not believe if I were you I would attempt to put in the iron man but if Stevens can get the smoke arrangement it will be very valuable. You know Alabama has an iron man 54 feet high that weighs 99 tons and anything we could do would attract no attention whatever. Iron is handled in such a huge way that it is difficult to compete in that direction.

"It was understood that Duluth was to install and care for its model during the fair. The installation bills are complete and can be submitted to you. What I would like, however, is that you people should maintain the model during the fair, paying the expense of the lighting etc., and keep Stevens here to look after it and explain it. He is the best talker you could well get, interests the people and so thoroughly understands every detail of the model and of Duluth that he would be worth more to you and Duluth than any exhibit you could possibly put here.

"Some little features that he has been finishing such as little silk banners, indicating location of districts we will expect you to pay for. Please let me hear from you in this matter as in another week his work so far as we are concerned will be completed.

"I cannot urge you too strongly, however, for the good of your own city and the object you wish to accomplish, to keep him here permanently."

Capt. McDougall said that in the expenditure of their $100,000 the Minnesota state commissioners had never appeared in Duluth nor shown any interest in this section of the state.

"The governor evidently forgot us," he said, "and there were no appointments from this district."

"We've always been turned down," declared Z. D. Scott, "always, for the last twenty-five years that I've been here, and I move that we go after our rights from the governor or whoever is the proper person to approach. We ought to get this thing before the public through the newspapers or any one else that we can."

It was decided that the club should call the governor's attention to the matter.

Capt. McDougall said that S. G. Stevens, in charge of the Duluth exhibit at the mines building at St. Louis, had, when he found that the work in installing other exhibits would soil the model of Duluth, enclosed the model with lumber sheeting and made peep holes, illuminating the inside. Visitors could peer through the holes, and this was giving the exhibit more novelty and drawing power than if it had not been done.

* * *

Gorge H. Crosby, chairman of the finance committee, said there were plenty of funds on hand to go to work on matters now up for undertaking, but that the entire subscription would soon be completed. Owing to his own absence from the city during the week and the absence of the secretary of the club, Mr. Eva, the committee was unable to give a specific report as to work or amount of money made known.

The following report on the approaches for the aerial bridge over the government canal was read:

Your committee appointed to make inquiry concerning the matter of the approaches to the aerial bridge have done so and respectfully report that while the improvements to these approaches suggested by Captain Potter and others at a recent meeting of the public affairs committee, are quite desirable this committee deems it not wise or prudent to ask the city council to make any change in the plans adopted for the reason that such changes, would cause delay, possible complications with property owners and involve an increased appropriation. The construction of the approaches is such that if future years show the necessity of their extension and improvement it can be made at a mere nominal cost beyond the cost of such extension and improvement at the present time.

The report is signed by the committee consisting of E. L. Millar, chairman; J. A. Watterworth, G. L. Douglas, Jr., J. A. Erd and H. R. Armstrong.

As to the Webster school, President W. A. McGonagle said he had heard that the additional ground needed for the school had been bought by an ice company, which, if true, he said, meant a more unpleasant condition of affairs for the school than at present. He said that in order to relieve the situation at the school it would be necessary for the committee to go to work quickly.

As to observation cars on the range roads, Julius H. Barnes said that President House had informed him the cars had been ordered and would be added to the equipment of the roads as soon as shipped from the factory.

* * *

Mr. Barnes also reported that personal interviews are being arranged for with heads of railroads to correct rates on freight that discriminate against Duluth. Ward Ames, Sr., is chairman of the committee which has this part of the work in charge.

Objectionable advertising was spoken of, but no report on the subject was made. Mr. Crosby suggested that a good way to stop this kind of publicity was through the real estate dealers, who might be able to refuse to lease grounds for such purposes.

PHYSICIAN FOUND DEAD

Dr. Quinn of Superior Dies From Effect of Chloroform.

Dr. John J. Quinn, a well-known Superior physician, was found dead in his bed in the New York block yesterday afternoon.

Death was caused through the application of chloroform, Dr. Quinn's night robe being found saturated with the anasthetic and wrapped about his head.

There are conflicting opinions as to whether his demise was accidental or premeditated, but it appears to have been suicide.

Domestic trouble which have resulted in his wife and family leaving him to go to Detroit, are believed to have caused him to be despondent.

Some time ago he took the Keely cure for the drink habit and was supposed to have overcome his habits, but his troubles and bad health are said to have resulted in his becoming a victim of drink again.

Dr. Quinn was discovered dead in bed by his landlady, to whom a servant reported that she was unable to arouse him.

Yesterday morning he purchased a large amount of chloroform from a Superior drug store. While he appeared nervous at the time, nothing was suspected for the reason that he had frequently bought the drug to use in his practice. Beside his bed were found two empty chloroform bottles and one partly filled.

Dr. Quinn leaves several relatives in Superior, his mother, Mrs. Annie Quinn, and brothers, Charles H. and William J. Quinn.

He was an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, but of late is said to have neglected his practice to some extent.

INJUNCTION GRANTED

Restraining Order In Ely Church Row.

Judge Dibell has granted the petition of the Swedish Free Lutheran church of Ely for a temporary injunction restraining John L. Anderson and Swan Pearson from interfering with the affairs of the church.

The injunctional order will remain in effect until the suit now pending in district court is settled.

The petitioners claimed that Anderson and Pearson made forcible entrance to the church building, in company with others, breaking off and replacing the locks and catches with others.

The trouble is the outcome of a war between factions of the church, in which there are two sets of trustees claiming to have been legally elected.

INSTITUTE CLOSES

Commencement Exercises Held, and Twelve Pupils Graduate.

Fine Program By School and Address By Bishop McGolrick.

The assembly room of the Sacred Heart Institute was packed with relatives and friends of the pupils and the faculty, when the commencement program opened last evening. Green and red floated everywhere, evidencing the enthusiasm of the class of '04. The stage was a mass of palms and red roses.

Miss O'Keefe's oration, entitled "The Use and Abuse of Science," was well delivered. She discussed briefly the pleasure and value accruing from scientific research, and then showed the reverse of the picture, the elimination of God arising from the failure to discern a creative hand prior to the condensation and solidification of the earth's crust, as well as in the subsequent perfecting of the vast planetary systems.

Miss Lambert rendered two piano numbers. This popular young graduate was greeted warmly as she took her place. Her playing was the product of an artistic mind and carefully trained hand.

The chorus work was well rendered and the perfect harmony of the four-part selections made a pleasing effect.

Bishop McGolrick, in his address, expressed his appreciation from personal observation in the lecture and class rooms of the good work done by the graduates. He complimented the members of the faculty on their earnest endeavor to secure the best ways and means, for, as he said, the true teacher studies to impart not only science or knowledge, but penetrates the whole being of the child. A teacher ought to show the child the most direct path and spare the pains that are encountered in winding roads and by-paths. Education, he said, was a necessity, especially in this age, and the self-educated men who make success of life are very few; they are usually "jacks of all trades" and end in being masters of none. Education should not be for a day but for life, and the pupil should be enabled to continue his course of study, whatever that may be, after leaving school.

"These young ladies," the bishop further remarked, "who are going from this institute tonight will, we hope, spread the good influence of a virtuous life everywhere, for virtue is diffusive. In this age of ours there are manifold means of education, books are as plentiful as dandelions in Duluth, but therein lies the difficulty and in the choice of our reading matter we should use good discretion. Your motto 'Audentes Fortuna Iuvat,' 'Fortune Favors the Daring,' is an excellent working model and my sincerest wish is that you may be brave. A great man once said that in order to better the condition of mankind it would be sufficient that the women be brave and the men pure. His friends came to him and said he must have made a mistake, that the women should be pure and the men brave, but he maintained that he meant just as he said. So with my congratulations and good wishes the best advice I can give you is be brave."

The graduates were: In the scientific course, Miss Elizabeth O'Keefe; language and music course, Miss Alice Lambert; commercial course, Miss Bertha Hanneman; accountant course, Miss Margaret Miller.

Gold medals were conferred upon Miss Elizabeth O'Keefe, graduate; Miss Alice Lambert, graduate; Miss Bertha Hanneman, graduate; Miss Margaret Miller, graduate; Miss Jennie Doran, for composition; Miss Bertha Chase, for good conduct; Miss Margaret Pierce, for good conduct.

Grammar department graduates: Bertha E. Chase, Charlotte Robetaille, Jennie Quigley, Grace Nolan, Margaret Chisholm, Julia Holland, Bella Lavaque.

TO LAY OCEAN CABLE.

The Steamer Stephan Starts From Coney Island.

On Monday morning the German cable steamer Stephan started from Coney Island to lay the 3200 miles of cable that is to connect Brooklyn with the far away Azores, and with the German empire at Borkum, on the North sea. If all goes well, messages will be passing within a month from Borkum to Coney and back again, says the Brooklyn Eagle. But all may not go well. Indeed, it would be a surprising thing if the laying of a deep sea cable should be accomplished with anything like the ease that might naturally be expected.

The Stephan left the port with her gunwales dangerously close to the water, so heavily laden is she with the cable wires that are to stretch across the ocean. There is something more than 4,000,000 pounds of cable coiled away in the four tanks in her hold—enough to weight the big vessel down until she looks less like a ship than a long float with a few masts sticking up.

As every mile of cable runs out of her stern tank, the load will be lessend by 19,000 pounds, and the bow of the ship will go down deeper as the stern rises. The cable tank will have to be flooded with water to preserve the equilibrium, otherwise the Stephan would stand on her head in the ocean.

Recently a telegraph operator on the Stephan sent a message through the cable coiled in the hold. he message traveled over 2000 miles, although it didn't leave the ship's sides. It left the telegraph room from one instrument, and an instant later was flashing off at another instrument in the same room. It took just as long to send the message from the operator's right hand to his his left as it will to take to send the same message to the Azores. The fact that there will be several billion tons of sea piled on top of the cable will make no difference.

The operators have been testing the cable all the week as it was laid away coiled in the tanks. It was tested for copper resistance and for a number of technical purposes. It met the contract stipulations and will be used.

The actual cable laying will not start at Coney Island, as ten miles of the cable is already laid. This was put down last October, but the bad weather that came on at that time stopped operations, and, besides, there was not enough cable then manufactured to complete the job.

Since October the loose end of the ten-mile section has been switching and worming around at the bottom of the ocean eight miles south of Fire Island. The Stephan stopped there last week on her way from Germany and picked up the end and connected it with a big red buoy. It had not been buoyed at all through the winter, but the engineers had their bearings so well they picked it up without any trouble. It will take all of tomorrow to raise the loose end to the surface, splice it to the cable in the steamer, lift the buoy on deck and get ready to start. No new cable will be reeled out until Tuesday.

The cable from Coney Island will be spliced to the coil in the rearmost tank on the Stephan. This is a big circular tank twenty feet deep and contains more than 600 miles of deep sea cable, all of it more than an inch in diameter. The other end of this coil of cable is attached to the telegraph instruments in the telegraph room, so that messages can be sent constantly from the ship to shore. At any time on the trip across the ship's officers can communicate with Coney Island. This is absolutely necessary in order to be sure that the cable is going down without a break.

The cable uncoils and passes up to the main deck and over spools that control it so that it cannot reel off too fast. It then passes over spools to the stern sheaf, over which it slides down into the water. There is a tremendous strain on the cable at all times. In the very deepest water, with three miles of cable suspended from the stern sheaf, the weight is nearly 300 tons, or 600,000 pounds. This makes it necessary to exercise extreme care in laying cable in very deep water. The least irregularity in the strain is liable to cause a snap of the cable, and then there may be days of grappling for a loose end three miles below the ship's bottom.

Cable laying is slow work. The Stephan is equipped with all modern machinery for rapid work, but 160 miles of cable in twenty-four hours is a very fine day's work. There are constant delays caused by breaking machinery, kinks in the cable and a hundred other little accidents.

Still, slow as it is, cable laying is a sure and well developed business compared with what it was when the first ocean cable was laid not so very many years ago. The Stephan will leave here with the reasonable certainty of having an ocean cable in good working order in one month's time.

The great difficulty anticipated by the officers who will lay this cable is the set of the Gulf stream. This is a factor that is difficult to account for in the calculations. In fact, it sets all calculations at naught. The Stephan may be on the Gulf stream on a cloudy day and the captain may think he is on exactly the right course only to realize, when he sees sunshine, that he is seventy or eighty miles out of his course. Then, too, the Gulf stream is likely to cause breaks in the cable. The Stephan's officers are not worried over any section of the cable, except that which lies over this stream.

STRET CAR MANNERS.

An incident occurred in a street car in Boston a year or two ago which created much discussion in regard to street car manners, says the Chicago Chronicle. An elderly man, with silvery locks and a saintly face was riding in a street car, and at one of the stops a beautiful young woman got on and stood before the old man, who at the same moment rose to his feet.

"Oh! don't rise, I beg you, sir. I would just as soon stand," said the young woman, and the aged man replied: "I do not give a damn, madam, whether you stand or not. I am going to get off here."

This glaring instance of extreme and brutal discourtesy nevertheless raised the question to what extent good morals and good breeding required a man to give his seat in a street car to a woman.

The question is just as pertient today as it was then, and it is extremely desirable that men who wish to do right about it should thoroughly understand what they are doing and why they do it.

In a small city where the travel is light and the routes are short the question is not a practical one, as no decent man will there keep a seat as long as a woman is standing. In a large city, where the street cars are almost always crowded with people who are strangers to each other, and where it may take a passenger an hour to reach his destination, the situation is entirely different.

If in Chicago, for example, the men were so chivalrous that they would never sit as long as a woman was standing the result would be that few men would ever have a seat. All the seats would be filled with women, and all the men would be swinging by the straps, as, in fact, sometimes occurs.

This is evidently the intention of the traction companies, and one reason why men do not surrender their seats is that they will not be a party to such a scheme of oppression. They think if the women are left to stand something may be done about it.

In many cases, however, no matter how chivalrous a man's impulses may be, his physical condition absolutely forbids his giving up his seat. He may be large and robust in appearance, but he may have a fatal weakness that admits of no experiments. Even aside from this some men may have worked so hard or been so long on their feet during the day that to stand during the long ride homeward would amount to torture. They look like very coarse-grained men as they sit fast with women and children standing all around them, but they are doing right.

It must not be overlooked, also, that the women who are compelled to stand in the street cars are in most cases none the worse for it. They need nothing so much as physical weariness. They have been shopping, perhaps, and will have hours of indolence as soon as they reach their homes. To give them a seat, therefore, while it is in some cases commendable, is still in the main a sentimenttal act.

After all, there are many instances in which a man is not ill nor weary, and in which it is highly becoming that he should give his seat to a woman, who, for all he knows, may be physically unable to stand.

AGUINALDO'S INSPIRATION.

That Carlyle's "French Revolution" inspired Aguinaldo to lead the revolution in the Philippines, and that he carried a copy of this book through all his campaigns, was a statement attributed to Gen. Funston by the Rev. R. B. Kester of the Hemmenway Methodist church, Evanston, recently, says the Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The Rev. Mr. Kester traveled with Gen. Funston on his return from the conference in California and he said the general told him of the finding of the book and his belief that it has been a source of inspiration to Aguinaldo in his revolution.

"Gen. Funston told me," said the Rev. Mr. Kester, "that Aguinaldo had carried the book through all his campaigns in the marshes and swamps and hills, and that he had read and marked it.

"'When I captured him,' said the general, 'this was one of the first things I found among his effects. The book had almost been worn out with reading and was filled with marked passages.'"

ELECTRICITY FAILS TO KILL

Ohio Prison Authorities Mystified By Bungling Electrocutions.

Columbus, Ohio, June 18.—The electrocution of Moses Johnson, the negro murderer of Portsmouth, Ohio, in the annex at the Ohio penitentiary this morning was almost as harrowing as that of Michael Schiller, the Youngstown murderer, yesterday morning. Johnson was strapped in the chair at 12:06 and the first shock was administered at at 12:06. This was 1750 volts, but it failed to extinguish life. Five shocks in all were administered before the condemned man was pronounced dead at 12:20. After each shock except the last the attending physicians found evidence of heart action, which made the repeated applications of the electric current necessary. The prison authorities are mystified at the failure of the electric current to do its work quickly. There does not appear to be any weakness or disarrangement in the machinery. In both the Schiller and Johnson electrocutions the current showed the required voltage and the electrodes were apparently properly adjusted.

Johnson retained remarkable composure as he walked into the death chamber and bade his friends good-bye while he was being strapped in the chair.

PUBLIC TO KNOW LITTLE ABOUT QUAY'S PROPERTY.

Beaver, Pa., June 18.—The will of Senator Quay was probated yesterday. Not only does it not disclose the amount of his estate, but provides that the executors shall not file an accounting. The will says Mrs. Quay is provided for. Matthew Stanley Quay, the senator's grandson, is given his farm in Chester, Pa. The remainder of the estate is to be sold and divided into five equal parts. Four of these go to his children, Miss Susan, Miss Coral and R. R. Quay and Mrs. Mary Davidson. The fifth is to be invested and the revenues given to Maj. A. G. C. Quay.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Charles H. McCoy, a prominent attorney with offices in the Atwood building, of Chicago, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor in a bathtub at a hotel at Jacksonville, Fla., Friday. McCoy, it is said, in the last few days had lost $10,000 by speculating in stocks in Wall street, through a local firm.

W. S. Hayes, arrested at Dallas, Tex., on charges of false entries in the First National Bank of Oklahoma, of which he was president, shot himself and is dying. He was arrested on a warrant secured by United States Attorney Horace Speed, of Guthrie. The bank failed a few weeks ago.

In a panic among passengers on a Brooklyn trolley car of the Fulton street line Friday night, nine persons received slight injuries, most of them requiring the attention of physicians.

FINNS ARE NOT RESPONSIBLE

For the Assassination of Governor General Bobrikoff.

St. Petersburg, June 18.—A solemn memorial service for General Bobrikoff, governor general of Finland, who was shot Thursday at Helsingfors and died yesterday as the result of his wounds, was held at the ministry of the interior today.

Much interest is manifested in the political results of General Bobrikoff's assassination, and some of the Finnish senators have arrived here for the purpose of considering the subject with the authorities. The papers continue to discuss the matter with great earnestness with the exception of the Svet, counselling against harsh measures.

The Viedomosti strongly insists that the Finnish nation should not be held responsible for the crime and that repressive measures would not only mitigate against the situation in Finland, but prejudice the interests of the whole empire. "The necessity for equal friendly and loving relations toward all nationalities under the empire," the paper says, "is one of the plain teachings of history."

The Novoe Vreyma says:

"The Finnish nation at heart realizes that Russia is the best guardian of its interests. Gen. Bobrikoff's murderer belonged to a class in Finland which is always striving to create an oligarchy. The Finnish aristocracy should cease, once for all, to promote agitation, for Finland enjoys a degree of autonomy never known under Swedish rule."

GAVE BACK MONEY.

The repairs of the South Methedist Episcopal church, which was badly damaged several weeks ago by wind, have just been finished, and now the property is really better than it was before the storm, says the News Republican of Hobart, Okla. The building was insured against tornadoes, and when the adjuster made settlement it was agreed that the damage sustained was $1300, which sum was promptly paid over to the church officials by the company. The work of repairing was commenced at once thereafter, and after everything had been placed in statu quo it was found that there was just $300 of the insurance money remaining in the treasury of the church. The question then arose as to what should be done with the surplus fund. After much deliberation it was finally agreed that the money did not belong to the church, but to the insurance company. Whereupon this sum was paid back to the company.

With the settlement of the big lake strike, labor conditions are gradually reaching their normal state in Duluth. As the boats go into commission more work is supplied for men on the docks. Every day more boats are being put in operation, and with every one added to the list there is just that much more work for the dock men and the freight handlers.

The good effects are felt as far away as the ranges, for while all the Lake Carrier boats were tied up by the deadlock, no ore was being taken from the local docks, so no ore was being hauled to them, keeping a large number of train men from employment, as well as making labor and business conditions slack on the ranges. All the ore-carrying roads are now running a number of ore trains daily, requiring an additional crew of men at the docks and mines.

The strike had no effect on the lumber trade. Before its settlement the longshormen at the head of the lakes had about all thy could do. They are still kept busy, with an occasional period of quiet. The lumber boats appear to be bunched, many of them arriving and departing at about the same time, so that one day the local longshoremen have more work than they can attend to and the next day there will be only enough work to keep a part of them busy.

Coal is arriving at the head of the lakes in increasing quantities, giving employment to large crews of men on the several coal docks.

All of the seventeen delegates from Duluth trades and labor unions who attended the convention of the State Federation of Labor at New Ulm the first three days of the week have now returned home, many of them not arriving until yesterday, while some delayed until today. With one accord they pronounce the meeting a successful one, productive of good results.

On the recommendation of Secretary W. E. McEwen, of Duluth, in his annual address and report, the work of organization in the state will be prosecuted vigorously the ensuing year.

"If I were asked what is the most important work before the convention," said Mr. McEwen, "I would unhesitatingly reply: The discussion and introduction of ways and means to carry on the work of organization throughout the state."

Instructions were issued to organizers to enlist railway laborers in the labor movement, and Secretary McEwen introduced a resolution censuring Senator Clapp for evading the vote of the eight-hour working law.

The latter resolution caused a political discussion. Some were in favor of censuring him for his failure to vote, but, following out the policy of the federation, the majority were disinclined to furnish campaign material and the recommendation of the committee that the resolution be tabled prevailed.

LABOR NOTES.

In Alabama 30 per cent of those employed in the textile industry are under sixteen years of age.

In New Zealand last year 12,481 persons drew old age pensions, amounting to $1,057,970. The toal cost of administering the act was only $19,025.

Planers in Holland are paid at the rate of eight cents an hour.

In Saxony, Germany, there is an industrial school for every 16,641 inhabitants.

There has been a large increase of female employes in recent years, the total between the years of 1896 and 1903 being 52.77 per cent. The average workday for thefemale is nine hours and a half.

Special reports on 266 trade unions in England during April show an aggregate of 561,496 members. Of these 3075, or 5.5 per cent., were unemployed, compared with 4.9 per cent in the previous month and 4.5 per cent a year ago.

The Amalgamated Society of Engineers has branches all over the world, numbering 641 unions comprised of 94,790 members, with a total amount in its funds of $2,750,000.

Carpenters at Havana, Cuba, and vicinity are paid $2.50 to $3.50 a day. They are paid in Spanish gold, and the day's work consists of ten hours.

Wages paid in the Philippines to adult male labor range from twenty cents to a $1 a day.

Longshoremen in China earn twenty cents a day.

Chicago, Ill., female school teachers have a union numbering 2000 members.

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Engineers has increased from 8000 to 37,000 members in two years.

Tremendous strides in growth and importance have been made by the Massachusetts branch A. F. of L., this year, sixty-seven additional unions affiliating with the organization during the past twelve months. The number includes every large union of the state, and while but 300 odd of the nearly 1000 organizations of the state are as yet directly affiliated, nevertheless the unions attached probably directly represent 50 per cent of the organized workers of Massachusetts.

The great industrial corporations of the United States—General Electric company, the United States Steel corporation and the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, which employ approximately 215,000 wage earners, have inaugurated reductions in wages because of depression in trade.

The strike of the textile workers in Saxony is general—some 7500 men ceased work recently, and it is expected that others in allied industries will join in the strike. The men demand a 10-hour day and a 10 per cent increase in wages.

The Railway Carmen's union at St. Paul is now the largest in the United States. The total enrollment is 600.

The Western Federation of Miners has issued an appeal to unions throughout the country to contribute to an "eight-hour fund," and let the battleground be in the Western country. The miners have already started the fund.

The president of the London board of trade stated recently in the British house of commons that 700 factories in Lancashire were idle for lack of raw cotton, and that the government would encourage the growth of cotton elsewhere than in the Southern states of America.

In the Australia house of representatives recently a labor member made a motion in favor of establishing a commonwealth clothing factory to manufacture all cloth and clothing required for the use of the federal department.

Passenger conductors want a 20 per cent increase, but it is probable that they will compromise for 12 per cent, the advance granted their fellow-workers in the West. Freight conductors and brakemen want a 20 per cent increase, but are expected to accept 15 per cent.

The street car service at Odessa, Russia, is suspended in consequence of a strike of drivers and conductors for higher wages.

Iowa State College had a department of farm mechanics. Instruction is given in farm machinery and appliances, including land drainage, rural telephones, farm water supply and various means of obtaining power for working farm machinery.

Thirty cracker manufacturers in the country use the union label of the cracker bakers.

Last year 2,929 railroad men were killed in the United States and 50,324 were injured. The figures for all coal mines for 1903 show 1,467 killed and 3,643.

The average wages received by each laborer in Iowa per annum have increased from 255.71, paid in 1885, to $428.41, paid in 1903, a gain of $75.70.

Representatives of 100,000 organized workers on the railroads in the territory between Chicago and Buffalo are preparing their demands similar to those recently granted to all the trainmen and engineer west of Chicago.

The New Jersey Bureau of Statistics gives recent data regarding the production of machinery in that state. The greatest number of persons employed at any time during the fiscal year 1903 was 19,642, an average of a little over 175 to each establishment. The smallest number was 14,329, an average of almost 151 employees. The total sum paid in wages, not including salaried persons, was $9,364,484, and the average yearly earnings of wage workers in the industry was $507.52, an increase of $23.16 over those of the previous year.

There are over 100 unions affiliated with the Central Labor Council at Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners now has 1,701 unions chartered.

The glass blowers of New Jersey some time ago notified the governor of that state that they propose to contest the new child labor law of last winter, and the reason given by them is that they cannot run their factories at a profit without using boy helpers.

Last month the British collieries employed 480,406 work people, the pits worked an average of 4.84 days a week. The number employed was 2 per cent greater than a year ago.

HALF HOLIDAY MOVEMENT

The interest of the Women's Council is now being centered in the half holiday for the employes of the department stores, which they hope to inaugurate with the hot weather. Mrs. J. L. Washburn, president of the Council, says of it:

"A committee from the Woman's Council waited upon the ministers of the city at their regular meeting last week. The purpose of the committee was to secure the co-operation of the ministers in the efforts of the Woman's Council to secure a half holiday for clerks in dry goods and department stores during the months of July and August, also to enlist their interest and aid in a campaign of education directed toward those thoughtless housekeepers who forget to order their meat and groceries until too late for the last regular delivery to their district.

"This thoughtlessness works a great hardship and injustice toward those employes of groceries and meat shops who drive the delivery wagons. Of course the customer must not be disappointed, especially after the very emphatic telephone message to the effect that if you can't deliver it tonight, or any time that I want it, I shall have to trade with some one who can. The result is that poor, tired driver and team must start out for another trip after work for the day should be finished. Often, especially on Saturday nights, it is 11 or 12 o'clock before the last delivery, caused by the thoughtlessness of customers, is completed.

"The committee found the ministers in cordial sympathy with the movement, and their hearty co-operation in every way possible was promised. Most of them will preach on the subject tomorrow. It is women who are, in great part, responsible for this unnecessary hardship to employes, and it is to women that we must look for the remedy.

"If merchants are assured that their sales will be practically the same, and that it will work no hardship to their customers, they certainly will have no objection to the half holiday for their employes. A resolution is being drawn up by the committee, which is to be signed by women. By signing this a woman practically pledges herself not to expect to shop on the afternoon agreed on for a half holiday, and to order her meat and groceries in time for the general delivery in her district. If this petition is signed by a large number of the housekeepers and shoppers, the merchants may feel safe trying the half holiday experiment for July and August. It is nothing new. In most large cities it is customary for merchants to give their employes a half holiday during the heated season.

"Duluth is no longer a little village. She must get in line with the other large cities in this matter, not because it is a fad, but because justice and humanity demand it."

MANY PEOPLE HAVE CATARRH OF STOMACH AND DON'T KNOW IT.

A Beautiful Ohio Belle Cured of Catarrh By the Use of Pe-ru-na.

Miss Althea Glynton, 1521 Chapel street, Cincinnati, Ohio, writes:

"My system was very much run down, from an excess of parties, late suppers and unreasonable hours without the proper rest.

"My appetite had failed me, I had frequent headaches and a lassitude which left me no ambition whatever. I lost nearly twenty pounds, and was advised to take a good tonic and rest. I had heard so much of Peruna that I decided to try it. What a wonderful remedy it is, to be sure. In a very short time my appetite returned and with it ambition and a rested feeling, and I was soon my usual self, had regained most of the flesh lost and am very grateful to you for what Peruna has done for me."—Althea Glynton.

No medicine in the world has cured more cases of dyspepsia than Peruna. The reason for this is that dyspepsia in a great majority of cases depends upon catarrh of the stomach.

Catarrh of the stomach may have been set up by an extension of the catarrh from the throat or head. It may be induced by late suppers, indigestible diet, rapid eating, drinking ice water, the use of alcoholic stimulants and many other indiscretions.

Miss Ida Freyberg, 520 North Fourth street, Sheboygan, Wis., writes:

"It is with great pleasure that I recommend Peruna to all who are afflicted with catarrh. I was much troubled with that disease and had tried many doctors' prescriptions and many proprietary medicines, and had about given up in despair, when a friend persuaded me to try a bottle of Peruna. I took one bottle and felt so much relieved that I got another, which benefited me much, and a third entirely cured me. I can always say a good word for Peruna."—Miss Ida Freyberg.

Mrs. Jessie Colton, 439 East Nineteenth street New York city, writes:

"Through overwork and anxiety in my business I was very much run down. Had loss of appetite, and, what was worse than that, loss of sleep at night. I was afraid I would have to consult a physician, when one of my customers advised me to try Peruna, as it had made her well and strong. I began to take it, and in a few days began to feel stronger, and from the first dose I slept at night without awakening. I took only two bottles; now I am well, but I am never without Peruna in the house."—Mrs. Jessie Colton.

Peruna cures all such cases of dyspepsia, simply because it cures catarrh wherever located. The reason so many cases of dyspepsia suffer on and on without relief, trying this medicine and that medicine, is that these conditions are not recognized as catarrh of the stomach.

Any one suffering from dyspepsia, having tried the ordinary remedies without relief, would be safe to assume that their case is one of catarrh of the stomach, and should at once begin a course of Peruna. Peruna is sure to cure these cases. It never fails.

We have on file many thousand testimonials like the ones given above. We can only give our readers a slight glimpse of the vast array of unsolicited endorsements we are receiving every month. No other physician in the world has received such a volume of enthusiastic and grateful letters of thanks as Dr. Hartman for Peruna.

STALWART FACTION

In Wisconsin Contest Wins Before National Committee.

Courts Will Be Asked to Settle the Party Ticket.

Chicago, June 18.—By unanimous vote the Republican national committee late yesterday afternoon decided to seat the delegates-at-large from Wisconsin, who are members of the so-called "Stalwart" faction, headed by United States Senators John C. Spooner and Joseph V. Quarles, and opposed to the Republicans led by Governor Robert La Follette.

While the contest is partly settled, so far as the national committee is concerned, the dispute between the two parties of the Badger state is by no means ended, as the Wisconsin courts are to be asked to determine which of the two conventions recently held in the state was legally the party convention and entitled to have the names of its nominees for state offices placed upon the official ballot, under the regular party name.

The "Stalwart" delegates-at-large, who were seated, are: Senator John C. Spooner, Senator Joseph V. Quarles, Congressman Joseph W. Babcock and Emil Baensch.

The delegates-at-large from the La Follette faction were: Governor Robert M. La Follette, W. D. Connor, Isaac Stephenson and James B. Stout.

After the national committee had decided against the supporters of the governor from Wisconsin, the leaders of Mr. La Follette's side announced their determination to carry the fight to the end, and it is probable, in spite of the decision of the committeemen, that the dispute will again be fought out before the committee on credentials in the national convention.

The anti-La Follette men were equally determined to continue the contest, which had been exceedingly bitter.

The Spooner adherents asserted that the first legal action to be taken would come from their side and would very likely be in the form of mandamus proceedings to compel the placing of their candidates headed by Samuel A. Cook for governor, on the official ballot of the state, or else the placing of the La Follette ticket on the official ballot.

The state supreme court of Wisconsin meets in August and it was stated the matter would be ready to be presented by that time.

The time limit for placing the candidates' names on the ballot expires Oct. 15, by which time it is thought the matter will have been decided.

It was contended by the "Stalwart" faction that the action of the committee in recognizing them will determine the decision of the Wisconsin supreme court.

In the arguments before the committe the Stalwarts were represented by John M. Olin, of Madison, and M. G. Jeffries, of Janesville. H. W. Chynoweth, of Madison, and Gilbert E. Roe, of New York, formerly asociated with Governor La Follette, presented the side of the La Follette men.

The manner of holding the separate conventions was reviewed, the way in which the delegates were elected was recited and numerous charges were made on oth sides.

A rule limiting the time of arguments of contests was suspended and each side was given full opportunity to present its case. After the vote to seat the Stalwart delegates was taken, Governor La Follette and several supporters of his who had come from Wisconsin, left the committee room immediately and took a train for home.

Mr. Chynoweth told the committee that by the unanimous vote of the state central committee Gov. La Follette was given 585 votes on the temporary roll of the convention and that this was a majority of the 1065 delegates. The notice of the meeting of the opposition faction, he said, was that of an anti-third term caucus and at no time were there present a majority of the regular delegates. Continuing he said:

"The regular Republicans were barred unless they believed in the narrow idea of opposition to a third term. The committee on credentials was appointed by this caucus. It seated delegates without any notice or opportunity for hearing. There was no hearing on the contests."

M. G. Jeffries, of Janesville, Wis., closed arguments for the "Stalwart" faction. He charged that the supporters of Gov. La Follette were not loyal to the party of which they were members, that Governor La Follette in a speech had advised Social Democrats to go to the Republican caucuses and vote, and that in the governor's campaign some of his meetings were presided over by Bryan Democrats who announced that they would vote for Gov. La Follette. He asserted that more than 33 per cent of the vote of the Republican caucuses was Democratic. He made a number of other charges along these lines pointing out alleged improper methods which, he said, the opposing side had used to obtain as many delegates as they did.

The vote by which the "Stalwarts" delegates at large was seated, was then taken by the committee and was unanimous.

The committee then affirmed the report of temporary officers for the convention. These will be Charles W. Johnson, of Minneapolis, secretary; John B. Molley, of Ohio, first assistant secretary; Elihu Root, temporary chairman; William E. Stone, sergeant at arms; David C. Owen, Milwaukee, first assistant sergeant at arms. A long list of minor employes, such as doorkeeper, reading clerks, etc., was adopted as reported by the sub-committee.

TWO-THIRDS CROP DESTROYED.

Bucharest, Roumania, June 18.—Two-thirds of the Roumanian wheat and hay crop has already been lost owing to the prolonged drought, and the maize crop is in great danger. The synod has ordered that a prayer be said for rain and that holy ikons be carried in procession on Sunday throughout the country. The minister of domains has ordered that leaves be gathered in the forest for use as winter fodder for cattle.

FUN POKED BY COURT

At Professor Trigs In Libel Suit In New York.

Triggs In Disgust Abandoned Suit Against the Sun.

New York, June 18.—The staid judges of the appellate division of the supreme court—men who ordinarily ponder with frowning thoughtfulness over litigated points and then write erudite opinions which tax the understanding of those less learned in the law than themselves—had to laugh outright at the suit which Professor Oscar Lovell Triggs brought against the New York Sun for libel.

The professor, who when at the university of Chicago, gained wide notoriety by his enthusiastic exploitation of his idiosyncracies which were just sprouting when he was at the university of Minnesota, wanted the newspaper chastised, financially, for holding him up to ridicule and contempt by poking fun at his peculiar theories as to literature.

The appellate division not only told the professor that he wasn't entitled to damages from the Sun, but went so far as to poke more fun at the hurt plaintiff for his inability to appreciate the humor in the newspaper articles. So Triggs has abandoned his suit in disgust.

The Sun certainly did cause the public to smile broadly, if not to laugh uproariously, at the Chicago professor's theories as to the creation and interpretation of poetry. Triggs had promulgated certain hard and fast rules, and the Sun applied these rules with a vengeance to the writing of such men as Longfellow, Whittier, Holmes and Emerson, with ludicrous effect. Added to this were sundry truculent comments of the editorial writer apropos of the professor's ideas on literature in general. Triggs was wrathy. He'd have the Sun punished, he would; and suit for damages was begun forthwith.

Through the special term the case went, and laughter followed in its wake, laughter in which jurists, lawyers, court attaches and bench-warmers joined. Then appeal was taken, and the higher court said that "the article certainly tends to make the ideas with which the plaintiff is charged ridiculous, but there is nothing charged against him which makes him as a man, infamous, odious or ridiculous."

"The plaintiff," continued the court, "objects to the article published as tending to expose him to ridicule and contempt, and to impair his usefulness as a teacher in the university in which he is an instructor. There is nothing in the article which can possibly be construed as charging the plaintiff with a crime or disgraceful conduct or any act which would subject him to the contempt of the community.

"The article is written and plainly intended to be humorous and not serious. It is filled with exaggerations as to what the author considers to be the result of the application of the ideas of the plaintiff to certain poems specified. But that the spirit of exaggeration and fun pervading the article was not intended seriously, not to be taken seriously, charging the plaintiff with any misconduct or lack of professional ability, is quite clear, and however much fun is made of the teachings of the plaintiff and their effect as understood by the writer of the article, there is nothing in it that can be taken as a serious charge against the plaintiff or as subjecting him to contempt.

"The plaintiff has taken the publication too seriously, and has considered what was intended to amuse the readers of the paper, as serious criticism upon his work, which it seems a study of the article does not warrant."

This is poor consolation for Professor Triggs, but it is not likely that he will carry the question to the court of appeals to beter it.

MUSIC TEACHERS CLOSE SESSIONS

Dr. Colville of St. Paul Elected President of Association.

Winona Next Place of Meeting—Sauret Recital Eagerly Awaited.

The final session of the Minnesota State Music Teachers' association was held this morning. The first matter which came before the meeting was the election of officers. D. F. Colville, of St. Paul, one of the very popular members of the association, was honored with the presidency. Eugence C. Murdock, the present presiding official, could have been returned to the office, for the manner in which he has conducted its affairs has met with the warm appreciation of the members, but he declined to serve again.

JESSICA DE WOLF,
Soprano.
Will Be Heard This Evening.

Miss Caroline V. Smith, of Winona, was chosen vice president; John A. Jaeger, of St. Paul, secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. Hattie Smith Fuller, of Albert Lea, auditor.

To head the program committee which arranges the programs for the annual convention, Gustavus Johnson, of St. Paul was chosen, and with him will act Mrs. James McAuliffe, of Duluth, and Heinrich Hoevel, of Minneapolis.

The changes in the constitution and bylaws, proposed for consideration at the meeting yesterday, which provide that the secretary-treasurer shall settle up all affairs of the association within three months of the annual meeting, instead of six months; that the official year of the association shall be from Oct. 1 to Oct. 1, instead of the calendar year, and that officers shall assume their duties on Oct. 1 following their election, instead of Jan. 1, were adopted.

The report of the committee on place of meeting was given by Mrs. Delia B. Hoit, of Detroit, and it was suggested by the committee that the invitation to hald the convention at Winona next year be accepted, with the date to be settled later. The report of the committee was accepted by the convention.

An official telegram of greeting was ordered sent to August Geiger, president of the Southern Music Teachers' association, which is now in session at Gainesville, Ga. Mr. Geiger has been of much assistance to the president and secretary of this state's association.

ARTHUR SPEED,
Pianist.
Will Be Heard This Evening.

The remainder of the meeting was given over to voting thanks to the different officers and individuals and clubs who have assisted in the success of the convention. Very special thanks were voted to the retiring president, E. C. Murdock, and Miss Ednah F. Hall, secretary-treasurer, the pastor and board of trustees of the church, and to the Commercial club of this city. Thanks were also voted to the local executive committee, to those who took part in the programs and to John G. Howard, of this city, who has aided the executive committee. The meeting then adjourned until next year.

At 11 o'clock a meeting of the public school music section took place in the lecture room, with Miss Elsie M. Shawe, of St. Paul, chairman. Papers were read by Mrs. Cora A. Merry, of Superior, and Miss Fannie Pitcher, of Mankato, and Miss Shawe read the papers of Miss Nellie Farnsworth, of this city, on "The Grade Teacher's Preparation," and Miss Caroline V. Smith's, of Winona, on "How Can We Bring Music More Generally to the People of Minnesota." This was the last meeting of the convention, and this afternoon the members drove around the boulevard.

Tonight the last concert by the noted violinist, Emile Sauret, assisted by Jessica De Wolf, soprano, and Arthur Speed, pianist, will be given. The program is a fine one and the members are anticipating it with much pleasure. The artists are of the finest, and the opportunity of hearing musicians is greatly appreciated by the members.

MINNESOTA COMPOSERS.

Music Teachers Listen to Their Works.

Yesterday afternoon Gerard Tonning, vice-president of the Minnesota State Music Teachers' association, presided at an informal meeting of the county vice-presidents of the association. Sixteen county vice-presidents attended the meeting and the welfare of the association and ways and means of spreading its influence were discussed.

At 2:30 o'clock the Minnesota composers' concert was given. One of the objects for which the association is striving is the encouragement of state talent along the line of musical composition and at yesterday's program much interest was manifest. The conditions of presenting the work were in some cases ideal, where the composer himself was able to play or sing his own work before an interested audience of musicians.

The first number was an organ "Fantasie in E Flat Major" by Carl Hellmaier, of St. Paul, and was played by Hamlin H. Hunt, of Minneapolis. It was well received and was followed by two dainty soprano solos, "Oh, Unforgiving Heart," and "A Red Rose," by Lillian Curry Morton, of St. Paul, and sung by Miss Florence Buck of the same city. Miss Morton was the accompanist.

Two violin numbers, "Norwegian Melody" and "Spring Song," by William W. Nelson, of St. Paul, were played by Mr. Nelson and perhaps roused the most enthusiasm of any of the numbers. Both are beautiful bits of melody and were exquisitely played. Louis L. Rosenberger was the accompanist. Two baritone numbers with 'cello by C. A. Marshall, of Minneapolis, were sung by Mr. Marshall. The 'cello accompaniment was played by Carlo Fischer and in the second song "Old German Love Couplet," the accompaniment was particularly pretty. The other number was "Farewell."

A chorus by A. F. M. Custance of this city, was sung by a chorus of eight voices. "The Story of the Cross," is the subject which is of the triumphant order of sacred music and needs a large chorus to give the interpretation which the piece properly merits. Solos were sung by Mrs. James McAuliffe and Charles O. Applehagen.

Three piano numbers, "Danse Andalouse," "Mazurka" and "Tarantelle," by Gustavus Johnson were played by himself and received marked expression of approval.

Three tenor songs, "Forget," "God the Father" and "Neath Thy Casement," by W. Rhys-Herbert, of St. Paul, were sung by J. Austin Williams, of Minneapolis, and were followed by sonata for 'cello and piano by Robert G. Gale, of Minneapolis, and the first movement was splendidly played by Carlo Fisher and Carlyle Scott. Three songs, by Ernest Lachmund, of this city, were sung by D. F. Colville, of St. Paul, in a delightful manner, with Mr. Lachmund at the piano.

At half past four a round table on strings was held and papers were read by Carlo Fisher and W. M. Nelson.

W. J. HENDERSON SPEAKS.

Lectures on "Modern Tendencies of Music."

"Modern Tendencies in Music," the subject taken by W. J. Henderson, the eminent New York musical critic, in his address last night, at the First Methodist church, before the Minnesota State Music Teachers' association, has rather a dry sound. As handled by this lecturer, however, it was made a thing of interest, besides being instructive. Frequent sarcastic comments on some of the noted composers and their work, and occasional outcroppings of humor, relaxed the tension and made the large audience the more appreciative.

Preceding the lecture was an organ recital by Hamlin H. Hunt, of Minneapolis. Four numbers, from Rheinberger, Arcadelt-Liszt and Guilmant were played. The numbers were very finely rendered, and called for an enthusiastic encore.

In his introductory remarks Mr. Henderson said that he rose with diffidence to address an audience of students of music from the Middle West, explaining that there is a mistaken impression out here regarding the manner in which residents of this section, in either business or the arts, are regarded by New Yorkers. He said that instead of looking down upon and laughing at the Westerners, as is generally supposed to be the case, the Eastern people rather look up to them for their indomitable energy and hustling qualities in all things, and fear rather than laugh at them.

Mr. Henderson dealt quite extensively with the history of music from its beginning up to the present day, and selected Lasso Petrine, Japoco Peri, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schumann, Liszt and Wagner as representative composers of the epochs of music, touching upon the work of some of their contemporaries. He also dealt with the tendency of modern composers to write detailed stories and portray emotions.

He spoke of what he termed the marvelous development of music during the last century, and of the slower development during the preceding centuries and explained the big difference in the music of today and yesterday.

"The most instructive view of music is the historical view," continued Mr. Henderson. "Music began in chaos, with the composers grouping about in the darkness for they knew not what. They had no measure and no means to find the difference between dual time and triple time. One can imagine that it took some time to get order out of this chaotic condition.

"The Netherlands school of music, which I would call the first school, lasted from 1425 to 1625. The first fifty years were spent in trying hard to find how to do something, and experimenting on mechanical tricks. They had only the elements to deal with. It was, therefore, a long time before there were any evidences of freedom, or departures from rules laid down by the early masters.

"Finally, beauty in composition was reached, but there was no evidence of expression. The composers tried merely to make their efforts sound well and pleasing to the ear.

"The next step was the imitation of externals. We find the composers imitating, or trying to imitate, different noises, such as the din of the streets of Paris. Here is where the battle makes its appearance."

Mr. Henderson said that the earlier compositions were all reverent, thoughtful, reflective affairs for the church, with no attempt to express the human passions. In the year 1600 there was a marked departure from the established rule, with the invention of opera. He dealt with the invention of opera and the subsequent development of operatic music, taking its history step by step up to the present time. He said that music is the youngest of the arts, and that there is no telling how far it will go or where it will end up. The music of today was characterized as being entirely a representative art, using "representative" in its elementary meaning.

Mr. Henderson said that, contrary to an impression prevailing among many of the musical critics of the day, the tendency to make music representative of something outside of music is very old.

"Richard Strauss is the leader of the movement and representative composer of the time in this tendency to write detailed stories and portray emotions. His music is said to be often ugly, and many parts are offensive to the ear, but this has been said of every great composer. What he looks upon as his best productions are often a combination of impossible music, which cannot be interpreted by the ear. In my opinion music should not need a program in the hands of the hearer so that it may be followed. It should make its own meaning plain, without directions being written out on paper."

THE STORY OF Amalgamated Copper

A PERSONAL WORD BY THOMAS W. LAWSON AND A STATEMENT BY THE PUBLISHERS OF

Everybody's Magazine

THE PERSONAL WORD BY MR. LAWSON

Personally I know that one hundred millions of dollars were lost, thirty men committed suicide, and twenty previously reputable citizens went to the penitentiary, directly because of Amalgamated.

It was largely because of my efforts that the foundation of Amalgamated was successfully laid. It was created because of my work. It was because of what I stood for, because I had the public's confidence, and because my promises had been kept that the plain people invested two hundred million dollars of their savings, and it was because of trickery and broken promises that the public lost the enormous sums they did.

My motives for writing the Story of Amalgamated are manifold; I have unwittingly been made the instrument by which thousands upon thousands of investors in America and Europe have been plundered. I wish them to know my position as to the past, that they may acquit me of intentional wrong-doing; as to the present, that they may know that I am doing all in my power to right the wrongs that have been committed; and as to the future, that they may see how I propose to compel restitution.

THOMAS W. LAWSON.

A Statement by the Publishers of Everybody's Magazine

In the articles by Mr. Lawson, beginning in the July number, under the caption of "Frenzied Finance, The Story of Amalgamated," we have a narrative from Mr. Lawson's own lips, how, in the last few years, he has seen millions of dollars won without right, and thousands of men ruined. It is a story of financial tragedy of today.

In the great financial happenings of recent years story tellers have given their version; political economists their theories; reformers their pictures; and historians their tablets. For the first time in the history of High Finance we have the High Priest tell it as it happened, and it is for Everybody's Magazine to publish "the cold-blooded facts," for Mr. Lawson has pledged himself to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Military Convict at the Soo Escapes But Is Recaptured.

Sault Ste. Marie—Martin Ross, a military convict, escaped from Fort Brady, at the Soo, only to be recaptured. He was in the vicinity of the crematory when he made the dash for liberty. The sentry shot, but failed to stop him. The next morning Lieut. Wells and a detachment of men at the rifle range at Rexford saw Ross and gave chase. Some long range firing was indulged in, but Ross was not hit. He was, however, run down and brought back to the post. The officers at the fort say that Ross received assistance from people about the city and county and that prosecutions will follow it sufficient evidence can be secured.

The several Sault Ste. Marie gamblers who were indicted and pleaded guilty to running ganling rooms, were brought before Judge Steere, in the circuit court, for sentence. Frank Chapel was hit the hardest. He was fined $300 and costs. John Quinn, Thomas Cliff and John Hatton were fined $40 and costs and Michael Rellis and Henry Whirley were fined $50 and costs. For selling liquor to a minor Thomas Quinn was fined $40 and costs. George Coleman was given a fine of $25 and costs for violation of the liquor law.

Ontonagon—Edwin Pattison of Bohemia township, brought to Ontonagon a yearling black bear which he caught in a trap the previous day. Mr. Pattison says that there are a considerable number of bears and wolves in that locality. A wolf was killed near the Peterson mill in that township a few days ago.

Cedar River—Louis Marks, a merchant of Cedar River, Menominee county, has been arrested on a serious charge preferred by a fourteen-year-old girl who was employed as a domestic at his home. The people of Cedar River were much wrought up over the matter. Marks, who is a married man, is about forty years of age and has been conducting a business in Cedar River for some years.

Escanaba—A Frenchman, who posted a letter in Escanaba last fall and used a cancelled stamp, was arrested last week by a postoffice inspector and committed to the Delta county jail. Although his alleged crime is a state's prison offense the prisoner was released owing largely to the fact that it was his first offense. The man lived out of town on the E. & L. S. road, and the inspector had been on the lookout for him for several months.

Corrine—A fatal case of shooting occurred at Corinne, Schoolcraft county. It has been the custom of a crowd of young men at Corinne to gather at suppertime to "put the shot." Near this gathering place there lives an elderly shoemaker by the name of Thomas Donen, whom the boys of the village have tormented more or less for some time past. It happened on the evening in question that the shot accidentally slipped and crashed into the door of the old man's home, causing him to appear immediately with a shotgun and an aroused temper. Without warning he fired, and as a result Matt Wilson, a young lumberman, thirty-five years of age, was fatally wounded. The distance was only fifteen feet and the charge must have been buckshot as the spine was injured so that the limbs were paralyzed.

CLINE WANTS HIS CLOTHES

Indifferent About Absent Wife He Married at the Soo.

Detroit, Mich., June 18.—"All I want is my belongings back," said W. H. Cline, of Coalport, Pa., at Detroit police headquarters Thursday morning, when he called to enlist the aid of the police in finding his pretty wife, who left him, he says, last March and is now supposed to be in this city.

"Genevieve and I were married at the American Soo on July 11, 1903," said Cline. "We were always happy, and I can't understand what led her to desert me. Soon after our marriage we went to Coalport to live. My wife went on ahead with several trunks, one of which contained two suits of my clothes, my diamond ring, a silver cuspidor and a silver mustache cup. These are the things I am anxious to recover. I still love Genevieve, but I don't know that I could live with her again. She had no reason to leave me. I learned that she came to Detroit, instead or going to Pittsburg. She has a married sister here, but I have heard that she is living here with a girl chum.

"Genevieve is 27 years old and daughter of Dr. Neilson, the army and navy surgeon whose body was found in the Detroit river some years ago. There was a hole in the back of his head when the body was pulled from the water, and for a time it was believed that he had met with foul play. But that theory petered out.

"I met Genevieve a few years ago in Pittsburg. A little later I enlisted with Company D, First artillery, and served in the Philippines. While there we corresponded and on my return we continued our courtship in Cleveland."

WEST DULUTH

DWELLINGS BURNED

Fire In Alger-Smith Row Burns Out Four Families.

Possibility That American Lumber Company May Leave Here.

Fire broke out in the Alger-Smith row, of dwelling houses, Fifty-first avenue west, at 3 o'clock this morning and caused damage to the extent of about $3000. Two houses, 111 and 113 Fifty-first avenue, occupied by L. J. Gibson and T. Hassing, are total losses, being burned to the ground. Two others, Nos. 115 and 117, occupied by the families of David Fousha and Samuel Price, were completely gutted by the flames, and the loss on them will be almost total.

Practically none of the contents of the dwellings, all of which were two-story frame structures, was saved. Members of the families barely escaped with their lives, several of them getting out through the windows. The houses themselves were insured, almost to their full value, it is understood. Mr. Gibson and Mr. Foucha each had their household effects insured for $500. Hassing and Price were without insurance.

The fire is thought to have been caused by a smudge, which was left smouldering in the sawdust near Gibson's house w hen the family retired for the night. The blaze was discovered at 3 o'clock, but it is said the alarm was not turned in until nearly half an hour later. When the fire department arrived on the scene two of the houses, Nos. 111 and 113 were almost burned to the ground. The work of the department was confined to saving the other houses in the immediate vicinity and in extinguishing the fire in the homes of Fousha and Price.

Several of the occupants of the houses had no time to save other than a few scraps of their clothing, and West Duluth merchants were busy outfitting them this morning.

IRVING BANQUET.

Very Happy Affair Held at School Buliding.

The ninth annual banquet of the Irving school alumni association was held at the school building last evening. It was an enjoyable affair in every way. Covers were laid for 125 persons, and the menu was a most elaborate and tempting one.

The halls of the building had been handsomely decorated for the occasion with palms, cut flowers, ferns and the class colors, pink and green. Crepe paper of these colors was artistically festooned about the halls.

Preceding the banquet was a program of specialties, literary and musical numbers. Will Coughlan delighted the banqueters with several ventriloquistic stunts, Miss Effie Brotherton recited a selection from F. Hopkinson Smith, and a mandolin orchestra, composed of West Duluth boys, gave several pleasing numbers.

Miss Laura Kennedy, principal of the Irving school, acted as toastmistress, and she made an admirable one. Miss May Hammell responded to the toast, "The Irving School," and Miss Grace Keeler, president of the Alumni association, to the "Irving Alumni." Miss Charlotte Mallery was assigned "The Boys" as a subject. Miss House, of the eighth grade, toasted the graduating class. All the remarks were in a happy vein, and wit and brilliant repartee were all the time in evidence. A toast not down on the program was one to Miss Kennedy, by Ray Abbott, which was declared the hit of the evening.

INDUSTRY MAY LEAVE.

American Lumber Company May Have to Go.

At the meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club last evening a committee, consisting of W. B. Getchell, L. A. Barnes and J. J. Frey was appointed to investigate the possible removal of the American Lumber company's plant from West Duluth. A reperesentative of the company was present at the meeting and reported that the concern had been refused another lease on the building at present occupied by it. He asked that a committee from the Commercial club secure a new site, so that the company would not have to leave Duluth entirely. The fact that the company is refused a lease on the old car works now occupied by them is taken to mean that some new industry is in contemplation for West Duluth.

THE TIE THAT BINDS.

Although suffering intense pain from oxalic poison, self-administred, Mrs. Albert Berold, of Lockland, Ky., refused medical attention until the cry of her baby placed in her arms changed her determination to die into a desire to live for baby's sake, and she was saved.

"I ran away to get married," she said, "and was so happy at first. When my little one was born seven months ago, my happiness seemed to be complete. Then my husband began to neglect me, and two weeks ago I came home to my mother. It seemed to me I was only in the way here. Mamma had just begun to have things easier when I had to come back and be a burden to her. Thoughts of my wrecked happiness made me desperate, and I determined to end it all."

Eager to die—ready to leave behind mother, home, friends, honor, everything—but the cry of her child saved her.

What a blessing to countless thousands of men and women is the little child. How many are saved from discouragement, degradation and woe by the coo of a laughing babe and the touch of its silken arms. How many fathers with a disposition to falter and give up the struggle with the world are daily given new life and strength by thoughts of the little ones at home. How many wives owe to the children they bear their continued interest in life, in purity, in all that makes for real happiness and contentment. How many are saved even from self-destruction of both soul and body through the love of a child.

To the woman newly wed and to the one who expects soon to be it can be said in sincerity that when all else fails to hold the husband to faithfulness the bearing of a child will almost invariably do so, notwithstanding the sad experience of Mrs. Berold. This is the tie that binds many a home together that might otherwise be sundered and destroyed. For he is indeed a worthless being, and one better rid of, who will desert flesh of his flesh and blood of his blood.

For "a little child shall lead them" up out of the slough of despond and gloom into the brightness of eternal joy and happiness.

WHAT PADDY SHOT AT.

According to Francis E. Leupp, correspondent of the New York Evening Post, who is said to be a close friend of President Roosevelt, the policy of the Republican campaign in 1904 is to be such that every aspirant to congressional honors can handle the tariff question to suit himself. The low tariff member will talk of low tariff, the reciprocity advocate will talk reciprocity, the conservative revisionist will talk conservative revision, the "stand-patter" will talk no change at all.

If this forecast proves a correct one the people of this congressional district may expect a stirring campaign for reciprocity from Congressman Bede. In districts where the preponderance of reciprocity sentiment prevails the voters will be invited to support reciprocity, revision and Roosevelt, in others they can vote for strenuous revision and Roosevelt, in others for moderate revision and Roosevelt, and in others for stand-patism and Roosevelt.

That makes the tariff a local issue with a vengeance while the president remains the principal national issue. There is reason to believe that Roosevelt is at heart a tariff reformer, and this may be the means he has taken in an effort to circumvent those leaders in his party who would bind him down with the stand-pat policy. But it is more likely to be a scheme to insure his election by deluding that large element in the Republican party favoring tariff reform into the belief that they will get what they desire. The chances are, however, that while they may succeed in electing Roosevelt, when it comes to tariff tinkering they will get what Paddy shot at.

THE DOCTOR'S FEE.

Two courts, one in St. Louis and the other in Michigan, having recently decided that a physician has no right to take the wealth of a patient into consideration when making a bill for his services, calls from the New York World the protest that while this practice may be illegal it is almost universal custom and a custom which is generally approved, for the reason that physicians and surgeons often make use of their skill in behalf of the poor without making any charge whatever, while wealthy people as a rule gladly pay for medical attention more than it is really worth.

This is the truth and it leads to the thought that possibly it would be better if all physicians were employed by the government, when their duty would not only be to treat people when they are sick, but to teach them how to live so as to maintain their health.

In China the physician is paid when his patients are well. When they become ill he receives no revenue until they are sound again. This would seem to be a better system than ours, which compels the physician to depend upon the illness of people for his revenue. Under these circumstances he is not naturally as careful of the public health as he would be if he was paid to maintain and safeguard it.

This is the one redeeming feature of the system employed by some corporations of compelling their employes to give up a portion of their earnings as insurance against the need of medical attendance. It has a tendency to make the company doctor more concerned about maintaining the health of these employes than in treating them when they are sick, and corporation doctors make the best health officers in America, when that duty is combined with others as it often is in the mining regions.

If all physicians were paid from public taxation and taxation justly levied, then the man able to pay would pay his just proportion, while the poor man would receive medical treatment and education on the proper method of living not as charity, but as a right.

This would no doubt greatly reduce the number of physicians and drug stores, but it would be no great hardship on the world if the larger number of the men engaged in both of these pursuits were compelled to turn their attention to some line of productive industry.

Sickness, with its attendant doctor and drug bills, is a great tax upon the resources of the people, which would be greatly reduced if efforts of all physicians were directed toward the protection and safeguarding of the public health.

UNLAWFUL BUT ACCOMPLISHED.

Commenting upon an article in a recent issue of the London Spectator, which shows that the Monroe doctrine is not only a good thing for the United States, but also for England as well as the other European powers, because it prevents international quarrels and wars over American territory, the New York Sun, in its issue of June 15, undertakes to correct one of the Spectator's mistaken impressions regarding the Monroe doctrine and its attempt to make that document cover certain contingencies for which it was never intended. The Sun agrees with The Herald in recently expressed views on this question when it says:

"We cannot undertake to assure immunity to Latin-American republics from condign chastisement for brutal wrongs inflicted on the persons or chattels of the subjects or citizens of European powers. All that we can equitably do is to set definite limits to the length to which reprisals may be carried, bearing in mind that if the Monroe doctrine is to be upheld in the letter and the spirit the reparation exacted must stop short of territorial mutilation, or of such a confiscation of revenues as practically would cause the delinquent American republic to bleed to death.

"There is, however, an important distinction, which the Spectator fails to draw, between the undisputed right to impose penalties for outrages on foreigners, such as assassination, imprisonment or the seizure of personal property, on the one hand, and the relatively dubious and dangerous claim of a right to extort by fleets and armies the payment of debts arising out of contracts. There is a good deal to be said for the plea that to such debts the legal principle caveat emptor applies. It is easy, indeed, to conceive a case where the public indebtment might be so large that if the collection of interest and sinking fund were to be assured by the prolonged occupation of customs houses the debtor commonwealth would virtually be reduced to the condition of Egypt.

"The Spectator's conception of the Monroe doctrine, which already presents an exemplary approach to correctness, will be perfected when it comprehends that we shall never permit the Egyptian precedent, already followed in the case of Morocco, to be extended to this hemisphere."

The Sun's assertion that the United States would not permit on the part of European powers "the dubious and dangerous claim of a right to extort by fleets and armies the payment of debts arising out of contracts" from the other nations of this hemisphere would bear more weight were it not for the fact that this had already been permitted in the case of Venezuela, while the award of the international board of arbitration justifying such action has not only received the sanction of the Roosevelt administration, but the verdict itself was probably in large part a result of the influence of the United States executive. The president's Cuban letter shows, at least, that his sympathies are entirely in that direction and that if he has his way he will abolish the Monroe doctrine and substitute therefor the Roosevelt doctrine of the "big stick" and international policemanship.

In the light of recent events involving world politics it is reasonable to assume that perhaps the London Spectator has better information than the New York paper as to what position the United States has taken and what position it would continue to take in these matters if President Roosevelt continues to ocupy the executive chair. Perhaps it reasons from inside information and judges from what has already been accomplished what will be done in the future. And it may be that it is engaged in an effort to assist its government in its evident purpose of co-operating with President Roosevelt to establish a new and false and dangerous doctrine and seek to cover its hideousness with the mantle of President Monroe.

The story is often told of a man in jail who thought he had been unjustly arrested. When he said to the officer: "You cannot put me in jail," the officer replied: "Well, you are there, are you not?" The prisoner meant, of course, that the proceeding was contrary to law. The constitution forbids that an American citizen shall be deprived of a right to a jury trial. But it has been done. The constitution says that no man shall be deprived of his liberty without due process of law, but it has been done recently in Colorado. The constitution says there shall be no restrictions of liberty or citizenship on account of race, rank or creed. But it has been done in many states.

The Monroe doctrine has been an accepted international law for many years and it gives no authority to the United States officials to become international policemen or to guard the financial morals of other nations. But United States officers do not obey the law. As the supreme court has changed the constitution to meet their desires so the president seeks to change the Monroe doctrine to fit his private opinions.

In a letter to the Kansas City Journal from its correspondent at Kingfisher, O. T., it is related that Joe Droke, of Parvin, pleaded guilty in the probate court to the charge of spanking his mother-in-law, and was fined $5 and costs by Judge Graham. This was the minimum fine which could be imposed. In speaking of the case, Judge Graham, who was impressed with the extenuating circumstances surrounding it, expressed the regret that the fine did not call for two spankings. At the hearing it developed that the mother-in-law had persisted in "butting in" to the conduct of affairs in the Droke household, and even suggested that Mrs. Droke return to the home of her girlhood. While a spanking may be a short cut to the desired result in cases of this kind, it is well that the judge imposed a fine. But the law should give both man and wife the right to send mother-in-law out in the cold, cruel world if she does not behave herself. And yet after all there are few that so offend. Remember that President Smith of the Mormon church says he loves all his.

THE FIELD SURVEY

On the same day that a young lady was singing "My Old Kentucky Home" as an inducement to the Confederate veterans to select Louisville as their next meeting place a mob of Kentucky citizens in another quarter of the state shot to death a negress who had been accused of the murder of a white man, as she was attempting to escape after the breaking of the rope with which an attempt was made to hang her to a tree. "My Old Kentucky Home" may be a dear old place, but many of its occupants are not yet civilized.

It is noticeable that Governor Peabody of Colorado began to back water just a little as soon as he began to hear from United States courts. It is fortunate for the people of Colorado whose rights have been outraged by this anarchistic monster that they have a means of legal redress that is not controlled by courts of his selection.

TALKS WITH THE STATE PRESS.

There is in a certain city in Northern Minnesota a new high school building which has just been completed, and it is as fine as any in the smaller cities of the state. Furthermore, the school has reached a standard which entitles it to be accepted by the state high school board, and the school be allowed to qualify for state aid, but word was sent out not a great while ago that if the little city in which the high school is located would "get together" on the gubernatorial question, the school would be taken care of. This shows how utterly desperate the state house gang is getting. It will even deprive the school children of the state of those advantages which the legislature has vouchsafed them. Oh, yes, the people should continue such a gang in office.

The above is from the Princeton Union owned by R. C. Dunn. While Mr. Dunn is himself a candidate for governor, the charge is probably true. It is plainly evident that the appointees of the state government are all devoting more time to booming the candidacy of Judge Collins than to their official duties, and an executive who compels the people to pay the salaries of campaign workers would not hesitate to work this contemptuous little high school deal on a community that might be favorable to the opposition.

The citizens of St. Louis county generally will endorse this sentiment from the Two Harbors Journal:

The recent happenings at Eveleth may truly be chronicled as unfortunate, to say the least. Not being on the ground we are unfamiliar with the circumstances, but suffice it to say that to shoot men down with fire arms should only be done as a last resort, and only when all other means have been tried and have met with ignominious failure.

It appears, however, that the strikers were using force in an effort to compel non-union men to cease work and when this was interfered with by the sheriff's deputies they were attacked by the strikers. Yet it is also a fact that as soon as the sheriff's force withdrew there was no more trouble and the matter was amicably settled by citizens and local officials.

Says the Minneapolis Tribune:

The visit of native Filipino commissioners to this country revives talk of home rule for the islands. This has been part of the American plan from the beginning. The idea of Secretary Taft seems to be that a home rule assembly might possibly be put in operation early in the next administration. Assurance of this is so definite that probably the platform adopted at St. Louis will contain a distinct pledge of speedy autonomy for the islands.

Then what will become of the cry of the organs of imperialism, in which the Tribune has occasionally indulged, that the Filipinos are incapable of self-government? It is hardly probable that the few Americans over there have been able to civilize so many savages in such short time. If they are capable of governing themselves now they were when the treaty with Spain was signed.

It wasn't so very long ago that we were all jawing about the danger from the trolley cars because they made so much faster time than the slow-going mules they drove out of commission; but we have adjusted ourselves nicely to the changed conditions. Why not deal gently with the auto?

In reply it might be said to the man who drives "thoughts on things" home for the Minneapolis Tribune, that street cars are at least confined to tracks, which can be easily avoided by the pedestrian, while the chu-chu car dodges around everywhere in its noisless, sneaking way, and the danger lies in unexpected meetings of man and machine when the latter travels too fast. These accidental meetings are more liable to happen on crowded thoroughfares and the speed limit ordinance should be rigidly enforced. Nearly every automobile is run too fast on business streets no doubt in Minneapolis as well as in Duluth.

HOTEL GOSSIP

Senator Charles A. Johnson, of St. Peter, who was here yesterday with Prof. G. H. Towley, principal of the commercial department of the Gustavus Adolphus college at his home town, said before leaving that the project to raise money in this city which he was sounding had met with a very kind reception and that while there was nothing exactly tangible, he felt positive that the encouragement would prove itself by substantial offerings later.

"We came to Duluth as a primary move to see what the attitude of the friends of our college here would be," said the senator, and are going back to report on our visit. There will be a meeting on next Monday of our board of administration and at that time we will give the members an idea of what we found in Duluth, and on our report the board will decide whether or not to send a representative here to work for the fund.

"I believe such a representative will be sent. The board will appoint a financial committee and this committee will appoint a financial agent to look after the monetary matters. The finance committee will work in harmony with the citizens' committee of St. Peter, which has already done considerable work toward getting the fund started. We had $15,000 raised when the Swedish Lutheran conference met there last fall and have been working right along since that time, having, in the meantime, raised considerable more, so that the fund now is in the neighborhood of $20,000.

"But we want to get $50,000 with which to erect some new buildings. We have been accomodating from 375 to 400 students, the limit of capacity of the institution and want to be able to take care of 800. We feel certain that if we could look after 800 we could get that many for we know there are enough young people wanting an education to test the capacity of the institution if it could look after that number.

"Ours is the largest denominational college in the state and the largest college outside the universities in the state, as well. We are in a beautiful location there, being able to see for miles in both directions. We can see Mankato, ten miles away, from the hillside and the view of the Minnesota valley is a beautiful one. There are five buildings there, of brick and stone, and with two more large buildings, say, we would be in good condition to better care for our young people than any other institution in the state, or at least as well.

"Our people are deeply interested in the success of this enterprise, as the college has been a feature of our district for nearly thirty years, having been instituted in 1876. Rev. A. F. Elmquist, of Duluth, S. H. Eckman, the attorney here, and a number of other prominent citizens of the Zenith City are among those who have gained their early schooling at St. Peter.

"But our school, while under denominational guidance of the Swedish church, teaches principally English, and we are not confined in our friendships or patronage to the Scandinavian people.

"I have been too busy on this project to bother about politics, and don't know enough about the situation down our way to tell you what candidate will get the votes in that neighborhood for governor of any other office."

And put it on the stove to cook;
She turned it over once or twice,

She realized the awful truth:
She'd cooked not wisely, but too well.

To where the waves blend in the mist.
And visions of the future rise
In haze of pearl and amethyst—
The sea of life, whose winding ways
Lead down the billows of the days.

Out over the sea she looks and waits
The star by which her ship shall sail
Through years whose good or evil fates
Shall send her calm or driving gale.
She only knows some day, somewhere,
There is a harbor far and fair.

Out over the sea she looks and dreams,
While songs sigh to her with its surge,
And in the distant rose-hued gleams
She sees all her tomorrows merge.
And on that sea, without a chart,
She launches her one bark—her heart.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Being bad is generally a matter of getting found out.

Most any girl's waist is slim enough to fit the shortest arm.

It's curious how fond a man can be of a girl's family till he marries her.

Some girls are so modest it makes them blush to have a glove squeeze their hand.

The man who thinks he would have been a great hero if he had been a soldier gets pretty mad with his wife when she wants him to go around and fight over the gas bill.

ONLY A PAINTED LATH.

New York Herald: It is now safe to say that more than half of the delegates to the Democratic National Convention will go uninstructed. This uninstructed majority will control the convention and shape its action. This is the single fact that forms the breeding-ground of all suspicion as to an anti-Parker combination. It is the single fact about which all the anti-Parker intrigue revolves.

This uninstructed majority is more of a menace to Judge Parker on paper than anywhere else. At least half a dozen of the most important of the uninstructed state delegations are known to be for Parker. Alabama, Kentucky, Michigan, New Jersey, South Carolina, Virginia and probably Pennsylvania will cast their votes for the New York candidate when the balloting begins. Other uninstructed delegations may safely be counted on to do the same.

The absence of instructions means only that the state leaders object to going to the national convention as messenger boys. They want a little independence, with a chance to obtain political recognition for themselves from the party candidate. They are going to ask for assurances that their local hegemony will be recognized and respected. There are little trades to make, and dickering that demands attention.

This is all the uninstructed delegations mean. Most of the important ones are for Parker. Few of the other are seriously opposed to him. For purposes of preventing his nomination the uninstructed delegation, about which so much fuss has been made, is only a lath painted to look like iron.

Betzler Seeing Things.

Beaver Bay Advocate: Saturday last a strange marine monster was seen in the North river on Joe Betzler's farm. John G. Betzler, who was on the river bank trying to save some timbers that had broken from their moorings, first saw the strange visitor on top of some floating logs, with about six feet of the upper part of its body standing almost erect. Suddenly it gave a lurch sideways, and for a few seconds entirely disappeared. It quickly came to the surface and was seen wildly biting at the willows that grow along the bank. These it bit off like straws, evidently in its eagerness to reach the shore. Finally, extricating itself from the timbers, it disappeared beneath the surface and has not since been seen. Col. Wallace was early on the ground and feels confident he will cage the monster, after which he feels certain he can realize more money than he can in the locating business.

A Dream of Bliss.

Washington Star: "So you are looking forward to a good time this summer?"

"Yes, sir," answered Mr. Cumrox.

"Going out of town?"

"No. I'm going to send mother and the girls oue of town. Then I'm going to sit in my shirt sleeves, smoke my pipe in the parlor and wire a street piano to play all the rag-time I want."

Newspaper Gift Enterprises.

Newburyport News: The Salem News hits it about right when it says, with reference to the World's fair schemes of certain newspapers: "With most of the papers which engage in the coupon and gift enterprises, stress is laid upon circulation figures, which are posted, from week to week, in conspicuous type. It can be seen, however, that the excess circulation is of no value to the general advertiser, since copies issued above the normal reading circulation are purchased only for the sake of the coupon which a given page contains. The coupon secured, the paper then becomes material for the junk man." The advertiser nowadays is getting shrewd and wise, and so it does not seem possible that he is being deceived.

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

Those Fair Young Graduates.

Oh, yes, there is a good deal of fuss and feathers about the modern commencement. Fond papas and adoring mammas are hurried from one function to another. The brass bands and the orators from abroad vie with one another for a hearing. The floral offerings are weighty and impressive and all the minor accessories of the occasion help to make it the biggest event of the month. Te custom of celebrating the closing of an academic year has spread from the higher institutions down through the high and even into the grammar and intermediate schools and sometimes the tots in the kindergarten are made to have a dim realization of the fact that they are on the threshold of a new epoch in their educational career.

And yet these royal June days would be robbed of half their glory if it were not the month par excellence of commencements. It is for our adorable graduates that roses bloom in profusion and overarching skies take on a blue not less beautiful than the firmament above Italian plains and meadows are adorned in garments of living green. So give the fair young graduates the center of the stage and let us listen attentively while Augustus discusses so learnedly upon the "Causes of Decay in Nations" and the blushing Stella reads her essay on the "Poetry of Everyday Life." June belongs to the outgoing seniors and there will never be another day in all their future history which will quite compare with the one on which they stand up in the hot crowded hall and receive diplomas. They may wander far and wide in the world but it will be a long time before the words "Members of the graduating class" will be forgotten or the thrill of pride with which they arose to receive the final monitions and exhortations.

Ah, you bald-headed old fellow, and you, staid matron with silvery hair, do not grow cynical in your old age as you gaze at the spectacle and say under your breath, "Oh, pshaw! what does it all amount to, anyway? It will be soon over and they will find the world cold enough when they take their first plunge." Rather let your thought fly back to your own callow yet glorious school days, to the little red building where you learned your A B C, to the academy where you frolicked and studied, to the college or university around which gather some of the most precious memories of your life. Try to recall, if you can, the impulses and the high ambitions that were yours when you were in your teens or your early twenties. So shall the annual recurrence of the commencement season exhilarate and inspire you anew.

And it does mean something to the youngsters. That meaning lies beneath the externals of the celebrations, in the glad consciousness that a certain round of study has been accomplished and certain just rewards earned. It is a great thing to go through even one school or one prescribed course, to have availed one's self of a certain set of opportunities, and now to be ready to move on to the next stage of study or of action. Make all you can, then, Mr. Senior and Miss Senior, of this golden moment. Exalt the loyalties to your school, to your class and to your ideals of the scholarly life.

How poor the world would be without the pouring into its depleted life of the fresh enthusiasm of these fair young graduates the country over. Their contribution to the body politic cannot easily be calculated. Before the advance of this shining host stretching from Maine to California, it seems as if all the evils of the world would have to go down. How can shams and corruptions and entrenched wrongs resist the onset of the energy, the knowledge and consecration to be found in the boys and girls, the young men and the young women who are going out during these passing weeks from our educational institutions? The world needs them sorely and they will not disappoint our hopes.

Only let them realize as they go that knowledge must be yoked with faith, learning with loving, if they are to make themselves tell and attain true success. For there is only one thing better than a thoroughly disciplined, well-informed mind, and that is a pure, unselfish heart.

POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

Democratic State Convention To Meet In Duluth Next Wednesday With Over 1000 Delegates.

Both Hearst and Anti-Hearst People Claim Control—The Republican Fight For Governorship Is Getting More Bitter.

Just a little more than 1000 delegates are entitled to places in the armory next Wednesday when the state Democratic convention meets, but it is supposed that defaulting counties will probably reduce this number by at least 50. On the occasion of every state convention it is found that some of the counties which are too easy going to hold primaries, send delegates with what purport to be proper credentials, but who are on both sides of the fence, so these have to be thrown out.

What the convention is likely to do is a question which is hard to answer in advance. It will be a close hard fight and both sides are claiming it.

It is an undoubted fact that there are a whole lot of people in the Hearst camp, who are not so much for Hearst as a man as they are for the principles which, in a general way, have been followed by the people who are in his trail, and that there is no other man representing this element of principles who is in the race for the nomination. Most of these people are original Bryanites and would follow the Nebraskan through thick and thin if he were willing to be their leader. But of course two defeats in presidential campaigns are enough for any one man.

The great thing about Bryan as a politician is that he is better known personally to the people than any other man of the time, as his travels have been more extensive through the United States than those of any other public man. This has given him a direct meeting with more of the voting population than any other man could hope to have, and whether he met his friends eight years ago or four years ago, he has his grip on them just the same, and their belief in his sincerity is what leads many of them to go where he wants them to. They believe, in many instances, that Hearst is in this political period the follower of Bryan and practically his personal representative.

Locally the Hearst followers have had definite plans and definite heads, while the opposition have appeared indifferent about organizing.

In Hennepin county the Hearst side has a solid delegation and in Ramsey county the solid strength is with his opponents.

As it now stands the local Hearst people claim they will have the convention by a three-fourths vote, or about 150 more votes than necessary to carry their own purposes. Of course, so far as St. Louis county is concerned, the entire delegation of 36 is composed of Hearst men.

It is expected that the convention will reaffirm the Kansas City platform practically.

• • •

The Kansas City platform condemns the Philippine policy, "the greedy commercialism which dictated the Philippine policy of the Republican administration," but favors territorial expansion "when it takes in desirable territory which can be erected into states in the Union and whose people are willing and fit to become American citizens."

It goes on to say: "We favor trade expansion by every peaceable and legitimate means, but we are unalterably opposed to the seizing or purchasing of distant islands to be governed outside of the constitution and whose people can never become citizens."

The platform opposes militarism, private monopolies, the Dingley tariff law as "a trust breeding measure," denounces the currency bill enacted in 1898 and reaffirms and endorses the platform of 1896, reiterating the demand for the restoration of a bimetallic price level and the immediate restoration of the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the rate of 16 to 1 without waiting for the "aid or consent of any other nation."

Government by injunction is denounced and the election of United States senators by popular vote favored and direct legislation, wherever practicable, is also favored. The blacklist is denounced and arbitration for labor difficulties favored.

Government ownership of the Nicaraguan canal, improvement of the arid Western lands, Chinese exclusion and self-government are endorsed and the Hay-Pauncefote treaty condemned as a surrender of American rights and interests, while the "lavish appropriations of recent Republican congresses" are also denounced.

• • •

Through the columns of the Sauk Center Herald Frank M. Eddy has stated his platform in the following planks:

Tariffs that protect, no those that oppress.

Reciprocity that reciprocates.

Rigid governmental control of trusts and corporations.

The gold standard as an accomplished legal fact.

One wife at a time, and no more, for one man.

Liberality and justice in pensions.

One vote for each voter and the right to cast it.

Knute Nelson and Moses E. Clapp for United States senators.

Opposition to mergers, past, present and future.

Equality in taxation.

Economy, but not parsimony, in public expenditures.

The best management and the most scientific treatment attainable for the inmates of our asylums.

Abundance of revenue and separate control for our state institutions.

Reforms as well as punishment in all our penal institutions.

Old soldiers in the home to retain their pensions for themselves and families.

Minnesotans to be given the preference in supplying state institutions.

The United States, Minnesota, Roosevelt and the nominees of the state convention.

Baseball hurts politics, and this is the explanation that some of the local politicians give for the quietness locally the past week. When there is a good game of ball on at the local grounds in the afternoon the very men that have the time to talk politics prefer, if they have the price in their trousers, to dig it up and take in the game.

Both the Collins and Dunn sides have headquarters now, the Collins apartments being in charge of E. L. Millar, who knows how to handle campaigns and a number of other things, including a trade journal. The Collins rooms are in the Mesaba block, and the fact that the entrance is through room No. 13 seems to have no dampening effect on the energy of the workers. A. P. Cook says that thre are new people coming over to Collins' side every day, people that have never taken any interest in politics before while the other fellows say that such as are going over merely go over to inquire how the campaign is going on. The Dunn people, with the customary political coolness, profess to think that Dunn's escapade with the Minneapolis Journal man, some time since, is forgotten, but the Collins people say "Not if we know ourselves."

They have issued the Minneapolis Journal's editorial on the subject, and are distributing it liberally and without price to everybody who cares to take it. Both sides are pretty well along with their precinct organizations, and from this on expect things to run smoothly in this respect. Will C. Sargent, former chairman of the Dunn local committee, has not returned, and it is said now that if he does, there is no danger of his entering the campaign, as his recent illness has probably made it advisable for him to rest from campaign duties.

But he is a member of the executive committee of the St. Louis county R. C. Dunn campaign committee, along with Guy A. Eaton and William Getty, and his name appears on the letterheads which are being used at the Dunn headquarters in the Manhattan building.

• • •

Ex-Mayor Eustis of Minneapolis must be reckoned with, too, in this deal, as he has come out flatfooted for governor, and will no doubt get strength in his neighborhood that will give him some weight in the convention. Together with Frank Eddy he will draw from the accumulation which the Dunn and Collins' forces would otherwise include, and if both these gentlemen stay in to a finish it will be interesting to see which of the two leading candidates will do the most losing to the other two.

There seems to be no question but that Dunn is the best known candidate, so far as personal acquaintance with the people of the state is concerned, and his long record as an officeholder is an asset in giving him a knowledge of the state's inhabitants that only a few men have. But his actions throughout the campaign have militated against him, and the contest at St. Paul a couple of weeks hence may be a more tightly drawn proposition than it would be under normal conditions. But, of course, as one of the politicians puts it, normal conditions in politics are abnormal.

VAN SANT DECLINES

To Discuss Candidacy For Third Term.

St. Paul, June 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—"Yes, I have read the report that I am a candidate for a third term," said Governor S. R. Van Sant, who returned yesterday from Cornell college, Iowa, where he received the degree of master of arts. "I can only say that I am not discussing this question."

This is all the governor would say yesterday regarding the report that Insurance Commissioner Dearth's interview renouncing his allegiance to R. C. Dunn means that Governor Van Sant is a candidate for a third term. The refusal of the governor to talk is considered significant, inasmuch as several weeks ago he did not hesitate to say that under no circumstances would he be a candidate for the place.

The possible candidacy of the governor is the principal topic discussed in the Twin Cities. The supporters of Judge Collins say that the report originated with the Dunn men, who sought thereby to throw disorder into the Collins camp. The friends of Mr. Dunn, on the other hand, maintain that Governor Van Sant is in reality a candidate for a third term; that is, he will allow his name to be presented in the convention should neither Judge Collins nor R. C. Dunn have a majority of the delegates.

"The story has been manufactured by the Dunn men for the purpose of injuring Judge Collins," said one of the judge's managers yesterday. "The governor has announced that he is not a candidate, and I believe that he meant what he said."

• • •

George Matchan, surveyor general of logs and lumber, of Minneapolis, called on Governor Van Sant yesterday. Mr. Matchan is Judge Collins' campaign manager in Hennepin county, and believes that the St. Cloud judge will carry the county solid.

"Judge Collins will have the 113 delegates of Hennepin county," said Mr. Matchan yesterday. "I am as confident of this as I am that he is a candidate. He will carry more than half of the wards solid and he will get some delegates from the others.

"The St. Cloud man will have a majority of the delegates in the county convention and they will enforce the unit rule; this will mean that the 113 delegates will be cast for Judge Collins. There will be no split delegation in Hennepin county this year. One of the other candidates will get the 113 delegates.

"The report that the Swedish wards in Minneapolis are for Dunn is not true. The Scandinavians of the Flour City are generally for Collins, and he will carry the wards in which they predominate."

• • •

Delegates to the Republican national convention at Chicago will leave for the Windy City today and tomorrow. It was planned at first to have the delegates go together in a special train, but the plan has been abandoned and the delegates will meet at Chicago informally.

There will be a meeting of the Minnesota delegation at the Sherman house Monday night to elect a national committeeman, a chairman and a secretary of the convention, an honorary vice president and a member of the committee on permanent organization, rules and resolutions and the committees to notify the president and the vice president of their nomination.

It is generally conceded that Frank B. Kellogg, of St. Paul, will be named a national committeeman and that either Senator Knute Nelson, of Alexandria, or Governor S. R. Van Sant, of Winona, will be on the resolutions' committee. Both are in favor of revising the tariff.

• • •

The Ramsey county delegation to the Democratic state convention at Duluth will leave for the Zenith City Wednesday morning at 8:30 o'clock, arriving in Duluth at 2:10 o'clock in the afternoon. The delegation will be headed by a brass band. The delegates will urge T. D. O'Brien as one of the delegates-at-large and will oppose to the last ditch any attempt to instruct the delegates to the national convention for W. R. Hearst.

GIVE HIM A CHANCE.

A Plea For the Poor Downtrodden Millionaire.

To be a millionaire, then, is to have more money than you can possibly spend on yourself, and to suffer daily from the inconsiderateness of those persons to whom such a condition appears one of utter content, says Bernard Shaw in the New York American.

What then is the millionaire to do with his surplus funds? The usual reply is, provide for his children and give alms. Now these two resources, as usually understood, are exactly the same thing, and a very mischievous thing, too. From the point of view of society, it does not matter a straw whether the person relieved of the necessity of working for his living by a millionaire's bounty is his son, his daughter's husband, or merely a casual beggar. The millionaire's private feelings may be more highly gratified in the former cases but the mischief to society and to the recipient is the same.

If you want to spoil a young man's career, there is no method surer than that of presenting him with what is called "an independence," meaning an abject and total dependence on the labor of others. Anybody who has watched the world intelligently enough to compare the average man of independent means when he has just finished his work at the university with the same man twenty years later, following a routine of fashion compared to which the round of a postman is a whirl of excitement and the beat of a policeman a chapter of romance, must have sometimes said to himself that it would have been better for the man if his father had spent every penny of his money, or thrown into the Thames.

In Ireland the absentee landlord is bitterly reproached for not administering his estate in person. It is pointed out truly enough that the absentee is a pure parasite upon the industry of his country.

On these estates generations of peasants (and agents) live hard, but bearable lives; whilst off them generations of ladies and gentlemen of good breeding and natural capacity are corrupted into drifters, wasters, drinkers, waiters-for-dead-men's-shoes, poor relations and social wreckage of all sorts, living aimless lives, and often dying squalid and tragic deaths. The typical modern proprietor is not an Irish squire, but a cosmopolitan shareholder, and the shareholder is an absentee as a matter of course. If his property is all the better managed for that, he himself is all the more completely reduced to the condition of a mere parasite upon and he is just as likely as the Irish absentee to become a center of demoralization to his family connections.

Every millionaire who leaves all his millions to his family in the ordinary course exposes his innocent descendants to this risk without securing them any advantage that they could not win more effectually, and happily by their own activity, backed by a fair start in life. Formerly this consideration had no weight with parents, because working for money was considered disgraceful to a gentleman, so it is still, in our more belated circles, to a lady. In all the professions we have survivals of old pretenses—the rudimentary pocket on the back of a barrister's gown is an example—by which the practitioner used to fob his fee without admitting that his services were for sale. Most people alive today, of middle age and upward, are more or less touched with superstitions that need no longer be reckoned with by or on behalf of young men. Such, for instance, as that the line which divides wholesale from retail trade is also a line marking a step in social position; or that there is something incongruous in a lord charging a shilling a head for admission to his castle and gardens, or opening a shop for milk, game and farm produce; or that a merchant's son who obtains a commission in a smart regiment is guilty of an act of ridiculous presumption.

Even the prejudice against manual labor is vanishing. In the artistic professions something like a worship of it was inaugurated when Ruskin took his Oxford class out of doors and set them to make roads. It is now a good many years since Dickens, when visiting a prison, encountered Wainwright, the prisoner, and heard that gentleman vindicate his geniility by demanding of his fellow prisoner (a bricklayer, if I remember aright) whether he had ever condescended to celan out the cell, or handle the broom, or, in short, do any work whatever for himself that he could put on his companion. The bricklayer, proud of having so distinguished a cellmate, eagerly gave the required testimony.

It would be easy to multiply instances of the change of public opinion for the better in this direction. But there is no need to pile up evidence. It will be quite willingly admitted that the father who throws his son on his own exertions, after equipping him fully with education and a reasonable capital, no longer degrades him, spoils his chance of a well-bred wife, and forfeits the caste of the family, but, on the contrary, solidifies his character and widens his prospects, professional, mercantile, political and matrimonial. Besides, public opinion, growing continually stronger against drones in the hive, begins to threaten, and even to execute, a differentiation of taxation against unearned incomes; so that the man who, in spite of the protests of parental wisdom and good citizenship, devotes great resources to the enrichment and probable demoralization of remote descendants for whose merit the community has no guarantee, does so at the risk of having his aim finally defeated by the income tax collector. We, therefore, have the intelligent and public-spirited millionaire cut off from his old resource of "founding a family." All that his children can now require of him, all that society expects to give them, all that is equally good for themselves, is a first rate equipment, not an independence. And there are millionaires who have no children.

DR. MITCHELL DOES AS HE AGREES.

If He Says That He Can Cure You, Then He Will Do It.

You need not look any further. Dr. Mitchell knows in advance just what he can do in every case. He does not have to wait to see what can be done. He knows at once. If he can not relieve or cure you, he says "No," and that ends it. If he can relieve or restore a case, he says so, and if he is given the opportunity he can and will prove it. His opinion is final in any case. It is this common, every-day honesty that is the foundation on which his whole practice rests. Dr. Mitchell has been healing the crippled, deaf, dumb, blind and curing all diseases that flesh is heir to for the past six years in Duluth, every day, at 17 East Superior street. He has crutches, canes and shoes, a basketful of shoes of all sizes and styles, men's, women's and children's, with iron braces and leather straps, springs and every kind of harness, formerly worn by all kinds of cripples. Some have worn them for months and some for years. All left by Healer Mitchell's patients.

Is this evidence enough? You still do not believe it. Then take a seat in the reception room. Here comes a lady with a baby who is ushered in the private office. She meets the doctor, tells him the child is 4 years old and has never sit up in its life or tried to. In less than ten minutes he brings the child out in the reception room, sits it on the floor straight up, and it goes to playing. Do you believe it now?

Here is a man who has not put his foot on the floor or bent that knee for nine months. He came on two crutches, and after the second treatment the man returns to his home walking naturally, carrying his crutches in his hands. Do you believe it now?

Here is a man who has not walked for twelve years, 82 years old. He is made to walk in a short time.

Here is a man who has spinal trouble. He has to walk bent over in half circle and so badly crippled that he had to be assisted into the office. Dr. Mitchell, after examining the man, stated to the men who helped him into the office that the gentleman was so badly crippled that he hardly knew where to commence. The doctor took him to treat, and to the surprise of his friends and himself, he came to the office without help for his third treatment and is overjoyed at what the doctor has done so far.

Here is a man who was going blind and has been under treatment about a week. The improvement in his sight is wonderful. He is treating new patients every day.

Eli Rogers May Relinquish Swamp and Make New Entry.

Eli Roger, of Loman, Minn., who filed on a piece of land not knowing that it was swamp, will be allowed to file a relinquishment to the claim and make another entry on another piece of land, according to a decision from the general land office at Washington, provided he furnishes satisfactory evidence in proof of his statements.

On March 20, 1903, Roger made entry for a quarter section in section 25, township 157-26. He alleges in an unscorroborated affidavit that at the time of examination and filing the snow was over two feet deep on the claim and that he was therefore unable to determine the character of the soil, which he subsequently found to be mostly swamp, and wholly unfit for cultivation.

He will be allowed 60 days from the notice in which to furnish proper evidence duly corroborating the statements made. He asks permission to make entry on 160 acres in township 157-26.

EXCURSION RETURNS

Northern Pacific Carries Large Crowd Back to Their Homes.

Excursionists from Wahpeton and points between there and Duluth who came in on Wednesday's excursion returned to their homes on special trains over the Northern Pacific yesterday evening. There were in the neighborhood of 1000 of these people and they enjoyed themselves thoroughly while in the city, and those who had never been in Duluth before were heard to express themselves with delight at the city, and their intention to return whenever the opportunity afforded.

The three days the excursionists were here were exceptionally sunny and bright, and this feature of their stay was not only delightful to the excursionists themselves but to all those who had a hand in getting up the excursion, such as the officials of the Northern Pacific railroad and the Commercial club.

A HEARTLESS MOTHER

Leaves Her Babes Starving and Uncared For.

Two little half-starved babies who have been deserted by their mother were taken charge of by Humane Officer Withrow this morning, and will be placed in the Children's Home at St. Paul.

The name of the mother is Amelia Fifer. She lives between Sixth and Seventh avenues east in First alley. A week ago she left the children who are not yet two months old, and went to South Superior for twenty-eight hours, leaving nobody but a fourteen-year old girl living next door, in charge of the babies. She was threatened with prosecution at the time, but was released with a warning from the assistant city attorney, after promising that she would stay at home and attend to her children.

This morning her husband complained to the humane officer that she had gone away again and left the babies uncared for. There are also three other children, the oldest of which is five years of age. The father stated that he did not know where the woman was. He had placed the babies in the care of a widow on Garfield avenue, but claimed he was unable to reimburse the woman for taking care of them.

The humane officer immediately had voluntary assignment papers drawn up and the father affixed his signature giving the children into the care of the Children's Home society. The signature of the mother is also necessary to the paper but there is little doubt that it can be secured if the woman can be located.

The twin babies appear to have been half-starved. Although they are nearly two months old, the two of them would weigh scarcely fifteen pounds. Their fingers are almost as thin as matches from lack of proper nourishment, and sores have broken out on their bodies through failure to properly care for them.

The three older children will probably be cared for by the relatives of the father, who have signified their willingness to take charge of them.

HIS MONEY TAKEN

Charles Butarski Claims to Have Been Robbed by Three Men.

Are in Custody, and Offense Is Highway Robbery.

Charged with highway robbery, Daniel O'Donnell, Harry Huber and Harry Levia are locked up at police headquarters awaiting their preliminary haring in the municipal court.

The three men are claimed to have robbed Charles Butarski, a Polander, of $38 on West First street last night, shortly before midnight.

Butarski was in Sullivan's saloon drinking last evening, and became somewhat intoxicated. The three men are said to have been in the saloon at the time, and taken note of the fact that he had a considerable sum of money in his possession. After spending some time in the saloon, he became boisterous and the proprietor ejected him, advising him to go home and get sobered up.

The three men are claimed to have followed him out of the saloon and to have caught up with him before he had gone but a few feet. Butarski claims that O'Donnell and Levia held his hands and went through his pockets, taking away his roll of $38.

He immediately went to police headquarters and reported the robbery and Officers Nelson and A. Cameron, who were on the beats nearest the scene of the affair were detailed to look into the matter. They succeeded in locating O'Donnell, Huber and Levia and within an hour had the three of them locked up at headquarters. Butarski identified O'Donnell and Levia as the two men who had gone through his pockets, and stated that Huber looked on while they did it.

All three of the men deny that they had anything to do with the robbery, but they told different stories to the police which conflict on several points, and the authorities are convinced that they have the right men. They have not yet been arraigned for their preliminary hearing as the police are waiting to get some of the men who were in the saloon at the time Butarski was ejected, as witnesses.

The offense is a most serious one, and grand larceny in the first degree will probably be the charge against them.

LOCATION OF COURTHOUSE

Ernest Jefferson Says It Should Be Near Business District.

Believing that the county has a clear and undisputed title to the present courthouse site, and that the district court will so hold, Ernest R. Jefferson expresses himself as decidedly in favor of a courthouse location nearer the business portion of the city.

Mr. Jefferson goes even farther and says that the new courthouse should be erected nearer the business center, even though the county should eventually lose the old site, a contingency he does not anticipate.

"Under no circumstances though," says Mr. Jefferson, "should the new courthouse be built above Seond street.

"I am in favor of a new location nearer the business center, because the old site is very inconvenient. It is an imposition on the taxpayers and all those who do business at the courthouse, to be compelled to take a street car to reach the county offices to transact their business.

"The logical location for the county courthouse is as near as possible to the business center where it can be reached readily without resorting to street cars and where it is convenient alike to people from every part of the city as well as those from the country.

"I believe that the courthouse should be erected on two, or at the outside, on not more than three lots. There is plenty of room at the top. If two stories are not enough, build it three stories high. If that is not sufficient build it even four or five stories high.

"There is no earthly reason why St. Louis county should furnish yard room for its employes to lay out a ball ground. All we need is room enough for the courthouse building.

"I believe that it is practicable to have the jail in the courthouse building. If it is necessary let it occupy one netire floor."

THE COST OF CRUSHED ROCK

C. P. Frank of Crushed Rock Company Discusses Question.

C. P. Frank, president and general manager of the Duluth Crushed Stone company, takes exception to some of the statement made by the aldermen in regard to the purchase of the new stone crusher, and claims that not only will the crusher prove an unprofitable investment, but that his company has not been given fair treatment in the matter.

"The new plant is to be located at Lester Park," said Mr. Frank, "and could be used to any possible advantage only for work near there, as we make the board of public works a price on our rock of $1.20 at the crusher, while the cost of producing rock at the city plant last year, according to their printed report, was between $1.27 and $1.28 per cubic yard, which price does not include any part of the extensive improvements and repairs which they have recently made. It is reasonable to suppose that the cost of producing, at a smaller plant, far away from the direct supervision and crushing, a smaller amount of stone, would be considerably more and would not justify the expenditure of between $1500 and $2000 for new plant.

"It is understood that they expect to locate the plant about a block from the end of the car line, but I think it very doubtful if they can get the consent of any owner of property of such value to damage his property in the ruinous way in which they have spoiled forever the city park at the West End.

"The net result to the city of our proposition would be that for what rock they may need at Lakeside the freight may make the rock cost the city 20c or 25c a yard more than they can figure out on paper that it will cost them to crush it themselves. For rock used at Endion or the East End, our price would be cheaper than they could produce it for, as there is no rock in the East End on any street which is as easy to work as that where the city plant is now located. For all of the West End the price would be about the same as it is now costing the city, as we could deliver it in chutes, under the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad tracks, and for all work at West Duluth there would be asaving to the city of at least 50c a yard.

"We have put up a large crushing plant at West Duluth, thinking we would have fair treatment from the city if our price was reasonable, and think they should give us their good will and encouragement, and not think of putting up additional plants of their own, when stone is offered to them cheaper than they can produce it."

CONTRACTOR NOT TO BLAME

Not Responsible For the Breaks In East First Street Curb.

The numerous breaks in the curbing on East First street are not due to the faulty construction according to the report which City Engineer McGilvray and Alexander Kennedy of the board of public works will make to the council Monday night, but to the fact that the citizens in laying short carriage walks to the curb have not left sufficient space for the action of the frost.

The curbing on East First street is the combined concrete curb and gutter. At frequent intervals along the streets cracks have appeared in the curb, and it is commencing to crumble away. At the last meeting of the council, the contractor was requested to repair these breaks and place the curb in proper condition, under the conditions of his contract.

The city engineer and Mr. Kennedy inspected the curb yesterday, and found that the breaks were not due to any fault of the contractor.

"The property owners along the street" said Mr. McGilvray this morning, "have in many instances laid short pieces of walk from the sidewalk to the curb since the curb was constructed. In building these walks sufficient space was not left to allow for the action of the frost and the contraction and expansion. The result has been that during the winter the frost has simply broken a large piece of the curbing loose wherever these walks are constructed. Any person who inspects the breaks can see this for himself. There is a crack on each side of the walk and a piece of curbing about three feet in length is broken off."

Dancing Party.

Last evening a number of the younger Masons gave a delightful dancing party at Masonic hall. This was the second in a series that promise to be most enjoyable affairs. Among the guests were Messrs. and Mesdames G. H. Winchester, Jesse Norton, J. G. Burrows, W. A. Abbett, D. R. Black, J. L. Mullen, W. E. Morrow, W. D. Underhill, S. T. Welsh, William Riggs, Misses Cooley, Millbrook, Cox, Palmer, Burgo, Black, Wells, Judd and Spinck, and Messrs. PROTECT YOURSELF.

And Cure Your Constipation and Intestinal Indigestion With Rea Bros.' Cascarin.

The man whose system is fortified and protected by Cascarin is as vulnerable to the diseases of the liver, kidneys, stomach and bowels as was that famous Greek, Achilles, to the weapons of his Trojan enemies. Nay, even more so, for even Achilles had one weak spot, which was, at last, the cause of his death. But Cascarin's protecting armor has no weak spot. We, whose liver, kidneys, stomach and bowels are protected by Cascarin are absolutely impregnable to such ailments as constipation, biliousness, dyspepsia, catarrh of the stomach, insomnia, pain in the back and head, dizziness and lack of vitality, and be is unassailable because the liver and kidneys, stomach and bowels, from diseases of which such afflictions come, are put in good order and kept so by the judicious use of that infallible remedy Cascarin. Its effects are wonderful in such cases, and it never fails to cure and keep cured. Cascarin is the most wonderful cure ever offered suffering humanity.

FOGGY FOR SAILING

Doubtful Whether Yacht Pennant Races Would Be Sailed.

Course and Entries—Boat Club Reception Friday Evening.

Owing to the deep fog today it was problematical whether the yacht club would be able to start the pennant races. The entries for the contest were as follows :

Schooners—Ski-u-Mah, Capt. F. G. German; Water Lily, Capt. C. P. McCormick; Mildred J, Capt. C. T. Winters.

Sloops: Sea Gull, Capt. Joseph Roth; Stranger, Capt. C. Z. Driesbach; Golden Rod, Capt. A. S. Osborn; Marguerite, Capt. J. A. Kent.

Boats of uniform design: Miss Modesty, Capt. H. E. Gooch; Feather, Dr. Frank B. Lynam; unnamed, Capt. J. L. Hopkins; unnamed, Capt. G. N. Holland. A fifth of the same uniform design boat to be sailed by Edwin C. Congdon, was not entered owing to the skipper's absence from the city.

The course was to be No. 1, the wind being favorable, the conurse as follows: Starting from clubhouse buoy, which was to be left on starboard side to buoy off Superior shore, thence to buoy off Oatka beach, thence back to starting point, leaving last three buoys on part hand.

The schedule time for starting was to be 2 p. m.

The Duluth Boat club is to hold a reception at the clubhouse next Friday night and a committee on arrangements has been selected as follows: A. W. Frick, chairman; L. J. Hopkins, Herbert Spencer, Carrol Graff, A. W. Puck and J. D. Mahoney.

If the weather permits the program will include dancing as well as boat rides. It is planned to put all the boats in the clubhouse at the service of the visiting friends and to also have some launches.

Affairs of the boat club have taken on a livelier turn the past week, as there have been some pleasant evenings for rowing. Nearly every boat was out last night, and it is believed that the interest in the shell rowing will be revived the coming week. The eights have been laying off the last few days, rsting after their hard work which was done to prepare for the contest at Madison.

Once more assuring you that we appreciate to the full your efforts towards making our stay the pleasant one it has been, I remain, yours very truly,

A SHOOTING NEAR BUHL

Meager Report of One Reaches County Attorney McClintock.

A shooting scrape at the Kinney mine location, near Buhl, last evening is being investigated by County Attorney J. M. McClintock this afternoon.

Word of the trouble reached Mr. McClintock by telephone from M. A. Nichols, town recorder of Buhl, this morning, and he left immediately to look into the matter this evening.

The details gained over the telephone were very meager for the reason the line was not working well.

All the county attorney could gather was that during a fight between two Austrians one shot the other, causing a very serious if not a fatal wound.

The man who did the shooting is in custody, but claims that he fired in self-defense.

It was impossible to get over the telephone the names of either of the parties in the shooting affray.

Jewish Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Sadie Schwartzbein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Schwartzbein, 112 First avenue east, and A. Averboak, of Superior, will occur tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock, at the Jewish Synagogue. Following the ceremony a reception will be tendered the guests at Odd Fellows hall. For the wedding dinner 500 covers will be laid. On June 24 Mr. and Mrs. Averboak will leave for St. Louis, Chicago, New York and other eastern points. They will return to the head of the lakes sometime in August and will take up their residence in Duluth.

Active Travel Now.

Passenger business to Chicago is good now on account of the low round-trip rate made because of the Republican national convention. The arrangement of fares to St. Louis for the exposition is such that it is of particular advantage to St. Louis in the case of people going to Chicago, as they can get first-class round trip rates to St. Louis good to stop over in Chicago, at less than the first-class round-trip rate to Chicago. This induces many people who have business in Chicago to take in the fair at the Mound City who might not otherwise attend.

CRITICISED THE WOMEN

For Accepting Invitations From Officials Who Opposed Suffrage.

Berlin, June 18.—Count Von Hoensbroecht, the well-known political writer, created a sensation at the session of the women's congress this morning. When the fourth section, which was discussing woman's suffrage, had completed the list of program speakers, it threw the subject open to discussion. Von Hoensbroecht asked permission to speak and criticised the delegates for accepting invitations to garden parties, those of Chancellor and Countess Von Buelow and Interior Secretary and Countess Von Posadowsky-Wehner, immediately after the government had declared that it would not accept the woman suffrage amendment to the law creating boards of arbitration for merchants and their employes. Von Hoensbroecht said the women should have informed the ministers that they were unable to accept social courtesies under the circumstances.

"The secretary of the interior," said Von Hoensbroecht, "snubbed the suffrage movement, but gave you strawberries and cream."

Fraulein Freudenberg, of Munich, who presided, instantly repelled the count's criticism and said the advocates of women's rights hoped to have an opportunity to meet their direct enemies socially and explain their views.

The women's congress closed this afternoon with an enormous meetin. The Philharmonic hall was over-filled and a large overflow meeting was held in an adjacent hall, where the speeches made in the Philarmonic hall were repeated. The leading speaker in the main hall was Mrs. Perkins Gilman, who discussed Professor Lester F. Ward's theory of the biological origin of the sex, according to which the female became the established type prior to the male. Mrs. Gilman turned the theory to account, discussing in a brilliant way the relations between the sexes today, claiming that society will not be perfect till woman participates in all human interests equally with man. Helen Lange discussed the ultimate aims of the woman's movement.

Lady Aberdeen, president of the International Council, cordially thanked the German organizers for the splendid success of the congress. Frau Mary Stritt, of Dresden, president of the German league, declared the congress adjourned amid a scene of great enthusiasm.

The American delegates as the German attendants point out made a favorable impression owing to the superiority of their oratory, clear, concise statements and distinct, deliberate speaking.

The municipality tonight will give the delegates a great farewell reception at the city hall.

PHILIPPINE OPENING

At World's Fair Postponed on Account of Rain.

St. Louis, June 18.—Because of continued heavy rain it was today decided to postpone the dedication of the Philippine exhibit until Monday.

BIG BATTLE SOON

Engagement Expected at Hai Cheng Within a Month.

Gen. Kuropatkin Is Assembling Forces In That Locality.

General Kuroki's headquarters in the field (via Fusan, June 18.)—Kuropatkin is assembling forces at Hai Cheng. A great battle is expected within a month. The Russians again in their attempt to relieve Port Arthur were permitted to select their own battleground and again they greatly misjudged the Japanese numbers and the disposition of their forces and again were outgeneraled.

Tokio, June 18.—The Vladivostok squadron has disappeared off the West Coast of Aomori prefecture. The Russians recently searched two merchantmen and to one of them they transferred the Englishmen taken from the Japanese transport Sado. They then permitted the vessels to depart uninjured.

Liao Yang, June 18.—Lieut. Col. Walter S. Schuyler, U. S. A., and Capt. William V. Judson, of the United States Engineer corps, were present with the other military attaches at the battle of Vafangow.

Red Cross trains filled with wounded from the south are passing through Liao Yang. Almost all the officers of one regiment were killed or wounded.

Military activity on a grand scale is apparent at Mukden. A high authority confirms the announcement that Kuropatkin is assuming the offensive.

PRESIDENT AT WEDDING

Attended the Robinson-Roosevelt Marriage at Hyde Park.

Hyde Park, June 18.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt were guests of honor today at the wedding of Miss Helen Roosevelt and Theodore Douglas Robinson. The bride is a daughter of J. Roosevelt, who is the cousin of the president. The groom is a son of the president's sister, Mrs. Douglas Robinson, of New York. The president, Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Carew, Mrs. Roosevelt's sister, were driven from the railroad station to the picturesque little Episcopal church in the village where the ceremony was performed. The church was filled with guests when the presidential party arrived.

The wedding ceremony was solmnized by the Rev. A. T. Ashton, a friend of the Roosevelt family. The best man was Charles E. Adams, of Toledo, Ohio, and one of the bridesmaids was Miss Alice Roosevelt, daughter of the president.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, the president and Mrs. Roosevelt and several hundred other guests attended a reception to the young couple at the country home of J. Roosevelt, about two miles from the village.

President Roosevelt and party will leave this evening for New York. They will pass Sunday as the guests of Attorney General Knox at his country home near Valley Forge, Pa.

PRESIDENT CENSURED

For His Action in the Miller Case at Washington.

St. Paul, June 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—After passing resolutions censuring President Roosevelt for his action in the Miller case in connection with the public printing office in Washington, and electing officers, the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders adjourned by singing Auld Lang Syne. The resolution directed against President Roosevelt in substance declares that the brotherhood should take the opportunity to protest against the pronouncement of Roosevelt in declaring the open shop to be in the interest of public good; that the labor movement is an unselfish movement, the purpose of which is the abolishment of all conditions that do not operate for the public weal.

The officers elected are:

President, E. W. Tatum, Chicago; first vice president, R. Glocklin, Toronto; second vice president, George Baker, Cincinnati; third vice president, Louis Both, St. Paul; general secretary, James W. Dougherty, New York; secretary-treasurer, James Espey, Washington, D. C.; statistician, Justin Effert, Minneapolis. District organizers—William Glockling, Toronto; John J. Fitzgerald, New York; Jacob G. Halles, Baltimore; A. G. Peterson, Denver; William C. Booth, San Francisco.

ASKS STAY OF PROCEEDINGS

City Enters One in Barber Asphalt Federal Case.

Moving papers on the application of the defendant for a stay of proceedings, in the case of the Barber Asphalt company against the city of Duluth, were filed today with the clerk of the federal courts. The case is one in which the asphalt concern sues the city for payment on a contract for paving East Superior street.

The city, through its attorney, Bert Fesler, asks that an order be issued requiring the plaintiff to appear in court chambers before Judge Page Morris on July 9, at 10 o'clock in the morning, to show cause why an order shall not be made by the court staying all proceedings in the action until the final determination of three cases now pending in district court.

The motion is made on the ground that the actions in the district court are of the same general nature and character as the present action; that they involve the validity of the same contract, seek payment or enjoining of payment of the same moneys sued for in this action, on the same and similar grounds; that they are between the same parties, and will finally determine the same issues that will be determined by the present action; that they were begun prior to the commencement of this action, and are still pending and undetermined, and that the relief sought for in this motion by the city is necessary for its protection, and to prevent prejudice to its interests.

THE DERBY AT CHICAGO

Many of the Horses Are Very Evenly Matched.

Chicago, June 18.—Unless an unexpected thunder shower should spoil calculations the seventeenth American derby will be run over a fast track this afternoon. Turf experts believe that the race will be run in very close to 2:33, the record time for the race, held by The Picket, which went the distance in that time last year. As the time for the race approaches it seems likely that there will be some added starters. Edward Corrigan, owner of Gus Strauss has not decided whether or not to start his colt.

Despite the "no betting" system at the track, English Lad is expected to go to the post a top heavy favorite. Several big bookmakers expect to accommodate the big betters by the sign system, where a wink and a nod may mean the gain or loss of thousands. The price of 4 to 5 probably will be the post odds, with Moharib and Highball, at about 5 to 2.

The conditions are all that can be expected for a monster crowd and preparations to handle more than 50,000 have been made.

The list of probable starters is as follows, giving the odds, horse, owner, weight and jockey:

2 to 1, English Lad, Fred Cook, 127, Dominick.

3 to 1, Moharib, J. W. Schorr, 125, Shaw.

3 to 1, Highball, W. M. Scheftel, 122, Fuller.

6 to 1, Fort Hunter, N. Dymont, 125, Wonderly.

8to 1, Rapid Water, J. A. Drake, 122, Lyne.

10 to 1, Bill Curtis, H. Griffin, 119, Oliphant.

20 to 1, Elwood, Mrs. N. E. Durnell, 127, Prior.

20 to 1, Proceeds, S. S. Brown, 125, Helgesen.

25 to 1, Woodson, L. B. Dickerson, 122, J. Conley.

40 to 1, Brand New, Woodson & Buckner, 112, B. Davis.

40 to 1, Proofreader, W. S. Williams, 122, Sykes.

50 to 1, Rainland, Mrs. M. Goldblatt, 125, C. Gray.

50 to 1, Merry Pioneer, E. R. Bradley, 122, C. Kelly.

60 to 1, Copper, S. C. Wagner, 115; ——.

100 to 1, Gus Straus, E. Corrigan, 115, J. Daly.

150 to 1, Volney, J. Tevis, 122, ——.

Today brought out two added starters, Copperfield, owned by J. B. Respess, and Mayor David S. Rose, owned by J. L. Slaughter, a colored man from Milwaukee.

Almost at the last moment it was announced that Proof Reader and Rainland were scratched.

The City Without Strikes.

San Francisco presents an extraordinary and significant new phase of the labor problem. For two years past, while other cities have been having serious industrial conflicts, not one of importance has occurred there. With the introduction of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, over fifty years ago, a new phase in curing stomach ills was presented, and during those years it has demonstrated its wonderful curative powers so conclusively that it is now recognized everywhere as the leading family medicine in the world. For poor appetite, coated tongue, bad breath, sour stomach, constipated bowels, indigestion, dyspepsia, insomnia, or malaria fever and ague, the Bitters is unequalled. Be sure to try it. The genuine has our private stamp over the neck of the bottle.

COMPLAINTS OF MILITIA.

Interfering With Relief Work and Mistreat Storekeeper.

Denver, June 18.—Messages have been received at the headquarters of the Western Federation of Miners in this city telling of interference by the military with relief work among the families of deported miners in Cripple Creek. Mrs. Sophie King telephoned that she had been called before the military and ordered hereafter to give aid only through the military. Information also was received that the military had attempted to sweat John Harper, the union storekeeper at Victor, by putting a rope around his neck. It is said this was done in presence of Gen. Bell. As a result of the order that aid shall be given only through the military the federation has been compelled to send money direct to those in need.

In addition to the suit which will be filed against the governor and state of Colorado for the imprisonment of President Moyer, a suit is also in contemplation against Captain Moore, who commanded the militia before Gen. Bell arrived at Victor.

ALL SAFE AND SOUND.

The Danish Literary Greenland Expedition.

All who have followed the fortunes of the latest Danish expedition to the Arctic will be glad to hear that the party is safe and back in South Greenland. The expedition was unique in its main purpose, has been remarkable in one of its achievements, and for months its friends were very anxious for its safety.

When last heard from before its return to civilization the party was stranded on a desolate little island in the North Water, northwest Greenland, and was solely dependent upon the Esquimaux of the neighboring mainland for food. One of its members was very ill, and two whalers had refused to take the party back to Europe.

The people of Greenland named it the "Danish Literary Greenland Expidition," and this is the name it has borne. It is probably the first time that the word "literary" has been applied to a party of geographical travelers, and the name does not suggest very serious geographical purpose. In this respect its name did injustice to the serious aim, the actual achievement and the sufferings of the expidition; but its record will prove again that there is little in a name if the man or men who bear it are all right.

The Literary Expedition, small but very select, left Copenhagen in June, 1902. It did not go primarily for geographic discovery, but its chief purpose was to collect the best material of all kinds for a general description of the island and its people which should be both good reading and scientifically accurate. Mr. Mylius Erichsen, the leader, was to be its historian. Count Harald Moltke, the painter, who won distinction by his paintings of the Aurora Borealis, was to take charge of the pictorial treatment of the volume. Knud Rasmussen, who was born in Greenland, and is a master of the Esquimaux language, was interpreter with the special duty of collecting Esquimau folk lore song. Dr. Bertelson, the physician, was assigned to the making of botanical and ornithological collections and the carrying out of a series of anthropological measurements and other studies of the people.

The party arrived at Godthaab in midsummer, and Mr. Erichsen sent home an excellent account of its experiences. The explorers shared the free, open air life of the Esquimaux, sailing, canoeing, or shooting with them along the mountainous, fiord-pierced coasts of West Greenland. They also did excellent geographical work, and were able to correct the existing maps in some particulars. Pushing through the costal mountains they reached the summit of a "nunatak" or mountain surrounded by inland ice, and from a height of 3000 feet above the sea they found that the inner ice between two of the great fiords lay a lower country of lakes and rivers that receive the waters of the ice cap. They also discovered two rows of nunataks forming virtually two consecutive mountain ranges that have not been shown on existing maps.

Soon after sunrise in February, 1903, after wintering in the colony of Jacobshaven, the party started on sledges for the most northern white colony of Upernivik, and from that far northern settlement, Erichsen, Rasmussen and Moltke set out on sledges on March 24, along the coast of Melville bay for Cape York. Dr. Bertelson, whose health was impaired, was compelled to return to Europe, and only three men started on this venturesome trip to the North.

This was a journey that had never before been made, and the geographic results are likely to be important. The coast of Melville bay, bending like a bow to the north and northwest, has long been known as one of the unmapped stretches of the Greenland shore line. The outline of Greenland could not be accurately shown till this unmapped shore and several other stretches of coost had been laid down on the charts. Many vessels have crossed Melville bay and explorers have returned from Smith Sound by rowboat, but they never followed the shore line. Peary was the first to lift the veil, for one of his sledge journeys mapped the northern half of the coast. But the southern half remained in obscurity. The Danish literary expedition is the first to follow that coast line, hundreds of miles in length, all the way by sledge, and its work, it is expected, will supply the data needed to complete the map of the entire western coast of Greenland.

We next heard of the party upon the return to Scotland of two Dundee whalers, under Capts. Milne and Adams, who found the xplorers on June 26 last year in camp on the small Saunders island, north of Cape York. The news the whalers brought back aroused the liveliest apprehensions. The three white men were living in a state of utter destitution, and were wholly dependent upon the friendly and hospitable Esquimaux for their food. Count Moltke was very ill and scarcely able to walk. The Danes begged the whalers to take them aboard and carry them back to Europe, but their request was denied.

This was a hard thing to do in view of the perilous condition of the men. Some German geographers have bitterly criticised the whaling captains for their apparent inhumanity. But there are two sides to the question. Of late years these whalers, as a rule, have refused to carry passengers, because their insurance policies stipulate that they shall not do so, and they might be vitiated if this condition were not obeyed. Then they were on their way to the whaling grounds, far to the west, and they do not like to carry strangers with them during their season of activity.

Though they resufsed to receive the party the whalers gave them some supplies and material with which to build a boat. They also told them that supplies had been left at Dalrymple rock, only a short distance away, for Capt. Amundsen, who was on his way to carry out his purpose of relocating the position of the magnetic pole. The fact that he had not yet arrived aroused solicitude in Denmark, which has only just been relieved by the news from the literary party that Amundsen arrived later and gave them further assistance.

It had been feared that the Danes would attempt to leave the island, where they had taken refuge last fall, and that they perished in the terrific weather that is known to have prevailed in those waters. It was hoped that they decided to spend another winter with the Esquimaux. We do not yet know how or when they returned to the Danish settlements in South Greenland, but the news that they are there and in good health relieves all anxiety, and we may expect some interesting literature from this small expedition.

KENTUCKY COAL FIELDS.

They Are Said to Be Rich and Extensive.

The United States geological survey has recently published an interesting paper on the Cumberland Gap coal field in the southeastern part of Kentucky. Although replete with valuable information in regard to the geology and numerous veins of coal in that locality, it is merely a preliminary abstract of a more detailed report which will be prepared under a cooperative arrangement between the United States Geological Survey and that of the state of Kentucky. The field work, from which the data given in this paper was derived, was done by Mr. George H. Ashley, of the United States geological survey. The territory embraced in the division known as the Cumberland Gap coal field is one of the richest mineral sections of the state. It lies between the Pine and Cumberland mountains, and extends from Fork mountain, south of Middlesboro, to the head of Poor and Clover forks of Cumberland river, embracing an area ninety miles long and from fifteen to twenty miles in width. The territory was quite fully explored by the Geological Survey of Kentucky before the Middlesboro branch of the Louisville & Nashville railroad, which crosses from Pineville to Cumberland Gap, was built. In fact, it was this valuable work of the survey, executed nearly twenty years ago, and the reports concerning it officially published, which led to the extension of the road and to the settlement of Middlesboro. As to the latter, the attention of certain English capitalist was first attracted to Kentucky as a field for exploitation by the mineral exhibit of the state survey at the New Orleans World's Fair of 1885. Not long afterward a development and town site company was formed by them, which, despite the financial crisis of 1892-93, entailing stagnation for several years and heavy individual losses, has led to very valuable economic results.

While the reports of the Kentucky geological survey were valuable as demonstrating the existence of many workable strata of coal, of great commercial worth, they were more in nature of preliminary surveys, blazing the way for the practical development which followed says the Louisville Courier-Journal. The paper of Mr. Ashley gives the result of this work in detail, with more specific description of the various coal seams and the industrial progress of the territory. He reports that in Log mountain, which lies southeast of Middlesboro, have been found at least forty coal beds, thirteen of which are of workable thickness. Of these, eight are now worked on a commercial scale. The production of coal in the vicinity of Middlesboro has reached an annual output of from 600,000 to 1,000,000 tons, while the statistics furnished by the reports of the State Inspector of Mines show that from this and the adjacent fields opened by the construction of the railroad, nearly one-half of Kentucky's output of coal of over 6,000,000 tons has been derived, where previous to that time none had been mined except for local use.

Owing to the lack of railroad facilities, the development of this field has been comparatively limited, being confined to the region adjacent to Middlesboro. In the vicinity of this thrifty center, where were early constructed one or two furnaces for the reduction of iron ores found on the south side of the Cumberland mountains, in Tennessee, several mining towns have sprung up, where many miners find employment. In addition to mining, the making of coke is a large industry, both this product and the coal finding a ready market the year round, so that the mines run regularly summer and winter. Part of the coal is consumed in the iron furnaces in Middlesboro, while the rest is sent to the copper smelters at Ducktown, Tenn., and other parts of the South, as well as North. There is, however, a large part of this valuable coal field which has been too long neglected. On the Cumberland, along both the Poor and Clover Forks, are valuable coals which for the need of railroads are as yet wholly undeveloped. There are also forests of commercial timber, unexcelled in any part of the state, neglected for the same reason, the output of which is limited to logs cut near the streams and floated down on tide to mills on the main river, near Pineville and points below. With the construction of railroads up these valleys, the conditions in that overlooked region are most favorable for both mining and manufacturing industries.

It is gratifying to realize that with the establishment of a geological survey in Kentucky, by the action of the last legislature, there will be a revival of active work and co-operation with United States geological survey, tending to the development of this portion of Kentucky. The whole region has already been topographically mapped by the United States, showing the streams, mountains, roads and relative elevations, and needs but the placing upon these maps of the correct geological materials awaiting development, to stimulate capital in the work of getting them a market.

But there is still another very essential work required. This is the exploration and definement of the very rich iron deposits which will sooner or later be found to exist in the east side of the Cumberland and the west side of the Pine mountain. They have been satisfactorily explored and found to exist in Tennessee, near LaFollette, where an iron furnace has been erected, and south of Cumberland Gap, where ore is procured for the furnace at Middlesboro, as also farther north, at Big Stone Gap. As the geological formation on the west side of Pine mountain conforms with and is a repetition of that on the east side of Pine mountain, there is reasonable assurance that both the Oriskany, or brown, and the red hematite, will be found overlying the subcarboniferous limestone in the stretch between Pound Gap and Pineville, if not farther south. Sections of this great uplift, which includes both ranges, according to Profs. Shaler and Procter, indicate the existence of these ores, not only near the base of bothe these mountains, but underlying the entire uplift, far below the coal. The deposit conforms to those of Birmingham, which is situated near the southern terminus of the Appalachian uplift, and there is every geological indication that careful exploration will develop its presence as indicated. If found, it would make this region, with the combination of iron and coal, without a rival in this country.

THE SKELETON IN ARMOR.

It has long been the desire of the Women's Educational and Industrial society of Fall River to commemorate the discovery in 1831 of the skeleton in armor referred to in Longfellow's famous poem, and its efforts have at last been crowned with success. A bronze tablet twenty-four inches in length and twenty inches in width has been placed in the brick building on Hartwell street which occupies the site of the finding of the skeleton, says the New York Tribune.

According to the story told by Miss Susan H. Wixon, president of the society, Hannah Borden Cook, the discoverer of the skeleton, was a resident of Fall River. On the morning of the discovery she had been busily engaged in spring housecleaning, and everything was as clean and sweet as limewash, paint and hard work could make it. The pewter, brass and tinware only remained to be scoured, and Hannah went in search of clean, white scouring sand to the "sandbank" well and favorably known in olden times to housewives far and near. The spot was between Fourth and Fifth streets in those days, but it is now covered by dwelling houses and other buildings. Suddenly, as she scooped the white, dry sand, Hannah's hand came in contact with some hard, dry substance. Hastily pushing aside the sand which covered it, she was horrified at seeing a grinning human skull lying there in the warm sunshine, face upward. Hastening homeward, she told her husband, William Cook, and with his friend, John Orswell, he hurried to the spot.

On being unearthed the object was found to be the skeleton of a human being, clothed in brass armor and buried in a sitting posture, facing the east. The bones were those of a tall, large framed man. The knees were drawn up toward the breast and the forearms were drawn to the shoulders. From the head down the figure was wrapped in a sort of shroud of woven bark, seven varieties having been used in its construction. All of it, however, crumbled to dust and vanished on exposure to the air. The armor upon the skeleton was made of fine brass, thin, flat and triangular in shape. These arrows were in a sort of quiver of bark, which dropped to pieces on exposure to the air.

The skeleton was carefully examined by local physicians—Dr. Wilbur and Dr. Glazier—who came to the conclusion that it was that of an Indian, and that it had lain in the ground one hundred and fifty years. The bones were gathered up and, with the brass arrow tips, were placed in a case with a glass cover and deposited in the Fall River Athenaseum. There the skeleton lay in state, an object of interest to all beholders, until destroyed by the great fire of 1843.

In connection with the identical spot where the skeleton was found a tragedy occurred a few years later in the life of Hannah Cook, the discoverer. Her little eleven year old boy while playing there lost his life. Through the caving in of the bank he and a small companion were suffocated.

THE GRAIN MARKETS

Wheat Started Higher But Turned Weak and Declined.

Flax Trading Was Dull and the Market Irregular.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 18.—The wheat market opened higher this morning under the influence of higher cables and a large decrease in Australian shipments, but the favorable weather conditions caused it to decline steadily.

The Liverpool market is firmer, closing today with an advance of ½d, but the American markets did not follow, and closed with lower prices. In Chicago the July was unchanged, but in Duluth it was off ½c, in Minneapolis ⅝-½c, and in New York, 1-1½c. Foreign buyers are a little uneasy over the lighter shipments this week and are buying some wheat. Duluth exporters this morning sold 15 loads of Manitoba wheat for shipment abroad. The Russian and Roumanian advices are also disturbing foreign buyers. The London market closed ⅛d lower to ¼d higher and Paris ¼c lower.

Car receipts at Duluth were 77 against 60 last year, and at Minneapolis 208 against 182 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 285 against 242 last year. Chicago received 16 against 12 last year. Winnipeg receipts were 112 against 130 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 297,000 bus, last year 222,600 bus. Shipments 511,-000 bus, last year 125,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 154,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ⅛@¼d lower. In the Chicago July corn closed ¼c lower. July oats closed ¾-¼c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 485,000 bus, last year 958,000 bus. Shipments 644,000 bus, last year 230,000 bus. Clearances were 37,-000 bus.

Trading in wheat on the Duluth board was very light. The July option opened ¼c higher at 93c and from that point fell off steadily, dropping to 92⅛c at 11:15. It then stiffened to 92¼c at 11:20 and closed at that point, a loss for the day of 1c. The September option was firmer closing with an advance of ¼c.

Cash offerings were fairly liberal and for No. 1 northern July price was paid.

Flax was dull. July sold ¼c higher to $1.05⅝ and closed ½c lower at $1.09. The September option also closed ¼c lower while October was ¼c higher.

Oats fell ½c. Rye is in no demand and the price is down to 55c nominal, which is 10c lower than the bid price of a few days ago.

Following were the closing prices on the Duluth board:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Firmness Marked Wheat Prices From Several Causes.

Chicago, June 18.—Higher cables and a large decrease in Australian shipments caused firmness in wheat today. The principal demand came from large short interests, but there was a fair commission house demand. July opened 1⅛@⅛c to ⅝c higher at 88¾ to 88⅝@⅞c. There was considerable realizing on favorable weather conditions, resulting in a decline of 8¼@⅝c, but a rally to 88⅜@⅝c followed. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 307 cars, against 210 cars last week and 254 cars a year ago.

Trading continued listless the entire session, the demand being very light in the face of perfect weather conditions. Small traders were inclined to even up trades over Sunday. After selling down to 88¼c, July closed unchanged at 88⅝@⅞c.

Strength of wheat offset lower cables in the corn market, resulting in a firm undertone. Trading was light and mostly for local account. July opened a shade lower to ⅛c higher at 48⅝@½c to 48½c, sold off to 48¼c and rallied to 48⅝c. Local receipts were 364 cars, with 36 of contract grade.

In sympathy with wheat the market became weak later in the day. After touching 47⅝c, July closed at a loss of ½c at 47⅞c.

Oats were steady on a fair commission house demand. The market received the best support from the strength of wheat. July opened a shade up at 38⅞c, sold at 38¾ and held steady at 38¾@⅞c. Local receipts were 94 cars.

Provisions were barely steady as a result of moderate profit-taking. Small receipts of hogs and higher prices at the yards were influences apparently ignored by the majority of traders. September pork opened 2½@5c higher at $12.77½, sold off to $12.75 and rallied to $12.82½. September lard was unchanged at $6.97½. Ribs were down 2½ at $7.40.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Kansas City wires: A year ago at this time Kansas City had contracted 3,000,000 bushels of new wheat for future shipment. This year there is a rumor of 50,000 bus. being worked but no cash handler can figure out how it could be done at these prices. The weather is fine in the territory where cutting has begun and people are figuring on new wheat here in liberal quantities by July 10.

• • •

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Market unchanged to ¼c higher. Liverpool was ¼d higher on small world's shipments. This caused some strength here and some covering of shorts. Cash prices still have a declining tendency and a movement of the new crop is getting nearer day by day. With good weather in this country the initiative of an advance must, we think, come from abroad. European supplies are very plentiful and it will take something rather drastic in the way of a crop outlook to sustain an advancing market.

Corn—It was a very dull market and seemed influenced by the higher temperatures and fine weather. There was nothing very urgent in the cash situation either way, but perhaps a little increase in country offerings and the speculative operations are small and featureless. Any great improvement in crop prospects might increase country offerings, and we think it will, but until then we rather look for a scalping market.

Oats—There was selling of July oats by Patten houses and this caused some scattered liquidation. The volume of business is small. So far there is no improvement in the movement and the receipts meet with a fair cash demand.

Provisions—The market is a hesitating one. Packers are trading on both sides. The position is, in our judgment, a very doubtful one. We are inclined to think after so material an advance we would take profits on the hard spots.

• • •

Chicago Record Herald: Figured on the basis of September, the lowest basis now possible, there is a difference between Chicago and an export price to Liverpool of 2⅝c on No. 1 northern wheat, and of 5½c on No. 2 hard winter. The July differences, of course, are too far away to be thought of in the matter of export. The Liverpool September basis, which is ⅞c to 1c higher than the July, is equal to 75½c for No. 1 northern and to 73¾c for No. 2 hard winter in store, Chicago. The best shipping bids drawn from abroad on rye at New York yesterday were equal to 57c f. o. b. there, and is equal to 49c in store here. There was one sale yesterday of July, enough to establish a market at 60 cents. The September was practically 55c. The local stocks of rye is 45,000 bushels, while the supply at New York is 150,000 bushels, and at Buffalo 180,000 bushels. All of this, except a few carloads lots, is presumably held by one man. Offerings of new rye for July delivery are now being made from the country and the rye market, therefore, presenting much the same problem as the wheat and calling for a parting down of premiums.

• • •

The Argentine correspondent of the Northwestern Miller estimates that on May 29 there was 40,000,000 bus of wheat and 12,000,000 bus of flax available there for export. These estimates aggregate the exports on the crop at 90,000,000 bus of wheat and 36,000,000 bushels of flax.

B. E. Baker's Chicago grain letter: Wheat—Liverpool cables came unexpectedly higher and considerably anticipated light world's shipments Monday and unfavorable Russian and Argentine crop advices. Local operators were short over night and were quick to cover at the opening, making a strong market the first hour. Trade and interest dwindled in the absence of anything further in the news to maintain bullish enthusiasm. Weather fine and forecast contained no unfavorable features. Cash demand is slow. Liverpool closed ½d higher. Estimated world's shipments Monday, 8,800,000. Estimated receipts, 23 cars for Monday.

Corn was in the hands of pit traders. Prices held firm until wheat weakened. Estimates for Monday were larger than anticipated and this with further liquidation of July carried prices off sharply. We expect a falling off in receipts before long. Cash demand is still poor. Estimated, 440 cars for Monday.

Oats—There was small trade in oats with the only feature being further liquidation in the July. The deferred futures held relatively firm. The cash situation continues strong and crop prospects bright. Estimated, 94 cars.

Provisions—Provisions held firm on a moderate trade. The undertone was strong and the market looks to be a purchase on the breaks. Estimated for Monday, 40,000.

ADVANCE IN STOCKS

Tone Intensely Dull and No Feature In the Trading.

The Closing Was Strong With Net Fractional Advances.

New York, June 18.—But few stocks today varied more than an eighth from last night's prices on the opening quotations and gains and losses were mixed. Dealings were small and insignificant except for the sale of 2000 shares of Southern Pacific at a decline of an eighth. An advance of ⅝ in St. Paul was the largest change.

Southern Pacific receded ½ before support was encountered. On the rebound, the stock became quieter but sold ⅛ above yesterday's closing. The market generally eased off after the opening and hardened when Southern Pacific rallied. Amalgamated Copper moved up ¾ on increased dealings. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred lost 1½ and Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred 1⅜.

The market drifted very sluggishly until the final dealings, when prices hardened, Southern Pacific, rising to 45¼. Northern Central jumped 6 points, Northwestern rose 1¼ and New York Central, Amalgamated Copper and Wheeling & Lake Erie second preferred 1. There were declines of 2 in New York dock and 1¼ in Metropolitan Securities. Southern Pacific lost about all its rise in the last few minutes and the closing was irregular.

STOCK GOSSIP

T. A. McIntyre & Co. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The underlying conditions of the general market are becoming more favorable and the outlook for the future is now much brighter than at any time for the past several months, and we feel that the situation is an improving one, and as a consequence, we have come to the conclusion that purchases of any of the better class stocks of tried merit, especially the trunk lines and the grangers and the general railroad list, can now be bought with comparative safety for moderate turns on any further weakness or decline in the general market. There is nothing at the moment to suggest the probability of any immediate revival of active bull speculation or any sharp advance in prices, but the fact that the market seems to have become hardened or callous to further bad news, such as the passing of the dividend on Minneapolis & St. Louis the past week, and the reduction in the dividend on Lake Erie & Western preferred, and the absence of any further extensive selling pressure, is an indication that the general market is pretty well sold out and has discounted what bearishness there is left in the discussion of poor earnings and the extent of a reaction in general business and the consequent effect upon the iron and steel and bituminous coal and dry goods markets. We therefore, are now, probably not far from the turning spot for the better, especially as we note a rather general tendency upon the part of financiers and the generality of operators to look for the bright spots. There will become more apparent within the course of the next two or three weeks.

• • •

Evans to Paine, Webber & Co: The Southern Pacific stock issue is still the dominating factor in the market and continues to be very generally condemned. Prices yesterday remained fairly steady until the last half hour, when a fresh outburst of liquidation and short selling in Southern Pacific caused weakness throughout. Sentiment is again changing from the bull to the bear side. Railroad earnings so far received for June show very considerable improvement over last year, but general business continues in a depressing condition. It looks to me as if the little bull movement of the past few weeks culminated on day before yesterday and although I do not look for any immediate decline, I think that stocks are a sale on all rallies.

• • •

W. T. Carrington to B. E. Baker: I have talked with some of the best posted men on the street, and they generally look upon the Southern Pacific deal favorably. One remarked if they had made an issue of gold dollars the trade would have sold them down. I see nothing to change my views on the market.

• • •

Randolph to Paine, Webber & Co.: Some further selling in Southern Pacific at opening this morning under which the stock declined to the lowest price on this movement. There did not seem to be much of the stock pressing for sale, however, and in a very short time a covering movement set in, which carried the price up over a point. The rest of the market hardened but the tone was intensely dull and there was no feature in the trading. Railway earnings for the second week of June which are coming to hand are generally very favorable, as they compare with a week last year in which flood damage was quite extensive. The market closed very dull but strong with fractional net advances.

• • •

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is very dull, very firm and a shade higher than yesterday. The bank statement was again favorable, showing accumulation in funds and a continued expansive tendency. There was an active trade in Southern Pacific. The offerings seemed to be well taken. We see no reason to change our views on the conditions or outlook. Think both the present situtionand the prospects will force a continued investment buying of the good dividend paying stocks, which later will extend to the less desirable ones.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Almost everybody was looking for a declining market today and the renewed support given Southern Pacific and other stocks came as a surprise. The feeling now is that the plan is to gradually restore public confidence by working prices higher. Some very bright reports are buying stocks. Copper metal is stronger. It is rumore that Lake is now 13⅝ bid. Best selected has advanced 15 shillings in London within three days. Amalgamated Copper is acting better. All the coppers ought to do better.

New York to Paine, Webber & Co.: The Financial Bureau says: There is a dearth of copper mining development going on at present too little to warrant the belief that the past average increase in production can be maintained during the next five or ten years. Therefore, unless there is a decided decline in consumption the price of copper more than holds up its present level, it must advance.

Paine, Webber & Co.: The Financial Bureau says: A Boston expert sums up the copper situation as follows: The world's output of copper is now near 1,300,000,000 pounds annually. A normal increase of six per cent annually, will call for 79,000,000 of new copper next year and more still in each succeeding year. This is equivalent to the output of a Calumet and Hecla, a Boston and Montana or a Rio Tinto.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 18.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 5@23 points on the old crop and of 3@10 points on the new crop position or fully as high as warranted by the firmer Liverpool cables. Weather conditions remained nearly perfect, and following the call the market ruled rather easier, particularly as to the old crop months which came in for a reneval of liquidation and pressure from leading room operators. The new crop, however, held fairly steady on moderate covering for over Sunday, notwithstanding the favorable character of the weather forecast. Business was very quiet and after breaking to about 10.95 for July and 10.55 for August, the market showed little tendency either way, all new crop positions holding near the opening figures. Cotton futures closed steady: June, 10.87; July, 10.97; August, 10.60; September, 9.89; October, 9.62; November, 9.55; December, 9.66; January, 9.63.

STEAMER ASHORE

G. Watson French Goes on the Rocks Near Lester River.

Released After Few Hours and Is Apparently Uninjured.

The steamer G. Watson French, Capt. L. W. Young, with 6000 tons of coal for the Ohio Fuel company as a cargo, went on the rocks just off the mouth of Lester river about 10:15 o'clock this morning. She was released at 1:45 o'clock this afternoon by the tugs Superior, Helm and Excelsior, which had been working to release her since a half hour after she grounded. The French is owned by C. W. Elphicke, of Chicago.

The boat was lying less than 200 feet from the shore, with her bow apparently in about fifteen feet of water, while her stern was free to swing with the united efforts of the tugs.

It is thought that the accident was due to the fact that, with the wind blowing as it was this morning, there was difficulty on board the boat in catching the foghorn signals from the Duluth entry, for which the French was heading. Shortly before striking she passed the bow of the Huronic, Capt. Foote, which was also making for the Duluth entry.

"The French was so close that I could plainly hear her revolving screw, but because of the fog I could not make out her outline," says Capt. Foote. "She signaled that she would pass to starboard, and did so. She was then heading northwest. We were less than three miles out at the time, but could hear only the signals from the horn at the Superior entry. I threw the lead overboard and found we were in thirteen fathoms of water. In a few minutes I caught the Duluth fog signal, and from that on had no trouble in locating the entry."

The French is a new boat, built last year at West Bay City, Mich. She is 356 feet long, 50 feet beam and 28 feet deep.

As far as could be seen from her actions when released from the rocks, the French was uninjured. She floated all right and was towed into the harbor. When the boat is unloaded she will either be taken to the drydock for examination, or a diver will inspect her bottom to determine just how much she was damaged by contact with the rocks. In either case she will remain in the drydock until the injured plates are repaired, provided the injury is regarded as serious.

BETTER INQUIRY FOR REAL ESTATE

Somewhat Better Tone to the Market, Though There Is Not Much Activity—Excursion Brings In Many Visitors Who Look Into Farm Land Inducements—Twin City Realty Men Coming Next Week.

With a little stronger inquiry this week, the local realty market has not the record of any important sales made, though several of the dealers are closing negotiations involving small amounts today.

During the past week there have been a large number of visitors in the city, and some of these have taken advantage of the opportunity offered to call on the real estate brokers and make inquiry as to city property and the advantages offered for investments. As a result, the agencies have been busy showing property and answering questions. Whether anything will come of the information given remains to be seen.

• • •

The anticipated visit here, next Tuesday and Wednesday, of the members of the real estate exchanges of the Twin Cities is an event that the local real estate men are making preparations for. The Twin City realty dealers are to take advantage of the low rates given on the railways in event of the state Democratic convention to come to the head of the lakes and look over the real estate field. Some of them have not been hr in years, and the idea of the visit is that they will get in closer touch with Duluth as a field for investment.

The local real estate men will make special effort to make the visit a pleasant one, and the plans of entertainment include a boat ride about the harbor and a banquet at the Commercial club rooms. The Commercial club will co-operate with the realty men in the entertainment of the visitors.

The junket of the Twin City real estate men to Duluth will have special significance, and the results may be for reaching. The local men engaged in the realty business have every confidence in the future of the city, and know that it offers at the present time one of the best fields for investment of any city in the Northwest, if they can convince their Twin City brethren in the same opinion it is believed that the local business will receive a stimulus for the summer and coming fall business.

• • •

Farm land business, which experienced a period of quiet for the past two months, is already picking up and the indications point toward a lively movement of new lands during the summer. This is probably due to the fact that a great many of the farmers from older portions of the state are now coming to the city on the cheap excursions and while here they use their time advantageously in looking up and negotiating for acreage. Of course not all that make the inquiries will buy St. Louis county lands, but the special inducements which can be offered by the farm land dealers in Northern Minnesota counties have a strong attraction to the practical farmers from the Southern part of the state and they rarely ever miss the opportunity of bettering themselves.

Through these popular excursions from the farming portions of the states it is expected that an immense amount of good will result indirectly to Duluth for the reason that it will bring farmers here to look up new lands and, if they purchase, the chances are ten to one that they will sell out their already cultivated farms and locate on new grounds. It is taken to mean a long step toward the future development of the agricultural possibilities of St. Louis and adjoining counties. Instances are not frequent where farmers who came here merely for a pleasure trip have been interested in Northern Minnesota lands and purchased tracts of new land.

• • •

Sckstein & Eby report the following sales closed: A house on East Seventh street, for $1050; lot on East Fifth street, for $850; lot on West Fourth street, near Twentieth avenue, for $900; lot on West Second street, near Nineteenth avenue, for $500. The firm has earnest money on two other deals likely to be closed within a few days, and has negotiated a couple of loans in the week just closed.

• • •

"There is plenty of small business to be had at the present time," said a local real estate broker this week, "but there are no large sales being negotiated, in fact, it seems that the men with money are not inclined to buy any property just now. The building loan business has been quite active and some of those people who have had the money to loan and are right here on the ground to watch the loan, have been placing about all that they cared to."

• • •

Favorable weather during the past week has resulted in the contract construction work being pushed along very fast. Especially is this true of the foundation work for the new Lennox hotel for Ribenack Bros. and the Masonic Temple at Lake avenue and Second street. In both places considerable rock has been encountered in the excavating. The work on the Masonic Temple will have to be hurried in order that the foundation will be ready for the corner stone laying July 4.

• • •

Among the larger transfers of the week has been that of Mary Kelleher to the Fitger Brewing company of two lots in Hibbing for $14,000.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Financial Troubles of a Baltic Firm to Be Aired.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—The financial troubles of Thompson & Juve, of Baltic, will have an airing before Capt. A. B. Wheelock, trustee, of this city, on June 27. T. Thompson is ordered to show cause why an order should not be issued authorizing the sale of certain property belonging to Thompson & Juve upon which he has a mortgage. T. Thompson is not a member of the firm, but is the holder of a mortgage executed by the members of the firm, which the creditors desire shall be sold for their benefit. A petition was filed in the United States court in this city some weeks ago by creditors of the two men composing the firm, asking that they be adjudged involuntary bankrupts.

Lewis Mann, of Sioux Falls, has filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in the United States court in this city. He places his liabilities at $1708.03 and assets at $229.

Yankton—The thirtieth annual session of the grand lodge, A. F. & A. M., for South Dakota, has adjourned. Many Masons and Star members left Friday, but some places have been taken by the delegates to the grand chapter of the Royal Arch Masons, which have elected the following officers: Grand high priest, George H. Perry, Sioux Falls; deputy, John H. Kutnewsky, Redfield; king, A. C. Birvemtzki, Salem; scribe, John A. Cleaver, Huron; treasurer, C. B. Jacobs, Lenox; secretary, George A. Pettigrew, Sioux Falls; chaplain, Rev. John L. Babcock, Sioux Falls.

The grand lodge elected the following: Grand master, Ivan W. Goodner, Pierre; deputy, Edgar D. Brookman, Vermillion; senior grand warden, Charles A. Fisher, Aberdeen; junior grand warden, R. H. McCaughey, Mellette; grand treasurer, John W. Bryan, Plankinton; grand secretary, George A. Pettigrew, Sioux Falls; Aberdeen secured next year's meeting.

Deadwood—The annual meeting of the Lucky Strike Mining company was held this week. The officers elected for the coming year are: A. L. Harris, president, Reedsburg, Wis.; S. B. Soule, vice president, Deadwood; T. Swift, secretary, Minn.; H. Selter, treasurer, Tracy, Minn.; C. A. Allen, general manager, Deadwood. It was decided to erect a 300-ton mill which is to use the wet crushing process. A shaft is down 175 feet and the ore is of millable value. The company owns 313 acres of ground on the Homestake belt.

The last cleanup at the Clover Leaf mill on Elk creek amounted to about $18,000. The mill is running full capacity or sixty stamps. The mine is being operated at the 700-foot level, at which depth the vein has widened to more than twice its size at the 300-foot level.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—There is much rivalry for the honor of representing the district at the national Democratic convention. E. E. Cole, a well known hotel man, M. A. Hildreth, attorney, and C. H. Auhler, an insurance man, are candidates. Cole and Hildreth are said to be against Anheier and if neither of them can go they may throw their support to Carmody, of Traill county.

The street railway promoters have secured a special election in Moorhead for next Tuesday on the question of extending the street car franchise from ten to twenty years. It mas granted for the ten-year period originally and the company wants the extension to harmonize with the franchise on this side.

When the hearing of the case against the women in the tenderloin district was up recently, Judge Pollock made an order closing the places. The houses are still open and five were raided by the officers and the proprietors held under $500 bail, each to show cause why they are not in contempt.

Dickinson—It will cost North Dakota $100,000 this year to dip cattle. The commissioners of the several counties will buy sulphur, lime and tanks. The tanks are being set according to specifications furnished by the chief state veterinarian, Dr. L. Van Es, of Fargo, and the mixing of the dip and the dipping operations will be under the supervision of federal officers, who will issue receipts for each brand of cattle dipped. These receipts will be in the form of certificates and will give the owners of cattle unrestricted shipping privileges in the fall.

The state will collect a fee of 10 cents a head in the unorganized counties, which is estimated to be ample to cover expenses, and it is likely that a similar charge will be collected in the organized counties. Ten carloads of sulphur have already been ordered for North Dakota points, which indicates something of the magnitude of the work being carried on for the eradication of cattle scab.

Dipping will commence generally about July 1, and an army of federal officers is expected from Washington about that time. The work will be thorough and cattle allowed to go out of the state will be clean.

Oakes—The state encampment of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. closed Thursday night. The new officers are: Commander, N. L. Siegfried, Sanborn; senior vice commander, E. R. Kennedy, Ludden; junior vice commander, M. H. Kiff, Tower City; chaplain, R. Crabtree, Ellendale; medical director, J. H. Johnson, Lisbon; delegate-at-large, Henry Beal, Valley City; alternate-at-large, C. W. Barrett, Tower City; delegate, J. B. Ashelman, Fargo; alternate, Roswell Thomas, Lisbon.

The Relief corps elected a President, Monilla D. Johnson, Valley City; senior vice, Elizabeth Porter, Jamestown; junior vice, Annie B. Fay, Oakes; treasurer, Jennie Hollinswad, Valley City; chaplain, Mary A. Crabtree, Ellendale; executive board, Jennie Westergaard, Amanda Freeze, Joseph Folsom, Emily Barrett, Franziska Stormke; delegate-at-large, Susan R. Morrill, Wahpeton; alternate-at-large, Viola Dull, Devils Lake; delegate, Mrs. Black, Valley City; alternate, Lillian R. Hartwell, Wahpeton.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

CHURCH ON WHEELS IN DULUTH THIS SUMMER

The "People's Cathedral" Used By Rev. William Asher.

Will Be at Superior Street and 2nd Avenue West Every Sunday Evening.

The "People's Cathedral," a photograph of which is here reproduced, will become a familiar sight on the streets of Duluth the present summer. It is being used by Rev. William Asher, president of the Duluth Bethel society, and his assistants as a sort of church on wheels, and assists materially in prosecuting the vigorous and novel religious campaign which Mr. Asher has started in what appears to be a successful attempt to reach the masses.

The other scenes here pictured, a group of men being addressed by Mr. Asher in a Bowery saloon, and another group of laborers listening to him on the docks, will also become common in Duluth, for the young minister intends to carry on this effective campaign as long as the warm weather continues. He has already held a number of such meetings, and all have been uniformly successful.

The church on wheels will have different routes during the summer. A regular stand, weather permitting, will be made every Sunday evening at the corner of Superior street and Second avenue west, where Mr. Asher will address the outdoor congregation. He has a very interesting way of talking which makes the street loafers interested in his remarks, so that he need have no fear of being greeted with small crowds.

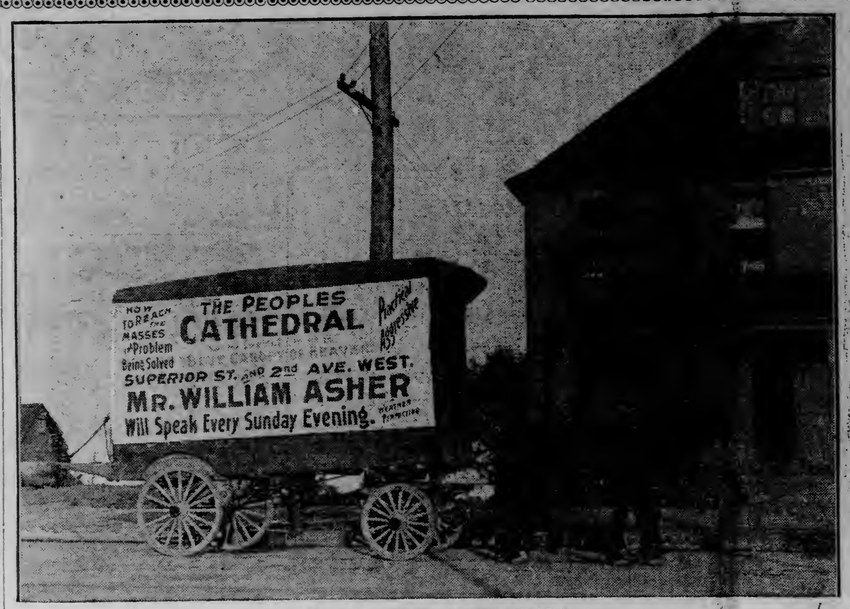

The covered wagon will probably also be used to carry Mr. Asher and his assistants to the ball and circus grounds, or wherever an outdoor crowd is assembled. It is not the minister's aim to intrude where he is not wanted, however, and he will at no time appear at such a gathering without the permission of those having the affair in charge. And when there it will not be his purpose to tire his hearers with a long and tiresome harangue. On such occasions he speaks rationally and in such a manner that his hearers become interested at once. Close attention is given until the close of his remarks.

The minister is ably assisted in the work by Mrs. Asher, who accompanies him on most of his expeditions. She has a pleasing voice and never fails to delight the rough men with her songs. She carries with her to the street and saloon meetings one of the small Towner organs, the music of which makes the services more attractive and church like.

The first meeting of the unusual religious campaign instituted by Mr. Asher was held about two weeks ago in Roy McKenzie's saloon, on the Bowery. Since then other saloon meetings, as well as services on the docks among the men who load and unload the boats, have been held. All have met with great success.

There is scarcely a saloon keeper in Duluth who, with his bartenders, has not been visited by Mr. Asher in the last two weeks. The minister made the rounds of the saloons, introducing himself to the men he found in them, but in none, except on the regular meeting nights, did he linger longer than to shake hands and make a few cordial remarks. He has in this manner gained the friendship of most of these men, and there is probably not one in the lot who would not willingly give the use of a saloon for the holding of religious services.

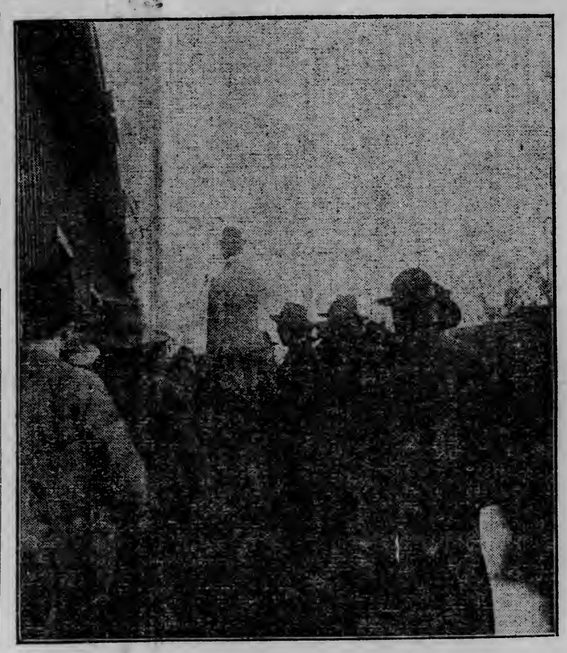

Mr. Asher does not confine his efforts to Duluth alone, but occasionally pays a visit to a nearby town for the purpose of holding services. One such was at Nickerson two Sundays ago. The Duluthian addressed two meetings of saw mill men, in a boarding house and saloon, and was courteously received and listened to respectfully at both places. He was also granted an opportunity to make a few remarks at the Nickerson town hall while a dance was in progress.

LOVE FOR AN ONLY SISTER

Caused the Downfall of Eighteen-Year-Old Lad.

Chicago, June 18.—Love for an only sister and a successful attempt to fit her to be a professional nurse—this at a cost of $400, drawn from his salary of $11 a week—caused the downfall of nineteen-year-old Howard Rhoades of Cleveland, now a prisoner at the county jail on a forgery charge. He yielded to temptation only after he had paid the last penny on his sisters' annual tuition fee of $100. By that time his clothing was reduced almost to rags. At the same time he continued purchasing religious works to keep up his studies for the ministry.

Bearing the jeers and jibes of his working companions for months because of his ragged attire the boy at last forged his employer's name to an order for 30 days for a suit of clothes valued at $14.85. Failure to make good his obligation to pay for the clothes because he lost his position he was arrested on a warrant sworn out by the clothing company.

Rhoades's case is on Judge Clifford's call. He will plead guilty and seek to escape with a short jail sentence.

The youth is the eldest of a family of 10 children, the father being a laborer at Cleveland, Ohio. His only siste, Edith, was ambitious to do her part toward providing a comfortable home for her parents in their old age, and decided to become a professional nurse. She talked over the proposition with her brother, Howard, who undertook to pay her way through the Ohio State university. Small wages at Cleveland caused him to come to Chicago four years ago. At the beginning of the college term that year he paid in advance the first year's fee for his sister. Each succeeding year he gave his sister the $100 necessary for the year. She is in her final year of instruction.

FLAATEN'S JUVENILE ORCHESTRA

FLAATEN'S JUVENILE ORCHESTRA—SOMETHING UNIQUE IN MUSICAL LINE.

Flaaten's Musical Conservatory String orchestra, consisting of over seventy pieces, many of the instruments being in the hands of children under 12 years of age, is an organization of exceptional merit and ability, and one which has of late attracted widespread interest and favorable comment in Duluth.

Little was known of this musical aggregation until the evening of May 26, when it gave a recital of high quality at the Lyceum Opera house, before a large and enthusiastically appreciative audience. The manner in which the several numbers were applauded must have been highly gratifying to Gustav Flaaten, the director. All the selections showed careful training and practice, and several of the violin solos, rendered as they were by mere children, were considered most remarkable. Especially was this true of the work of Edwin Bergh, one of the older pupils. This youth, only 18 years of age, played the beautiful "Romanza," by Svendson, with rare taste and skill. His work shows g reat promise. He is also concert master of the orchestra.

The whole orchestra is one of commendable strength, embracing among its clever young people more than one with unusual talent. At the public performance all acquitted themselves with remarkable credit.

MERE CHARITY.

Modern advertising can cope with the etiquette of courts. M. A. P. tells us that a young American woman wished to be presented at the court of the king of Saxony.

The high officials, having inquired into her social standing at home, objected. They represented to her that the king could scarcely receive the daughter of a retail bootmaker.

The young woman cabled home, and told her father the situation. The next morning she received his answer:

"Can't call it selling. Practically giving them away. See advertisement."

That solved the difficulty. She was presented as the daughter of an eminent philanthropist.

NEW STEEL SHAFT HOUSE

That Has Been Erected at the Pioneer Mine at Ely.

On Same Plan As the Savoy and Sibley Structures.

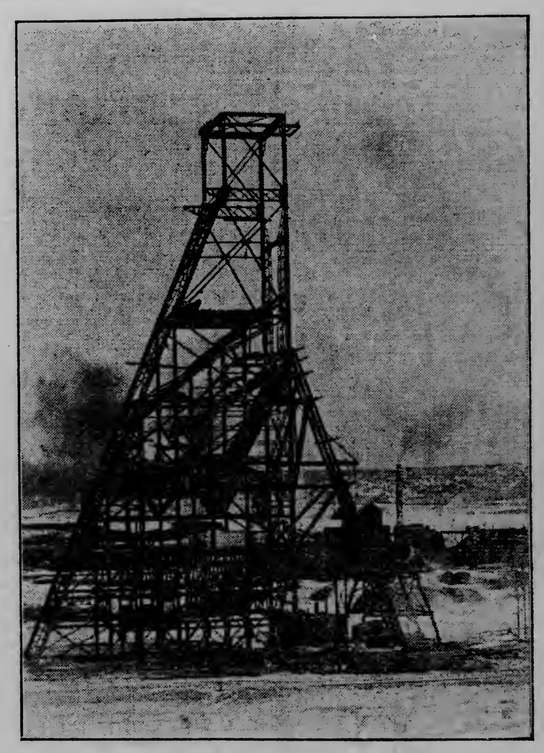

At the Pioneer mine at Ely a new steel shaft house has been finished which is one of the largest in existence. It is at shaft B and is one of the three largest structures of the kind on the iron ranges, those at the Savoy and Sibley mines being of about the same dimensions.

The new shaft is 160 feet and 4 inches in height and was commenced December 3, 1903, although the arrangements for its construction were begun long before that time. There are 30,000 rivets in the framework and the whole weighs 301 tons. The construction of the shaft, which was under the superintendency of Henry Hoke, has gone along smoothly from the inception, and Mr. Hoke has been the recipient of many congratulations on the good work that has been done.

The new shaft house is on the same plan as the Savoy and Sibley structures and is designed with machinery to handle as much as 100,000 tons per month.

Included in the machinery is a double drum hoist put in by the Sullivan Machinery Co., of Chicago, which, with its mate used at the Oliver Iron Mining Co.'s Aragon mine at Norway, Mich., are the largest of the kind ever constructed on the iron ranges. The drum hoist has a capacity of 10 tons and is so arranged that the ore may be lifted from different levels. The machine will have 1000 horse power.

The shaft house has been built on an incline lined with old wire rope, while the entire framing of the shaft is of old rails, which makes the entire shaft and shaft house fireproof.

Word has reached Duluth of the wedding of Miss Edith Shorb, daughter of Mrs. Mrs. J. de Barth Shorb, of San Francisco, and James King Steele to take place at the home of the bride's mother in San Francisco. Mr. Steele is well known in Duluth, where he lived for some time. The Los Angeles Daily Times says of the bride:

"Old residents of Los Angeles will be especially interested in the announcement which comes from the north of the engagement of Miss Edith Shorb, now a resident of San Francisco, and James King Steele, a promising young business man of Sacramento. The date of New York.

MISS DESS McCLARAN,

This charming young woman, who has chosen the stage as her profession, is now visiting her cousin, Miss Adele McClaran, of this city. She has sung in "Winsome Winnie" with Paula Edwards, and has appeared in the productions of "Way Down East" and "Sky Farm." She is now appearing on the concert stage under the management of the Lyceum bureau of New York, and this picture exhibits her in one of the very effective characters assumed in her concert work. Her volce is a soprano of much sweetness and good power. She will remain in Duluth a month.

for the marriage has been fixed, July 18 next, at the residence of Mrs. Shorb on Gough street, San Francisco. Miss Shorb is the daughter of the late J. de Barth Shorb, who, for many years was one of the foremost men in Los Angeles county striving for and always having faith in the success of its future. Mr. Shorb built up many enterprises, and promoted others. He organized and conducted the San Gabriel Wine company, which has given away to the Dolge Felt Factory; was first president of the Monrovia division of the Southern Pacific Railway company, which was a private line before it was absorbed by the Southern Pacific company; and to him the importation of the foreign grapes into the manufactory of wine in Southern California is rightly attributed. He was for many years president of the state board of viticulture.

"On her mother's side Miss Edith Shorb is the granddaughter of B. D. Wilson, who was one of the first Americans to settle in Southern California, crossing the plains as early as 1841, and locating in Los Angeles in 1843, after having spent several years on the grant owned by him where Riverside now stands. There he married the daughter of Don Bernardo Yorba, who owned the adjacent rancho along the Santa Ana river at Yorbe, Orange county. "Don Benito" Wilson, as he was commonly called, was beloved by Mexicans and Americans alike. He built the trail to Mt. Wilson, which bears his name, for the purpose of bringing down lumber from its heights. He accumulated wealth in a general merchandise store which stood on the corner now occupied by the Farmers' and Merchants' bank. The cannon which he took as captain in the war with Mexico, still stands at the corner, where he placed it as a hitching post for this store. Mr. Wilson later moved to San Gabriel, where he died in 1878. He owned from the mountains to the foothills, Pasadena, Alhambra, and the homestead of the Shorbs, now the property of H. E. Huntington. Miss Wilson and Mrs. George S. Patton, the aunts of Miss Shorb, still live at the old Wilson homestead, adjoining the Pasadena country club and the H. E. Huntington ranch. Dr. J. de Barth Shorb is also a brother of Miss Shorb.

"Miss Shorb has never cared for society, but she devoted herself to her mother. Since her father's death and the reverses of fortune that came to the family, she has bravely helped to bear the strain. She is a fine horsewoman and proficient in many athletic diversions."

A WEDDING GUEST FROM THE POOR HOUSE

By Jacob Bretoch.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

An old woman sat silent in a corner of one of the wards in a great poorhouse. Her eyes were on the floor and she was busy with thoughts of other days, when her heart was young and full of love and life and courage; when the future was aglow with brightness and promise. She did not sigh and there was in her face an expression of resignation and patience, if not content.

It was not the evening of life she looked forward to when she was a bonnie, brown-eyed girl, roaming the fields and groves of the old farm, nor when she stood blushing at the altar and put her hand in that of stalwart Robert Mann, nor when she set out bravely with him in search of fortune and happiness in the great city. Ah, no, then all seemed so easy, so certain, so sure. And when little Robert came she had thought surely no shadow could cross their path, for had they not given hostage to fortune? Those were happy days, even though Robert did not get ahead very much so far as money was concerned, and there was much pinching to make the ends meet.

Then had come Robert's long illness, and finally the black day when he had died, leaving her with the boy, then 12 years old, hopelessly in debt and totally unprepared to cope with the world.

She had been such a simple body and had never taken kindly to city ways. So Robert had assumed most of the contact with the world and her life had been almost wholly confined to the little cottage and the little garden back of it. She knew no more of bread-earning than a child. The old father and mother were dead and they had left nothing, the inevitable mortgage having eaten up the old place. For four terrible years she had struggled with the bread-and-butter problem, fighting every inch of the ground and barely keeping the wolf's nose outside the threshold, and this only by keeping the boy constantly at work. This was what hurt her most, because she saw the boy growing up to a life of toil such as had been his father's, unprepared to cope with the world on equal terms. And he was such an unusually bright and ambitious lad, too, and desired so ardently to acquire an education. He had been brave and manly when taken from school and put to work, but had insisted on going to night school. He had early developed a passion for things medical and surgical and the idea of studying medicine took root and grew within him. So whole-hearted did he become in this direction that he attracted the attention of a great physician in the neighborhood, who offered to take the boy under his wing and give him a medical education. At first Robert was wild with delight. Then he suddenly realized that it was impossible. His small earnings were absolutely necessary to keep want away from the squalid little flat, called him. So he manfully declined the offer. In vain did the mother urge him to accept the great opportunity. She could get along, she would live, one way or another. Her wants were few, and, Heaven knows, she was willing to work to the finger bones that he should have this great opportunity.

But he knew her inefficiency to combat the world and resolutely refused to retract his resolution.

It was then that a mighty resolve took possession of the mother heart. She would not be the millstone to keep him down to the life of penury she had known. She would go away and leave him to carve out his career unhindered. She thought it over during many sleepless nights and finally decided in desperation that the poorhouse offered the only sure and safe way. She realized that she was not capable of keeping soul and body together by her own misdirected exertions and she was sure if she attempted to go on working in the great city that Robert would find her—he was so smart. No she must eliminate herself utterly.

And so one morning she had called Robert back as he was leaving for his work and asked him to kiss her once more, and she had clung, trembling and tearful, with both arms about his neck, as she bade him what she knew was to be her last good-bye. She remembered now his kindly, cheery way.

"You're working too hard, mam," he had said. "Now, do go out and get some sunshine and forget all this worry. I'll take care of things all right, now that I have quit dreaming. Cheer up!" And he had pinched her cheek and kissed her.

As soon as he was well away she had gone forth, simply clad and a few hours later had been admitted to the county poorhouse under an assumed name. She knew Robert would make a great fuss searching for her and fearing her own resolution had refused to read the newspapers. Later, although wild to know whether he had gone into medicine under the patronage of the famous physician, she had still feared her strength and not only had not sought information, but resolutely kept away from the newspapers, lest she might read something which would tempt her beyond her strength. She had absolutely eliminated herself from his life.

It was a good seven years later she happened to get hold of an old newspaper and to run across an item telling of the graduation of Robert Mann from a medical school and stating that he would take up practice with the celebrated Dr. ——, whose protege he was. This was a good ten years ago. Robert was now in his early thirties and she wondered wistfully how had gone the battle with her boy. Life was so dreary with her. She cared so little for the petty gossip and the little intrigues of the great sordid institution. In fact, she felt very tired and very old and very hopeless. But she was also very patient and it was with almost a triumphant gleam in her faded eye that she comforted herself for the millionth time with the thought that she had won the fight and given Robert the chance.

As she sat there, filled with these thoughts, a newspaper fluttered from the hands of one sitting near her, as the other hobbled out of the ward. It dropped at her feet and mechanically she picked it up. She glanced at it with dull—almost unseeing eyes. A familiar name caught her attention—his name, Robert Mann, right at the head of the page in big, black type. She wiped her glasses and eagerly read the piece over which the name was. It told of a grand wedding about to occur between Dr. Robert Mann, "the distinguished surgeon, lecturer at the medical university, on the consulting staffs of a dozen hospitals, etc., etc.," and Miss Eunice Rogers, the beautiful daughter of Senator Rogers, a great heiress in her own right, as well as a favorite in exclusive society circles because of her great beauty and wit, etc., etc."

The paper fell from the hands of the old woman at the poorhouse. In her heart welled up a great yearning to see her boy once more before she died and also to see the woman he was to marry—to look in her eyes and determine for herself if the bride was good enough for him. The audacity of the idea startled her, but it grew in her mind until it became an irresistable purpose.

The place and date of the wedding had burned itself into her mind. St. Paul's at 8 o'clock in the evening of June 3. It ran in her mind all day and all that sleepless night. Then she decided to do it.

Yes, she would do it. She would slip away from the poorhouse in the morning and she would quietly step into the church in the evening and see her boy married. It was a great undertaking, she knew, and she did not underestimate the obstacles, but she would be cunning—ah, so cunning, and she would be self-controlled. Then she would return to the poorhouse. They would punish her, she knew, and she would go hungry, but what cared she for that.

On the morning of June 3, when the driver of a big truck with high sides had unloaded his wagon and driven away toward the city, he turned and looked into his wagon and was startled to see an old woman all huddled up in a heap. He was a frank-faced young fellow and when she told him with her soul in her eyes that she was going to see her son for the last time, he became sympathetic and let her go on, even going many blocks out of his way to land her where she wanted to go.

At the church she bided her time and while the ushers were busiest slipped in and shrank into a rear seat, unobserved. The brightness of the scene and the fine dresses abashed her, but she forgot it all when the wedding party entered. She leaned forward and gazed upon the groom. Her face lighted up. He had not changed so much as she had feared. She would have known him anywhere, despite his beard. Oh, what a fine gentleman he was—the very picture of his father, only better groomed and more confident in his manner. Of all the fine folk present he was easily king. Her old heart beat tumultuously. Yes, it was worth all the years of self-abnegation. This, verily, was her reward.

The ceremony was over and they were coming down the aisle together. Once more she leaned forward, this time to look into the face of his bride. Such a sweet, fine face she saw, under the bridal veil, that she leaned back content.

Then the reaction overcame her and with a sudden gasp she fainted. There was a slight commotion, the groom turned and asked: "What's the matter?"

"An old woman fainted, that's all," was the reply.

"Bring her back into the ante-room," he commanded the ushers. "I'll see if it's anything serious."

When she opened her eyes she was lying on a lounge. Robert was bending over her. The bride was kneeling beside her. Their were tears in both their eyes. Robert was saying:

"Yes, it is surely mother. I knew I was not mistaken. The locket proves it."

"No, no," she said, feebly. "You are mistaken. "I am nobody. Let me go back to the poorhouse."

But there was to be no more poorhouse for her. Hers was to be the biggest and sunniest room in the mansion on the boulevard, where she sat in the daintiest of white caps and knitted away the rest of her days, with a happiness that passeth understanding.

DIFFICULTIES IN THE WAY OF MARRIAGE.

It is usually considered that the difficult problem in getting married is in finding some one to have you, but in Farmington it is different, says the Kennebec Journal. There, if both are willin' and so signify to the town clerk, it does not settle the matter, as proved in two different instances recently. In one case the selectmen of the town interfered; in the second instance, where the would-be bride had been a widow just fourteen days, a written notice was filed with the town clerk, worded as follows: "To Louis Voter, Town Clerk, we hereby file the following caution with you not to issue a certificate to —— and ——, for this reason that Mrs. ——'s husband has just passed away and his mother feels very much grieved in having the marriage take place at present." Signed by six names.

Word has reached Duluth of the wedding of Miss Edith Shorb, daughter of Mrs. Mrs. J. de Barth Shorb, of San Francisco, and James King Steele to take place at the home of the bride's mother in San Francisco. Mr. Steele is well known in Duluth, where he lived for some time. The Los Angeles Daily Times says of the bride:

"Old residents of Los Angeles will be especially interested in the announcement which comes from the north of the engagement of Miss Edith Shorb, now a resident of San Francisco, and James King Steele, a promising young business man of Sacramento. The date

MISS DESS McCLARAN, of New York.

This charming young woman, who has chosen the stage as her profession, is now visiting her cousin, Miss Adele McClaran, of this city. She has sung in "Winsome Winnie" with Paula Edwards, and has appeared in the productions of "Way Down East" and "Sky Farm." She is now appearing on the concert stage under the management of the Lyceum bureau of New York, and this picture exhibits her in one of the very effective characters assumed in her concert work. Her voice is a soprano of much sweetness and good power. She will remain in Duluth a month.

for the marriage has been fixed, July 18 next, at the residence of Mrs. Shorb on Gough street, San Francisco. Miss Shorb is the daughter of the late J. de Barth Shorb, who, for many years was one of the foremost men in Los Angeles county striving for and always having faith in the success of its future. Mr. Shorb built up many enterprises, and promoted others. He organized and conducted the San Gabriel Wine company, which has given away to the Dolge Felt Factory; was first president of the Monrovia division of the Southern Pacific Railway company, which was a private line before it was absorbed by the Southern Pacific company; and to him the importation of the foreign grapes into the manufactory of wine in Southern California is rightly attributed. He was for many years president of the state board of viticulture.

"On her mother's side Miss Edith Shorb is the granddaughter of B. D. Wilson, who was one of the first Americans to settle in Southern California, crossing the plains as early as 1841, and locating in Los Angeles in 1843, after having spent several years on the grant owned by him where Riverside now stands. There he married the daughter of Don Bernardo Yorba, who owned the adjacent rancho along the Santa Ana river at Yorbe, Orange county. "Don Benito" Wilson, as he was commonly called, was beloved by Mexicans and Americans alike. He built the trail to Mt. Wilson, which bears his name, for the purpose of bringing down lumber from its heights. He accumulated wealth in a general merchandise store which stood on the corner now occupied by the Farmers' and Merchants' bank. The cannon which he took as captain in the war with Mexico, still stands at the corner, where he placed it as a hitching post for this store. Mr. Wilson later moved to San Gabriel, where he died in 1878. He owned from the mountains to the foothills, Pasadena, Alhambra, and the homestead of the Shorbs, now the property of H. E. Huntington. Miss Wilson and Mrs. George S. Patton, the aunts of Miss Shorb, still live at the old Wilson homestead, adjoining the Pasadena country club and the H. E. Huntington ranch. Dr. J. de Barth Shorb is also a brother of Miss Shorb.

"Miss Shorb has never cared for society, but she devoted herself to her mother. Since her father's death and the reverses of fortune that came to the family, she has bravely helped to bear the strain. She is a fine horsewoman and proficient in many athletic diversions."

A WEDDING GUEST FROM THE POOR HOUSE

By Jacob Bretoch.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

An old woman sat silent in a corner of one of the wards in a great poorhouse. Her eyes were on the floor and she was busy with thoughts of other days, when her heart was young and full of love and life and courage; when the future was aglow with brightness and promise. She did not sigh and there was in her face an expression of resignation and patience, if not content.

It was not the evening of life she looked forward to when she was a bonnie, brown-eyed girl, roaming the fields and groves of the old farm, nor when she stood blushing at the altar and put her hand in that of stalwart Robert Mann, nor when she set out bravely with him in search of fortune and happiness in the great city. Ah, no, then all seemed so easy, so certain, so sure. And when little Robert came she had thought surely no shadow could cross their path, for had they not given hostage to fortune? Those were happy days, even though Robert did not get ahead very much so far as money was concerned, and there was much pinching to make the ends meet.

Then had come Robert's long illness, and finally the black day when he had died, leaving her with the boy, then 11 years old, hopelessly in debt and totally unprepared to cope with the world.

She had been such a simple body and had never taken kindly to city ways. So Robert had assumed most of the contact with the world and her life had been almost wholly confined to the little cottage and the little garden back of it. She knew no more of bread-earning than a child. The old father and mother were dead and they had left nothing, the inevitable mortgage having eaten up the old place. For four terrible years she had struggled with the bread-and-butter problem, fighting every inch of the ground and barely keeping the wolf's nose outside the threshold, and this only by keeping the boy constantly at work. This was what hurt her most, because she saw the boy growing up to a life of toil such as had been his father's, unprepared to cope with the world on equal terms. And he was such an unusually bright and ambitious lad, too, and desired so ardently to acquire an education. He had been brave and manly when taken from school and put to work, but had insisted on going to night school. He had early developed a passion for things medical and surgical and the idea of studying medicine took root and grew within him. So whole-hearted did he become in this direction that he attracted the attention of a great physician in the neighborhood, who offered to take the boy under his wing and give him a medical education. At first Robert was wild with delight. Then he suddenly realized that it was impossible. His small earnings were absolutely necessary to keep want away from the squalid little flat, called him. So he manfully declined the offer. In vain did the mother urge him to accept the great opportunity. She could get along, she would live, one way or another. Her wants were few, and, Heaven knows, she was willing to work to the finger bones that he should have this great opportunity.

But he know her inefficiency to combat the world and resolutely refused to retract his resolution.

I was then that a mighty resolve took possession of the mother heart. She would not be the millstone to keep him down to the life of penury she had known. She would go away and leave him to carve out his career unhindered. She thought it over during many sleepless nights and finally decided in desperation that the poorhouse offered the only sure and safe way. She realized that she was not capable of keeping soul and body together by her own misdirected exertions and she was sure if she attempted to go on working in the great city that Robert would find her—he was so smart. No she must eliminate herself utterly.

And so one morning she had called Robert back as he was leaving for his work and asked him to kiss her once more, and she had clung, trembling and tearful, with both arms about his neck, as she bade him, what she knew was to be her last good-bye. She remembered now his kindly, cheery way.

"You're working too hard, mam," he had said. "Now, do go out and get some sunshine and forget all this worry. I'll take care of things all right, now that I have quit dreaming. Cheer up!" And he had pinched her cheek and kissed her.

As soon as he was well away she had gone forth, simply clad and a few hours later had been admitted to the county poorhouse under an assumed name. She knew Robert would make a great fuss searching for her and fearing her own resolution had refused to read the newspapers. Later, although wild to know whether he had gone into medicine under the patronage of the famous physician, she had still feared her strength and not only had not sought information, but resolutely kept away from the newspapers, lest she might read something which would tempt her beyond her strength. She had absolutely eliminated herself from his life.

It was a good seven years later she happened to get hold of an old newspaper and to run across an item telling of the graduation of Robert Mann from a medical school and stating that he would take up practice with the celebrated Dr. ——, whose protege he was. This was a good ten years ago. Robert was now in his early thirties and she wondered wistfully how had gone the battle with her boy. Life was so dreary with her. She cared so little for the petty gossip and the little intrigues of the great sordid institution. In fact, she felt very tired and very old and very hopeless. But she was also very patient and it was with almost a triumphant gleam in her faded eye that she comforted herself for the millionth time with the thought that she had won the fight and given Robert the chance.

As she sat there, filled with these thoughts, a newspaper fluttered from the hands of one sitting near her, as the other hobbled out of the ward. It dropped at her feet and mechanically she picked it up. She glanced at it with dull—almost unseeing eyes. A familiar name caught her attention—his name, Robert Mann, right at the head of the page in big, black type. She wiped her glasses and eagerly read the piece over which the name was. It told of a grand wedding about to occur between Dr. Robert Mann, "the distinguished surgeon, lecturer at the medical university, on the consulting staffs of a dozen hospitals, etc., etc.," and Miss Eunice Rogers, the beautiful daughter of Senator Rogers, a great heiress in her own right, as well as a favorite in exclusive society circles because of her great beauty and wit, etc., etc."

The paper fell from the hands of the old woman at the poorhouse. In her heart welled up a great yearning to see her boy once more before she died and also to see the woman he was to marry—to look in her eyes and determine for herself if the bride was good enough for him. The audacity of the idea startled her, but it grew in her mind until it became an irresistable purpose.

The place and date of the wedding had burned itself into her mind. St. Paul's at 8 o'clock in the evening of June 3. It ran in her mind all day and all that sleepless night. Then she decided to do it.

Yes, she would do it. She would slip away from the poorhouse in the morning and she would quietly step into the church in the evening and see her boy married. It was a great undertaking, she knew, and she did not underestimate the obstacles, but she would be cunning—ah, so cunning, and she would be self-controlled. Then she would return to the poorhouse. They would punish her, she knew, and she would go hungry, but what cared she for that.

On the morning of June 3, when the driver of a big truck with high sides had unloaded his wagon and driven away toward the city, he turned and looked into his wagon and was startled to see an old woman all huddled up in a heap. He was a frank-faced young fellow and when he told him with her soul in her eyes that she was going to see her son for the last time, he became sympathetic and let her go on, even going many blocks out of his way to land her where she wanted to go.

At the church she bided her time and while the ushers were busiest slipped in and shrank into a rear seat, unobserved.

The brightness of the scene and the fine dresses abashed her, but she forgot it all when the wedding party entered. She leaned forward and gazed upon the groom. Her face lighted up. He had not changed so much as she had feared. She would have known him anywhere, despite his beard. Oh, what a fine gentleman he was—the very picture of his father, only better groomed and more confident in his manner. Of all the fine folk present he was easily king. Her old heart beat tumultuously. Yes, it was worth all the years of self-abnegation. This, verily, was her reward.

The ceremony was over and they were coming down the aisle together. Once more she leaned forward, this time to look into the face of his bride. Such a sweet, fine face she saw, under the bridal veil, that she leaned back content.

Then the reaction overcame her and with a sudden gasp she fainted. There was a slight commotion, the groom turned and asked: "What's the matter?"

"An old woman fainted, that's all," was the reply.

"Bring her back into the ante-room," he commanded the ushers. "I'll see if it's anything serious."

When she opened her eyes she was lying on a lounge. Robert was bending over her. The bride was kneeling beside her. Their were tears in both their eyes. Robert was saying:

"Yes, it is surely mother. I knew I was not mistaken. The locket proves it."

"No, no," she said, feebly. "You are mistaken. "I am nobody. Let me go back to the poorhouse."

But there was to be no more poorhouse for her. Hers was to be the biggest and sunniest room in the mansion on the boulevard, where she sat in the daintiest of white caps and knitted away the rest of her days, with a happiness that passeth understanding.

DIFFICULTIES IN THE WAY OF MARRIAGE.

It is usually considered that the difficult problem in getting married is in finding some one to have you, but in Farmington it is different, says the Kennebec Journal. There, if both are willin' and so signify to the town clerk, it does not settle the matter, as proved in two different instances recently. In one case the selectmen of the town interfered; in the second instance, where the would-be bride had been a widow just fourteen days, a written notice was filed with the town clerk, worded as follows: "To Louis Voter, Town Clerk, we hereby file the following caution with you not to issue a certificate to —— and ——, for this reason that Mrs. ——'s husband has just passed away and his mother feels very much grieved in having the marriage take place at present." Signed by six names.

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

FOR THE SUMMER GIRL BY THE SEA

[By Our Special Correspondent.]
MIRIAM SPIER.

'Tis perhaps difficult for some of us to admit, but nevertheless true, that to appear beautiful is woman's principal mission at the gay seaside resorts, where there is little else to occupy the feminine mind from the beginning of the week to the end, when the countless opportunities to pursue the ever-tempting flirtation more or less mild or exciting is to be found.

There is little surprise, then, that sylphlike forms in the prettiest costumes imaginable float happily along on the crest of the waves or contribute bright rays of color upon the white sands of the beach. There is a tone of style and finish about the up-to-date bathing costume that suggests the chic appearance justly applicable to our Parisian sisters. No longer are women compelled to take their dip at the seaside in the unbecoming garments of a stereotyped style, not so many years ago. Women, and children, too, are as attractive at the seaside as in the boudoirs of home; their draperies are arranged with fastidious care, the fit of their garment is molded to their forms in lines of grace and the colors selected are those which are not only becoming, but also in keeping with the bright summer landscape and the shining blue sea.

This season there is a particularly large assortment of materials to select from for the bathing suit. Of course, mohair will be used extensively in the plain colors, and the well-dressed woman will go into the surf in striped or figured silk. Then there are seen also the poplin and alpaca garments, trimmed abundantly with pretty silk and braid of almost every description. These fabrics are all light in weight and promise to keep their shape in water and even after the fair bather has stepped out of the water. They will not cling in the all too close folds common to old-time bathing suits, but will gracefully hold their own shape; but little affected by the water which saturates them. White, scarlet, blues and lavender and green all find favor among seekers after suits in which they will look most fascinating. Serges, flannels and woolen suits will be donned by those who bathe in chilly waters in the most quiet places, but the well-dressed woman at the fashionable resorts will appear in silk as shining as the sea and as bright as the colorings of the rainbow.

Very new and particularly favored this summer are the silks, and there are suits made up in fine striped and charmingly figured designs, while just as elaborate are some fashioned in the plain shades. The softer silks are not quite as practical as the stiffer ones, and of these there is a beautiful and endless assortment in pretty grounds, figured with bright colors, as well as everything attractive in the vast line of taffetas that the manufacturer can produce. Naturally, there are some women who will wear the softer silks, but it would be advisable for only those who can display a faultless figure and form to attempt these materials.

Mohair is mostly used in plain colors and is trimmed profusely with braid. Poplin and alpaca are also much used with the plain ground more than any other style, and they look charming and attractive with silk and braid trimmings.

One especially rich bathing costume was made of white mohair, trimmed with rows of blue soutache braid, and worn with a blue sash and blue hose. The tunic is not quite knee length and has a triple box plait in the front and back, the bottom edged with five rows of the soutache braid. The tiny V at the neck, the shoulder straps, which are the width of the shoulder seam, and the sleeve, cut to resemble handkerchief points, are also trimmed with four rows of blue soutache crossing at the corners. The shoes were of white canvas, embroidered on the toe with a blue silk chevron and tied with blue ribbons. The finishing touch is attained by a pretty little oilskin cap covered in silk, a blue band being run about the drawstring and tied at the top with a dainty bow.

Another stunning costume was in dark blue taffeta, trimmed in white silk, striped in light blue and worn with a big Alsatian bow of light blue as a finish to the sailor collar, a stock collar of the same, and a band of the silk at the edge of the skirt. Both the blouse and the skirt have small tucks in them, and the full sleeves are elbow length finished by a shirring. The hose and slippers are the same shade as the costume, and a becoming blue silk cap protected the abundant tresses from the water. Among the sights that attracted attention recently at one of the summer resorts, was a dear little tot on the beach in a bathing suit of red mohair, trimmed with plain white braid in double rows. The little blouse has a sailor collar edged with a double row of the braid, and the vest was trimmed crosswise with double rows of the braid at intervals. A white belt and tiny shoulder puffs for sleeves completed the suit. The little accessories that added greatly to the get-up were tiny white silk ribbon bows in the hair, white lace silk stockings and white slippers laced about the ankle with ribbons of the same shade of red.

One of the cutest features in this season's bathing gowns is the dainty little white chemisette, which is not only applied to the chic Parisian costume, but to the natty bathing suits as well. It adds to the color effectiveness of a bathing suit and the touch of white is becoming to even the brownest of sun-tanned faces.

Conspicuously attractive is a bathing costume of scarlet wash silk, with a chemisette of tucked white silk that is trimmed across the front with white silk braid, and heads a full shirred vest of the same material. A fancy white silk braid is used in two rows around the skirt and the bodice, which has a collar turned quite far back across the back and merging into cute little bolero fronts over the bodice in front. Two bands of the braid finish the little sleeve in the shape of a shoulder puff. White high laced shoes are worn with scarlet hose. White ribbon confines the skirt at the waist, and scarlet ribbons trim a white silk cap, which is arranged artistically upon a very pretty pompadour.

A becoming costume that will afford comfort as well as good style is the new Russian bathing suit. Fashioned in pale-blue pongee silk, the blouse and skirt are in one in the Russian coat style. The back sets smoothly over the shoulders and is made with a center seam. The fronts are also plain, closing at the center with buttons and buttonhole to the lower edge or stitched together from the waist line down. The neck is open, disclosing a removable chemisette, with or without a standing collar or a narrow band for a finish. A broad collar in sailor or stole outline provides completion, and the sleeves may be of the popular bishop shaping or in short puff style. Leg bands confine the knickerbockers below the knee. Four varied widths of white silk braid (the broadest to the edge) trim the sailor collar, neckband and sleeve puff. A white silk shield ornaments the chemisette, and white ribbon sash, with bow and ends to the front, gives the waist a chic finish. Either the white or blue hose may be worn, and white slippers laced sandal fashion to the ankle.

This same costume can be carried out in the plain or checked waterproof taffeta, surah or peau de soie, and are very effective with mohair braid or silk-stitched bands for trimming. Regarding the details and accessories of the bathing outfit, a great deal of thought and taste should be exercised. Hosiery, shoes or boots and caps must be selected with care, each harmonizing in every respect with the costume. There are hose of endless description and variety to be seen in the shops, affording a choice for every woman to select from. Although the assortment of shoes and boots is more limited, many changes may be achieved by the addition of silk laces to correspond in shade with the garment. Of course, there are the high laced boots of canvas, which are very trim and neat, finished by the silken string and tied in dainty bows; then some of our fair sisters may select the prettily embroidered sandal with the crossed ankle ribbons that were worn many years ago, and still have a fascinating touch, particularly upon a small or well-shaped foot. Lastly, there are the plain little sandals with absolutely very little to them besides the sole and a strap to hold it on, and many of the bathers do not wear any shoes at all, but have the finest silk hosiery made to match the color of the bathing dress or its trimmings. To return for just a moment to a few suggestions regarding the hosiery, it might be well to know that some of the daintiest silken affairs worn are embroidered in small floral designs scatteerd at intervals, and giving a touch of inconspicuous color to a dark ground, while others are woven in fine lace patterns and smart openwork stitches that reveal a hint of a white ankle peeping through the mesh.

Ribbons and sashes flutter showily upon the new bathing garments, and give them an airiness and a touch of charming carelessness very becoming to them. A big Alsatian bow often will form all the cap which the little feminine bather will wear, artistically arranged upon her glossy hair. This style is particularly fascinating when one has a head of curly hair, with cunning little ringlets escaping all about the face. When caps are worn they will be trimmed with bows of ribbon or frills of silk of the color of the cap, and in the case of the handkerchief cap, which will make its appearance again, none but the fairest face will look charming under it.

Of very great importance, particularly to our stouter sister, is the fact that in order to appear trim and neat it is absolutely essential to wear a corset. Possibly a more comfortable one than is worn with the dinner or evening gown will answer. For our more fortunate slight women simply a girdle is required to give necessary graceful lines to waist and hips. A regular bathing corset can be obtained that has no steels that might rust, but just enough stiffness acquired by featherbones to hold the shape sufficiently neat. A strikingly attractive costume seen on an equally as charming a fair bather, who was rather enjoying her sun bath on the beach than the surf, was in white poplin, with narrow black silk braid for trimming. The skirt blouse was tucked in Gibson style and had a Russian closing at the left side. An applied round yoke without a standing collar was a pretty feature and the short puff at the shoulder adopted for the sleeves. The fulness of the blouse at the back was gathered at the waist line and the fronts were allowed to pouch over the belt. Three-piece shaping was given the skirt and the fulness at the top disposed in tucks. The black braid outlined the round yoke, edged the shoulder puffs and appeared on the skirt forming a panel in front and extending in three rows around the skirt at intervals. A fringed black silk girdle was worn. A white cap, with large black bow at the front, white silk hose and white sandals completed an exceedingly chic costume.

Laces and Embroideries.

A library might be filled with the mysteries of trimmings and still the wonderful story remain incomplete. Since womankind first learned the art never has the use of laces and embroideries been more lavish. Sumptuous passementeries showing encrusted leaves, fruits and figured designs are in all the shops, and the fiat of the fashion molders has gone forth that everything my lady wears from a robe de nuit to her wedding gown—shirtwaist suits included—must be burnished up and edged off with jeweled braids, glittering passementries and elaborate embroideries.

Fruits made of padded plush are shown swinging from stems of white and green braid. In between the fruits are leaves of white open work and gold braid. Small green braid is used to show the veins and outlines of the leaves. Purple velvet was used for one exquisite gown lately shown in Paris. The velvet was made up so as to form clusters of delicious appearing purple grapes, while green braid attaches the bunches to the waist and skirt. This design was carried out with elaborate fulness—the branches of the grapevine were shown by brown braid held in place by tiny balls of gold gauze, and the slender tendrils of the vine were of green braid. The purple velvet of the grapes themselves finished off one of the most daring yet successful creations of the present Parisian season. The gown was worn by the Marquise de Lorme at the spring races and was widely admired. In fact, no flight of fancy in the piling on of rich trimmings of lace and embroidered material can excel the present craving for these delights of the feminine instinct.

Japanese Crepe.

For summer kimonos Japanese cotton crepe is an excellent fabric. It washes like the traditional iron, and no matter how delicate the coloring may be there is seldom a piece that fades with tubbing. This material can be procured in an infinite variety of tints and designs. Stripes are effective and a plain crepe to match the colored stripe makes a pretty border for the collar, front and loose sleeves. There is one distinctly Japanese pattern that has taken remarkably well. It represents Japanese letters of the alphabet stamped in white on dark blue, China blue or any color that one happens to fancy.

Description of Above Models.

Sicilienne Bathing Suit.

The sicilliennes are ideal for beach and bathing suit wear, for they shed both the sand and the water with equal thoroughness. This season black is in the lead as heretofore, with navy blue a very close second. Some shades of brown are favored by those who desire a little novelty, and the darker shades in the shot sicilienne attract many. The model illustrated in black has the collarless chemisette, and the broad sailor collar in narrow tucks, and this and the little cravet and puffed sleeve ruffle are edged in white with black soutache and French knots. The skirt is gored with a pretty flare just above the knee, and a narrow featherboned belt completes the natty outfit.

With Touches of White.

Black mohair blouse with short puff sleeve edged with white, and a broad sailor collar in white with fancy pattern in black mohair braid fashions this plain and sensible bathing suit. The skirt is full, pleated to the waistband, and a deep belt of white has four rows of the fancy black braid as a trimming.

A Model In Gray.

Some of the lighter sicilliennes, and especially in the fashionable shades of gray and tan, are liked by some bathers as being distinctive when compared with the multitude of black and blue bathing suits. The model is fashioned with tucks forming a yoke, the fulness being caught down at the waistline by the narrow belt. A fancy collar with stole ends, which pass beneath the ceinture, is edged with a novelty braid of black and white which tones in prettily with the gray. The stole ends are repeated by strappings down the front of the skirt, these too edged with braid. The skirt is gored to fit over the hips without fulness, and there is a shallow band of princess haircloth inserted in the stitched hem, which prevents the skirt from sagging forlornly about the knees when wet.

Black Stitched With White.

Black taffeta has made quite a niche for itself in the affections of the beach girls, for not only is it smart and stylish, but it is comfortable to swim in, being light and shedding the water well. An unusually good model is the one illustrated, in which there is a shallow shoulder yoke, to which the blouse portion is shirred, the broad sailor collar concealing the yoke. The neck is cut in V shape and filled in with a collarless chemisette of tucked white mohair. The skirt is pleated to the waistband, each plait being heavily stitched in white over the curve of the hips, the oscillating stitch of the sewing machine making a pretty finish. A narrow black beading threaded with white velvet ribbon appears on the sailor collar and edges the pointed belt.

Banded With Braids.

The larger suit of dark gray mohair is banded with a white linen braid, this fashioning the round yoke, to which the blouse is applied in a broad double box plait, and the fastening is at the left side. The skirt has a round hip yoke decorated with braid and three bands appear above the hem. The fastening of the skirt follows the line of the waist. The little suit is of navy blue serge trimmed with the same linen braid. The throat is open, the broad sailor collar forming a V. The little skirt is pleated to the waistband and double rows of braid appear on the sailor collar, sleeve, belt and hem.

Of Cravenetted Silk.

Somewhat more elaborate is this bathing costume of black moneybak taffetas, with its chemisette and shawl collar of white banded with a handsome novelty silk braid. The blouse is pleated to the long shoulder seam, the shallow puff sleeve being edged with the braid. The skirt has tablier effect outlined with the fancy braid, which is semitransparent, and the circular cut affords snugness at the hips with flare at the hem.

Fagotting the Latest Modiste Fad.

Among the new summer neckwear one of the most attractive is the fagotted stock. These stocks are easily laundered, merely needing to be stretched into shape before ironing; and there is no other neckwear so comfortable and dainty on either a shirtwaist suit or a gown for afternoon wear. They are very simple to make, as all that is required is bias bands of neatly folded linen fagotted together with a coarse mercerized cotton. The shops are now selling the linen bands all ready to use, and the woman with the merest knowledge of needlework may make for herself any number of artistic trimmings.

Yokes of fagotting are particularly pretty on organdies or the light flowered silks if the bands are made with ribbon of the prevailing shade, and the heavy crochet silk is used for the handwork. Some of the most elaborate skirts are made with yokes, which consist of clusters of hand-run tucks, alternating with fagotted bands and over a drop skirt. The effect is unusually pretty.

A woman with a taste for simple needlework could create a very beautiful gown, almost entirely made of shirring and fagotting. The yoke, the deep cuffed sleeve and the panels of the skirt should all be done in straight pieces. In one of the newest models the fagotting in the yoke of the skirt ran horizontally and in the remainder of the skirt the work was put in vertically. Fagotting is being used extensively in the making of all underwear and is holding a conspicuous place in children's dresses and the little caps

NOVELS FOR THE SUMMER HOLIDAYS.

ROMANCES FOR THE SEASHORE.

"THE SINGULAR MISS SMITH," By Mrs. Florence M. Kingsley.

"THE CASTAWAY," By Hallie Erminie Rives.

"A BOOK OF MEDITATIONS," By Edward Howard Griggs.

"THE FOOLISH DICTIONARY," By Gideon Wurz.

"THE VILLA CLAUDIA," By J. A. Mitchell.

Just now, when every one is planning his or her vacation, travelers to mountains, seashore or country want to know what books to take with them. The following books, widely dieffrent in character, are among the best new novels, and each is full or entertainment and amusement.

The events in 'The Crossing," the new novel by Winston Churchill, author of "Richard Carvel" and 'The Crisis," take place in the wilderness, from which have been carved the states of Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. David Ritchie, its hero, grows up in North Carolina, crosses the Blue Ridge with the American immigrants of 1774 into the Great Wilderness, fights British and Indians, and goes with George Rogers Clark and his men to Kaskaskia and to Vincennes, where they trap the British Gen. Hamilton, "The Hair-Buyer." David's later adventures carry him to St. Louis and down the Mississippi to New Orleans, where he finally wins the beautiful Helene. Many charming women beside the heroine appear in the book, which overflows with the romance of adventure, the atmosphere of the woods, and the spirit of the American pioneers who won the Northwest.

Mary Stuart is the heroine of Maurice Hewlett's new novel, "The Queen's Quair," which stands out among the year's books by its distinction, its power, its force and its picture of life in a heroic age. The lovely Queen of Scots still fascinates the world. Mr. Hewlett's book surpasses former attempts to tell Mary's romance because he has sought to find out her secret by finding out her heart. Mary herself, magnetic, beautiful, passionately alive, athirst for love, is the center of a tale teeming with interest, plot and intrigue. It is a novel of first-rate power and interest.

"The Singular Miss Smith," on the other hand, is a bright, breezy story of a beautiful heiress, who thought she would find out how working women live. Partly, Mrs. Florence Morse Kingsley is poking fun at some of the solemn undertakings of women's clubs; but chiefly she tells a charming love story of the old-fashioned sort. Miss Smith suddenly gives up her investigations as to why girls would rather work in factories than in private houses, because she finds herself confronted with a problem of very much more pressing interest.

The best of the summer books for a man is "The Merry Anne," by Mr. Samuel Merwin, who wrote that other virile story of business life, "Calumet K"—which, by the way, has just appeared in paper covers at 25 cents. "The Merry Anne" is a fleet little schooner that carries lumber from port to port on Lake Michigan, and Dick Smiley, her young captain, is working hard to pay for her and to win the girl he loves. Beveridge, his rival for Annie's hand and a spy of the revenue service, finds smuggled liquors aboard the Merry Anne and tries to prove Dick guilty and to put him to shame before Annie. Several exciting voyages lead to the chase of the culprits through the woods of the northern peninsula. Mr. Thomas Fogarty has embellished the book with thirty attractive drawings.

The hero of Margaret Horton Potter's new novel, "The Flame-Gatherers," is an Arab prince of the house of Asra, who is captured in battle by the Rajah of Mandu. Owing to an ancient curse, the Asra "must die if love they cherish." Ahalya falls deeply in love with Asra, and the first part of the tale relates their growing love and Asra's fight for her against the Rajah's vizier. Asra gives up his talisman against the curse to win Ahalya; and how it all comes out must be left to the reader. The action is constant, and the story glows with life and color and charm.

"The Adventures of Elizabeth in Rugen," is even more fascinating and piquant than the same author's "Elizabeth and Her German Garden." Elizabeth makes a driving trip of eleven days round Germany's largest island, relating her amusing adventures with people and picturing the watering place in the light of her sunny personality. But most of all it is the charming gracious woman herself who comes out in these adventures that gives the book its special attraction.

"The Woman Errant," is partly based on a curious modern social phenomen—the challenge of the woman domestic by the woman errant. Barbara, Evan and the twins, of course, reappear in this new story by the anonymous author of "The aGrden of a Commuter's Wife," and "People of the Whirlpool." It contains among its characters several young women who enter business life, not through necessity, but for the sport of it, or for extra pocket money, caring little as to the result of their action on others. It is less a garden book and more a novel than its predecessors, but it has charm, good philosophy, and interesting characters and incidents. The theme on which it is partly based is being a great deal discussed nowadays, yet it has been untouched hitherto in fiction.

The central figure of "The Castaway," the new novel by Miss Hallie Erminie Rives, the author of "Hearts Courageous," which proved such a wonderful success, is George Gordon, Lord Byron, the most romantic man known in literary history. There are few authors as daring as Miss Rives in the selection of subjects—this fact has been made clear in the past—and therefore it is not really surprising that she has written a romance about one whom most novelists have carefully avoided. Byron declined to be considered respectable while living, and there has been a general disposition to treat in silence his numerous amours and adventures and let his literary labors stand as a monument to his undoubted genius. Byron's youth has been cited as an excuse for his vagaries, and it has been thought a pity that death removed him from earth before age had tempered the passions and cooled his emotional nature of the poet of Don Juan. Those who would put in the background the wild and wayward life of Byron may feel aggrieved that Miss Rives has dragged into the limelight the personality of the poet and made him the chief figure in a romance that hrobs with emotions and tears passion into tatters. But Miss Rives is accustomed to being criticized and chided for her daring literary deeds, she probably will not complain, having rather expected that her story would create a sensational outburst in many quarters. It can be said that she has written a highly interesting story. Not the least attractive features of the book are the eight illustrations, four in color, by Howard Chandler Christy. Published by the Bobbs-Merrill company, Indianapolis.

Edward Howard Griggs, who recently delivered a series of lectures in Duluth, is the author of "A Book of Meditations," published by B. W. Huebsch, New York, which has already reached its third edition. Those who admired the scholarly lectures delivered here by Mr. Griggs will undoubtedly be much interested in his latest book. As the author of "The New Humanism," Mr. Griggs became known as an able exponent of the formulated thought of the new crusade. The New England Journal of Education said: "Mr. Griggs is distinctly an essayist. There is a magical rhythm in his style, but back of all this is the fact that he touches the life of the listener or the reader in a way that others do not. This is indescribable." As the name indicates, "A Book of Meditations" is a collection of thoughts and views which have been written by the author during his travels and studies during the past fifteen years or so. The deep experience and wide study of Mr. Griggs are evident throughout the volume, and no one can read it without feeling benefited.

A. Henry Savage Landor, author of the book of travel in the Malay islands, "The Gems of the East," just published by Harper & Brothers, is a grandson of Walter Savage Landor, the English man of letters. Mr. Landor was born at Florence, and received his eduaction there and at Julian's in Paris, as an art student. His career as a traveler began with a tour through Japan, China, Korea, South Mongolia, Tibet, America, Australia and Northern Africa. With the true gift of the explorer, Mr. Landor soon turned his steps towards unknown lands. He was the first white man to reach both sources of the Brahmaputre river, and his thrilling experiences of imprisonment and torture in Tibet are narrated in his book "In the Forbidden Land." He marched with the allied troops to Pekin in 1900, and was the first Anglo-Saxon to enter the "Forbidden City." Mr. Landor's headquarters are in London, but he frequently comes to New York in the intervals of his longer journeys.

An odd use has been discovered for that jolly 75-cent volume of humor entitled "The Foolish Dictionary," by Gideon Wurdz, which the Robinson, Luce company has recently issued. As it contains some 700 witty, satirical and epigrammatical definitions of familiar English words, amusing descriptions of the meaning of words pertaining to love and marriage are naturaly included, and it is learned that in a number of cases "The Foolish Dictionary" has been sent as a wedding present to June brides and grooms with such words as "Love," "Marriage," "Matrimony," "Lover," "Wedding" and "Alimony" underscored. The definitions are:

Love—A man's insane desire to become a woman's meal ticket.

Lover—An ardent admirer who says: "Yes, dearest, I will shovel the snow off the lake so we can go skating!" And after marriage remarks "What! Shovel the snow off the walk for you? Well, I should say not! I'm no chore boy."

Matrimony—A game for women, in which the unmarried half are trying to find a husband and the married half trying not to be found out by one. Both halves are eminently successful.

Wedding—A trade in which the bride is generally given away and the groom is often sold.

Alimony—An expensive soothing syrup, prescribed by the judge for a divorcee's bleeding heart. (Old spelling, allay money).

Mrs. Cynthia Westover Alden, author of "Women's Ways of Earning Money," just published by A. S. Barnes & Co., as the first volume in the Woman's Home Library, has been successful in many widely different callings, and has practiced both the arts and sciences.

The daughter of a well-known mineralogist of California, she supported herself when she came to New York to become a singer, by lecturing on "Geology" at the Museum of Natural History, where she afterwards became Professor Whitfield's assistant.

Through her musical studies she became familiar with several foreign languages, which enabled her to secure the position of inspector at the New York custom house, where she performed special services. Later she became private secretary to Street Cleaning Commissioner Beattie, where, during the illness of her chief, she frequently performed the entire duties of the office.

She is well remembered as the leading soprano at St. Thomas' church, on Fifth avenue, but her scientific and political knowledge caused her to drift more and more into public work. As a woman newspaper editor she ranks among the first, and it is this broad newspaper experience which has put her in touch with many women's lives and callings, and given her much of her material for the book. Her work as president general of the International Sunshine society, to which she gives her services, has also put her in touch with women of many interests.

Conan Doyle's last book was "The Adventures of Gerard" (McClure-Phillips). His first story, written at the age of six, was about a tiger that swallowed a man. Dr. Doyle began his experience with the syndicating of his literary output at an early age. He used to tell stories to his schoolmates, for which they paid him in jam-tarts. Young Doyle had his own way of extracting the price he wished. He would get his story worked up to some such climax as this: "While holding the rocky edge of the cliff with a grip of desperation, the hero could hear below him the continued growis of the enraged bear." Having proceeded thus far, he would refuse to proceed further unless the price paid in current tartlets of the schoolboy realm was doubled.

Will Carleton, the poet and lecturer, was lecturing in a Western city several years ago, when, on leaving the platform, he was accosted by a pleasant, shabby-looking old woman.

"Mr. Carleton," she said. "I want to ask a great favor. Will you give me the handkerchief you carried while you lectured this evening?"

"Why, what on earth do you want that for?"

"I am very poor, Mr. Carleton," she said, "and if you give me that handkerchief I think I can live on it a year."

Mr. Carleton stared. "A year! You shall certainly have it," and the old woman retired with the handkerchief, profusely thanking him. Later Mr. Carleton learned that she had embroidered his name on it, and "raffled" it so extensively that she did make several hundred dollars, enough to keep her for a year.

In a review of Margaret Horton Potter's novel "The Flame-Gatherers," in June Book News the writer says that it is "a wonderful romance of intensity and color, and a wonderful reincarnation of spiritual significance and depth. It is this punishment of wrong doing, this reward of right living, the great lesson of life and death that forms thefoundation of Mrs. Black's tale of mystery and mysticism. The appreciative reader, who looks beneath the surface of books and seizes on those qualities that make for durability, will rejoice in the 'The Flame-Gatherers.'"

The mystery which is the foundation of J. A. Mitchell's new romance, "The Villa Claudia," is hinted at early in its pages, and at once arouses the reader's interest. Notwithstanding a generous use of the author's well-known sense of fun and his delicious way of dealing with the sentimental relations between young persons of opposite sexes, the mystery is the dominant note. It would be unfair to the reader to give any hint of just what it is or to reveal its solution; it is enough to say that Mr. Mitchell has embodied in "The Villa Claudia" athoroughly new idea and has handled it in a way to hold the reader's close attention to the very end. The scene of the story is laid at a villa in modern Tivoli, the town which in the time of Horace was Tibur and was the favorite dwelling place of the jolly Latin poet. His Sabine farm was nearby, and in many of his verses he celebrates this delightful locality. The classic spirit is preserved by frequent quotations from and allusions to the poet, and still more classic flavor is given to the book by numerous engravings of scenes and objects connected with Tibur. The characters, however, are all modern and mostly American. All in all, "The Villa Claudia" is a delightful medley of antiquity and modernity, sentiment and humor, with a decided dash of good sense and philosophy.

The summer fiction season has brought "To Windward," the popular new novel by Henry C. Rowland, conspicuously to the fore. The second edition of "To Windward" is simultaneous with the appearance of short stories by this brilliant author in several of the magazines. A. S. Barnes & Co., the publishers of "To Windward," report a constant demand for Dr. Rowland's first novel.

The Burr exhibition at the St. Louis exposition has aroused renewed interest in the story of Aaron Burr and Charles Felton Pidgin's untiring efforts, through his Burr novels, to remove from his name the stigma placed there by historians. The Robinson, Luce company, of Boston, who have recently taken over the publication of "Biennerhassett" and "The Climax," report an active demand for them. Mr. Pidgin's third novel in the Aaron Burr trilogy, entitled "Little Burr, or the Warwick of America," will be issued by those publishers soon.

Few people are aware that the Congo Fre State has such a thing as a navy. It has, and its navy, small as it is, furnished Joseph Conrad, the author of "Romance," "Youth," "Falk," etc., with his unique experience in command of a naval vessel. The little tinplate affair of which he was captain and admiral, and possibly mate also, plied up and down the Congo and kept in subjection with its small guns the swarthy natives on the banks. Mr. Conrad was not able to hold his exalted position very long, for fever struck him low and he was obliged to return to England. But during his term of service he gathered many impressions which he has set down in "Heart of Darkness," the second in the series of three tales which make up his book, "Youth."

The Macmillan company will publish in about a fortnight Mr. Weale's very timely book on "Manchuria." It is the work of a man who has lived long in that country, and who has explored diligently the conditions and the problems for which Manchuria is the name, as those conditions—social, economic, political, historic, racial—exist today. This octavo of about 300 pages will contain thirty plates from specially good photographs of Port Arthur, Dalny and places in the neighborhood.

An instance of rapidity with which a new piece of slang travels across the country is shown by the term "Fusser." When "The Fusser's Calendar" first appeared few people in California knew what a fusser was. Now that Fox, Duffield & Co. announce "The Fusser's Book," a logical successor to the calendar, the largest advance orders are found to come from the Pacific slope. A fusser, it seems, is an habitual beau or lady's man, and the new rules for his correct conduct and etiquette are said by those who have had the advantage of seeing the advance proofs to rival "Ruth Ashmore" and "As Seen By Him" in humor if not in practical suggestions.

The Harpers are issuing another impression of that well-known standard volume "Crabb's Synonymes," which they first published some years ago, and of which they have sold up to this time in the neighborhood of 50,000 copies. The work was compiled by George Crabb, of Suffolk, England, who died in 1851, after a life of varied pursuits. He studied medicine, but relinquished it because of an unconquerable aversion for the dissecting-room. He studied at Oxford as a gentleman commoner, and later began the practice of law. He produced several excellent legal works and dictionaries, of which his "Dictionary of English Synonymes" has steadily gained in popularity. Crabb passed the last few years of his life in the utmost seclusion, and died at the age of 73.

Three of A. S. Barnes & Co.'s new books are just being published in London. The Macmillan company have just issued A. S. Barnes & Co.'s "Napoleon, a Short Biography," by R. M. Johnston. Sidney Appleton, who is publishing independently in London, has secured J. C. Lincoln's successful novel, "Cap'n Eri," which has just been launched in England with a most favorable reception. Richard Henry Stoddard's "Recollections," which is attracting so much attention in this country, has been secured by Bernard Quaritch, the famous London publisher of fine books.

In all the long list of college graduates this year, the name which easily attracts greatest attention is that of Helen Keller. Miss Keller graduates from Radcliffe college, Harvard, on June 28, and the event will be given especial significance. Many distinguished people have been invited to be present, and newspapers and peridoicals are displaying close interest in the subject. Miss Keller has already proved her ability in one field of life work—that of literature. Her book on "Optimism" showing her wonderful and sunny vein of philosophy, as well as attitude toward life, published a few months ago by Crowell, is now in its tenth thousand.

A curious fact noticed by publishers and authors is the cumulative effect on the public of an author's work. The result is that the more books an author puts out—provided they are not disappointing—the greater the s ale of each one. J. A. Mitchell's new book, "The Villa Claudia," hasstimulated the demand for his previous successes, "The Pines of Lory," "Gloria Victis," and "Amos Judd." The new readers of these in turn spread the demand for "The Villa Claudia," and so it works in a sort of endless chain, each new work increasing the sale of the others, and indirectly its own.

One of the most ingenious of noms de guerre is that of Col. D. Streamer, whose book of verses called "Misrepresentative Men" is to be published soon by Fox, Duffield & Co. Col. D. Steamer, author of "Ruthless Rhymes Baedeker," etc., is in reality Capt. Harry Graham, aide-de-camp to the governor general of Canada, Lord Minto. He is a member of the Coldstream Guards—whence his pen name "Col. D. Streamer-er." Capt. Graham dedicates his book—which by the way shows him to be an Englishman who not only understands but practices American humor—to one of the most popular of American actresses—Miscs Ethel Barrymore.

The English reading public has had its full share of American books this season; in fact, never before have English publishers been so anxious to bring out novels dealing with American life. One English firm has already made arangements to bring out Mrs. H. A. Mitchell Keay's novel of divorce, "He That Eateth Bread With Me," and there are being issued in London now editions of Rose E. Young's "Sally of Missouri," Pauline Bradford Mackie's "The Volce in the Desert," George Madden Martin's "Emmy Lou: Her Book and Heart," Norman Duncan's "The Way of the Sea," and Bruno Lessing's "Children of Men."

Marmaduke Pickthall, who has told so interestingly in "Said, the Fisherman," of the natives of Palestine, has an interesting light to throw upon the foreigners there. In Jerusalem, it appears, you must not think it strange if anyone you meet informs you in confidence that he is John the Baptist or the Apostle Paul. The native Turks are very lenient with these poor, deluded creatures. Once, however, four Italians arrived in the city and declared that they were, respectively, the Savior, Peter, James and John. The Arabs imediately thrust them into prison, saying: "We can understand one madman, but not four madmen in the agreement. These must be impostors."

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. report the following new printings: The tenth edition of "Our National Parks," by John Muir; the 5th edition of "Miss Muffet's Christmas Party," by Samuel M. Shaler; and the second edition of "The Masque of Judgment," by William Vaughn Moody, whose latest dramatic poem, "The Fire-Bringer," is just issued.

Andrew Lang's recent severe and unkind remarks about "Chicago Humor" have stirred up some very able defence, but none of it has been more to the point than a recent article by Norman Hapgood in Collier's Weekly. He comments in detail on the eminent critic's failure to understand George Ade (and others), and then concludes with the following paragraph: "I wish he would obtain and study McCutcheon's new book, 'Bird Center Cartoons.' They are full of a fidelity of detail which would give the English critic much information that he lacks. The whole is infused with that good-natured laughing observation which is characteristic of Chicago and the humor of the West."

Little, Brown & Co.'s popular new fiction for summer reading includes the following: "Anna, the Adventuress," by E. Phillips Oppenheim (4th impression); "The Raibow Chasers," by John H. Whitson (4th impression); "The Viking's Skull," by John R. Carling (3rd impression); "The Wood-Carver of 'Lympus," by M. E. E. Henry-Ruffin.

The June number of the Booklovers' Magazine is delightfully original. Harold Bolce's article, telling of "Japan's New Gospel of Civilization," is profusely illustrated. "The Staying Power of Russia and of Japan," by N. T. Bacon, reveals facts that will make you think. Under the title of "A Benevolent Despot," Frank H. Taylor writes of President Diaz, of Mexico, while "£6000 in 'Swedes'" is the title of an unusual story by Thomas Russell Sullivan.

Three short stories, an article by the commander of the Ziegler Polar expedition, another describing how fireworks are made, an instalment of Hamlin Garland's serial, "Little Squatters," anecdotes of Edison, the German emperor, Daniel Webster, Lafayette, and the late Admiral Makaroff, and a good article on wise and unwise fasting make up part of the contents of the Youth's Companion of June 16.

How the war is being carried on in the far East is illustrated by graphic and reliable photographs in the current issue of Harper's Weekly—an especially noteworthy feature being a double-page group of snapshots showing various phases of Japanese military activity in the field. They were taken near Sunan, Korea (a town about fifteen miles north of Ping Yang), and were sent from there early in April. Other features of this number of the Weekly are an informing character sketch of Judge Parker, by James Creelman; an article on "The Revival of Cycling," by the secretary-treasurer of the L. A. W.; and papers on timely topics by Sydney Brooks, Robert Bridges and James MacArthur, and fiction by G. K. Chesterton and A. E. W. Mason, whose new serial, "The Truants," reaches its seventeenth installment in this number.

The June number of the New England Magazine, just out, is perhaps not so striking as the May edition, whose superb art illustrations, unique and fascinating Japanese article, and other strong features, made it a remarkable number. Yet it is quite as fine in its way and holds its onw bravely among current periodicals. The New England has always made a specialty of town articles. This month it is the fine old town of Farmington, Maine, the home of the famous Abbott family, that is interestingly treated by Mary Stoyell Stimpson, and lavishly illustrated.

"Drawbacks of Sea Travel," by Jerome Hart, a very interesting letter describing the different types met on an Atlantic liner, and tellign of the concerts and other forms of entertainment given on board, appears in the Argonaut for June 13. "The Magna Charta of Japan," a happily timely topic, will be discussed in the July Century by Baron Kentaro Kaneko, one of the four authors of the Japanese constitution. Baron Kaneko is a Harvard A. It will surprise many to learn that there are 24,000 convicts who have worn or are wearing Mrs. Balling Booth's badge, indicating membership in the Volunteer Prisoners' league, which pledges them to endeavor to reform. The remarkable story of this stupendous work is given in an illustrated article, covering a double page, in the current issue of Leslie's Weekly. The front page is a spirited drawing of a scene at the Republican national headquarters in Chicago, before the opening of the national convention, about to be held. Two full pages are devoted to pictures of the great war in the East, and one to the curious types of children on exhibition at St. Louis. A page is also devoted to a remarkable cave-in which threatens to destroy a Pennsylvania mining town. A full page of illustrations is given to sporting affairs.

Theatrical

THE COMING WEEK AT THE THEATERS

The Elliott-Courtenay Stock Company At the Lyceum Will Present "Trilby" the First Half of the Week and "Spotless Town" the Second Half.

Beginning Monday, June 20 the Elliott-Courtenay Stock company will present Paul M. Potter's dramatization of Du Maurier's famous novel "Trilby," at the Lyceum theater, for three nights and Wednesday popular priced matinee. "Trilby" is one of the most successful plays of modern times and has been played with phenomenal success in every civilized country of the world and in every language. Its Bohemian atmosphere appeals to all classes. Student life in the Latin quarter in Paris has always been more or less interesting and much has been said and written about struggles, ambitions and pleasures of the habitues of this famous part of Paris. Du Maurier's graphic descriptions and trite sayings, have not been destroyed by Mr. Potter.

Miss Eualla Bennett, the leading woman, who resembles Mrs. Leslie Carter to a marked degree, and by a strange coincidence is under the same management for next season, has had an early training that fits her for stock work. She is permitted to appear here this summer by Mr. Belasco's permission. Miss Bennett was last seen here as a star in the "Heart of Maryland." In order to introduce Miss Bennett to the ladies of Duluth, the management is devoting Monday night to a free night for ladies. The coupons which appear in the advertisement is self explanatory.

For the balance of the week "Spotless Town," a musical farce travesty, will be produced. The piece is something, nothing and hard to explain other than that it was written for laughing purposes.

The biograph is retained with new views and continues to please.

NATURALISM IN THE DRAMA

Henry Becque, Not Zola, Father of Movement.

Emile Zola once wrote in his sweeping dictatorial manner: "Le threatre sera naturaliste ou il ne sera pas," but as Henry Becque said in his mordant style, Zola always convinced one in his pronunciamentos; it was only when he attempted to put his theories into action that they completely broke down. Alas! realism in the theater, after all the gong-sounding of cafe aestheticians, after the desperate campaigns of the one clairvoyant manager in the movement, Antoine, is as dead as the romanticism of "Hernani." After the flamboyant, the drab and now they are both relegated to the limbo of the tried-and-found-wanting, says James Hpneker in the New York Sun.

When Zola sat down to pen his famous call to arms, "Naturalism on the Stage," Antoine was still in the future. Dumas fils and Sardou ruled the Parisian theater. "Uncle" Sarcey manufactured his diverting feuilletons and Augier was become a classic. The author of "L'Assommoir" had like Alexander sighed for new worlds to subjugate. He had won a victory, thanks to Flaubert and the De Goncourts, in fiction; it remained for the theater to provoke his ire. It still clung obstinately to old-fashioned conventions and refused to be coerced either by "Henrietta Marechal" or by the furious onslaught of Zola and his cohort of writing men.

In the essy referred to, Zola made the well known speech that a piece of work will always be a corner of nature seen through a temperament. He told the truth when he said that the "romantic movement was but a skirmish; romanticism, which corresponds to nothing durable, was simply a restless regret of the old World." Stendhal and Balzac had created the modern novel. The stage did not move with other arts, though Diderot and Mercier "laid down squarely the basis of the naturalistic theater." Victor Hugo gave the romantic drama its death blow. Scribe was an ingenious cabinet maker. Sardou "has no life—only movement." Dumas the younger was spoiled by cleverness—"a man of genius is not clever, and a man of genius is necessary to establish the naturalistic formula in a masterly fashion." Besides, Dumas preaches, always preaches. "Emile Augier is the real master of the French stage, the most sincere"—but he did not know how to disengage himself from conventions, from stereotyped ideas, from made-up ideas.

Who then was to be the savior, according to Zola? And this writer did not underrate the difficulties of the task. He knew that" the dramatic author was enclosed in a rigid frame. . . . that the solitary reader tolerates everything, goes where he is led, even when he is disgusted; while the spectators taken en masse are seized with prodishness, with frights, with sensibilities of which the author must take notice under pain of a certain fall. But everything marches forward! If the theater will submit to Sardou's juggling, to the theories and witticisms of Dumas, to the sentimental characters of Augier, the theater will be left in the onward movement of civilization, and as Becque said in his "Souvenirs of a Dramatic Author," the theater has reached its end many times, yet somehow it continues to flourish d-spite the gloomy prophecies of the professors and critical malcontents. Every season, declared M. Becque, that same cry rises to heaven—"la fin du theater," and the next season the curtain rises on the same old house, on the same old plays.

However, Zola trumpeted forth his opinions. According to him the De Goncourt brothers were the first to put into motion realistic ideas. "Henriette Marechal" with its dialogue copied from the spoken conversation of contemporary life, with its various scenes copied boldly from reality, was a path breaker. And Becque again interrupts; Edmond de Goncourt posed for thirty years as a hissed author, "pour cette parade d' Henriette Marechal." Away with the mechanicism of the polished, dovetailed machine-made play of Dumas. "I yearn for life with its shiver, its breath and its strength; I long for life as it is," passionately declaimed the simple minded bourgeois Zola, who then, in default of other naturalistic dramatists, turned his "Therese Raquin" into a play—and an awful melodrama it was, not without its moments of power, but romantic, and old-fashioned to a degree.

* * *

And this was Zola's puishment. He contumaciously usurped the throne of realism, never realizing his life long that he was a romantist of the deepest dye, a follower of Hugo, that melodramatic tale teller. All the while he fancied himself a lineal descendant of Balzac and Flaubert. Like Moses, he saw the promised land, but there it ended. Searching ceaselessly with his Diogenese lantern for a dramatist, he nevertheless overlooked not only a great one but the true father of the later-day movement in French dramatic literature, Henry Becque. What a paradox! Here was the unfortunate Becque patroling the boulevards night and day with plays under his arm, plays up his sleeve, plays in his hat, plays at home—and always was he shown the door, only the reappear at the managerial window. Calm in his superiority, his temper untouched by his trials, Becque presented the picture of the true Parisian man of genius—witty, ironical on the subject of his misfortunes, and absolutely undaunted by refusals. He persisted until he forced his way into the Comedie Francaise, despite the intriguing, the disappointments, the broken promises and the open hostility of Sarcey, then the reigning pontiff of French dramatic criticism. Jules Claretie pretended a sympathy that he did not feel, and it was only when pressure was brought by Edouard Thierry that his masterpiece, "Les Corbeaaux," was put on the stage after many disheartening delays; after it had been refused at the Vaudeville, the Gymnase, the Odeon, the Porte-Saint-Martin, the Gaite, the Oluny and the Ambigu. Such perseverance is positively heroic.

* * *

I know of few more diverting books than Becque's Memoirs and the record of the Literary Quarrels. If he was gay, careless and unspoiled by his failures in his daily existence, he must have saved his bile for his books. They are vitriolic. The lashing he gives Sarcey and Claretie is deadly. He had evidently put his revengeful feelings carefully away and only revived them when the time came, when his successes, his disciples, his election as the master of a powerful school, warranted his decanting the bitter vintage. How it sparkles, how it bites! He pours upon the head of Sarcey his choicest irony. After snubbing the young Becque, after pompously telling him that he had no talent, that he should take Scribe for a model, Sarcey at the end, when he saw Becque as a possible strong figure in the dramatic world, calmly wrote: "Oh! Becque, I have known you a long time. He brought me his first piece. He owes it to me that his 'The Prodigal Son' was played." To cap his attack, Becque prints this statement at the end of the miserable history of his efforts to secure a footing. It is almost too good to be true. Diabolically clever also is his imitation of a Sarcey critique on Moliere, for Sarcey was no friend of character dramas.

In his preface to "The Ravens" Becque announces that he is not a thinker, not a dreamer, not a psychologist, not a believer in heredity. As Jean Jullien truly said, the Becque plays prove nothing, are not photographic, are not deformations of life, but sincere life itself. The author relates that in composing—he had a large apartment on the rue de Matignon—he spent much time in front of a mirror searching for the exact gesture, for the exact glance of the eye, for the precise intonation. This fidelity to nature recalls a similar procedure of Flaubert, who chanted at the top of his formidable voice his phrases to see if they would stand the test of breathing. Becque caught the just color of every speech, and it is this preoccupation with essentials of his art that enabled him to set on their feet most solidly all of his characters. They live, they have the breath of life in them; when they walk or talk we believe in them. The peep he permits us to take into his workshop is of much value to the student.

* * *

He admired Antoine, naturally, and his opinion of Zola I have recorded. He rapped Brunetiere harply over the knuckles for assuming that criticism conserves the tradition of literature. Vain words, cried Becque; literature makes itself despite criticism, it is ever in advance of the critics. Only a sterile art is the result of academies. Curiously enough, Becque had a consuming admiration for Sardou. Him he proclaimed the real master, the man of imagination, observation, the masterly manipulator of the character of characters. This is rather disconcerting to those who admire in the Becque plays just those qualities in which Sardou is deficient. Perhaps the fact that Sardou absolutely forced the production of Becque's "L'Enfant Prodigue" may have accentuated his praise of that prestidigitator of Marly. Becque entertained a qualified opinion of Ibsen and an overwhelming feeling for Tolstoy as dramatist. The Russian's "Powers of Darkness" greatly affected the Frenchman. (Becque was born in 1837 and died in 1900.)

And what is this naturalistic formula of Becque's that escaped the notice of the zealous Zola and set the pace for nearly all the younger men? Is it not the absence of a formula of the tricks of construction religiously handed down by the Scribe-Sardou school? As is generally the case, the disciples have gone their master one better in their disdain of solid workmanship. The taint of the artificial, of the sawdust, is missing in Becque's masterpieces; yet with all their large rhythms, unconventional act-ends and freedom from the cliche, there is no staggedness in detail; indeed, close study reveals the preesnce of a delicate, intricate mechanism, so shielded by the art of the dramatist as to illude us into believing that we are in the presence of unreasoned reality. Setting aside his pessimism, his harsh handling of character, his want of sympathy—a true objectivity—Becque is as much a theatermensch as Sardou. He saw the mad futility of the literary men who invaded the theater full of arrogant belief in their formulas, in their newer conventions that would save supplanted older ones. As a practical playwright, our author had no patience with those who attempted to dispense with the frame of the footlights, who would turn the playhouse into a literary farm through which would gambol all sorts of incompetents masquerading as original dramatic thinkers.

* * *

Becque's major quality is his gift of lifelike characterization. Character with him is of prime importance. He did not tear down the structure of the drama, merely removing much of the scaffolding which time had allowed to disfigure its facade. While Zola and the rest were devising methods for doing away with the formal drama, Becque sat reading Moliere. Moliere is his real master—Moliere and life, as Augustin Filon truthfully says. In his endeavor to put before us his people in a simple, direct way he did smash several conventions. He usually lands his audience in the middle of the action, omitting the old-fashioned exposition act, careful preparation and sometimes development, as we know it in the well-regulated drama. But search for his reasons and they are not long concealed. Logical he is, though it is not the cruel logic of Paul Hervieu, his most distinguished artistic descendant. The logic of Becque's events must retire before the logic of hic characters, that is all. Humanity, then, is his chief concern. He cares little for literary style. He is not a stylist, though he has style—the stark, individual style of Henry Becque.

Complications, catastrophe, denouement, all these are attenuated in the Becque plays. Atmosphere supplies the exposition, character painting, action. The impersonality of the dramatist is profound. If he had projected himself or his views upon the scene, then we would have been back with Dumas and his preachments. Faguet was right when he wrote that we are returning to the Moliere comedy of character. Movement in the accepted sense there is but little. Treatment and interpretation have been whittled away to a mere profile, so that in the Antoine repertory the anecdote bluntly expressed and dumped on the boards is a slice of real life without comment—without skill, one is tempted to add.

Becque was nearer the fountain head of classic form than Hervieu, Donnay, De Curel, eGorges Ancey, Leon Hennique, Camille Fabre, Maurice Donnay, Lemaitre, Henri Lavidan and the rest of the younger group that delighted in honoring him with the title of supreme master. At best Becque's was a modified naturalism. He recognized the limitations of his material and subdued his hand to them. M. Filon points out with his accustomed acuity that Becque and his followers tried to bring their work "into line with the philosophy of Taine," as Dumas and Augier's ideas corresponded with those of Victor Cousin, the eclectic philosopher. Positivism rather than naked realism is Becque's note. The cold-blooded pessimism that pervades so unpleasantly many of his comedies was the resultant of a temperament sorely tried by experience, and one steeped in the materialism of the Second Empire.

So we get from him the psychology of the crowd instead of the hero ego of earlier dramatists. He contrives a dense atmosphere into which he plunges his puppets, and often his people appear cold, heartless, cynical. He is a surgeon, more Ibsen than he would ever acknowledge in his calm exposure of social maladies. And what a storehouse have been his studies of character for the generation succeeding him! Doubtless the "grass is already green on the grave of dramatic naturalism," as Filon boasted. Becque forged the formula, the others but developed it. His plays must be examined separately.

MISS EULALIA BENNETT,
New Leading Woman of Elliott & Courtenay Stock Company.

SIR HENRY'S CAT

Cause of Maude Fealy Getting an Engagement.

Denver, June 17.—To a Denver girl, Miss Maude Fealy, falls the honor of becoming leading woman for Sir Henry Irving, regarded as the leading actor of the world today.

An envelope with the coat of arms of the titled English actor, arrived in Denver last week from London. It was a bulky document and contained a contract signed by Sir Henry and his business representative, and incidentally contained the manscript for three parts for different productions that will be given by Sir Henry in London this fall and winter.

A brief note from Sir Henry requested that Miss Fealy sign the contract and return it to London by the first mail. Sir Henry also requested that Miss Fealy sail for London by the 15th of August at the latest.

There was just a bit of air excitement around the home of Miss Fealy in the Utopia apartments on the arrival of the letter.

Miss Fealy inspected the contract with care, walked to her writing desk with a sigh, reached for pen and ink and wrote her name in full.

"That ends it," she said. "God bless the cat."

Then Miss Fealy looked up with a happy smile.

"It was odd, I suppose, that last expression, but one can hardly help blessing the cat—a cat known as Sir Henry—when all the details are known."

"This, you see ,is the part of 'Fair Rosamond,' she said, holding up a roll of manuscript. 'Fair Rosamond of the 'Becket, which will be my first part. And here is Yarah of Waterloo, and here is another part in the 'Lyons Mail.' These are the only ones that have arrived up to the present time."

"But, Miss Fealy, the cat and the 'God bless the cat' you used; what does that mean?"

"When I was playing with William Gilette in 'Sherlock Holmes' in London, two years ago. I had the use of Sir Henry Irving's dressing room in the old Lyceum. It was a beautiful room, filled with pointings, photographs and interesting notes and letters from people from all parts of the world. Sir Henry has a cat around the theater, an old cat that he had named Sir Henry.

"I was in the habit of drinking malted milk after each performance, and the cat would come to my dressing room for a portion. I took a fancy to the cat and I always had time to put some new bright ribbon around his neck each day. Sir Henry had seen my work in 'Sherlock Holmes' and was good enough to come back on the stage and discuss the part with me. He went away to London and on his return we were still playing 'Sherlock.' He came upon the stage one day, when he was directing a rehearsal of Faust. He noticed his namesake, Sir Henry, come down the stage in a bright ribbon. He stopped his work and asked who had decorated the cat in such a lavish manner. An old woman who cleaned up the dressing room told him it was my work.

"'That's very kind of Miss Fealy, very kind. I must thank her,' he said; and he did thank me.

"And that's my reason for blessing the cat."

SHOWS ON "THE PIKE."

Native Actresses Help Out the French Colony.

St. Louis, June 18.—France cried out, "Help me, America!" Our republic responded to the call of the next greatest of republics. Five native vaudeville actresses were rushed to the rescue. This happened in the French colony on the Pike. Wasn't it natural that sightseers should think women from Paris, surely beautiful and probably frisky, were wearing decolete gowns in the Palais du Costumes? But people who entered met with disappointment. They got their money's worth of the show, but not of the kind that most of them had believed they were buying. They saw first an extensive exhibition of clothes such as have been worn in France, but the wearers were wax dummies grouped in alcoves along a spacious corridor. Not a bare shoulder shrugged, not a sleeveless arm swayed, not a coiffured head nodded, not an eye winked. These models of belles were models in wax. Away down at the end of the hall were six lively women pacing listlessly to and fro, but not one was anything like beautiful, or at all Parisian in manner. A placard said they were exhibits from a St. Louis store. Only the dummies were Frenchy. The fact that the show contained nothing frivolous was soon bruited abroad and something in that way had to be done. Hence the cry of France for America's help. The response was embodied in two of our singers and three of our dancers, all good ones. They are given each hour with a lively bit of vaudeville that gives relief to the inanimate things on view. Now the barker has something to talk about.

* * *

No promise made on the Pike is more misleading than the one which says that the Pasion Play of Oberammergau is given in a church in the Tyrolean Alps. Most of those who pay the admission fee expect, unreasonably of course, to see a dramatic performance; yet their credulity is not inexcusable, for a plentifully distributed circular speaks of the German professor who has "inaugurated the presentations of the play in person" and of the duplication of an Alpine church as "a place suitable to the play's dignity and sacred character." True, a perusal of the entire circular should advise the reader that the "pictorial representation" is merely a magic lantern show; yet disappointment is expressed by many when, on seating themselves in a pew, they turn their eyes reverently toward the altar end of the fine little German village church and see such a white cloth as moving photographs are thrown upon in the vaudeville theaters. But the pictures prove to be motionless and of the old-fashioned stereopticon order. They give views in and about Oberammergau as a prelude to portraits of the peasant actors in character costumes, and these are followed by a series picturing scenes in the Passion Play, while a young man tells about them from a pulpit at one side. As an illustrated lecture on the famous Oberammergau theatrical production this would compare favorably with the many that have been taken through this country, but it isn't a performance at all. It is a lecture with magic lantern illustrations. The talker looks like a divinity student unpracticed in church service, and at first he seems afraid of his own voice, but he gains poise as he goes along and pulls himself together for a peroration that has considerable twang and vim. Then the organist plays the doxology and the congregation disperses.

* * *

The Moorish Palace is a waxworks show, but you don't know it until you get in. The outside display simply indicates that all is alive inside. The word "harem" is heard in the talk of the persuader, and he mentions a "performance." Above the entrance is a balcony open to the Pike, and to that emerges a boy and a girl to sing and dance. There is nothing characteristic of Morocco in what they do, and none in their aspect beyond the costumes. However, all of us know that the Moors are sensual, and some of us remember that at the Midway were Moorish girls. So we are not disheartned by the propriety of the boy and girl in the balcony, but are encouraged by the two groups of wax harem women in the alcoves at the sides of the portal, and we pass in with nerves braced for a shock. We get the shock, sure enough, but not of the kind that hope has promised. Pictures defile before us as composed of desire and expectation. Therefore it is hopefully that visitors go into the Moorish Palace. But who enters there may as well wage hope behind.

The light is so low that on coming in from the sunshine nothing is visible. The timid visitor, feeling that he is in a wicked place, claps one hand on his watch, the other on his cash pocket, and strains his eyes for highwaymen. Slowly his vision adjusts itself to the dimness, and he plucks up courage to go ahead. A corridor is before him, and he finds that it has alcoves on both sides. What look at first sight to be human beings are in these places. He approaches a group. They are wax effigies. So are those in the next lot—and the next—and so on to the end of the long passage. The tableaux represent characters and occasions in the history of the Moors; illustrations of various grades of home life in finery and tatters, in palaces and hovels; of religious ceremonies and socity festivities. But there isn't one breath of life in the whole exhibition, except the song-and-dance team in the free balcony outside.

* * *

A Parisian theater has been opened. Two Frenchmen, in the uniform of gendarmes, stand beside the entrance. The barker is an American. So is the ticket-seller. So are the boys, in smart, red uniforms, who usher us to seats. But if we have been in Paris we feel that we are there again, so blightly and cheerfully like a vaudeville theater of the boulevards is this. Let me tell you right off that it is no Moulin Rouge we have got into, but a cafe chantant, where we shall get vivacity, and even indelicacy, but no flagrant indecency. And we shall see how much French vaudeville is like the American, and how much it is different. The entertainment is going to disappoint some of those present, for among them are staid folks of the kind who go to see that goldarned "Sapho" perform when they are in N'York, but they are squeamish about even "Uncle Tom's Cabin" when they are t'hum. In the assemblage on the other hand, is a party from New York's smart set. We are a queer conglomerate at the fair.

The comic men in this show from Paris demonstrate the reason why their sort get no favor on our stage, although many have tried. Their principal idea of fun is to make themselves outlandish in aspect. The first on this program wears, as the feature of his grotesque costume, a huge cravat of brilliant green.

This Frenchman's humor doesn't rise to the level of his neck, and so keeps below his brain. He clowns mechanically with a construction that makes him seem to be a dwarf in a basket carried on the back of a negress; again is a small jockey on a race horse, and again as Theodore Roosevelt rough riding on a bucking burro. He used his own legs vigorously for those of the beasts and worked their eyes, ears and tails by pulling strings. We in th's country have consigned such childish foolery to clowns in the three-ring circuses. Our stage beasts have to be as intelligent as the men inside can make them. A second comedian is built out to enormous rotundity, and his nose and ears are extended in hideous malformation. He is accompanied by a woman whose fat is real and they constitute what we call a musical team, using canes that become flutes, umbrellas that become flageolets, frying pans that become banjos and hats that become concertinas. Finally the man plays a concealed shime of bells by striking his false paunch in the right spots, and at the same time works an electric light plant to make his eyes, nose and ears incandescent. Also, the soles of his feet. Also, the sat of his trousers. Very subtle humor that.

* * *

I suppose I ought to tell, too, what a young woman does. She impersonates a French rustic maiden of a type corresponding to our Sis Hopkins and Rickety Ann. Vocally all these grotesques are far superior to ours, and this gawk sings admirably a ditty about her first visit to Paris. It is at the climax of her sketch that she introducos a bit of artistic fancy—a touch of Ibsenism realism—a stroke of dramatic genius. All along her head has itched and she has scratched it often. Now she finds the louse that has been biting her, places it deliberately on the floor and stamps on it. Paris, you know, is the art center of the earth.

However, all the rest of the fiminine portion of this Parisian show is dainty in manner, even when the matter becomes somewhat indelicate. Two women are graceful in the contortive activity of whirlwind waltzes with moments of cancan. In their finely correct gowning they are fit for a fashionable drawing room, though they go heels-over-head oftener than is habitual in the best society. A troupe of twelve little girls—not women, except as they are grown up, but really girls yet—march out in saucy costumes to sing and dance. Their art is surely an inspiration from America. The music comes pretty near to ragtime and the dancing includes movements of march and tableau, like those which originated in this country.

* * *

The biggest show in area on the Pike is the Tyholean Alps. Its frontage is built up in a representation in miniature, yet a hundred feet high in spots, of an Alpine range of mountains. A journey through them may be made at the cost of a quarter. I say "through them," not "over them," because the route lies inside of them and not on top. You start in an ascending railway car, but go only a little way before the guide cries "All out!" You are angry for a moment at having to walk when you expected to ride. But the view that bursts on the vision drives every feeling our of mind save admiration. Do you recall a first visit to one of those wax cycloramas that were built in our larger cities years ago and thrived till they ceased to be a wonder? The spectator stood on a high central platform and looked at a painting which covered the wall of the circular structure. This panorama was so good in prespective that its distance of fifty feet from the spectator seemed more like fifty miles. The intervening ground was filled in with what, in theaters, are called "set pieces," and they were so blended into the perpendicular picture that the illusion was amazing That same cyclorama principle is used, with many variations for this trip through Alpine mountains and villages. The tourist is led through winding rock-bound passages, and every little way, at one side or the other, a view that seems to comprise miles of beautifully scenery opens up. Most of the Tyrolean famous places are thus reproduced.

"And now, ladies and gentlemen," says the guide, "please step into this elevator, and we will carry you up 5000 feet to the top of a mountain."

A disenchanting trick, a Coney Island sort of joke, is then played on the party. The elevator is joggled as if with its rapid rise. The cables run swiftly through the corners. Outside a window a surface of rock is rushing downward. This lasts five minutes. In that time the car has risen probably seventy feet, but when you step out the height looks like the mile that the guide spoke of. You are standing on a dizzy glacier. Down in the depths on three sides of this apex are valleys, with here and there a cottage, and at one point the spire of a village church. Away off ranges of mountains rise beyond the line of verdure into the altitude of perpetual snow and ice. The seeming distances are marvelous. The awe inspired in me I estimate as worth about $5, and so it was cheap at a quarter.

OFF SEASON GOSSIP.

Mrs. Fiske, in bringing her season to a close, encountered one of those little squalls which bob up on the surface of placid waters now and then and disturb the equilibrium of even the most distinguished of players. Like Richard Mansfield and other genuises, Mrs. Fiske has demonstrated that she has a temper. Ann Arbor and the students of Michigan university are the discoverers of this trait in the famous actress. As told in the press dispatches from there recently, Mrs. Fiske elected to enlighten Ann Arbor, its students and its other people with Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler." Just at present Mrs. Fiske is suffering from the Ibsenian affliction in its most virulent form. She admits that she did not like Ibsen at first, but thinks, after two or three years of such study as she has given him that the poisonous and cynical old Norseman is the greatest genius of them all. Now, it so happened that Ann Arbor cared more for peanuts than the human vivisection of Ibsen. The cracking of the brittle guber shells aroused Mrs. Fiske first to anger and then to unacustomed protest. The curtain was lowered in the midst of the performance. Mrs. Fiske left the theater in a huff and the college boys finished their peanuts on the way back to the university, apparently glad that they had seen only a small part of Ibsen's play. The answer is that if Ann Arbor prefers "The Girl From Maxim's" to "Hedda Gabbler," with peanuts for a side relish, they are entitled to their taste. If Mrs. Fiske is devoted to Ibsen, let her take her friend's plays to the market where they are appreciated. Just where that market is located in America has not been discovered, but since she has quarreled with the syndicate Mrs. Fiske is the original route discoverer, and somewhere along the trail she may locate a few spots where Ibsen is an attraction. If she does not find the location her quarrel is with herself, and not with people like the boys at Ann Arbor.

William Norris seems to have made good as a star. The play, "A Business Man," in which he is winning stellar distinction in Chicago at present, is a success of generous proportions, and in the leading role this young actor is credited with having a great part.

London is not satisfied with treating our spring invasion with a chilliness that is not in keeping with the balmy period of the year, but some of the cruel critics there have actually undertaken to "hand it" to that marvelous American institution, the chorus girl. London does not make the delicate distinction between the plain, ordinary spear carrier, known as the chorus girl, and the modish wearer of the latest gowns, who is designated as a show girl. In fact, they generalize in the British metropolis. This in itself is crime enough, but great shadows of sadness, they say our American chorus girl is bad. Things have evidently come to a pretty pass when a self-respecting and hard-working chorus girl has to go to London and be roasted for the mere fact that her friend, Reginald Sissboom, has seen fit to ascertain by actual experience whether she thinks the lobsters are broiled as thoroughly in the Hotel Cecil as they are in this country. Evidently our American "merry, merry girls" have caused some anguish in the British breast. The virtuous London Globe recently went out of its way to say:

"No one can doubt that the free and easy manner in which the American chorus girl conducts herself, both on and off the stage, with particular reference to the manner in which she treats her audience, is slowly but surely dragging the musical comedy in the mire."

According to this theory, gentle chorus lady, the degeneracy of the stage rests upon your head. You are ruining musical comedy, and that in itself is something that we had about begun to believe was even beyond your reach. Why do you not imitate your English cousins? You know that a British blonde, with a penchant for abbreviated costume upon the stage, would never scan the audience to locate her particular college rave or brainless Johnnie in the crush, staid Briton lass would be seen out later than 5 a. m. for anything in the world.

But if one very pretty member of the American chorus ranks who was approached voiced the sentiments of her sisters' labors in the realms of the merry, merry, the London Globe missed its mark. Very tersely, but not said in malice when this young lady was asked to answer the charge, she replied:

"Oh, pliff."

Did it again. Beat 'em. Skinned the Bugville bunch. Trampled on their vulgar necks. Tamed the Cussed Colts and sent them back to the green pastures in the suburbs.

Koukalik, the matinee idol, was in the box for Duluth, and before an appreciative audience of fair ladies, he gave a finished interpretation of how baseball should be pitched. That's what he did. He kept the ladies and the fans also applauding his good work. With the form he showed yesterday, the hated rival persons looked easier than the Maroons, up to the last inning, when they brought a couple of runs across the plate, and gave some of the fans palpitation of the central organ in their circulatory system.

The White Sox have a most discouraging habit of landing on a pitcher in the first inning, and winning the game then and there. They started out to do it yesterday. Ball got four bad ones, and Corrigan died for his sake—sacrificed. Then the boy captain came in on an error by that erratic person who acts as agent at depot nnmber two for the Bugville bunch.

It was in the fourth that Mr. O'Leary, the King of Sweat Stool, did his little stunt. Quillan had ripped off his usual single, and gone to second on Zink's sacrifice. Then Dan bit the bulb one of the swatfullest swats of the year. Away out over the heads of the herdsmen in the outer gardens it soared, and dropped over the new extension to the fence, for four bases. Quillan and Dan smiled serenely down the line to the plate with two runs in their possession. After Lagger had been retired, Owens didn't know any better than to tear off a two-bagger—just to show he could do it.

Things looked propitious in the fifth. Ball gave the sphere a most memorable mop to deep center, and the longshoreman who cavorts in that garden did a circus stunt, running backward and jumping into the air to bring it down with one glove. It robbed Ball of a double, but the fans gave Mr. Anderson the glad hand. Corrigan lined out a nice clean single, and Randall came to bat. Newt—no, don't cheer—Newt only gave Mr. Cameron a chance to show how to make a double play unassisted. Quillan had got the engines started in good shape for the second depot when Newt landed on the ball and sent a sizzling liner down to Cameron. It stuck to his glove and he walked back to touch first. While Quillan was sprinting for third, thinking Randall had made a hit.

Koukalik let up in the ninth and allowed the mortally injured two runs, just to save the disgrace of a shutout and to keep Emil the rooter from jumping in the lake. Leach, the little college boy who plays right field, suddenly remembered that he used to hit the ball down in Minneapolis, and landed on one of Coke's curves for a single. Wells went out on a long fly to left, and Rogers fanned. It looked as if it were all over, but the Superior contingent still had a cheer coming. Egan singled and then little Mr. Doll walked up to the plate and drove one out over Lagger's head for two bases, bringing home two runs. But Plymat, the new third baseman, was not equal to the occasion, and three of Coke's mysterious benders finished the game, with one run to the good.

They are playing Bugville again today. Rusty, the man with the sunset hair, is whirling his slants over the plate, and if some kind, Christian ball player will kindly take a fall out of those Terrible Tigers, the White Stockings will proceed to take a half-nelson on the pennant during the remainder of this Superior series. THEY CANNOT LOSE.

Tigers Keep Winning Gait, Defeating Fargo Again.

Grand Forks, June 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The second game of the Fargo-Grand Forks series was played here yesterday. It was a little faster game than the one yesterday, but the interest was not so great, as the scores did not seem as hard to get. The Werdenites were demolished by a score of 3 to 1.

"Iron Man" Morton was on the slab for the Tigers and allowed the visitors but three hits. One of which was a home run by Traeger in the second inning. The other two hits were secured by Demontreville and Lempke. The home run made by Traeger was the only score the Fargo bunch got.e

The first score made by the Tigers was in the first inning. A single by Nagel and a two-bagger by Dunn did the business. Then came five innings of shut outs. In the seventh, the fans got busy and there was something doing. Cole led off with a hit, and was followed by a sacrifice on the part of Martin. Then Sharnweber reached for a three-bagger and the game was won. In the eighth Nagel led off with a hit and was followed by a sacrifice. A hit on the part of Dun sent him to third. He scored on a passed ball.

Morton was in fine form, getting nine strike outs, and issuing one pass. Lempke struck out three and issued no passes. Cheek did the running for Nagel. Sharnweber went through the whole game without an assist, putout or error, an unusual ocurrence for a short stop. The score:

WINNIPEG SHUT OUT.

Crookston Gets Revenge For Previous Day's Defeat.

Crookston, Minn., June 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Crookston found an easy mark in the Winnipeg team, yesterday afternoon, and got sweet revenge for the defeat of the day before, by shutting out the Maroons by the score of 6 to 0. Thomas had the champions at his mercy, allowing but three hits. The local men were on their mettle and played the kind of ball that wins pennants. The feature of the game was the batting of Novacek, who had two home runs to his credit, one of which brought in two men. A three bagger was also chalked up to his credit. The score:

ARE HEAVY BATTERS

Good Stick Work By White Sox During Home Series.

O'Leary, Quillan and Randall Above .300—Owens Leads Pitchers.

With the close of the present home series, some of the statistics of the work of the team will be of interest to the fans. On the present home series Owens has proved the most effective of the twirlers. He has won all three of the home games pitched, besides being a tower of strength to the team as a substitute second baseman. He is one of the best all-round men on the team, batting at a .200 clip and fielding his position in good style.

Shaw has a record of one game won and none lost, but the victory was really due to Koukalik, who went in in the sixth inning and pulled the game out of a hole by superb work. As Shaw pitched the majority of innings, the game will be credited to him, however. Gehring, Noldin and Koukalik are all tied, each having won two games and lost one on the present home series.

Gehring and Noldin are known to the fans from last year, and their good work is not surprising. They pitched good ball last year, with a losing team behind them, and with a team like the White Sox they are difficult propositions to go up against. Gehring has been weaker with the bat this year than formerly, but Noldin and Koukalik have been hitting at a .273 clip.

Koukalik's good showing has been a source of no little satisfaction to the fans, and "Coke" is one of the most popular men on the team. His unfailing good humor makes him a general favorite, and he takes his bumps with good spirit. It is a peculiar fact that in each of the games pitched the opposing team has scored but two runs off his delivery, and they have scored in but one inning in each game. Coke has had hard luck in this respect, and has been robbed of shut-outs on at least two occasions when he deserved them. This means that in the three games he has given the opposing team twenty-four goose eggs.

The great feature of Owens' work is the manner in which he relies on the field. He never exerts himslf when the bases are empty, and works like a demon when there is any danger of a score.

O'Leary has led the team in batting in the home series cheifly on account of his phenomenal record of five hits out of five times up in one of the Fargo games. He is closely followed by Quillan and Randall with Zink a good fourth. The following averages are taken from the official scores in the home games. Lagger, who makes a poor showing, was hitting well on the trip, and his average would be higher if the games abroad were counted:

O'Leary	.533
Quillan	.350
Randall	.340
Zink	.290
Noldin	.273
Koukalik	.273
Corrigan	.240
Ball	.220
Owens	.200
Hughes	.143
Lagger	.140
Gehring	.100

Hughes has made up for his weakness at the bat with a perfect fielding record in the three games he has played, and both Koukalik and Noldin are tied with him in this respect.

Randall has the best fielding average of the outfielders with an average of .923, and Lagger comes a close second with an average of .920. Jack Corrigan makes a poor showing on account of two very excusable errors on hard chances.

FINE GAME PLAYED

Kelley-How-Thomson Nine Defeats Northern Pacific Bunch.

Fashions Go to Aitkin Sunday, Big Duluths to Cloquet.

COMMERCIAL LEAGUE.

STANDING.

Clubs.	P.	W.	L.	Pct.

Kelley-How-Thomson	3	2	1	.666
Northern Pacific ...	4	2	2	.500
First National Bank	3	0	3	.000

The victory of the Kelley-How-Thomson team Thursday evening over the railroad men left the former a close second in the race. The game was one of the best amateur games played in the city this year, the hardware men winning by a score of 4 to 3.

The next regular game is scheduled for Thursday evening, when F. A. Patrick & Co. will meet the bankers. The latter have strengthened their team considerably since the last game, and will make an effort to pull the dry goods men out of first place in the race for the pennant.

* * *

The Duluth Fashions will leave this afternoon for Aitkin, where they will meet the team from that city tomorrow. The Fashions have defeated both the Cloquet and Two Harbors teams this year, and are in line for the amateur championship of Northern Minnesota. The team has only been defeated once this year, when the Superior league team won by a small margin. Lovell will be in the box for the Fashions tomorrow, and from the form he has been showing should win his game.

* * *

The Big Duluth team will journey to Cloquet again this afternoon for a game tomorrow. In the game last Sunday the clothing men won by a score of 10 to 8, but the Cloquet men just missed batting out a victory by a strong rally in the ninth. They were anxious for another game, and the Big Duluth team consented to go out again tomorrow. Menelce will be in the box for the local players, and they will endeavor to make the victory more decisive than that of last Sunday.

* * *

The Millers will meet the West Duluth team at the Thirty-second avenue west grounds tomorrow afternoon. The Millers won their first game last Sunday from the Columbias of Superior, and are out after the scalps of some of the local amateur teams. They will probably go to Aitkin for two games on July 3 and 4.

WHAT PERDICARIS DID FOR TANGIER.

The capture of Ion Perdicaris and Cromwell Varley by the brigand Raisuli is a matter of more than ordinary and personal concern. Tangier is within five days' journey from London, says the Lancet. It possesses so many natural and climatic advantages that its popularity as a climatic resort was likely to increase more and more. Under the leadership of Ion Perdicaris the European residents had constituted themselves into a sort of borough, elected a municipality and duly proceeded to impose taxes on each other. They used the money thus collected to build some sewers, to pave some streets, and in fact, to introduce sanitary improvements which rendered the place more inhabitable. Therefore, more visitors came, land increased in value, and so many new and European houses were built that had this continued the picturesque character of the place would soon have been destroyed. Then people would cease to go to Tangier, and all this building would have proved useless and a dead loss. But the Moors rebelled. They did not, perhaps, greatly object to the improvements made at Tangier, particularly as for the moment it brought in a golden harvest; but they could not tolerate European ideas at the court of their own Sultan and in the interior of the country. Little by little the sultan has lost his authority and the country has fallen into a state of anarchy.

It is not probable that even Raisuli and his wild men would willingly do Mr. Perdicaris or Mr. Varley any bodily injury, but Mr. Perdicaris is not in good health, and at his age the rough existence he will be forced to lead may produce evil results. Perdicaris all his life has been devoted to good deeds. No one could be more popular among the Moslem Moors, whom he has defended over and over again from the extortion of Jew and Christian usurers, acting under the cover of the protege system. It will go hard with Raisuli and his tribe if they injure him. To the European Mr. Perdicaris has also been a constant friend and the leader in all practical useful works. It was Mrs. Perdicaris who organized the soup kitchens when there was danger of cholera, so that the want of food should not prepare the way for the outbreak of the disease. In all public works that have contributed to render Tangier clean and healthy, Mr. Perdicaris was the principal initiator and donor. The cause of public health has in him its first and most useful champion, while in regard to the cruel abuses practised under the protege system he has been instrumental in bringing about reform.

WHAT DR. SMITH SAYS.

Dr. Julia Holmes Smith, of Chicago, encourages man to wander from his own fireside, and repeats this variation of "Homekeeping youth had ever homely wits:" "Men who stay at home every night aren't good for anything; it is my observation for a quarter of a century. I side with the men on this question of organization. I don't like to see a man at home every night, with one foot on the cradle. Clubs and lodges are good things. The man whose attention is given all day to buying and selling, to contracts, to figures, or to other routine business, is in a rut. He needs change. In the evening, if he goes to his lodge or to his club, the merchant is given an opportunity to meet the banker, the lawyer meets the doctor, the grocer meets the architect, and they all find recreation in it." The young women of Chicago "are favorable to men's clubs and lodges." So vanishes the palaeolithic jest about "going to the lodge."

PLAN BIG EVENT

Gun Club Arranges Program For Tournament Next Month.

Sweepstakes With Good Money For High Average Marksmen.

The tenth annual tournament of the Duluth Central Gun club will be held in Duluth on July 20 and 21.

The members are already commencing to lay their plans for the tournament, and expect to have a number of outside marksmen entered in the different events.

The events will all take the form of sweepstakes, and the members of the gun club will add $350 for high average prizes. On Wednesday there will be thirteen events. Events number 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, 9 and 10 will be for fifteen targets each, with an entrance fee of $1.50 for each event. Events number 5, 6, 11 and 12 have an entrance fee of $2 and twenty targets are shot at. Event No. 13, known as the wolf, is for twenty-five targets with an entrance fee of $5.

The money from each event is divided between the two marksmen with the highest averages, in the ratio of 60 per cent for the first and 40 per cent for the second.

The targets in the event known as the Wolf do not count in the averages.

The program on the second day is the same as that on the first, with the exception of the event No. 13, which will be known as "The Coyote." The marksmen will shoot by classes in this event. The entrance fee will be $5 and there will be two moneys, 40 and 60 per cent.

In order to qualify for the high average prizes the marksmen must shoot in all of the events but the Wolf and Coyote, and the $350 donated by the club will be divided among the different marksmen according to the averages made by them in all of the events. No. 1 will secure $20, No. 2, $19, and the following eight marksmen corresponding amounts, each receiving $1 less than the preceding one. No. 11 will receive $10 and all the following marksmen down to and including No. 29 will receive like prizes. No. 30 will be given a prize of $5, which is the lowest. The tournament is open to amateurs only, and professionals and manufacturers' agents will be barred, although a number of them have been invited to attend and shoot for records. The shooting will commence at 9 o'clock each day on the ranges at Thirty-second avenue east, and the members look for the most successful tournament ever held in Duluth.

BARON KENTARO KANEKO.

One of the Most Interesting Foreigners Now Visiting Here.

A man much in the public eye just now is Baron Kentaro Kaneko, Bachelor of Laws and Doctor of Laws, Harvard University, member of the Japanese House of Peers, formerly Minister of State for Agriculture and Commerce, one of the four authors of the Japanese constitution, and special envoy to America of the Japanese Emperor. He has made many friends and aroused much interest by his addresses at Harvard, where he has been a guest of the Japan Club, and elsewnere, and by his published articles on Japan's law and constitution, and on the war in the Far East. The July Century also announces an article from his pen, "The Magna Charta of Japan."

Baron Kentaro Kaneko was born in 1853, the year of Commodore Perry's famous visit to Japan. At the age of sixteen he attracted the attention of Marquis Kuroda, one of the richest and most powerful of the old Daimios of Japan, who determined to provide for his education and sent him in 1871 to Boston. After his studies at the Rice School and the English High School, young Kaneko entered the law office of Messrs. Gray & Swift, his work there being largely directed by Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr., now of the United States Supreme Court. During his course in the Harvard Law School, from which he graduated in 1878, he enjoyed the friendship of Longfellow, Dr. Holmes, Hon. Robert C. Winthrop and other well known men, who like the old Daimio, were attracted by the amicable qualities and the intellectual promise of the young Japanese.

Returning to Japan immediately after graduation, he was in 1880 appointed secretary of the Senate, and had assigned to him the task of examining the Constitutions of all the States of Europe and America, in preparation for the impending change in the government of his native country. Four years afterward he became secretary to Marquis—then Count—Ito, and was appointed on the commission to draft the new constitution. The following year, continuing in the same line of work, he was on the commission to reorganize the administrative departments of the government. For the service thus rendered, on the promulgation of the constitution he was rewarded with the decoration of the "Order of the Sacred Treasure."

In 1889, receiving an appointment as imperial commissioner to study the actual workings of parlimentary institutions, he traveled extensively in Europe and America, and on his return, as Chief Secretary of the House of Peers, superintended the organization of the new Japanese Parliament. 1892, having been elected a member of the Institute of International Law, Mr. Kaneko attended the meeting in Geneva, where his plea for the abolition of Extraterritoriality was influential in determining the favorable vote of the institute. In 1894, becoming Vice-Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, he was again honored by the emperor with an appointment as life member of the House of Peers, and received the additional decoration of the "Order of the Rising Son." Resigning his office on a change of ministry in 1898, when Marquis Ito again came into power, Mr. Kaneko entered his cabinet as Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, holding the office until the premier again retired. Since then he has been mayor of one of the Tokyo municipalities.

While Baron Kaneko has come to America as a special envoy of the Japanese emperor, his field of activity in commercial and economic rather than, narrowly speaking, diplomatic. Broadly speaking, however, it is diplomatic; for his government, looking hopefully toward the end of the present struggle, realizes the growing importance of the United States on the Pacific, and believes that a community of trade interests between the two nations, convincingly demonstrated and carried into effect, will, with the Ango-Japanese alliance, constitute an impassable barrier to future Asiatic encroachments by Russia, or any other power.

MADISON CREW

Should Beat Wisconsin Record In the Poughkepsie Regetta.

Will Go East Just In Time For the Race.

Madison, Wis., June 18.—Only a few days remain before the Wisconsin crew will leave for the East in which the men will have nothing to do but row and nothing to think about but oarsmanship.

On the evening of June 21 or the morning of June 22 the Wisconsin party will leave for Poughkeepsie, arriving there on the afternoon of June 23 in time to rig their shells for work on the day following. As the race this year will be held June 28, there will be but four days before the day of the race in which the men can practice and prepare for the great regatta.

As the schedule indicates, it is the intention of Coach O'Dea to vary the plan of previous years and to prepare the men for their event entirely on hom waters, with little or no work to be done at Poughkeepsie other than what is absolutely necessary to keep the men in trim. Consequently the coming week will see the finishing touches put to the form of the crew. As the hard training for condition will all be done during the next ef'w days, much depends upon the weather conditions.

At the present time it is certain that the 'varsity and four-oared crews will be entered at Poughkeepsie. There was also a prospect that the university freshmen would be sent, and the decision as to this mattr was to have been made last Saturday, it all depending upon the amount of money that could have been collected by subscription. On the previous Thursday, however, a member of the freshman crew left for home, and as his absence would be fatal, no freshman eight will be sent.

The damaged four-oared shell was received from the express company, and although the boat is in a bad condition, Coach O'Dea believes that he will be able to patch it up so that it can be used in the race, although it will be impossible to fix it so that the speed can be got out of it that would be expected from a perfect boat.

The Wisconsin party will this year have the same quarters as last year—the Riverview Military academy—in many respects the best quarters of all those occupied by the visiting crews.

As to the crew which will represent Wisconsin this year a great deal can be said, but not with the best assurance, as so much in the form and speed of the 'varsity eight will depend upon the work that has been done during the present week of practice. The greatest hardship at Wisconsin has always been inability to secure continuous practice for the crews, and the early part of the season has been no exception to the general rule. But the work has gone on fairly well, nevertheless, and at the present time the crew is rowing in good form.

The past week has been a favorable one and the crew that will represent Wisconsin will be stronger than that of last year for a certainty and perhaps strong enough and fast enough to be a big factor in the regatta.

A few evenings ago the 'varsity eight, upon which covered the four-mile course in the best of form, and but for a heavy wind that sprang up shortly after the start the trial probably would have been made in the fastest time of the season. The men all said the trial was most satisfactory, and Coach O'Dea, while he refused to give out the time of the trial, wore a satisfied smile that spoke for much. Davis, a freshman, was in the shell again, and finished as strong as the older men. The stroke held at 28 to the minute, which is to be Wisconsin's rowing stroke this year, and the boat rode on an even keel the whole distance.

AFFAIRS OF AN AFRICAN TRIBE.

A cowardly tribe in the interior of Africa, the Borans, is thus described by a British explorer: "They carry long spears with huge blades, which look grotesque in the hands of such a cowardly race. They wear loose knickers of American cotton cloth and a wrap of the same material over their shoulders. These garments are treated with 'ghi' (butter) till they look like black waterproof. This American cloth is very durable and is the only cloth for which there is any demand. It is the ordinary medium of exchange among the tribes from Dirri to the coast. The Boran either shaves his head or keeps his hair short, or long in ghi-covered ringlets, but he always wears a small pigtail. He ornaments himself with a necklace of small beads or plaited giraffe-tail hairs, also with many heavy bracelets of metal and ivory, which often incase his arm up to the elbow. Each of these is supposed to represent some dangerous animal, including man, which he has slain. Bands and tabs of giraffe skin complete his costume."

Borans are polygamists if they can afford the luxury, says the Chicago News. Their women have to content themselves with leather garments made of bullock hides scraped thin, clothing being considered much too valuable for them. They are weighed down with many bead necklaces. Their religion consists in a belief in a spirit, "Wak." The vagueness of their conception of "Wak" hown by the fact that the same word is used in the Boran tongue for the sky. They do not believe in any future state of existence, but try to avert present calamity by propitating Wak. This is done by sacrificing their children and their cattle. A Boran of any standing when he marries becomes a 'raba,' and for a certain period after marriage, probably four to eight years, he is obliged to leave any children that are born to him to die in the bush. No Boran cares to contemplate the fearful calamities with which Wak would visit him if he failed in this duty.

After the "raba" period the Boran becomes a "gudda." "This word," says the traveler who describes the natives, "happens to be the Hindustani for 'ass,' but if there were any connection the Boran would certainly be entitled to the rank earlier in life." Wak has no claim on Gudda's children, but neither has Gudda himself. He has to send them off at a very early age with a present of cattle and sheep to be brought up by the wata, who are the low hunter caste of the Borans. They remain with these people till they are grown and then return to the bosom of their people.

GAME MEN WIN OUT

In Baseball as In All Other Sports, Says Murnane.

Pittsburg In the Running For the League Championship.

T. H. Murnane says ina Boston letter: I once heard an old sport say the only dead game thing in the world was a fighting cock, who will never quit while able to raise his head, and will go to his death to save the money.

I think man comes next to the bird, and a combination of game individuals will be found hard to keep down if they have the ability to perform under ordinary circumstances.

Let two ball clubs start down the line evenly matched in talent and go through the season without injuries to players, the luck will break even in the long run. The winner, however, will be the club that fought gamest when luck was breaking badly for them.

It usually takes pluck, luck and ability to carry off a championship in the major leagues, and no club has the right to be considered dead game until they have been put to the test and carried off the prize.

Sprinters in a mile race look good until pumped, and then fall out while the winner goes down the last quarter with his head up. Therefore a ball club must come in first to be entitled to the praise due a winner, and for this reason Pittsburg must still be classed as in the running for the league championship. They have gone the distance, and once at their speed are more likely to come along at a merry clip, or after the humiliation of playing second violin to the American league boys fully wears off.

A man from New York, who, by the way, usually lives in Jersey, should be considered authority, and for that reason I want to mention the fact that John Foster considers the Boston world beaters a little shy on staying powers, when compared with Clark Griffith's New York boys. Mr. Foster says should the clubs be close on the home stretch no doubt New York will outnerve Collins' boys. Admitting that the Highlanders are the gamest bunch that ever came over the pike, what grounds has the New York writer to go on that the Collins tribe has ever wavered for a second while after the purse?

Did they not go against the toughest proposition ever offered a ball club last fall in Pittsburg, when, with the game three to one against them in a best five in nine series, before a howling mob of fans, win three straight games of ball by brilliant and scrappy playing and made it four straight with a shut-out? Game finishers! Ah! There is nothing to it, Uncle John, for the Boston Americans are game, if nothing else. As exhibition workmen Pittsburg had them skinned a block, but the Collins tribe had the staying powers, led by the prince of stayers, Captain Collins.

I am quite sure that some of the teams now holding a good position in the big leagues are anything but stayers, but you can never tell until after July starts in and the whip is being applied.

Sometimes one or two men will enthuse a whole team and keep them at it in a wonderful way. McGraw, of New York, is one of these managers. Mack is ambitious to win the pennant, and works night and day to figure out how to win games. Knowing the fine points, his men listen and fight to the last. Any club failing to play the string out can never win out on a season, and Mack is well aware of manager, and no one has any great confidence in the players under contract. There's a nigger in the woodpile somewhere, and the owners will learn some day that Duffy is being badly handicapped by some of the old players on the team, who are playing the Mr. Hyde and Dr. Jekyl act. Duffy has a two years' contract and should be allowed to build up the the team, from the foundation. There are men connected with the club who were not altogether pleased at the engagement of Hugh Duffy.

The minor leagues are having interesting times over their races for championship honors. The American Association should have a big season, as Kansas City seems to be the only disappointment. Mike Grady, who was with Dale Gear in Kansas City last season, is now with Charley Nichols's St. Louis team. He said while here that Gear was not the man to make a success of a club in that city. "It's a fine ball town," said Mike, "but they must have a winner, and all cannot have winners."

President Ed Grillo certainly made a hit in ordering George Tebeau off the grounds for ten days, and I know that Tebeau will appreciate the stand that Grillo took as much as any one, for, after all, it was for the good of the game, and when a woodchopper goes to cut down trees he usually goes after the larger ones first. Grillo has the nerve all right.

THERY WON MOTOR RACE

Saalburg Thronged to See the Great International Event.

Saalburg, June 18.—The cosmopolitan gathering staying at Hamburg for the great international event in the motoring world was early astir yesterday and was joined by thousands of sightseers from all places within reach. They thronged Saalburg and all points of vantage along the course long before the time of starting the race. The weather was splendid. The course was 87½ miles, necessitating four circuits to complete the total distance of 350 miles. It was in excellent condition though numerous sharp curves, sudden falls and rivers, and deep embankments at the side presented enough dangers to try the skill and nerve of the most experienced drivers. The course was excellently kept by a large force of police and soldiers.

Emepror William, and the empress, Prince Henry of Prussia and other members of the royal family entered the royal stand shortly after 6 o'clock. They received a great ovation. His majesty who wore the uniform of the Zeithen Hussars, before the racing began exchanged a few words with Jenatzy, Germany's hope, and showed great interest in Jenatzy's car. The emperor appeared to keenly enjoy the surroundings and was interested in all the details of the course. During the forenoon, accompanied by Ambassador Tower, his majesty left the royal stand and proceeded to another stand, some distance off, so as to get a beter view of certain parts of the course. The emperor remained on the ground till noon, when he went off in a motor to take luncheon at Hamburg castle.

The start was made punctually at 7 o'clock, a flourish of trumpets signalling the departure. Jenatzy, the holder of the James Gordon Bennett cup, on shooting past the royal stand, saluted the emperor and empress. The other cars, 18 in all, were started at intervals of seven minutes with the exception of the car driven by Baron De Caters, which was delayed by a slight break down. The only American in the race was Marden, who drove an American car. The motors went off at a fast pace the leaders doing a mile a minute. Jenatzy, however, narrowly escaped a catastrophe early. At the bottom of a long straight incline approaching the village of Wehrein is a level crossing. Jenatzy was nearing the bottom of this incline, which is the fastest of the whole course, when the frantic shouts of the spectators induced him to slacken his speed. A few seconds later he came in sight of the crossing and saw thereon a locomotive, right in the middle of his course. But for the fact that he had previously slackened his speed Jenatzy must have met with disaster. The incident, however, only cost him a minutes delay.

At the end of the second circuit in the automobile race, Thery, the French representative, had assumed the lead, his time being one minute and 41 seconds better than that of Jenatzy, who was second. Thery was driving grandly and looked like winning.

Thery completed three circuits in four houfrs, 23 minutes and 40 seconds. Jenatzy's time was 4 hours 33 minutes and 15 seconds. The Frenchman thus was about ten minutes ahead of the German champion with another round to go.

Thery won the race, Janetzy was second. Thery's total time was 5 hours, 50 minutes and 3 seconds, and Jenatzy's was 6 hours, one minute and 21 seconds.

Jenatzy arrived at the winning post first, but his actual running time was 11 minutes and 18 seconds longer than that of the Frenchman.

THE IDEAL TIME

For Big World's Fair Handicap to Be Run at St. Louis.

Thoroughbreds Will Be Fit For Battle of Their Lives.

St. Louis, June 18.—With the sure starters already announced for the $50,000 World's Fair Handicap, to be run at the fair grounds, St. Louis, June 25, Hermis, Irish Lad and The Picket could still be excused and leave the best field to face a starter this year.

This statement is made merely on the possibility that these three, or any one of them, may not be sent to St. Louis.

Africander is regarded as a practical certain starter, and Irish Lad is a strong possibility. So is The Picket. If all of these come they will, of course, lend a lot of luster to the event; if not, their absence will but leave a gap in the mighty cavalcade of horse flesh which will battle for equine glory.

With McChesney, Runnells, Gold Heels, Dick Welles and Colonial Girl certain starters, the race will be endowed with sufficient glory for one event, and The Picket, Hermis, Irish Lad and Africander, and there would be room for a lurking suspicion that the Western turf is a trifle hoggish.

Even so, there is a universal desire that all the turf stars which met in the Brooklyn Handicap should again be brought together in the rich St. Louis stake.

The Brooklyn, though conceded to have been the greatest field of thoroughbreds ever brought together on the American turf, was in a measure unsatisfactory.

This because it was run early in the season, when some of the most prominent candidates for the turf championship were not in a fit condition to battle for such high stakes.

The World's Fair Handicap comes at an ideal time. It comes when horses are best fitted for the summer campaign and before they have begun to stale under the hard work cut out for them.

Africander and McChesney were clearly not up to a race when the Brooklyn was run, and the spectacle presented by them in the rear division was not a pleasing one to the turf world, which fully appreciates their greatness.

As the time approaches for the big race the belief is becoming general that the Western horses are going to cut a much greater figure in the race than was first expected.

Not necessarily the Western blue bloods, but horses which have been practically unnoticed by the general public during past seasons.

This division will be represented by some half a dozen or more, and, with a big advantage in weight, it will not be surprising if some one of them upsets calculations.

Ed Corrigan's McGee and John W. Schorr's Injunction have been doing particularly well of late. McGee ran one or two indifferent races in Chicago, the result, apparently, of too much drumming, but Corrigan has now wisely concluded to let up on the horse a little and he will be sent to the post as fresh as a daisy.

With 107 pounds in the saddle he will be no mean opponent for any man's horse.

Injunction has shown a decided liking for heavy going, and, should the track be muddy when the race is run, he is liable to be a decided factor.

Sam Hildreth has been keeping Witful in the dark of late, and he is said to be preparing a surprise. There is a strong belief that he is pointing the sometimes great daughter of Mirthful for the race.

A new candidate has bobbed up in Emporium. The horse was held in the future books at 200 to 1, a price that seemed entirely justifiable, but his stable evidently thought it was too long and strung $500 through the board on him.

He is owned by M. V. Conran and is being prepared for the race. If, by any chance, he should happen to win it, between the purse and the future book bet Mr. Conran would come into very sudden affluence.

There was some disappointment at Mr. Smathers not sending McChesney direct to the fair grounds for his preparation. The son of McDuff is a very popular horse here, even though he has never raced in this city, and it was hoped he would be started here at least once as a final keying up for the big race.

Some one in Chicago for some strange reason sent a story out, on the arrival of the rose there, that he was so poor it would be impossible to get him ready for the race.

This odd genius even went so far as to quote Mr. Hildreth as having made that remark.

What Hildreth really said on receipt of the horse was that if the race was to be run the following day he would certainly not start McChesney, but that with the two weeks granted him he could get the horse ready to run the race of his life.

Dick Welles' arrival last week started tongues to wagging. It was peculiar that with his arrival his price should advance in the future books.

He certainly looks lusty and good. He looks just a trifle high, but Mr. Respess is not so bad a trainer as to have his horse keyed up to the top notch two weeks in advance of such a rich stake.

The principal reason, perhaps, is the discovery that some time not very long ago it was necessary to blister the king of the Western turf for swinney. The horse has fully recovered from the effect of this, of course; all the soreness is gone from where the blister was applied, though the hair has been burned away and has not as yet come out.

The fear that the muscular contraction may not have been eradicated, however, would probably account for the advance in price.

The stories that Gold Heels had gone amiss in training were amusingly overdrawn. The horse was worked last Sunday on a very bad track. It was after the season of terrific rains which marked the latter part of the week preceding, but there had been enough rain and wind to take the sloppiness out of the mud and leave it heavy and holding.

From pulling his feet out of this muck while going at speed the horse developed a little soreness and his bad leg filled a little but he cooled out of the soreness and his leg was soon of normal appearance and gave no evidence whatever of being painful.

The report caused a lot of temporary excitement, which, however, soon died down when it was seen of what little consequence was the injury.

Hazelwood and Bearcatcher worked their way to the front and got into a corner of the limelight within the past ten days. Both are in the American derby and are expected to start, and if they run up to expectations they will probably be shipped here immediately thereafter.

Billy Oliver, owner of Hazelwood, declares him a certain starter in the big handicap, barring accident. Garnett Ferguson, owner of Bearcatcher, had the colt here in the early spring, but sent him to Chicago for his final preparation for the American derby.

He thinks very well of the California wonder, and fully expected when he left here to start him in the big event. His showing in the American derby will, of course, govern this.

That interest in the big race is becoming very keen is evidenced by the reservation of boxes.

These reservations come from New York, Chicago, Memphis, Kansas City and Louisville, as well as St. Louis, and nearly all of the forty-six boxes have been reserved.

WHY BOOKMAKERS WIN.

For the average racegoer the bookmaker's slate is very much of a puzzle, says the Rochester, N. Y., Herald. It is generally thought that all the bookies have to do to make money is to stand up and take it. The matter of percentage is spoken of in a general way, yet few know how it is figured or how the figures are applied. Often without knowing it the bookmakers are making a "Dutch" book.

A book is "Dutch" when the prices quoted are such that no matter which horse wins the book loses. This condition, of course, only comes about when the play is extremely light, or when the bookmaker has been "hooked in," as the saying goes, on an "out of line" price.

A price is "out of line" when it is above or below the market. For instance, a good thing is to be heavily played. The bookmaker who knows the money is in the ring to be played on a certain horse has a big advantage over the layer, who is not so well informed. Say the opening price against the good thing is 6 to 1, and the favorite opens at 8 to 5, the man who knows what is coming off can go after the favorite money with confidence and can "lay away" on the good thing. He can run the favorite up to the figure to which he desires to carry all the horses in the field, and then when the good thing is backed down to, say 4 to 1, he can put up that price and take the money.

Where such a play is made on a good thing the play on the other horse in the field is naturally lighter and their prices must advance correspondingly.

Booking in an open ring is carried on at an average of about 6 per cent. On small fields the penciler is lucky to have 4 per cent in his favor, but where the field is large the percentage in the average ring is about 8. When the play is light it frequently less than 3. Working on such a close margin, it is easy to see how the bookmaker who takes money at 6 to 1 on a horse that goes to the post at 3 to 1 is placed at a tremendous disadvantage, and is practically forced to hold the favorite. There is a difference of 1 per cent between 6 to 1 and and 3 to 1, so the man who lays against the good thing at 6 to 1, when working even on so good a basis as 8 per cent, is thrown "Dutch." When caught in that predicament he usually lets the favorite run for the book, as, if he doesnt' get the money in early, he will have to follow the market.

This will throw the percentage still further against him, and about he can do is to take a chance of "knocking the good thing down," which, of course, means to take a chance of beating him. It is, of course, a bad bookmaker who gets caught this way more than once in a great while, and yet it is readily apparent that it takes considerable mental agility to size up a crowd, figure out what prices they are apt to take against horses, and take it at an advance over the general market.

This may explain to some people who are fond of abusing bookmakers and calling them "plkers" why they won't take $10 on a 6 to 1 shot. After the prices are settled, and the men on the blocks know what the market is, there is usually little or no trouble in getting money on. One of the peculiarities of people who think they have a "good thing" up their sleeves is that they are terribly suspicious the bookmakers will find out what it is before they get their money on. To prevent this they swoop down in a swarm on the first man to put up a price. Then they get mad because the man won't take their money. As a rule, when the prices are first put up the bookmaker is merely feeling out the market. He desires to find out what horses the majority of the people wish to play, and he governs himself accordingly. He gets away from the one on which there is the greatest demand and goes up on the others. When he gets to a figure on the good thing which the crowd seems disinclined to accept, he hunches up a point higher, and then begins to take the money.

The experienced bettor who thinks he has a good thing and wants to get the best possible price against it doesn't swarm very much at the first slate, showing prices. He usually waits and lets the bookmakers get the favorite played first.

Unless the bookmaker wants to win to the favorite that is always the horse he wants to have played up to his limit first. When he ascertains the ring price against the first choice he has a guidance to go on with the others. The favorite, being at the shortest price, of course, represents the largest part of his book, and is the one he must not be caught out of line on.

THE HEAVY WEIGHTS

The Rank and File of Fight Followers Favor Jeffries.

Take It For Granted That Boiler Maker Will Win.

In view of the postponement of the meeting between James J. Jeffries and Jack Munroe for the heavyweight pugilistic title of the world, the sporting writers are again discussing the probable result of the fight. Malachy Hogan says in the Chicago Record-Herald:

The rank and file of fight followers seem to take it for granted that Jeffries will win, and although the odds have nominally been fixed at 2 to 1, few have gone to the pawnbrokers to raise the "coin." The fact that there has been little or no betting on the coming contest doesn't necessarily imply a lack of interest in the bout. It does give the impression, however, that the battle is more regarded in the light of an exhibition go than anything else.

Those who have gone out to watch the champion go through his daily stunts at Harbin Springs have sent out reports that Jeffries can't lose, and this seems to be the accepted opinion among sporting men. Anyone who has seen both of the principals in action cannot figure it any other way either, yet the victory does not always go to the favorite.

In comparing the men the difference in physique is not as marked as the average fight fan might think. It is not all Jeffries' way, except in experience and the prestige which a championship belt might carry with it. Of course this is a good deal, but not all. There are several points in the miner's favor. To begin with, Munroe is two years younger than Jeffries. The difference in weight is not a great deal, as critics generally regard any pounds over the 200 limit to be more of a hindrance than a benefit.

The most important thing in Jeffries' favor is his reach. He has considerable "on" the miner in this respect. While Munroe can only show a reach of 72 inches, the boiler maker can land a wallop at a distance of 76¾ inches. This will count some. It has been believed that Jeffries was the possessor of a pretty big chest, but the man from Butte shows an expanded measurement of 48 inches, while the best Jeffries can do is 47. In waist measure Munroe also shows better than Jeffries, which; however, is not necessarily an advantage. Munroe's legs are also pretty well developed:

The following figures give an idea of how the men shape up:

Jeffries—	Munroe—
29 years.....Age.....	27 years.
217 pounds...Weight.....	198 pounds.
6 ft ½ inch..Height.....	5 ft 11½ in.
76¾ inches...Reach.....	72 inches.
16¾ inches...Biceps.....	16 inches.
13 inches.....Forearm.....	13 inches.
9 inches.....Wrist.....	8½ inches
47 inches.....Chest Expand'd.	48 inches.
34 inches.....Waist.....	36 inches.
24½ inches...Thigh.....	24 inches.
16½ inches...Calf.....	18 inches.

Little has been said about Munroe's training. Critics on the coast seemingly regard the match as an extra training stunt for Jeffries, and let it go at that. There is one here and there who thinks Munroe has a chance, but no strong arguments have been advanced in his behalf. So many have advanced the argument that one punch will settle the fight, but I cannot agree with this after knowing something of the training of both men. Jeffries is not that kind of a fighter. You might expect such a termination were Jeffries as shifty as he is big.

Jeffries will probably first feel out his man and let him go along for a few rounds before he will attempt for the knockout punch. With this as the program training will tell. Should Munroe last a half a dozen rounds and be able to stand off the big boilermaker, the rest of the battle may be a surprise. With Jeffries getting short-winded the miner has a chance, even if a slim one. Very few expect this, however, as never yet has a man been able to withstand the savage rushes of the boilermaker. There is small probability that the championship will change hands.

George Siler writes as follows:

Jack Munroe's opportunity to demonstrate just how good or how poor a fighter he is will come to him when he faces Jim Jeffries under the auspices of the Yosemite club at San Francisco. The ex-miner has been put through a thorough course of heavy training by Tim McGrath and Billy Roche, a pair of conditioners second to none in the country. They have had him at the heavy and at the light bags; boxing a half dozen or more sturdy and rough novices daily; saw to it that he took his morning dips in the briny Pacific, and compelled him to trudge miles of roads in all kinds of going.

If condition is the direct route to the championship goal then Jack should he fail to reach it, cannot lay the blame of his ill success at the doors of his trainers, as they will send him on his championship journey fit to battle for his life.

Jeffries, also, it is reported, will be in condition to prevent Munroe getting within speaking distance of the title. Arguments relative to the result are not as to who will win, but how many rounds Munroe will stand up before the ponderous champion. The latter is given from one to six rounds to knock Munroe's championship aspirations into a cocked hat, and it remains to be seen how long it will take him to turn the trick. Jack's record does not count for much, but he is big and strong, can hit a few licks, and may, unexpectedly, worry Jeff before he goes under.

A San Francisco dispatch yesterday said: It has been decided by the physician at Harbin Springs that Champion Jeffries' knee must be tapped, and Jeffries and Delaney, his trainer, concur. Whether the operation will be performed at the springs or in San Francisco is not determined.

The managers of the Yosemite Athletic club want the champion brought to this city for treatment and have so informed Jeffries. The champion himself thinks he should go to San Francisco, in which event, provided the operation relieves him of his trouble, he will complete his training.

Munroe has given up all heavy work. From now on he will devote himself to the acquirement of speed, feeling that his physical condition is beyond improvement. To attain speed he will from now until the time of the fight devote himself to short sprints and boxing bouts with all the lively and clever little men he can secure.

SHARKEY THINKS

The Miner Has a Chance With Jeffries.

New York, June 18.—Tom Sharkey, who has fought both Jeffries and Munroe, is entitled to an opinion as to the outcome of this week's championship fight. The sailor, who wears his new honors as a benedict easily, spoke freely of the fight today. He said:

"This fellow Munroe has a better chance with Jeffries than a great many persons believe. I think he has an excellent chance, if he starts in right. Jeffries has been having easy game in his last few battles. In Munroe he will tackle a tough proposition. Munroe can take a pretty stiff punching, and he can land a wallop that is sure to do harm if it reaches the right place. He is very clever at mixing it and will more than hold his own with the champion at close quarters. If Munroe rushes Jeffries he will win sure, and he ought to score a knockout. He has the punch to do it, and Jeffries is not any too clever to keep him away. In fact, I believe that Jeffries has gone back somewhat and he will show it just as soon as he meets a fellow like munroe, who can send as good as he receives.

"With both Munroe and Jeffries in good condition, I think it will be a very fast fight. It will be a short fight, too, and it will be the wallop that will count. I look for a knockout in the early rounds. Munroe has everything in his favor; he is a young fellow, improving rapidly. He has won all of his important battles since he met Jeffries at Butte. He has no trouble in coming back with a wallop. In our fight at Philadelphia I put him down and almost out with a wallop. He took the count and it seemed all over with him, but his good condition enabled him to come back strong, and he went the limit. That's the kind of fellow that will give Jeffries a run for his money. The first round will probably be the hardest for Munroe. He is naturally anxious when he starts in, but once the opening round is over he is as strong as an ox, and the further he goes, the more confidence he gets. Whether Munroe wins or not, the fight is sure to be a good one, and I would like to get a crack at the winner for the championship."

FORBES KNOCKED OUT.

Frankie Neil Puts Him to Sleep In Third.

Chicago, June 18—Frank Neil, of San Francisco, last night at the Waverly Athletic club, demonstrated that his winning the bantam championship from Harry Forbes, last winter, was not an accident, as has been claimed by many people. In order to settle the matter the boys met last night in a six-round contest, and before the third round was half over Forbes was knocked senseless and was carried unconscious to his corner.

In the first round the advantage was on the side of Forbes, but slight. In the second round, Neil landed some heavy blows on Forbes' stomach, and Forbes put in a number of left jabs and right uppercuts to the champion's face. The blows, however, had little effect on Neil, who rushed constantly through the round.

At the opening of the third round it seemed that Forbes was about to gain the upperhand. He sent a straight left to Neil's face, which straightened him up, and then crossed the right to the jaw. He repeated this twice more without a return. As they backed away from a clinch, Neil let go a vicious left swing, which caught Forbes fairly on the chin and he went to the floor. He was up at the count of nine, but was weak. Neil sent another left to the jaw and Forbes went down for the second time. While he was lying on the floor his seconds threw a towel into the ring as a token of defeat, but neither of the fighters nor the referee noticed it, and as soon as Forbes was on his feet the fight began more fiercely than before. Forbes put a right to Neil's jaw that sent him whirling across the ring. Neil recovered quickly and rushed, and as Forbes came to meet him, Neil hooked his right to the jaw. The blow lifted Forbes off his feet and he struck the floor on the top of his head. He was completely knocked out, and did not recover consciousness for several minutes.

"IRON MAN" TELLS

How He Pitches In Order to Fool the Batters.

His One Idea Always Was to "Mix 'Em Up."

"With the one idea ever in mind that the secret of successful pitching is to mix 'em up,' I have always worked hard since I have been pitching professional ball to vary my style of delivery so as to fool the batter, or at least make his efforts to smash the ball a little more difficult," said Joe McGinnity recently. He goes on: "That is why I have worked steadily for five years to prefect my raise ball, affectionately called 'Old Sal' by the Giants.

"Billy Rhines, of the Cincinnati club, was the first pitcher I ever saw use the raise ball. He could throw the ball with considerable speed, but could not, or rather did not try, to curve it. After many months of practice, I was able to pitch the raise ball with a curve, and good judges of the game have given me credit for making good use of my knowledge.

"The ball I have found very effective this season can be called a cross-fire curve. There have been may pitchers with a good cross-fire delivery, but I don't know of any that used a curve with it. I have always thought that to add a curve to the cross-fire would be just what was needed to stop batsmen from placing the ball. All players like to hit to right field, particularly when there are men on the bases. A nice single to right, with a man on first, makes it almost sure for the man on the base to reach third. The batter also has an excellent chance of reaching second if a play is made on the preceding runner.

"Just to fool the right field hitters, if possible, I worked all last winter to develop a cross-fire curve. I tried it last season on several occasions, and I was satisfied I could control the pitch with sufficient practice. I may say the result of my work so far is up to my hopes.

"To deliver this ball I step to the extreme right of the pitcher's box, of course, keeping one foot on the rubber, according to the rules. I then send the ball to the batter with a wide outcurve. By the time it reaches the plate it appears almost as though the third baseman had thrown the ball. It is nearly impossible for a batsman to turn that ball into a safe right field hit. He is more apt to bang it along the third base line. I never pitch a ball but the fielder knows what is coming. Therefore, if things work right, they have a great chance of being about where the ball is hit to.

"I said if 'things come right.' That is one of the great secrets of any success a pitcher may achieve. We all get our bumps and get them good and plenty. As for myself, I mean to keep on working all the time to prepare for new conditions. I will say right now that I will spring a new one on the boys next summer. I worked at it all winter and will do so next winter when I get to my home in the Indian territory.

"I have been asked frequently this season whether I am hampered in my work by the strict enforcement of the balk rule. To a certain extent I am; that is, when there are runners on the bases. At that I have not found it a hardship, for I understand some of the pitchers complain the rule has hurt them in their delivery I am not complaining and I am perfectly willing to take any chances with the others. If the rule helps the base runners in other clubs, it will also help the men on our team. And I think everybody will admit the Giants are in the game with any of them when it comes to running the bases.

"The balk rule is supposed to help in the hit-and-run game. That is up to the pitcher and catcher. There is nearly always some way to get wise when the hit-and-run game is to be played. Both batsman and runner are anxious. The man at the bat will, as a rule, hit at anything, and the runner will make a break for second. Place the ball where it cannot be met squarely and the hit-and-run game ends in a man being thrown out at second and a strike on the batter.

"A pitcher cannot follow any strict set of rules in pitching and win. He must suit himself to the occasion. There are times, and many of them, in the career of every pitcher when the best thing he can do is to simply stick the ball over the plate and trust to fortune and his fielders to save him from disaster."

THE OLYMPIAN GAMES

Will Extend Over Period of Five Days.

St. Louis, June 18.—Official entry blanks for the world's Olympian games were issued by the department of physical culture at the World's exposition yesterday. Many hundreds of the blanks have been sent to European countries, out of which many candidates for championship honors will come to America.

According to the entry blanks, the games will extend over a period of five days, beginning Monday, Aug. 29, and closing Saturday, Sept. 3. Six world's championships will be run each day and four open handicap events. The sports will be conducted under the rules of the Amateur Athletic union of the United States and open to all amateur atheltes.

On the first day, Aug. 29, the championship events will be 60-meter run, 400-eter run, 2590-meter steeple chase, standing broad jump, running broad jump, running high jump and throwing 16-pound hammer. The handicap events will be 120-yard high hurdles, running broad jump, 880-yard run and putting 16-pound shot. Tuesday afternoon but one event will be contested, the famous Marathon race, distance 40 kilometers, or 24 miles, 1500 yards. This race will be the most important, and probably the most interesting of the entire Olympiad.

Wednesday, the third day of meeting, will mark the running of the 200-meter, wil inark the hunning of the 200-meter race, putting 16-pound shot, standing high jump, 400-meter hurdles, lifting the bar bell and the trial heats of the international tug-of-war contest. In the latter event teams of five men will compete, the weight of each team being unlimited. Handicap events for this day are 100-yard dash, one-mile run, pole vault and running high jump.

The most interesting event to the ancient Greeks during the first renewal of the Olympian games, was the discus throwing. This ancient sport is set for Thursday, Sept. 1, but will be a handicap event and not for the championship. The Olympian events will be 800-meter run, 200-meter hurdles, throwing 56-pound weight, running broad jump, running hop, step and jump, the final heat of the tug-of-war and the first section of the dumbbell competition: Two good track events are carded for this date, the 20-yard handicap and the 220-yard hurdles. The field events, besides the discus, will be the 56-pound weight.

The Olympian championship for the discus throw will be held on Saturday. This day will mark the running of eight world's championships and four open handicap events. The most important event of the day will be the team race, open to athletic teams from every country on the globe, the distance to be four miles, five men to start. The result will be judged by points. The team scoring the last number to win the race, that is, as the men finish in order—one, two, three—these points will be added, making a total of six, while those following points will be added also.

The other events that will be contested Saturday are: Hundred-meter run, 110-meter hurdle, 1500-meter run, throwing the discus, pole vault for height, three standing jumps. The open handicap events are 60-yard dash, 40-yard dash, throwing 16-pound hammer and one mile team race, handicap, four men to start.

A story of the Olympic games would be incomplete without mentioning the prizes that will be awarded the victors. In ancient days all the athletes were awarded laurel wreaths, but the modern Olympian winner, besides receiving his laurel wreath, will be presented with a gold medal, emblematic of the championship of the world, and, besides this medal, prizes have been offered by patrons of sport in special events. In the Marathon race, President Francis has offered a beautiful silver trophy valued at several hundred dollars.

NOVEL PRODUCTION.

Ringling Brothers' Jerusalem and the Crusades.

In the matter of spectacular production the Ringling Brothers have gone many steps further than ever before attempted in circus enterprise, and their achievement has made previous efforts look colorless and small. The subject chosen for their display is creamy with possibility, and the most has been made of this fact by the progressive firm. The story of Jerusalem and the Crusades is known to every reader, and classical history furnishes no chapter of higher and more inspiring interest. Ringling Brothers have seized upon the romantic features of this beautiful story, and brought them into stirring focus under canvas. Twelve hundred people are employed in the pantomimic display, and more than 600 horses are used in the exciting tournament and picturesque march of the Crusaders on their holy mission to Jerusalem. Oriental life is illustrated by a ballet divertissement before the Emir of Egypt, in which 200 young girls participate. The music was written for the production and is rendered by a band of 50 musicians, and the largest portable pipe organ ever made. This splendid novelty occupies about thirty minutes at the opening of the big circus program. It requires a special train to convey the enormous scenery, gorgeous properties and 2000 costumes used in the production of this thrilling spectacle, Jerusalem and the Crusades.

Ringling Brothers will exhibit at Duluth, Monday, July 4. The splendid street pageant, for which this circus is celebrated, will leave the show grounds on the morning of circus day at 10 o'clock.

The Thousand Islands.

There may be somewhere on the earth a more deligtful region than that of the Thousand Islands, but if there is, it has not been discovered. It is the Venice of America, but also has good hotels that can be kept warm if there shall happen to be a cold rainy evening. It is as fine as the Bay of Naples, with 2000 picturesque islands scattered along the twenty-five miles of one of the most beautiful rivers in the world. You can find out a great deal regarding it in No. 10 of the "Four-Track Series," "The Thousand Islands." Copy will be mailed free on receipt of a 2-cent stamp by George H. GAMEST FISH OF THEM ALL

Joy of Battle With the Agile Ouaninche—Canada's Finny Champions—Thrilling Contests In the Midst of Rapids.

Quebec, June 18.—"The fish that makes fun of the angler," is the name applied to the ouananiche of Lake St. John by the Montagnais Indians of northern Canada. Whether the name originated because the Indians realized how the fish often seems to make fun of the angler, or whether they meant to designate the ouananiche, as some etymologists suppose, as the fish that makes fun "for" the fishermen, it is equally appropriate.

No other sporting fish better fulfills the condition of making fun both of and for the angler than the ouananiche; so that the newest derivation of the word at least fairly depicts one of the leading characteristics of the fish. While no fish affords better sport to the angler than the ouananiche, there is certainly none that is more elusive when hooked, or more uncertain as to the nature and result of its fight.

An illustration of this fact was recently accorded to an angler who was fishing from a canoe in the Grand Discharge of Lake St. John. He had hooked and was playing a ouananiche of about two pounds in weight, when, to the surprise of both the angler and a friend who was fishing near him in another canoe, the fish leaped straight into the second canoe.

Before the fisherman had time to congratulate himself upon the safety of his fish, or those in the other boat had recovered from their astonishment sufficiently to secure the prize, the ouananiche made another and more successful leap for life, this time safely reaching the water and carrying away with him the fly upon which it had been hooked, together with a portion of the casting line.

The leaps of this fish closely resemble those of its near congener, the larger salmonoid, Salar, the leaper, or the common Atlantic salmon. Noam Palmer, of New York, was fishing the Washeshoo a short time ago, when a salmon that was not hooked at all leaped into his canoe and then out of it again. The ouananiche is seven more of a leaper than the salmon. Scarcely distinguishable from it in color or appearance, except that it is of more athletic build, it seems at times to struggle with theangler, as much in the air as in the water, for life and liberty. It has been compared to Rudyard Kipling's description of the Fuzzy Wuzzy of the Soudan, an "India rubber idiot on the spree."

The skyward gyrations of the ouananiche begin as soon as it feels the hook; and even when apparently safe in the bottom of the landing net it may leap out of it again. The acme of excitement is reached when a brace of ouananiche are hooked at the same time. At times it is one up and one down, or perhaps it may be both of them out of the water at the same time, their shimmering sides glistening in the sun amid the spray of the splashing waters, like burnished silver salvers shining through the rainbows of a waterfall.

The graceful proportions of the adult ouananiche, found in rapid water in the spring of the year, and its splendid fighting qualities, are not more remarkable than the beauty of its coloring. Clothed, indeed, in purple and finest silver, it undoubtedly fares sumptuously every day.

In its various hues it reflects every shade of its natural surroundings, from the indigo colored storm clouds to the rose tints of the setting sun, from the purple haze over the distant hills to the pale green foliage of the bursting buds, from the darkest views of the deepest holes that it frequents, the olive and bronze of the floating water weeds and the gray of the surrounding rocks, to the silver sheen of the moonbeams, the white topped rapids, and foam-flecked, eddying pools.

Such is the rare inland salmon of a fresh water habitat all the year round, which is found in scarcely any other accessible water than that of Lake St. John and its feeders and outlet. It attains the greatest measure of perfection in the turbulent waters of the great lake's outlet.

It is at the head of this discharge that the surplus waters of Lake St. John are poured out into a variety of channels, separated by many islands; and, many miles below, after encountering the violent obstacles to their descent that are answerable for the wild grandeur of their rapids, they are reunited in the bed of the Saguenay. The hundreds of different currents that dash about and between the various islands of the Discharge give rise to innumerable pools, sometimes protected by joints of the shore line or islands, from which they may be advantageously fished.

But many of the best fishing places can be reached only by canoe. It is a thrilling sensation to shoot the rapids in these frail craft, and to feel that nothing but a sheet of birch bark and the skill of your dusky guides stand between you and eternity.

But they are wonderfully clever, these guides, and it is a constant marvel to those who visit these waters for the first time to note the consummate tact and ability with which they navigate the most treacherous currents and violent rapids, sometimes cutting off with their paddles the top of anadvancing wave, at others holding back the canoe in the hollow of a rapid until the moment is propitious for shooting out of it, or perhaps, again, lifting it up sideways to the crest of a favorable roll of water.

Perhaps the best of the fishing is to be had in the pools of this Discharge, half a mile or so below the first heavy chute or falls. Because of the eddying effect of the various rapids, some of which in striking a projecting point of mainland or island are turned for a time in quite an opposite direction, there may be seen, side by side, contrary violent currents, the upward rush of the one being but little less decided than the downward plunge of the other.

Here and there, in the very heart of these exciting scenes, there are expanses of comparatively still water, where the dorsal fins of giant ouononiche may be seen over the top of the pool as they sail around in search of insect food. The canoemen often have some pretty hard paddling to cross the rapids in order to reach these favored spots, but once there the canoe remains almost stationary on the surface of the rising and sinking water, from and toward which there are currents running on every side.

The angler has therefore a large choice of casts. If his flies are not immediately seized when dropped upon the pool in the vicinity of the canoe, he permits them to descend one of the many surrounding rapids. In doing so he may play out a hundred feet of line, and may at any moment feel his flies seized by one or more of the gamest fish that swim.

As nearly as it is possible for him to do so, the experienced fisher for ouananiche endeavors to place his flies in the midst of the huge white patches of foam, which in almost every part of the Discharge have been churned up by the force of the rapids. These patches are rarely stationary, but are caught, first in one current or eddy, and then in another, and so almost constantly drifted hither and thither.

This foam forms sort of a trap for weak-winged insects, and is consequently, as a rule, thickly sprinkled with specimens of the prevailing flies. The hungry ouananiche have the habit of concealing themselves beneath the foam, waiting till their favorite fly floats around.

When the fish are plentiful, it is seldom that the angler draws the right kind of flies through a patch of this foam without securing a rise. As a rule, almost all the most popular varieties of trout and salmon flies are successful.

There are some exceptions, however. Thus, there is no record, so far, of the rise of ouononiche to that old-time favorite of trout fishermen, the Parmachene Belle. For the matter of that, no fly containing red seems to attract these fish.

In the spring of the year, when the water is high and somewhat discolored, very fair-sized salmon flies are the correct thing for the Grand Discharge and the Foiry are the most killing.

Some fishermen find large trout flies, which are not much more than one-tenth so costly as the salmon flies, quite as taking as the others. Of these the preferable varieties are the Brown Hackle, the Professor, the Grizzly King and the Queen of the Water.

Later on, when the water becomes clearer and lower, desire appears to fall and appetite to become a burden. Then the ouananiche is an epicure. He wants the finest and smallest of flies and will only take them upon the lightest of tackle.

They must be both tied and cast as Reynolds mixed his colors—with brains. A tiny dun, or a small shad fly or Gen. Hooker, or the smallest sizes of Jock Scott and Professors will then be found most successful.

Various are the rods employed in the Lake St. John waters. In the early spring, the habitant residents of Lake St. John take the ouananiche for food rather than sport, fishing for it with worms or a piece of salt pork.

They cut a pole out of the neighborhood woods for a rod, and their lines are usually of heavy cord with gimp next the hook; their general appearance and that of their outfit almost reialling the fisherman

Whose angle rod was made of sturdy oak.
His line a cable that no ship e'er broke;
His hook was baited with a dragon's tail,
He stood upon a rock and bobb'd for whale.

Grilse rods are sometimes called into requisition by visiting ouananiche anglers, both by those preferring a sharp, quick struggle with the fish to a procracted fight and by those who have had but little experience in fighting it in heavy water. The usual tool employed is a trout rod weighing from seven to nine ounces, and this is generally found to be the most serviceable for the purpose.

But there are experienced anglers who enjoy the sport of killing the fish upon a five ounce rod, and there is keen enjoyment in the struggle, particularly when no compensation for the lightness and pliability of the rod is taken in the shape of automatic adjuncts, possessing which, the angler hooks the fish and the self-acting reel does the rest. It may be asserted that with a very light rod and so stubborn a fighter as the ouananiche an automatic reel is almost essential to success, because of the difficulty, under the circumstances, of recovering the slack of the line. But with a rod heavy enough to recover a long line quickly in a strong current, say one of seven or eight ounces in weight, more sport can be had by the angler in playing his own fish and keeping his line taut with the aid of the good old-fashioned multiplying reel than in his employment of a lighter rod and the automatic care of his fish and line.

From the time that the ouanoniche is first impaled upon the hook until it is actually landed the angler has not much leisure for idle contemplation. If Isaak Walton had ever hooked a ouananiche he would have found the struggle that ensued something more than a mere contemplative man's recreation.

Sometimes the fish is continually breaking water. At others it may run out a good deal of line, and, like the salmon on some occasions, come to gaff or net without having leaped at all.

In the vicinity of these rapids the fish can know nothing of the life of indolence and ease that conduces to effeminacy. The very excitement and unrest of their surroundings render inactivity impossible to them, while the physical exertion necessarily employed in their constant struggles amid the mighty forces of those turbulent waters insures for them the possession of the courage, agility and strength that make them the recognized champions of the finny warriors of Canadian waters.

In proportion to their avoirdupois they can do more tackle smashing than any other fish that swims. As already explained, their lapse are prodigious. Habituated to overcome obstacles to their progress up-stream by throwing themselves over them, through the air, their skyward somersaults and aerial contortions when hooked leave the angler little leisure for contemplation while the struggle is in progress.

When it is understood that a ouananiche of five pounds weight will frequently leap three feet or more out of water in its endeavor to get free, and perhaps a dozen times in succession, some idea may be formed of the skill that is necessary to bring it safely to the net.

But when at last the battle has been won and the fresh water salmon of Lake St. John is laid upon a balsam bough at the bottom of the canoe, the angler, feasting his eyes upon the lovely object, may well exclaim with Dr. Henry van Dyke:

"Here let me chant my praise, thou noblest and most high minded fish, the cleanest feeder, the merriest liver, the loftiest leaper, and the bravest warrior of all creatures that swim. * * * As Lancelot among the knights, so art thou among the fish, the plain armored hero, the sunburnt champion of all the water folk."

VERMILION LAKE FISHING.

No Finer Fishing Anywhere In the Country.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I see by your paper of the 14th inst., that Cass Lake is making a strong bid for fishermen. Two Cass Lake gentlemen were said to have in five hours caught a flour barrel full. John Olson and Emil Anderson, two homesteaders from near Ashawa, drove over last Saturday to Joice Landing, procured a pork barrel and a good supply of ice and started out to troll and in four hours and fifteen minutes caught enough fish to fill the barrel and a ten gallon keg. This was after the fish were dressed. Two lumberjilers from Vermilion Lumber company's mill in fifteen minutes hooked twenty-four fine fish—pike, perch and a few bass. Olson lost several hooks, the fish being too large for him to tackle. I would say for information of all lovers of fishing that Vermilion Lake is in St. Louis county, 95 miles north of Duluth, 3 hours and 45 minutes ride from Duluth to Tower. Two steamboats make regular trips daily, one leaving Tower and the other leaving the head of the lake every morning except Sunday. The scenery is beautiful, the fishing good, climate simply delightful. Duluthians certainly could not select a more accessible place for a summer outing than Vermilion Lake, and the smaller lakes adjacent to it. For instance, Trout Lake, north of Vermilion, is noted for the land locked salmon that inhabit its waters.

THE GOSSIP OF GOTHAM

Yacht, With Outcasts Aboard, Found By Owner on Distant Shore—Got Near Enough to See Mistress In Orgy, Conducted With His Money.

New York, June 18.—The proprietors of local small shipyards that depend for custom chiefly upon the repairs and make-ready of pleasure craft are forewarned of a dull season. The lack of an international race by large yachts is the cause of the indifference to this sport of many boat owners, and the fact that last year had such a series, with a boating season that for length and costliness was of the purse-breaking order, leads many others to let their boats remain on dry land in their winter places of storage. Comparatively few of those who do not go down to the sea in large pleasure boats of their own ownership realize that yachting is a mighty expensive amusement to most yachtsmen. Multimillionaires are not nearly so numerous as are fine yachts costing to keep in commission for a summer, with modest allowance of entertainment of guests, from $20,000 upward. So a season off now and then is not amiss to the finances of not a few who on the decks of their boats pass as invulnerable to all matters of expenditure. The season now beginning is so slow that the boats laid up are many, and most of those offered for charter hang on at very low figures.

NOT FROM MERE IDLENESS.

In the case of one steam yacht laid by in a yard up the Hudson there's more than the indicated general condition to explain the vessel's idleness. Vessel she is, not much under 150 feet long, fairly fast, though built for comfort in cruising rather than for high speed, and widely known among the yachtsmen as one of the most luxuriously appointed boats of her size that appears hereabouts. Her owner is a member of one of the local swell pacht clubs, or was, at least, until he confessed last fall to being disgusted with all matters nautical, his own boat and its associations especially. He had been a persistent pleasure boater all the season. Much more of his interest seemed to center in the yacht than it had ever before, though he had owned her for three years, and previously had sailed smaller boats. All summer long he had indulged in short cruises of from two to three days to as many weeks, always with as much of a party aboard as the boat would accommodate comfortably. They were merry parties, too. The hostess of the yacht saw to that, for she not only passed on the invitations for these trips, but she set the pace once she had her guests aboard.

PROFESSIONALLY GAY.

She was one of the professionally gay—a singular woman—red-haired—not auburn or golden, but plain red—freckled, irregular of features, yet mistress of the boat owner's affections, apparently, and certainly spending his money without stint, as she had done by at least two New Yorkers before him. Her liking for racketty sociability was unlimited, and when her protector wearied of her pace she went it without him for a time, always with a boating party of her kind. Some one supposed that the short trips the yacht made in which he did not partake were attended by the same crowd that went in his own company, but really his mistress sneaked in clusters of her intimates—women of the half world and not too advantageously placed in it, and male beings who associated with them on terms of absolute equality. It was told last winter of this feature of the boat's use, that a half dozen of these outcasts were stranded in the rustic wilds of Eastern Long Island, while on one of these clandestine cruises, because the owner of the boat suddenly joined the boat as she lay in a small harbor, giving the guests barely time to get ashore without discovery. There they languished for some time, it is said, before they could make their way back to the metropolis. But that's another story.

PLANNED SOUTHERN CRUISE.

The owner seemed not to suspect these misdoings when, early in September, the cup races were completed, and he then planned a cruise in Southern waters, beginning about the middle of October. He and his mistress were to be the only passengers, though it was arranged that one was to join them at certain Southern ports. The yacht was to be overhauled and stocked with stores for the trip at a yard in South Brooklyn. Just as she was in shape for the cruise, and as the final stores were being put aboard, he was suddenly called away from the city on very urgent matters. The trip had to be delayed, of course, but after he had been away ten days he telegraphed to the woman that he would be ready to start in three days, and to the master of the boat to have everything in readiness. He reached the anchorage of his club that was handiest to town only to recover both dispatches. At the Brooklyn shipyard it was reported that the boat had departed ten days before. Eventually she was located off the south shore of Long Island, with a party of twenty-two on board, all outcasts, and indulging in an orgy untellable. He got close enough to its details to make the boat a dreadful reminder thereafter, and the Southern cruise was abandoned, the boat going on the ways in a week.

FOUND ANOTHER "FISH."

There it has remained ever since, but he has had one offer of a charter. It seems that though it was all off with the red-haired one, as well as with the boat, the woman recovered quickly from her loss of protection. There's just as god fish in the sea, you know, and surely this remarkable plain woman caught one. With neither quite the means nor the social standing of the disgusted yacht owner, the successor was an excellent good thing from the standpoint of women of her class, and the marvelous fact about it all was that he married her. There's precedent for that sort of thing, but likely these two didn't care for that. But here the woman's remarkable effrontery came in. Her honeymoon was but a month old when she proposed that the rest of it be spent afloat, and the groom agreeing, the search for a yacht that he might buy or charter led straight to the fine boat she had defiled last season. It is said she made an offer for the boat in person, but however that may be, her connection with the proposal was disclosed, and the offer was rejected. From the first the yacht has been for sale, as well, and I suspect that it now is a case of no reasonable offer refused.

ROMANCE OVER DRESS SUIT.

A dress suit that cost its owner a sum estimated variously at from $5000 to $15,000 is the possession of a William street insurance broker, and not so proud a possession, either, though he has told the circumstances because of their unusualness. It seems that while he was at business a smooth young fellow called at his home on the upper West Side and told his wife that her husband had sent him to get his dress suit, either the one with a spike-tailed coat or that with the Tuxedo. The caller was so plausible that the wife was disarmed. When she was made a bit confused by the fact that her husband hadn't a Tuxedo garment, he apologized so easily for having misunderstood the hastily given instructions that she was convinced of his honesty and bade him enter while she looked up the desired clothing.

FOUND BULKY LETTER.

She had it in a minute, but then there was delay while she sent a servant to an upper floor for a suit case. In this wait the visitor talked easily, but was unable quite to draw the wife's attention from her husband's "glad rags," and it was while she lingered over them that she noticed a bunchy place in the coat. Immediately she asked the caller if the suit was to be pressed before her husband wore it. He didn't know. That spot needed attention badly, she remarked, and in examining it more closely it proved that a bulging pocket was the cause of the roughness. Just as the servant returned with the grip the wife ran her hand into the pocket and fetched out a letter, thick and closely written in a feminine hand not her own.

That was enough to delay proceedings and after she had read the opening lines of the missive, the visitor's plea that he be not delayed fell only on the servant's ears. It may be explained right here that the caller was a sharper, a petty thief at a game that has been so successful hereabouts of late that the city's hock shops are believed to be chock-up with stolen dress suits.

REFUSED THIEF THE TOGS.

He didn't get away with the goods in this instance, for after a wait of two or three minutes, during which the wife's agitation grew, she announced positively, with a clutch at the spike-tailed garment, that the caller positively could not have the gay togs; that if her husband wanted his evening clothes, he must come for them in person. The visitor protested glibly, but she would not relent, and at that point the thief went out of the story—after some one else's glad rags, probably.

When the husband returned from business he was confronted with an angry spouse holding aloft sixteen pages of closely written incrimination. It was a case, too, of offending after promise to be good, after having been caught at like tricks, and the outcome was that the wife cleared out immediately with the chattels that she and the servant had been packing ever since the sharper's departure. In the separation arrangements that followed the husband agreed to a weekly payment to the wife of $30. From this figure the cost of the suit, which still is in the husband's possession, is calculated. The difference in the figures of the various estimators is due to difference of opinion as to how long the husband will maintain payments, it seeming to be the general belief that payers of alimony become forgetful, and there are no tables of statistics on which to strike an average.

A certain grizzled rounder of a well-to-do set much given to critical study of the feminine beauty of folly shows has just had an experience that has stirred him to something as near remorse as anything of which he is capable. He tells of it with the thorough attention to trifling detail that marks many who lead the idle life, and his desire that each hearer shall understand the true significance of every detail is as great as if he looked upon it as a fine exploit, himself the hero. But in one early recital, at least, he showed a tendency to seek sympathy, and between sips of his high ball confessed that it was deucedly irregular, not at all what he liked, you see, and altogether wanted most to be told that he had done just the right thing in the peculiar circumstances.

It seems that among the women acquaintances of last winter, for though his hair is whitening he keeps on seeking to know the fears he craved, and listen meanwhile to the now excessively tiresome queries and confidences of the parent.

"I put up what I hope for the old gentleman's sake struck him as a modest lunch," concludes the reciter, "and then broke away. If I hadn't celared out about then I believe the woman would have had me signing checks for the expenses of her tour, with the old man as a witness. But believe me, I felt relieved a few days later when I was told that papa was home in Pennsylvania."

The Doctor Writes of Counterfeiters.

CHAS. H. FLETCHER, New York City. Hyannis, Mass., May 12, 1900.

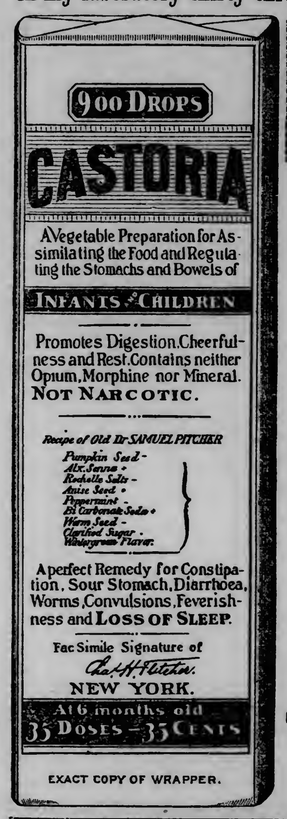

Dear Mr. Fletcher:—I wish to congratulate you on your numerous victories over counterfeiters and imitators of Castoria, and trust the time is not far distant when these inferior and dangerous mixtures will be entirely suppressed.

You are right when you say in your advertisements that it is "Experience against Experiment."

I feel it to be an outrage, and an imposition upon the parents of little children that my name should be associated with imitations of Castoria, dangerous to the health and life of these little ones who too often fight their battles for life in vain.

Let me again commend you for the high standard you have maintained in the preparation of my prescription, and I confidently believe it is due to this scrupulous integrity you are indebted for the wonderful sale of Castoria to-day, and the steady growth it has had since I gave you the details of its mauufacture in my laboratory thirty-three years ago.

CHELLEW IS RE-ELECTED

State Commander of the Maccabees of the World.

Minneapolis, June 18.—I. N. Chellew, of Duluth, was re-elected state commander of the Maccabees of the World after one of the most hotly contested elections in the history of the order. His opponent in the race was F. D. Furlong, of St. Paul, and Mr. Chellew won out only after a hard contest. He has occupied the office of state commander of Minnesota for seven years.

The other officers eleteed were: A. C. Jensen, Fergus Falls, lieutenant commander; G. S. Raper, Two Harbors, state record keeper Dr;. A. K. Richardson, Minneapolis; state physician; G. F. Butler, Long Prairie, state master-at-arms; C. J. Hector, Duluth, state chaplain; H. E. Stell, Brainerd, state sergeant; G. E. Clinton, Sleepy Eye, state sentinel; C. L. Adams, St. Paul, and E. E. Barnidge, Tower, masters of the guard; Stephen Butler, Minneapolis, state picket. E. H. Haas of St. Paul, and Alex. Stewart, of Duluth, were elected delegates to the supreme convention. Dr. Haas was elected on th first ballot in a field of seven candidates. He was the only candidate to secure an election on the first ballot.

About 100 delegates, representing more than 10,000 members o fthe order, were in attendance at the convention. State Commander Chellew opened the convention and the delegates were welcomed to the city by Mayor Haynes. Judge Ogle, of Mankato, responded.

The reports show the order to be in excellent shape in the state. There are now 147 tents, an increase of fifteen over a year ago, and the number of life members at present is 9734, a net gain of 348. The death benefits paid during the year amounted to $48,000, and the disability benefits to $1100.

Thursday night the knights enjoyed a banquet at the National hotel and Henry Deutsch presided as toastmaster. There were responses by Governor Van Sant, Mayor Haynes, George R. Laybourn, D. P. Markey, supreme commander; Dr. R. E. Moss, supreme examiner, and other prominent officers and members of the order.

Mrs. Annie M. Welch was re-elected commander of the woman's branch of the order, and she was also chosen to present the state at the supreme lodge represent the state at the supreme lodge in Detroit next month. Mayor Haynes welcomed the members to the city and Mrs. Lillian Hollister, supreme commander, responded gracefully. There are nineteen lodges in the state, with a membership of 4019, as compared with 700 members three years ago, when Mrs. Welch was elected state commander for the first time.

In the evening the delegates went to the Lyceum theater in a body and yesterday they joined the knights in an outing at Lake Minnetonka. The Dale Guards, of St. Paul, gave an exhibition drill at the close of the performance at the Lyceum and there were several novel features on the program.

CITIZENS OF IOWA HAVE DAY AT FAIR.

St. Louis, June 18.—Iowa came to the front yesterday and its citizens visited the World's fair in throngs. The military parade formed at the Iowa state pavilion and marched to the Iowa monument at the head of the cascades, on the Terrace of States.

The monument was presented to Iowa by Isaac S. Taylor, director of work of the exposition, and accepted by Commissioner Leroy, of Mount Pleasant, Iowa. The formal program was carried out at the state pavilion, where addresses were made by Governor Albert B. Cummins, Former Governor Larrabee, president Iowa World's fair commission; Thomas D. Healy, of Fort Dodge, and President David R. Francis of the exposition.

SUED BY HIS DOCTOR.

"A doctor here has sued me for $12.50, which I claimed was excessive for a case of cholera morbus," says R. White, of Coachella, Cal. "At the trial he praised his medical skill and medicine. I asked him if it was not Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy he used as I had good reason to believe it was, and he would not say under oath that it was not." No doctor could use a better remedy than this in a case of cholera morbus, it never fails. Sold by all druggists.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

Washington Post: Newell Dwight Hillis says that it will be vulgar to be rich in the next generation. We hope that it will be vulgar also for preachers to be sensational in the next generation.

Chicago Inter-Ocean: United Presbyterians of Greenville, Pa., have decided that a woman of 30 is not eligible to membership in young people's societies. Perhaps she may find a place in the infants' class.

Brooklyn Eagle: Of three chaplains recently appointed in the Japanese army one is a Buddhist, one a Shintoist and one a Christian. Some people in our section would never rest till the Buddhist and Shintoist were discharged.

Philadelphia Press: Of the many voices now being raised against lax divorce practices none has rung clearer than the recent utterance of Archbishop Ryan. He sees plainly that, in the long run, woman will be the principal sufferer, and that while chivalry is left to men they should resist the present influences at work to undermine the sacredness of the marriage relation.

Indianapolis Journal: Why do preachers prate of "the flowery path of sin" and "the rugged path of righteousness?" It is just the other way. The path of the sinner is narrow, tortuous, rough to the feet and full of pitfalls and pain, while the road to right living is broad and open as the day. But cultivate the flowers of love along this great highway, and it at once blossoms into a paradise of beauty and sweetness, made glad by the song of the heart and the gleeful laughter of children. Here only comes the glow of happiness arising from good deeds and the delicious rest that follows honest work done with a right intent.

Sydney (Australia) Bulletin: Elijah Dowie's departure from Adelaide, South Australia, was a strangely scared and subterranean business. Instead of going on board the Mongolia from Large bay, like an ordinary human, he announced that his place of embarkation would be kept a dark secret. Then, while the crowd haunted the jetties of Glenleg, Semaphore, Largs, and even Henley Beach, he sneaked down to out-of-the-way sleepy Brighton, where a launch waited. He made the passage across in the stuffy little launch cabin and declined to come out until the crowd on the dock of the Mongolia had finished kissing its departing friends and gone ashore. At the last moment the terrified prophet fled up the Monoglia's gangway as if the devil was behind him with a stinkpot and almost broke his neck getting into the cabin out of sight. It didn't look at all like the departure of a prophet.

GOVERNOR SUED FOR $100,000

Owners of the Portland Mine Bring Suit Against Several.

Denver, Col., June 18.—Papers in the $100,000 damage suit in the Portland Gold Mining company against Governor James H. Peabody, Adjt. Gen. Sherman M. Bell, C. C. Hamlin, secretary of the Mine Owners' association, and others connected with that body, as well as Sheriff Edward Bell of Teller county and his deputies who assisted in the closing down of the Portland mine, were served on Governor Peabody yesterday. Governor Peabody also received notice that on June 22 application would be made to United States Circuit Judge Amos Thayer, in St. Louis, for an injunction to restrain the governor, the military and all other persons from interfering with the operation of the Portland mine.

Those cited to appear before the federal court at St. Louis are Governor James Peabody, Adjt. Gen. Sherman M. Bell, Sheriff Edward Bell of Teller county, and the following officers and members of the Cripple Creek District Mine Owners' association: H. H. Hamlin, J. G. Colbourn, Charles Walden, F. C. Campbell, A. E. Carlton, L. E. Hill and A. T. Solman.

The petition for the injunction has been presented to the federal court by James H. Burns, owner of the Portland mine.

The jurisdiction of the United States court is asked on the grounds that the complainant is a citizen of the state of Iowa, and that he has been deprived of the enjoyment of his property, without due process of law and in violation of the fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth and fourteenth amendments to the constitution. The complaint further avers that the complainant's property is decreased in value from lying idle, and asks damages against the defendants in the sum of $100,000.

C. S. Hamlin, who is mentioned as one of the defendants, is the partner of the firm of Cunnell & Hamlin, James F. Burns, president of the Portland company, refuses to discuss his plans, for publication, but it is said he has declared to friends that he proposes to defray all expenses of suits that may be brought by the federal court against Governor Peabody and others by Portland miners who were deported from Cripple Creek.

Mr. Thomas, Mr. Burn's counsel, was busily engaged with Mr. Burns today in drawing complaints in the Portland suit, but he denied all knowledge of suits to be brought by deported miners.

FIRE DOES DAMAGE TO PACIFIC STEAMER.

Seattle, June 18.—Fire was discovered in the afterhold of the steamer Ohio tied at Moran Bros.' pier Thursday night. The flames gained such headway before the fire apparatus arrived that it took hours to get them under control.

Early yesterday the firemen gained the upper hand of the fire, and although the Ohio was listed heavily to port with the weight of water which had been thrown into her hold, she was saved.

ODD BLUNDERS OF ORATORS.

The London Spectator has collected the following instances of queer blunders in offhand parliamentary speeches:

"Sir, we are told that by this legislation the heart of the country has been shaken to its very foundations."

"The secretary of the education department was the father of a statement of which the bottom was knocked out by those who followed him in the second-reading debate, yet the honorable member for St. Pancras has thought iit to trot it out again."

"Among the many jarring notes heard in this house on military affairs this subject at least must be regarded as an oasis."

"The interests of the employers and employed are the same nine times out of ten—I will even say ninety-nine times out of ten."

"Our tongues are tied, our hands are fettered, and we are really beating the air for no purpose."

"I will now repeat what I was about to say when the honorable member interrupted me."

"The West Indies will now have a future which they never had in the past."

"A thorny subject which has long been a bone of contention among us."

"A slumbering volcano which at any moment a spark might set aflame."

"The Chancellor of the Exchequer has denuded us of every rag of the principles which we have been proclaiming from the house-tops."

"Ah! The honorable member opposite shakes his head at that. But he can't shake mine!"

Regretfully the compiler admits that not one of these blunders was made by an Irish member.

JAMES CREELMAN ON JUDGE PARKER

Harper's Weekly: A large head set strongly on a tall, strong body; a full fresh-colored face; broad, high, tranquil brow; straight, powerful nose; coarse tawny mustache; brilliant brown eyes that look straight at you; long and formidable jaws; a heavy underlip; big, flat teeth and massive round chin—every movement and look suggesting immense strength and a hearty contented spirit.

That is Chief Judge Alton Brooks Parker in his fifty-second year—the silent man to whom the defeated and distracted Democratic leaders turn for hope.

The idea that Judge Parker is a colorless respectability, a mere passive availability in politics, is ludicrous to those who know him well or have taken the trouble to examine his record. Even his distinguished associates on the bench have publicly borne witness that he is a man deeply informed in questions of government and of unshakable convictions.

Can it be said that a man has shown no signs of extraordinary character when we know that, after managing a victorious campaign in the state of New York—fresh from the excitements of desperate partisan warfare—he could take his seat on the judicial bench and from that hour remain politically mute for nearly 20 years? Where is there a parallel? Or has blatant blatherskitism, on the one hand, and cheap heries on the other, so corrupted the popular American electorate has at last come to look upon dignity, modesty, and common sense conservatism, even in the high magistracy, as signs of mediocrity?

There is no mystery about Judge Parker, notwithstanding his refusal to engage in a scramble for the presidency. As a voter Judge Parker has always supported the Democratic party, even, as in 1896 and 1900, he gave nothing more than his vote, reserving the right to disagree with particular issues set forth in the Chicago and Kansas City platforms, notably the free silver heresy.

Surely there is nothing evasive about that attitude. The judge believes in the rule of the majority—in parties as well as in governments. From a Democratic standpoint, the idea is fundamental.

His judicial opinions strongly emphasize his position as a strict constructionist. There is no greater stickler for a complete separation of the legislative executive, and judicial departments of the government—the policy that answers Lord Macauley's sneer, "Your constitution is all sail and no anchor."

Nor is Judge Parker's attitude toward the trust question in doubt. Speaking from the supreme court bench in 1896, he declared that, as a matter of common law, it was immaterial whether a combination in restraint of trade was reasonable or unreasonable. He reaffirmed that opinion as chef judge of the court of appeals. The mere possession of the power to suppress the people was unlawful. And it is important to understand that the judge was not construing a statute, but was declaring the policy of the common law. Surely there is no uncertainty in that utterance on the question of trusts or monopolies?

In his vote on the franchise tax he demonstrated his belief that a special right to use the public highways is in itself real property—in the nature of an easement—and, as such, is subject to taxation like any other real estate.

No man can read his exhaustive opinions involving the rights of capital and labor in their orderly relations to each other—opinions dealing with present industrial conditions—without knowing that he stands for the principle of competition, and would rather have a continual struggle than a peace involving a modification of either capital or labor. His utterances on this most complicated of modern issues show that he is an extreme individualist. In this he is the champion of strenuousness; for extreme liberty means extreme effort. He hates paternalism and socialism, the refuges of men too cowardly or too lazy to continue the struggle between capital and labor, out of which civilization has been evolved. It was Count Murayief who declared that the mission of Russian autocracy was to relieve the tired man of the world.

In 1895 when Judge Parker was conspicuously engaged in party politics—the last year in which he had a moral right to discuss political issues that "Federal taxation shall be exclusively for public purposes and shall not exceed the needs of the government economically administered." He indorsed that policy heartily.

In his speech at Atlanta last year the judge asserted his firm belief that the Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments to the constitution of the United States had left the rights of the states unimpaired except as to the negro question.

It will be seen that Judge Parker's position regarding trusts strictly constitutional policies, official usurpations, public franchises, capital and labor, tariff taxation and state rights are beyond doubt. And it is on these broad lines that the separate trend of Republican and Democratic thought and action lies today. So that the attempt to represent the judge as a neutral evasive man, without courage or convictions, must fall of success.

Judge Parker believes in party responsibility for government and, believing that, his idea is that the party in its national convention should declare its politicies and named for its candidate a citizen who can be depended upon to defend and enforce those policies. I write with authority when I say that Judge Parker would refuse to be a candidate for president upon a plaform which he blelevd to be unsound or unwise.

It is said by Judge Parker's enemies—in the absence of any stain upon his public or private life—that his candidacy is too vigorously supported by certain tricky politicians and Wall street bankers. But it is difficult to see how he can decline the support of any citienz on the ground that he is cunning in his political methods or that earns his income as a banker. It is a demonstrable fact that, at the time of the recent New York state convention, he used his influence to seat a contested delegation had written to him saying that he would, if seated, vote against Parker instructions. It is also a fact that when he was consulted about contests in the convention, he said:

"Every question should be settled on its merits. There is no other right way."

And it is illustrative of his character that on a day just before that decisive convention, when his political fate hung in the balance and when the Democratic leaders were in high council, the judge turned from politics to chloroform two sick horses and bury them in his favorite meadow. On the very day of the convention he spent his time overseeing the plowing of his hayfields, gathering wild flowers for his wife, working on his judicial opinions and discussing with an old friend a new book about Thomas Jefferson. It was not until nearly midnight, when a justice of the supreme court called him up on the telephone, that he hard a word about the convention.

Are these characteristic of an ambitious schemer or of a sane mind in a sane body, a cheerful contentment with life as it is?

It would be absurd to say that Judge Parker is a great man. He is a sound, learned lawyer, a capable man of business, a wise politician, a practical and successful farmer, and the kind of a citiezn who is useful to his neighbors and is loved and trusted by them, regardless of political differences. There are no evidences of towering genius in his career, but there are abundant indiactions that he is a sincere, old-fashioned Democrat, tenacious of the national traditions and that he represents in his make-up, reverence for law, quiet courage, hatred of demagogism and heroics and al that is strong, modest, sweet and sober in the American character.

IN COPPER CIRCLES

Settlement of Marine Strike Is Hailed With Joy.

Mine May Be Opened on the King Philip Property.

Houghton, Mich., June 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The practical settlement of the deadlock that has paralyzed lake marine traffic for the past six weeks is nowhere hailed with greater joy than in the Lake Superior copper district. While none of the mines have suffered seriously from shortage of fuel, none but the Calumet & Hecla have on hand anything like an adequate supply for the requirements of more than the immediate future, and even the Calumet & Hecla is under the necssity of obtaining further large fuel supplies to provide for the necessities of the long and cold winter that will follow the close of navigation next November. A few cargoes of bituminous coal have been received from time to time, but from now on heavy receipts may be looked for, as the requirments of the district now crowd a million tons annually, and this amount must be brought here by water within the next five months.

The coal wharf of the Calumet & Hecla, burned some months since, is nearly rebuilt, and will be better equipped than before for the receipt and storage of fuel.

The appointment of Robert H. Shields of Houghton as member of the state tax commission gives general satisfaction locally, and there is some faint glimmering of hope that he may be able to convince the commission that Houghton county is being given the worst of the assessments scheduled by the commissioners. The equalization of the county assessments throughout the state is attended to by various boards with over-lapping authorities, but the state tax commission is the newest and strongest of the lot, and imposes its dictum upon the others. The equalization of Houghton county at a far higher figure than Kent county, which contains the prosperous and populous city of Grand Rapids, with its hundred thousand people, is an indication of the great burdens in taxation that have been imposed upon the copper district. The taxes of the Calumet & Hecla are about the same as those of the Rio Tinto in Spain. The copper production of the mines is about equal, but Rio Tinto earns the larger profits—yet Spanish taxation is a byword for legalized extortion.

Local rumor credits St. Mary's Mineral Land company with seriously planning to open a mine on the King Philip property, near the Winona. Drill borings have given encouraging results on this tract, and it would not be surprising if the company decided to put down at least an exploring shaft or two. The policy of St. Mary's company ahs been changing within the past few years, and the management is inclined to be more aggressive in the development of its mineral lands. Many of the best mines of the district have been opened within the past thirty years on lands formerly owned in whole or part by the canal company, and while the profits have been large to the original owners, the canal company has realized but a small fraction of the profits that have accrued to the later holders who developed and operated the mines.

The three stamps at the Mohawk are doing good duty, treating about 1500 tons of rock daily. The rock is somewhat more refractory than that from the Wolverine mine, and carries considerably less copper, but metal is being made cheaply and in large quantities, and the Mohawk may declare a dividend toward the close of the year, though in the case of a low market price of the metal it is possible that the declaration of a dividend would be postponed for a few months, in pursuance of the conservative Stanton policy of not beginning dividends that cannot be steadily maintained. The low percentage of the Mohawk rock of late is due partially to the burning of the shafthouse at No. 3 last fall, but this is being replaced with a steep structure, and when completed, No. 3 shaft will aid in raising the percentage of copper secured from each ton of rock stamped.

The Osceola mill is crushing about 575 tons of rock per stamp per diem. For several years the Osceola has led the pacity per head, due partly to the nature pacity per head, due partly to thenature of the rock crushed, which is softer than the average, and partly to superior mill practice. Fifteen years ago the average capacity per head was little if any better than 300 tons in twenty-four hours, and although this figure has been nearly doubled, there seems no reason to believe that the limit of possible output has been reached. The history of the lake district for the past fifty years shows a steadily upward trend in milling capacity, accompanied by its necessary concomitant, decreased costs per ton of rock treated.

The Ahmeek continues to be an especially bright spot in the galaxy of new mines, and there are ample reasons for predicting that this property will make a mine of considerably more than average size and richness.

Barring accidents, the mineral product of the Atlantic for the first six months of 1904 will be the largest ever secured.

Since the end of the strike, last February, the Quincy has maintained an exceptionally even production of about 1120 tons of mineral monthly. The mineral, however, is dressed down much lower in copper than formerly, as is the case at nearly every mill in the district, the introduction of patent concentrators and other milling devices rendering it possible to secure much of the very fine copper formerly escaping in the taillings, though at the expense of including a considerably larger proportion of gangue rock than under the older and cruder methods of extraction.

The Michigan mine is securing good returns from its stamp rock, and is also producing large quantities of mass and barrel copper. While the affairs of the Michigan are no longer surrounded by the glamour of the boom days of old, the property is actually in better condition than ever before, and the results now being obtained could be made the basis for a substantial advance in the shares, were it not that the dear public is almost entirely out of the market, and the brokers can see neither fun nor profit in engineering a boom at their own expense. Unfortunately there are many shareholders—not only in the Michigan, but in all the other lake copper mines—whose sole idea of the value of mines is gained from the quotations for their shares, and who consider any mine a failure if its stock declines. Incidentally, these are the same people who believe firmly that every hole in the ground is an embryo Calumet & Hecla, in such times as the stock market is lively and advices advancing. By virtue of these beliefs they usually manage to buy on the bumps and sell on the slumps, to the great profit of the brokers and such wise investors as base their opinions of values on actual developments and returns at the mines, rather than on the figures printed on a ribbon of paper or chalked on a blackboard.

The Franklin production for the first half of the year will fall a little short of that secured in the corresponding period of 1903, but with the opening of the second shaft at the Franklin Junior the mine will be able to very materially increase its rock output, and the Franklin should close the year with a gain in production.

Wild and wooly estimates of the fortune of John D. Rockefeller, recently appearing in sundry of the public prints, credit him with a small item of $10,000,000 or $11,000,000 worth of Calumet & Hecla shares. If the other figures of the "estimated" fortune of a round billion were based on no surer foundation, Mr. Rockefeller would be forced to confine himself exclusively to a bread-and-milk diet from reasons of economy, rather than because of a physically defective assimilative apparatus. The veracious estimate aforesaid also credits Mr. Rockefeller with holding Amalgamated Copper shares to the extent of about $50,000,000 in excess of the entire market value of all the company's shares, which is rather hard on the other 14,000 shareholders—the other 14,000 who tried to fill up on Standard Oil richness, but who filled themselves up with natural gas, rather than petroleum.

DOCTORS FACED WITH FACTS FAIL TO EXPLAIN SECRET OF HIS MARVELOUS POWER OVER DEATH

Heals Those Hundreds of Miles Away the Same as Those Who Call in Person

Gives Service and Home Treatment Without Pay to Prove to All Mankind the Marvels of His Power—Feels It His Duty to God and Man to Give Freely of his Knowledge and Skill to all Who Stand in Need

(From the Baltimore World.)

New York (Special Correspondence)—Dr. Wallace Hadley, a well-known professor of chemistry of this city, has undoubtedly made the most sensational discovery of the age. Call it Divine power, science, or whatever you will, the fact remains that he has transcended all known methods of healing, set at defiance the supposed laws of nature, and utterly dumfounded the ill and afflicted by a series of the most miraculous cures known to medical science. Hopeless invalids, given up as utterly incurable by eminent physicians, have been healed of their afflictions and rescued from the indescribable anguish of an untimely grave by this man's mighty power over disease and death. The remedies of the best and most learned specialists seem as bread pills when compared with the remarkable discovery of this wonderful man. He has already done practically everything but bring the dead to life, and his associates are on the qui vive, not knowing what marvel he may next perform.

"How did you happen to make this great discovery?" asked a reporter who called to find out the cause of the tremendous furore Dr. Hadley has created.

"Ever since I graduated from the medical department of the University of Buffalo," said the doctor, "I have been convinced that no disease should cause death. God has, in my judgment, provided a cure for every ill to which human flesh is heir. Man must search and find this cure the same as man has discovered the telegraph, the telephone, etc. The first thing I set out to do was to find the exact elements which control living being and sustain life, to discover the power which makes a man's heart beat and his body live. I next determined to extract these products from animal, mineral and chemical substances and combine them as they are found in a living being. I worked many years, day and night, before I made any great progress. Then my discovery nearly all came at once. As soon as I made it I tried the preparation on myself, then I gave it to all the sick persons I could find. I called for the worst cases doctors could send me, cases supposed to be incurable. The results were simply miraculous. They far exceeded my most sanguine hopes. I particularly remember the case of Mrs. Sarah Miller, No. 150 Sixth street, Harrisburg, Pa. She was one of my first patients. The doctors had given her up to die. Her friends hourly expected to be called to her grave. She was so bad the night she received my treatment she did not expect to live until morning. She took two doses; it revived her; the next step she is living today. Here is a copy of a letter from her. Read for yourself." The following extract is taken verbatim from Mrs. Miller's letter. She says: "When I began to take your treatment I realized that I was on the brink of the grave. I suffered from gastro-intestinal catarrh and diabetes. I was in constant pain day and night. I felt blue, despondent and discouraged with life. I had taken so much medicine for so many years without receiving any benefit. I tried your treatment as a last resort, and thank God I took it, for otherwise I should not be here to write this letter." "This is only one of a large number of similar letters that I have received," said the doctor. "It seems that sometimes a divine hand directed these poor sufferers where to obtain relief. I believe that I was permitted to make this great discovery for the benefit of the whole human race. Here my services free for a limited time that all may enjoy the benefits of perfect health. Here is a letter from another woman whom I saved from the grave. Mrs. Germond, of No. 203 Highland avenue, Benton Springs, Mich., writes: 'I tried so many remedies without obtaining relief that I had given up all hope of ever being cured. I heard of your wonderful discovery, but I had no faith in you and was induced to give you a trial only on account of a strong letter received from a friend who had been cured by you. I was a physical wreck ready for the grave. I had heart, stomach and bronchial trouble. My whole system was diseased and run down. I suffered untold agonies. I often felt that death would be a welcome relief. I am confident that you saved my life, and had it not been for your marvelous treatment I should today be cold in my grave. I write this letter for the good of humanity, that others may be induced to try the wonderful treatment that has cured me.'"

"Do physicians take your treatment?" asked the reporter.

"They certainly do," said the doctor. "I am treating a large number now. Of course they would not want you to publish their names, but here are their letters. You can read what they say. I cure them when all their own remedies fail. I have demonstrated beyond doubt that the most serious diseases can be overcome. That the lives of thousands of men and women can be saved who have hitherto been carried off to the grave. I estimate that I shall save the lives of over one hundred thousand people the coming year who otherwise would have died an untimely death."

"But how do you account for your wonderful power over death?" asked the reporter.

"Step this way," said the doctor, leading the reporter into his large laboratory, "and I will show you the source of my power. I will explain to you the secret for which wise men have sought for ages." The doctor here pointed to a mysterious red fluid extract in a tightly-corked glass flagon. "This," said the doctor, "is the apparently simple extract that has startled the civilized world. This is the powerful essence that has given me the titles 'Divine Healer,' 'Miracle Worker,' 'A Latter-Day Savior,' etc. Of course I am nothing of the sort. I am a scientist. My discovery is scientific. I abstract life from the materials of nature. Did you ever stop to think that wheat and corn come from the earth and air? If we knew the wonderful chemical secrets of nature we could make corn, wheat and other food from the earth and air. So my discovery of the vital principle of life is not so wonderful after all. I have merely found a secret law of nature which has been overlooked by doctors and scientists for centuries past."

"Do you give treatement to everyone free? This, it seems, would be an enormous expense," said the reporter.

"Yes," said the doctor, "I offer a course of home treatment to everyone who writes me now absolutely free of charge. Later I expect to charge a moderate fee. It will probably cost me several thousand dollars to give this free help, but I can afford to do it; and besides I want to prove the miraculous power of my great discovery. Tell your readers to state the leading symptoms of their trouble, giving age and sex, and I will diagnose their cases, write them fully in regard to the exact stage to which their disease has progressed, the length of time required to effect a cure, and send them a course of home treatment for their particular disease."

The writer has taken Dr. Hadley's course of home treatment himself for a nervous affection, and he can personally vouch for its wonderful efficacy. He also guarantees this offer to be absolutely genuine in every respect. All who wish to be healed should write Dr. Hadley at his laboratory, Address Dr. Wallace Hadley, office 827 Force of Life building, 708 Madison avenue, New York city. If you have anything confidential to say, mark your letter private. The doctor is an extremely affable man and takes a supreme delight in curing difficult cases that have been given up to die by other physicians. It is these cases that offer him the opportunity to demonstrate the miraculous power of his great discovery.

VIRGINIA

Virginia, June 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—S. A. Nelson and family, who live in their new residence in the second addition, together with several visitors, escaped serious, if not fatal, injuries from the explosion of dynamite in a kitchen stove Thursday. The young son of Mr. Nelson had just brought in some wood from outside and, as Mrs. Nelson was baking bread, she filled the stove full. The several people in the house were in conversation and but little heed was paid to the peculiar noise issuing from the steel range, but when a loud report was heard and pieces of the range were being hurled all over the room there was a scramble to get into other rooms and to safety. When the commotion had ended the people returned to the kitchen only to find the stove completely ruined and dough all over the floor. Water was put on the live coals on the floor and further damage did not appear. Upon learning where the boy had secured the wood which had caused the damage Mr. Nelson got some more pieces and with others went to the ball grounds in front of the house and started a blaze, putting these pieces of wood on top of the heap. He waited only a short time when there were three loud reports and the wood was blown into the air. The presence of dynamite in the wood is a mystery and the family dwell in fear that another piece of the wood will find its way in the new steel range and do greater damage than the first consignment.

He demanded his cash, and as the woodsman was "all in" O'Neil grew desperate and dealt his victim a blow that hurled him to the ground and then put the "boots" to him, beating him up in terrible shape, winding up by breaking his nose. O'Nell took a train for Duluth the next morning and made headquarters on the Bowery, just where the Duluth policemen wanted him. They took first place in seven events out of twelve and several seconds. Eveleth came next with four firsts, and Ely drew last place, being very low in points. In the sprints Reid and Schaenleber, of this city, held high honors, while Ellsworth, of Eveleth, came in a good second, in fact he was the whole Eveleth agregation and did fine work, especially in the jumps. The points figured down were: Virginia, 54 1-3, Eveleth, 48 1-3, Ely, 13 1-3.

The Red Flag of the Pirates.

BY HARVEY ELLSWORTH.

Bradford Royden's feet were twined about the front legs of the chair on which he sat, his tongue was thrust first in one cheek and then in the other, and he leaned heavily upon the table. Before him was spread a piece of turkey-red calico, on which he was outlining heavily with black ink a skull and cross bones.

"I think it ought to be a black flag for a pirate," commented Smith Watson, who was looking on.

"Nope, red's for blood," replied Bradford. "We'll paint the boat black."

"What'll we call it?"

"We'll name her the 'Curse.' She'll be the curse of the seas when she gets abroad."

Bradford had fixed up the boat himself and he was prouder of it than if it had been the costliest yacht that ever touched water. It was fortunate, however, that it did not have to stand the test of any rougher waters than prevailed on the Lockewell Canal.

The pirates started on their voyage on a Friday evening, taking with them no supplies. "We must depend upon plundering as we go," announced the pirate captain, Bradford Royden, to the pirate crew, Smith Watson.

"Don't you think we might take something to eat just for this evening?" the crew had ventured apprehensively.

"Of course not," the captain had replied in a tone that demanded obedience. He bent himself to his oars with a heavy frown and the crew imitated him to the best of its ability. There were some jeers as they started forth, but the Captain ordered that no one was to be slain. The red flag dangled so limply in the soft evening air that its terrible insignia was not to be made out, yet the Captain and crew knew it was there and their hearts thrilled at the thought of adventures they were to meet. Two fishing rods, one rifle and a large caseknife formed the equipment.

"Hist! be warned! There's a garden," he observed.

"We shall not starve while we have those," said the Captain, pointing to them.

"I'm getting terrible hungry," remarked the crew when the sun had become almost as gory in the Western sky as the pirate flag.

The Captain said nothing, but indicated the shore with a wave of his hand and with one accord they pulled for it.

Shouldering his gun, the Captain gave the knife to the crew and they began a wary, yet vigilant march.

"Halt!" said the Captain, coming to a stop, the crew following his example. "Hist," he warned. "There's a garden," he observed.

"Nothin' good to eat in it," objected the crew.

"Radishes, onions and lettuce," replied the Captain, "and strawberries."

"Not very ripe."

"Good enough for starving men."

"We haven't any salt."

"Hah; there's a maiden fair; she shall buy her ransome with salt."

A girl a little under the stature of the pirates stood regarding them curiously. The Captain seized her by the arm. "We are pirates," he told her, and if you are not back in 10 minutes with bread and salt—"

"And butter," put in the crew.

"Yes, and butter, we shall fire your father's house and barns, lay waste his lands and carry you off captive!"

"You've been stealing," quoth the maiden, pointing to the supplies from the garden.

"We are pirates," repeated the Captain. "Hence at once and bring what we have commanded, or it will go hard with you."

"Mother'd see me," objected the maiden.

"Take a basket as if you were going to hunt eggs," suggested the crew.

"I've hunted 'em already, but I'll tell you what I'll do. If you'll wait here till mother gets out of the kitchen, I'll get you something.'

"How long'll that be?" inquired the crew, anxiously.

"I think she's on the front porch now; I'll go see."

"Swear that you'll return," ordered the pirate. "Say, 'I hope I'll find a snake in my bed if I don't bring food to the pirates.' "

"Oh, I couldn't say that," said the maiden, shuddering.

"Swear it!" demanded the Captain, and the maiden quakingly repeated the dreadful words.

"She'll come back," said the Captain, grimly, as she broke away.

And so she did within a very short time. Her eyes were wide open with excitement, and she panted from running. She had her arms full of queer-shaped packages. "This is salt and pepper. I mixed 'em like you do for hard-boiled eggs," she said, handing out the smallest package to the Captain, who thrust it in his pocket. "Here's a half loaf of bread. I don't know what mother'll say when she finds it's gone, but I just had to bring it when I thought of that snake." The maiden shivered at the word. "And I ran down cellar and got this butter; it'll be enough for two or three meals if you put it somewhere so it won't get too soft. There's a piece of pie and two doughnuts in this paper bag. I thought they'd taste good."

The pirate and the crew took the supplies with greedy promptness. "Thank you," said the Captain, "and we'll leave word that pirates coming this way are never to do you any harm."

"And there won't ever be any snakes get in my bed?"

"Never."

The pirates were as improvident as folk of their class always are. They ate all the bread, butter, doughnuts, pie and strawberries and most of the lettuce, radishes, and onions.

"My, but food does taste good when you're a pirate!" exclaimed the crew as he lay back contentedly.

"Where are we going to sleep tonight?" he asked a few mintues later.

"In Dangler's barn. It's only a few miles, but we'd better be getting on."

The Dangler farm bordered the canal, and the barn was not far from the water. It was not locked, and the boys got in without difficulty, and were congratulating themselves on having found such a good bed as the hay in the well-filled mow made, when the Captain almost screamed with surprise and terror, for his foot touched a human body, and the next instant was held tightly in a large grasp.

"Who in thunder be you? And what d'you mean disturbin' a man's sleep like this?" inquired a husky voice.

The crew started to retreat. "Come on, Brad,' he called to his chum; it's a robber or a hobo."

"You let go of me," commanded Bradford, but the man only gave an ugly laugh.

"You won't, won't you? Well, then, take that and that and that," cried the pirate captain, striking as hard as he could with his rifle at the man.

The tramp, giving a cry of pain and astonishment, relinquished his hold on Bradford's foot, and the two boys quickly made their escape.

"Let's get out of this," said Smith.

"Yes, we'll have to; it's to the oars once more."

"Let's don't go in any more barns."

"Where'll we sleep?"

"In the boat. We've got the oilcloth to cover over us."

The boat was tied up a few miles farther down the canal. The boys stretched themselves side by side in the bottom of the boat, and went as soundly to sleep as if they had been honest men instead of pirates. The night was nearly gone when the crew awoke. He rubbed his eyes and sat up, wondering for a moment where he was. As he remembered he saw a red glow in the sky. "It's getting morning," he thought; "no, that isn't the East," he added. "Brad, Brad, wake up! There's a big fire somewhere."

The Captain almost capsized the boat as he got suddenly to his feet.

"I believe that's Dangler's barn," he cried. "It's a mighty good thing we didn't sleep there if it is."

"I bet those hobos set it afire."

"Shouldn't wonder. Well, let's get a little more sleep."

The sun shining into their faces next awakened them.

"Breakfast," suggested the crew.

"Forage," said the Captain, and forth they stepped.

"Here's a mighty good spring."

Both boys drank deeply of the clear, cold water, and washed their faces in it.

"Also a springhouse," said the crew, taking observations and unhooking the door. "Gee, look at the jars of milk. I guess they'll never miss a little. I wish I hadn't drunk so much water."

Each of the boys drank from a stone jar of creamy milk.

"Look, here's some potatoes," remarked the Captain, going over to a basket.

"I guess they're seed potatoes."

"They'll make good pirate food. Put some in your pocket and so'll I. See, they're well supplied with butter. Let's wrap a hunk in some leaves. Now, if we can find some eggs, we're all right."

It was early in the day for eggs; but the boys found one in each of four nests, that had been left the day before for nest eggs. Rowing a little farther down they made a fire and cooked their breakfast.

"Out of sight!" was the verdict as they sat down to eat it.

They made their way slowly that day, and they did not suffer hunger. Their experience of the night before made them wary about sleeping in barns; yet, as the crew remarked, a boat wasn't as comfortable to sleep in as a bed.

"Hello, kids! Where are you going?" asked a cheerful voice while they were talking it over.

"Nowheres."

"Oh, I thought maybe you'd like to spend the night at my house."

The pirates eyed him suspiciously.

"Where do you live?" asked the crew.

"In that house over there. It's getting so dark you can hardly see it, but it's comfortable and roomy."

"We're pirates," announced Captain Bradford.

"So I judged from your flag; but I've no prejudice agaiast pirates. To tell the truth, I was one myself once."

"Well, then, we'll go," consented the pirates.

Although they protested that they had dined, their host set forth cold ham, pickles, bread and butter and jam, cake and pie, and, to show their appreciation of his hospitable efforts, the pirates cleaned the board.

Afterwards the man who had been a pirate told them such bloodthirsty tales of his early adventures that the boys hung on to each other as they went upstairs to bed, and were mighty glad that they were to sleep in one bed.

They had a fine breakfast the next morning before starting on their homeward row; but when they reminded their host of some of his piratical adventures he laughingly exclaimed: "What! I a pirate? Why, you must have been dreaming!"

It was nightfall when the pirates arrived at home. To their surprise they found their fathers waiting for them with stern faces.

"Were you on Dangler's place?" they were asked.

"Yes; but——"

"Were you in the barn?"

"Yes; but——"

"No excuses. Just answer the questions."

"Do you know anything about the burning of the barn?"

"Only that we saw it. We were about two miles from there."

"Didn't you go in there to sleep?"

"Yes; but there were tramps there, and we got out and slept in our boat."

"Oh, there were tramps there, were there? That's a new clue," said Mr. Royden to Mr. Watson.

Reports had reached their home before the boys got there that they had been about the Dangler place, and they were suspected of having set the barn afire; but when it was known that tramps had been there a search was begun for them. They were found skulking in the neighborhood. One of them had a bad record and the other one finally confessed to having started the fire. "I didn't mean no harm; I was only lightin' my pipe," he protested.

The boys were cleared of all suspicion; but the experience deprived piracy of its zest for them for that season, and the red flag was not seen again on the canal.

The Little Leas Go On a Journey.

BY ELEANOR McCARTHY.

"Now, when we get to the city you must all be very careful to stay with Norah and me while your father is looking after the trunks and things," said Mrs. Lea to Polly, Betty and Rosemary when they were about to start on their summer trip. They had to cross the city in going from one railroad station to another, and that was the part of the journey that Mrs. Lea said she dreaded. The three little Leas did not dread any of it. They looked forward with intense interest to this change in their lives. They were peculiarly interested in the city, because they had an aunt and an uncle and many cousins there, and on birthdays and Christmas their most beautiful gifts came from the city.

"What is the city like?" asked Rosemary when they were comfortably seated on the train and had grown accustomed to the novelty of travel.

"Its streets are of gold," ventured Betty.

"No," corrected Polly, "not all cities; only the new Jerusalem."

"Well, there are gold and silver and precious stones in the houses," insisted Betty.

"Yes, and the houses all join onto each other so you could walk right over the roofs," said Polly.

"Ain't there any yards?" asked Rosemary.

"No; only big parks, with fountains and donkeys and lions in them."

"Are there many little girls?"

"Millions."

At last the train went into a hole in the ground and there was no light except what came from the lamps. Rosemary climbed on Mr. Lea's lap and Polly and Betty loudly proclaimed that they were not afraid.

"It would be dreadful if we were frightened, wouldn't it?" whispered Betty.

The train came out of the tunnel and into the big station, where it stopped with a jolt.

"All out," called the conductor, and Mr. Lea took Rosemary, Mrs. Lea, Betty and Norah Polly by the hand. In the waiting room there were so many people that the little Leas thought all the people in the city must be there. Then Uncle Phil and Aunt Edith and cousin Kenneth and cousin Marjorie all ran up and hugged the three little Leas and said how glad they were to see them.

While Mr. Lea and Uncle Phil went off to see about the luggage and Aunt Edith talked with Mrs. Lea, the three little Leas were left to talk with their cousins.

"Now, we will all have luncheon," said Mr. Lea when he came back. They all got in two carriages and drove off to a hotel.

"This is a funny land," whispered Rosemary, as she looked around the big dining-room with beautiful pictures painted on wall and ceiling, velvet carpet on the floor, flowers everywhere and musicians playing.

They had a fine luncheon, Uncle Phil insisting that they should have everything they wanted, although Mrs. Lea protested that they would all be ill.

"Now we have an hour before you have to get your other train," said Uncle Phil. "Do you want to go to the Park?"

"Oh, yes, yes, yes," chorused the three little Leas, and in another five minutes they were on their way there.

The children had rides on the donkeys and in the goat carriages and then Kenneth cried, "To the Zoo; let's have a look at the Zoo! You never saw a lion, did you, Rosemary?"

"No, only in a book."

The little Leas were enraptured with the menagerie. Kenneth bought some peanuts and at first timidly and then with glee and confidence they fed the animals, talking to them all the while.

"You ain't seen the camels, have you?" a small boy asked Betty.

Betty shook her head.

"They're terrible funny with humps on their back. I'll show 'em to you if you give me them peanuts."

Betty gave up the peanuts.

"Come 'long," said the boy, "an' don't tell the others."

Betty slipped away with her new companion.

"I don't think they're pretty," said Betty, when the camels were pointed out to her.

"Who said they were? They can travel over deserts and go days an' days 'thout water. If you want to see a pretty animal come over here and I'll show you the striped tigers. They're beauts."

Betty forgot home and kindred in the maze of new attractions. She was standing directly in front of the lion's cage when the big lion with the shaggy mane got up and howled right at her hideously. Betty screamed with fright. "He's going to eat me; oh where's my mother?" she cried, and then, looking about, she discovered that she was surrounded by strange persons and strange animals. This made her cry harder than ever.

"What's the matter?" asked a big policeman coming up and taking her by the hand.

"My mother and father and everybody's lost," wailed Betty.

"Well, never mind, we'll find them. What's your father's name?"

"Father—yes, father Lea."

Just then Uncle Phil came around a corner. "Bless me, here she is!" he cried and lifting her up in his arms he ran as fast as he could with her back to where the others were.

"You almost made us lose that train, young lady," said Uncle Phil, "but I guess we'll make it up. Gather up the brood," he cried to Mr. Lea and in a few moments they were in the carriages and the drivers were told to drive as fast as they could to the ferry.

"What are we going to the ferry for?" asked Rosemary.

Everyone laughed, but she didn't see why.

Soon they stopped among a lot of other carriages and wagons and trucks. Rosemary looked all around but she could see nothing that suggested a fairy. Mr. Lea and Uncle Phil were seeing about trunks and tickets. Suddenly Rosemary gave a little cry of delight. "There's the fairy, oh, there she is!" Her eyes followed the carriage in which the fairy rode. Then she ran after it. "I must speak to the fairy," she gasped. The carriage halted and Rosemary was just about to speak to the fairy inside when it started up again. Rosemary followed on. When it stopped they were on a boat, but Rosemary did not realize that. She clambered upon the carriage step. "Kind fairy, will you give me my wish?" she asked.

"You sweet child, where did you come from and who do you think I am?"

"I'm Rosemary and you are a fairy, aren't you?"

"She is," said the man who rode with the lady in white, but she turned rosy pink and said, "Nonsense, I'm only a bride."

"Oh," ejaculated Rosemary, "I'm so sorry."

"Here, baby, you'll get hurt; where do you belong?" inquired a man coming up and taking her off the carriage step.

Mr. Lea and Norah came threading their way among the teams. "Here I am," Rosemary called to them, "but I can't find the fairy. I thought this was a fairy, but this only a bride."

Mr. Lea did not have time to answer. He put Rosemary on his shoulder and got back to the the rest of the party. "She was the first to board the ferry," he explained. "Well, I hope we are all on now and that no one will get lost again today."

"If I had children like that I'd chain them together before I started to travel," said Uncle Phil, but he kissed them affectionately and Rosemary three times.

"But you said we were going to see the fairy and we didn't," protested Rosemary.

"It wasn't a fairy," explained wise Cousin Kenneth, "it was a ferry and this is it, this boat we are on."

The ferry ride was a short one and then there were three hours more on the train before the little Leas arrived at their destination. They were pretty tired by that time, but they were glad to be there, for they knew that new things were going to happen.

"I'll show 'em to you if you give me them peanuts."

Lucy Brown's Curtain Dress.

BY BARBARA RUFFNEY.

All of the girls at the Rosebank School were to wear white frocks on class day, but Lucy Brown's had not come and it was the day before. There would be only one more express delivery that day and if it did not come, what was to be done? Lucy was one of the prize girls and how could she go up to receive her prize in a colored dress among all the girls in white? In all the exercises she would be unpleasantly conspicuous.

Lucy had all she could do to keep the tears back. She could not keep from being nervous. Her mother had written that the dress was being sent; why hadn't it come? Lucy frowned over this question. The 3 o'clock express came up the drive. There were packages and boxes of various sizes and one was marked "Miss Lucy Brown." Lucy's heart lightened. At last it had come. She ran with it to her room, shouting to her friends as she went, "My dress has come at last, Ellie."

"Oh, I'm so glad," Ellie called back. "I'll come in and see it soon."

Lucy could hardly cut the strings for excitement and she tore off the paper with eager haste. Carefully she lifted the white tissue paper.

"Oh, oh," she cried in dismay and burst into tears. The box was filled with lovely, long stemmed roses. At any other time Lucy would have been delighted to receive such a gift, but her disappointment over her dress was now too keen to let her have any pleasure in anything else.

"Let's see it," said Ellie, knocking and coming in at the same time. "Why what's the matter?"

"It—wasn't—a—dress—at all," sobbed Lucy. "It was only those horrid old flowers."

"Why Lucy Brown," they are perfectly sweet."

"But I didn't want roses, I wanted my dress. I'll just have to stay in bed tomorrow and say I'm ill, for I can't go out in an old frock when you girls all have your pretty new, white dresses. I won't do it.

"You have plenty of pretty dresses and who cares if they aren't white?" replied Ellie.

"What's very well for you to say when you have a dress of a Persian lawn all ready to put on your back."

"I suppose it does sound mean and I know I'd feel just as you do," admitted Ellie. "But, Lucy, you have a white pique skirt and you could wear a white shirtwaist with it."

"Wouldn't that be tacky! No I'd rather not have anything than to wear such a mix up as that."

"Well, I'm awfully sorry," said her friend, kissing Lucy and turning to leave the room. In a minute she turned back.

"Lucy," she cried, "Lucy, I know the very thing."

"What?"

"You know my Swiss curtains?"

"What have they got to do with my dress?"

"Everything. Just you cheer up and wait until I come back."

Ellie went away, laughing. Out on the veranda she swooped down upon a bevy of girls.

"I was just looking for you," she cried. "Girls, Lucy Brown's white dress hasn't come and she's in an awful stew."

"I should think she would be. Isn't it mean?"

"What is she going to do?"

"We must help her out."

"How can we? I've only one white dress fit to wear."

"We must make her one."

"Why Ellie Lawton, you must be crazy. Make her a dress by tomorrow? What out of, I'd like to know?"

"Out of my Swiss curtains."

The girls stared.

I mean it. They're awfully pretty and they have the ruffles all made. Now, if we sit up late tonight, and all turn in and work as hard as we can, we can do it."

"Where will we get a pattern?"

We can rip up one of Lucy's old dresses and cut it by that."

"Ellie, you certainly have a great head."

"We'll do it."

Before Lucy could more than half understand what they meant to do, Ellie's curtains were down and her blue and white dimity dress was being ripped to pieces for a pattern.

"Good work," said Ellie, when the pieces were pinned to the curtains and it was found that there was plenty of material. Supper was hurried that evening and after it was eaten such a cutting and clipping and basting and sewing as went on in Lucy Brown's room had never been seen in Rosebank.

"Pin it up on the shoulders; pull it down a little on the right."

Every one assisted at the fitting and all felt entitled to praise for the success that crowned their efforts.

By half-past twelve o'clock, thanks to many willing hands, Lucy was arrayed in a white frock that no one could have guessed had been curtains a few hours before.

The dress intended for Lucy came late the next day, having been missent. It was more expensive and more elaborate than the one she wore, but the girls all asserted that she could not possibly have looked any prettier in it than she did in the "curtain dress."

"And I never should have known how good you dear girls could be," added Lucy.

A LETTER TO MY MANY READERS.

"BURIED CITIES" PUZZLE V.

You will find a city buried within two words in one of the lines of the following stanza. It is a city far from this country. Can you tell what it is?

Vain is this Orient beauty's smile,
Too far these weary travelers roam;
Hope kindles not at fairest wile
Which fails to bring their Western home.

The answer to last week's puzzle was "Rome." It was buried in the words "for omen," the last letter in "for" and the first three in "omen."

ALPHABETICAL PUZZLES—VI.

The letters needed on the blackboard to complete the alphabet will be found to spell two numbers, one of which is exactly twice the value of the other. The solution to last week's puzzle was "Flo, Ruth, Madge."

THE ANIMAL ALPHABET

J is for Jay, not a Joke
Nor Jackdaw
Though Jackasses laugh
And the Jaguars claw.

K is Kangaroo,
Leaping high in the air
And passing a Kite
With an insolent stare.

L abors Long,
In all kinds of weather,
To lure Lamb and Lion
To Lie down together.
